THE Griffith Brothers, who have a chain of theatres throughout the state have recently made some purchases that bring their total number of theatres up to thirty-three.

Four of these newly acquired theatres are in Enid, The Melba and Mecca, formerly owned by Jack Johnson, and the Rialto and Royal, owned by Mrs. McQuilkin. This gives them all of the Enid houses but one, the Criterion, owned by Publix Theatres.

Jack Johnson will be general manager of these four theatres with Bob Browning, of Clinton, as assistant.

They have added the Criterion Theatre at Tonkawa, to their list, which gives them three theatres—all there are—in that town.

The Abbott Theatre, at Stillwater, is another purchase of these brothers. And they announce the planning of another theatre for Stillwater, The Aggie. This will be a fine theatre of 850 seats. Stillwater is the seat of the A. & M. College.

They have just completed a theatre in the six-week-old town of Burger, Texas, and are building another one in Panhandle, Texas, both towns being in the new oil district.

V. H. Bridges, the new manager for Liberty Film Corp., that is opening an exchange here in Oklahoma City, arrived from New Orleans last week. The Liberty will have its office in the new film exchange building at 523 South Robinson, being housed with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange. M-G-M will do the physical distributing of Liberty's product. The new manager was with the Liberty Exchange at New Orleans in a selling capacity. Carl Burton, former assistant booker at Universal, will be the booker at Liberty.

R. S. Ballantyne, southern district manager for Pathe, was in town this week-end to attend a Pathe sales meeting.

Wallace Walthall, who has been manager of the Enterprise Distributing Corp. office for seven years, has just learned that he has been made president of the newly formed Enterprise Film Corp. of Oklahoma. Besides the prestige and authority that is invested in this position, Mr. Walthall also received a large number of shares in the new company.

R. B. Williams, sales director for Universal was in town for a few days' visit with the local exchange. Universal expects to get into her new quarters at 519 West Main next week.

G. A. Peterson, who has the Cozy and Folly theatres at Hollis, opened up a new theatre at Cordell recently. A number of film people went over to the opening and reported a large attendance that night. Motion pictures were taken of the theatre inside and out, and preceding the opening, Mr. Peterson had a camera man come to Cordell and make a one-reel dramatic western in the streets of Cordell. The picture taken had as its plot a bank robbing. The players were local people, the leading ones being high-school pupils. This stunt secured the interest not only of Cordell, but the surrounding territory, and acted as splend'd advertising for the new theatre.

A. C. Bromberg, president of Progress Pictures, was in town last week accompanied by Mrs. Bromberg. A. B. Cheatham, district manager for Progress, was also in town at this time.

St. Louis

Milwaukee

WHILE no definite action has apparently been taken as yet, it remains a certainty in the minds of most local film men that Saxe will soon acquire the Garden Theatre, the last downtown picture house to remain under the active management of the Uihlein interests. A misleading headline in another trade paper reported that Saxe is dickering for the Alhambra. This is incorrect as the Alhambra is under a ten-years lease to Universal and as far as could be learned no overtures of any kind have been made by Saxe in regard to this house. If the Garden is taken over Saxe has complete control of the first run situation with the exception of the Alhambra, which during the past year played Universal, Fox Specials, Warner Brothers and United Artists pictures.

Stanley Brown manager of the Strand Theatre, has been confined to his home for several days past with a sever attack of illness resulting from overwork at the Strand, where he has gained the enviable reputation of being Milwaukee's hardest working managing director. He also supervises the Modjeska and Merrill theatres.

Harry Hatfield, managing director of the three Saxe houses in Green Bay, Wis., the Strand, Colonial and Grand has left for a month's visit to the East, after which he will return to re-assume his duties in the northern city.

Johnnie De Lorenzo, well-known former film salesman in the Wisconsin territory and now affiliated with a theatrical sign concern, has left the hospital where he was confined by illness for some time past and is now convalescing at home.

The Paris Theatre, a Milwaukee neighborhood house, has been sold by Frank Grabhorn to Ed. Wolf. Lucas Kuglich, who has heretofore operated the house under a lease, plans to go abroad for a vacation in the very near future.

Leo Behring, live wire manager of the Pastime Theater, located on North Avenue, plans to sail late this week for Europe. He will return late in summer to resume active charge of the Pastime, which under his management developed from a "bad news" proposition into one of the liveliest of the smaller neighborhood houses in the city.

Philadelphia

GENE and Harry Marcus, of the Twentieth Century Exchange, are receiving the condolences of the Philadelphia film fraternity on the death of their mother, Mrs. Diana Marcus, aged 82. Only a short time before her death, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

The Stanley Company's Edgemont Theatre in Chester and the Orpheum in Philadelphia have been closed and will be thoroughly renovated during the summer. Approximately $50,000 will be spent on each house. This outlay will include the installation of a new organ.

Joe Pierce, Philadelphia city salesman for Pathe, has been transferred to the up-state territory and has been succeeded in this city by Alfred Buck.

The Victoria Theatre, Elmer, N. J., operated by S. W. Oser under a lease, was recently destroyed by fire. The loss approximating $15,000, is not covered by insurance. The theatre had a seating capacity of 300.

A. C. Melvin, who has been a member of the Fox and Metro-Goldwyn exchanges in Washington, D. C., has been secured by Joseph Hebrew, district manager for Warner Bros. Vitagraph, to cover part of the Eastern Pennsylvania territory.

Charles Powell, who has been connected with the Philadelphia exchange of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., for several years, in a sales capacity, has joined the staff of Columbia Pictures.

Miss Ethel Hortner, assistant to Jack Greenburg, Secretary of the Film Board of Trade, has returned to her duties after undergoing an operation for appendicitis in the Jefferson Hospital.

George J. Shaffer, district manager for New England, Lew Adelson, assistant general advertising sales manager, and Ed Cochrane, special exploiteer of the Paramount forces, were in the city for a short time recently. They were the guests of W. E. Smith, district manager, and P. A. Bloch, manager of the Philadelphia exchange.

John Bethel has resigned from the sales force of Associated Exhibitors.

Texas

BENNETT R. FINN, who has been playing the double role of manager and producer at the Palace Theatre, will not return East this summer, according to an announcement made several days ago. Mr. Finn has signed with the Interstate Amusement Co., owners of the Palace and other Texas theatres, to work as vacation manager throughout the circuit. Mr. Finn will act as manager of the Majestic Theatre, Houston, the first two weeks in June while Manager Eddie Bremer is away on his vacation.

Abe Silverberg and Herman Shaw, local theatre managers, are in Dallas attending the M. P. T. O. Spring convention.

Will Horwitz, Jr., and wife will attend the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Southern convention in Chicago, according to Mr. Horwitz. Mr. Horwitz plays their program at his Texan and Iris theatres.

Wm. O'Donnal, road manager for Interstate Amusement Co., is in town for a short business session. Mr. O'Donnal will go to San Antonio from here.

Stephen Roberts, Educational comedy director, arrived in town for a ten-day vacation trip. Mr. Roberts and his wife, who is a Houston girl, made the trip by boat from New York. They will return to Los Angeles in time for Mr. Roberts to start production on June 1st, the opening date for Educational productions.

Florida

SAFETY Harbor is to have a theatre. According to reports, F. E. Washburn is building a house there which will be called the Safety Harbor.

Wm. H. Wassman, representing the Producers Distributing Corp., and Bill Sharp, representing the United Artists, were visitors in Tampa this week. Both these good fellows are mighty popular here.

G. L. Dickinson is building a new neighborhood theatre in St. Petersburg which will be called the Euclid, it being located on Euclid Avenue. Construction is well under way, equipment ordered, and it is reported the house will be ready sometime in May.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT
EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Colors That Cool Your Theatre in Summer

House Decorations and Lighting as a Weapon for Combating Hot Weather Slump

By JACK SAVAGE

Presentation Artist Universal Pictures Corporation.

COLOR as a means of expressing or communicating one's feelings or thoughts, with its known and unknown psychological tendencies, plays an important part upon the human emotions. In itself as pure and exquisite a pleasure as music, color, with its power to attract attention, to stimulate emotion, to cheer and animate, or quiet and subdue, can be made to create and build up a suitable atmosphere for any situation.

The theatre must be beautiful as well as entertaining. It must be inviting, restful and cool. By making it the most suitable place to be in during the hot summer day, you are immediately insured against the usual summer slump.

A mere outlay of expense is not sufficient. Well chosen colors and decorations in structural harmony with the lines of the theatre, lighting which is soft, cool and void of any discordant and irritating color combinations, will create the desired atmosphere. There are certain laws passed on to us which govern the various symbols, combinations and relationships of color.

For those who may not have a working knowledge of color the following brief outline of the fundamental principles applied to the theory of color may convey this thought more clearly.

There are three primary colors—yellow, red and blue, which are the basis for all other color tones that can be produced by mixture. There are three secondary colors, orange, green and violet, which are produced by mixing equal parts of any two of the primaries as follows: yellow and red produce orange; yellow and blue produce green; red and blue produce violet.

Complementary colors are those that by their union will theoretically produce white or neutral gray. Thus, the secondary colors become the complimentaries of the primaries, inasmuch as by mixing any secondary with its opposite primary we have, to a certain extent, the elements that go to make up all the colors of the spectrum. For instance, as red and yellow make orange, red and blue make violet, yellow and blue make green, etc., we have by a combination of red, yellow and blue all these six colors. Therefore, the complementary of any one of the primary colors will be the secondary color that contains the other two primaries. Green becomes the complementary of red; violet of yellow, and orange of blue. Complementary colors are in the strongest possible contrast to each other. Yet they have a peculiar power to enrich each other, when placed together. As in the mixture of equal parts of a complementary pair neutral gray is produced so in variated mixtures of complementary pairs all the other hues are produced.

Warm and cold colors: Examples of warm colors are yellow, orange, yellow-red, orange-red, etc. A cold color is one in which the blue predominates. Examples of cold colors are blue violet, blue-green, etc. Warm and cold colors produce in one, the mental sensations of warmth and coldness respectively.

Blue, because it is cold, modest and retiring, and because of its quietness and restraint should be the dominating factor in our summer color schemes.

Yellow, a warm color, should be used sparingly. A small amount of intense yellow, orange or red for relief, such as a bowl of flowers, panel decorations, etc., should be controlled and balanced by large areas of subdued color tones.

Green, the combination of yellow and blue, shows the psychological tendencies of both components. It is lighter and more cheerful than blue in effect, and has more dignity and repose than yellow. Green being restful to the eyes and nerves is a relief from the heat of the summer sun and should be used extensively. The lighter tones in drapes, seat covers, ceiling decorations, etc., and the darker ones should be limited to shrubs, flowers, and the floor. Violet denotes seriousness and solemnity. It is not used much in interior decorations. Red the warmest of colors, as a dominating factor in a color scheme should be avoided entirely. It is symbolical of warmth and has a strong stimulating, attractive and exciting power. The use of it would prove disastrous on a hot day.

With the free use of the lighter tones of coloring which are cheering end enlivening, colors that express coolness, in fixtures lighting, drapes, etc.. and above all, keeping the theatre itself as cool as possible, we, therefore, create or effect a quiet, restful and serene atmosphere in contrast with the heat of the summer days.

Equipment

3,200 Per Second

By P. M. ABBOTT

3,200 pictures a second. 12,000 feet of film per minute. 200 times normal speed. This is the almost unbelievable performance of a motion picture camera that has been invented and perfected by a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, C. Francis Jenkins.

Science, engineering and mechanical ingenuity—these are constantly at work toward the broadening and betterment of motion pictures.

Usually, there is nothing spectacular about technical inventions and improvements. A new method is tried out here and there—and, as a result, a better practice may be established. But it is seldom that an invention stirs the imagination of those uninitiated into the technical phases of motion pictures. It is only through such sensational inventions as this super-speed camera that the industry in general becomes aware of the consistent progress the technical end of this business is making.

The remarkable strides that have been made in adopting miniatures and models to picture production has saved millions of dollars for producers. Efficient projection apparatus has effected even greater economies for exhibitors.

Modern show places of today are made possible through the improved practices learned by engineers through years of specializing. Stage and general lighting effects that add their charm and atmosphere are all worked out from basic engineering data. And so it goes on down the line.

Just what technical research and invention hold forth for the future of motion pictures is beyond conception. That which appears as only the dream of a fanatic today may well be actual realization tomorrow.

Here, at least, is one phase of motion pictures that gives no indications of stagnating.

School Orchestra Popular Attraction

Local Organization and Average Picture Pack Reading Theatre

FOLLOWING closely on the heels of the popular local appeal of fiddlers' contests and Charleston dance exhibitions, the presentation at picture theatres of the leading high school orchestra of the town threatens to become one of the outstanding attractions for cinema houses.

One of the most successful presentations of a high school orchestra as a theatre attraction recently reported was staged at the State in Reading, Pa., by Manager F. K. M. Plessner. The school band was featured with a program headed by a photoplay of only average appeal and the State recorded a capacity week.

The orchestra of 40 pieces under the direction of a 22-year-old musical genius, is credited with attracting the bulk of the patronage drawn to the State during the week, and on the experience gained in this experiment, Plessner heartily endorsed the stunt as one that will prove a winner for other theatres throughout the country. Relatives and friends made up a large portion of the crowds attending the theatre during the week the high school orchestra was featured. The musicians appeared on the stage in a setting which featured the school colors and pennants. The staging had the advantage of novel lighting effects.

Drop Amateurs for Summer at Harmanus-Bleecker

After the hot weather sets in, Joseph Saperstein will do away with amateur nights at Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany. They will probably be resumed in the fall. In connection with his picture program this week, Saperstein staged a pretentious program including the "Vanities of Albany," in which about thirty young ladies took part.

J. S. Smart Stages Revue with Local Talent

J. S. Smart, manager of the Royal Theatre, Port Hope, a veteran exhibitor of Canada, turned producer for the first time in his life when he staged "The Capitol Follies" at his theatre during the week of April 26. This was a miniature musical revue which he organized with home town talent as an added feature for the picture programme.

Des Moines Suburban House Staging Fiddler's Contest

The Gem Theatre, Des Moines, owned and managed by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones, is putting on a fiddlers' contest with the feature film this week.

The Gem is a new suburban theatre and something of a new venture in Des Moines, where the outlying theatres have not proved such a paying proposition.

Amateur performances on Saturday night have proved helpful in building up business at the Gem, says Mrs. Jones. The fiddlers' contest has already occasioned considerable interest. Five or six performers will appear on Tuesday night and six on Wednesday, prizes of three dollars and two being awarded to the first and second winners each night. On Saturday the winners of the two nights will contest for ten dollars' worth of prizes.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

MANAGER FOUCHE of McVickar's Theatre, Chicago, has been transferred to the Oriental, the new Balaban and Katz house in which Paul Ash with his old popular tricks and new copyrighted title "Rajah of Jazz" will officiate as chief presentation attraction.

HAROLD BISHOP, formerly manager of the Metropolitan in Winnipeg, Man., has been appointed manager of the Empress Theatre, Edmonton, Alberta.

WALTER F. DAVIS succeeds Bishop as manager of the Winnipeg Metropolitan.

ROSS GARVER, managing director of the Indiana Theatre, Terre Haute, will have active charge of the Hippodrome in that city when it reopens in August with first run pictures and elaborate presentations after extensive remodeling and reconstruction work, which is now going on.

JOE JORDAN, formerly resident manager of the Virginia, Stanley house in Atlantic City, has succeeded Ed. Scott, recently resigned, as manager of the Stanley Theatre there.

FRED E. JOHNSON, for the past two and a half years manager of the Weller Theatre at Zanesville, is now manager of the Colonial and Strand Theatres, Cambridge, O., houses operated by the C. & M. Amusement Co.

To Continue Vaudeville All Summer at American

The American Theatre in Spokane has announced that the policy of showing vaudeville two days a week, recently experimented with there, will be continued through the summer months.

Vaudeville is an added attraction with pictures at the American on Mondays and Thursdays of each week, with straight pictures other days.

Orchestra Sunday Night Feature

The Olympic Theatre in Watertown, N. Y., will feature an augmented orchestra each Sunday night from now on with a special concert program. It is expected that this feature will attract trade during the summer months.

Barcli Now Second Run Theatre

The Barcli, in Schenectady, is now operating as a second run house with Frank Breymaier at the helm. Other second run houses say that they feel the effects of the Barcli's policy.

Reduce Admissions for All Shows at Montreal House

Herbert Allen, lessee of the Amherst Theatre, St. Catherine and Amherst Streets, Montreal, has found it necessary to reduce the admission prices, starting Sunday, May 2. Matinees are now 15 and 20 cents and all seats at night are 30 cents, prices including tax. This is for a picture programme and five acts of vaudeville, changed twice weekly. E. Levy is the manager of the Amherst which was opened late last fall.

Charleston Contest Scores at Tampa Theatre

The Victory Theatre, Tampa, last week played to big houses as the result of a Charleston contest staged with the assistance of the Evening Globe. The event was widely advertised by the paper and in a campaign in which one of the features was a street ballyhoo consisting of a truck equipped with a piano, and several girl dancers, who performed Charleston steps on street corners.

Peggy Joyce Appears With "The Skyrocket"

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, appearing in conjunction with "The Skyrocket" was the chief stage attraction last week at the Capitol in Detroit. The engagement was billed as the only personal appearance of Miss Joyce in connection with the picture, and proved a popular bid for the patronage of the Capitol.

In addition to the star and her picture, the Capitol offered John Murray Anderson's "Melodies Eternal," the Publix presentation. Miss Joyce appeared at four performances daily.

Smith and Durrell at Des Moines

The Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, last week presented Smith and Durrell, a harmony team, in their act, "Bits and Hits from Songland," as the leading stage number of the bill surrounding "Mlle. Modiste." Selections from the Victor Herbert score were played as an overture and an organ solo, "Tamiani Trial," played by Vergne Ford, completed the musical portion of the program.

Vaudeville at Broadway, Butte

Merle Davis, lessee of the Broadway, Ansonia and Orpheum Theatres, Butte, Mont., is now combining vaudeville with his picture programs the last of the week at his Broadway house, using the other days for the legitimate stage plays. The other two houses are kept strictly for motion picture programs.

Palace in Troy Cuts Admissions

George Marcoux, manager of the Palace in Troy, announced this week that on May 16, admission prices would drop to ten cents and that this price would continue until Labor Day. There will be no more amateur nights at the theatre until early fall.

The Midnight Matinee

Watch your Theatre grow young again between Midnight and Morning —

How long will the house be closed for reseating? A natural question! Not a day if you want to keep it open. Reseating and performances are continuous. They follow each other without interference. When the curtain comes down and the house empties at night, installation mechanics "ring up" on the night's program of putting in new seats. From midnight till morning the work goes on—methodically—rapidly—efficiently. A section of the old chairs comes out. The electric drills begin to hum. A section of new seats goes in. The work is timed—perfectly—to allow for the house being put in perfect order for the next regular performance. Between midnight and morning the old theatre gradually takes on the appearance of a new playhouse. Comfort and beauty grow like a flower from within, spreading from pit to gallery with each night's work and in the end —new seating throughout—not a night lost or a single patron turned away.

Lopez Signs for Picture Theatre Tour

Starts With 4 Weeks' Engagement at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo

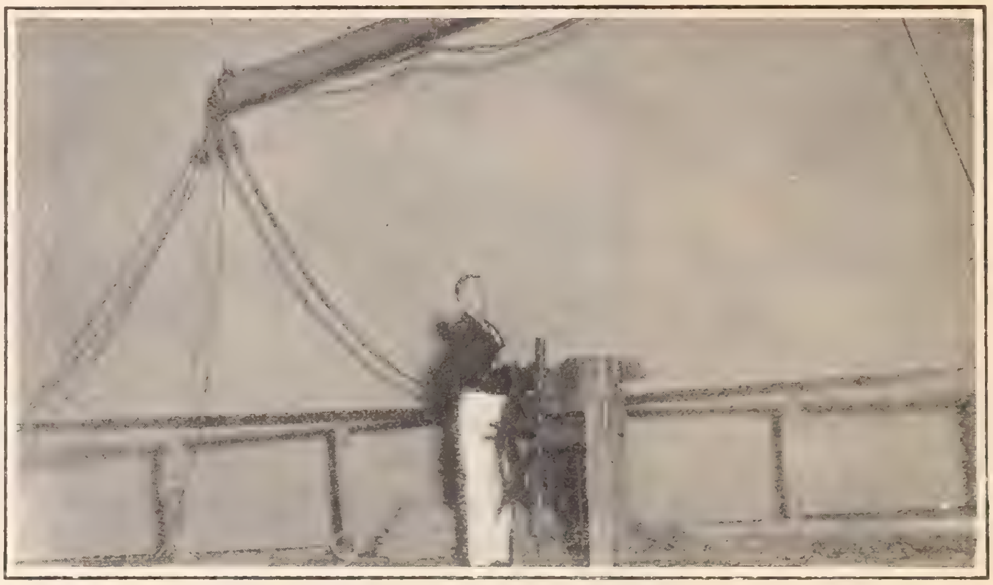
VINCENT LOPEZ has been booked for about four months' time in picture theatres in the East and Middle West through the William Morris Agency. The orchestra leader and his musical organization will open the booking with a four weeks' engagement at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo.

The Buffalo booking will be followed by appearances at Loew's State in St. Louis, with Loew's Allen in Cleveland following that. He will complete the contract as presently laid out about the middle of September.

With the extension of presentation circuits, the picture houses are going in largely for "names." The Loew theatres where pictures and presentations are offered, now numbering eight, have such well known stage names as Olga Petrova, Grace La Rue, Enda Leedom and Dave Stamper, in addition to Lopez and His Orchestra to offer at these houses.

With the increase of time in picture theatres, the sources of supply for presentation acts naturally is on the increase. It was recently announced in New York that Gus Edwards will form the Edwards Presentation Co., to produce prologues and presentations at the picture theatres after completion of his present contract to stage a group of presentations for Publix. In New York, also, Arthur Klein, former Keith-Albee artists' representative, announced the organization of a general booking agency specializing in presentations for picture theatres. Associated with Klein in this organization are Jack Haskell, Allen K. Foster and John Wenger.

V. E. B. Fuller is reported to be organizing a presentations chain of 10 theatres on Long Island, for which he will supply the acts. Among the artists he is booking is Masail Speranski, baritone of the Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio now presenting "Carmencita and the Soldier" at the Cosmopolitan Theatre, New York.



PROLOGUE FOR "THE SEA BEAST"

Novel lighting effects, simulating a lightning storm at sea, was a startling feature of the prologue for the Warner Brothers production at the Brooklyn Mark Strand. The number featured sea chanties sung by a baritone.

Colletta Jazz Revue Plays Rialto, Omaha

Colletta and her Jazz Revue in which she is assisted by Maxine Hamilton, Don Lee and Gerald Griffith held the stage at the Rialto, Omaha, last week as an added feature to the showing of Harry Langdon's comedy, "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp." Brader's orchestra featured the "Music Master" film "Felix Mendelssohn." "Marionettes," a Felix Comedy and Pathe News made up the balance of the screen offerings.

The Strand had "Mlle. Modiste" as the screen attraction with the 3 Abbey Sisters in "Musical Moments" as the stage offering.

Ruth Glanville at Wisconsin

The Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee, last week offered Ruth Glanville, saxophonist, and Rome & Dunn, the harmony duet, as the featured artists of the stage presentation accompanying the showing of Norma Talmadge in "Kiki."

Edna Leedom Heads Bill at St. Louis State

Edna Leedom and Dave Stamper headed the stage attractions at Loew's State, St. Louis, last week, when one of the most elaborate programs ever presented at the house was offered to heavy patronage. The program included "Brown of Harvard" as the screen feature, Don Albert's collegiate orchestra, Leedom and Stamper, and the film "A Lesson in the Charleston" as an added screen feature.

Syncopation Week was celebrated at the Missouri, with "A Social Celebrity" as the main attraction and "Rhapsody in Jazz," the Publix unit show produced by John Murray Anderson as the leading numbers, and Ida May Chadwick, dancer, and Mary Raines and Mildred Cady, popular radio performers as supporting features.

At the Grand Central, Gene Rodemich and his orchestra had Ruth Etting and Harry Barris as featured performers in the main attraction in support of "Mlle. Modiste," the screen feature.

Atlanta Met. Presents Its Biggest Show To Date

Last week's show at the Metropolitan, Atlanta, was the most pretentious so far offered at that house and evidenced a decisive thrust to offset the appeals for popular support being made by the Publix house, the Howard, now in the circuit of theatres offering the Publix unit shows.

The Metropolitan bill was headed by the First National feature, "The Far Cry," and included two stage numbers, Ned Wayburn's Dancing Venuses, a dressy dancing act with Virginia Bacon, Olive Brady and Mary Horan, and Britt Wood, "The Boob" and his Harmonica, who frequently appeared as a headliner in Atlanta at the Forsyth, the Keith house.

The orchestra featured an accompaniment to the Marion Talley record "Comin' Thro' the Rye," played on a Victor Orthophonic Electrola. Feature space in the billing also was accorded the one-reel picture, "Learn to do the Charleston."

The Howard bill had Douglas MacLean in "That's My Baby" and the John Murray Anderson production "The Bughouse Cabaret" as the leading numbers of a program advertised as a Fun Week Festival, while the Rialto repeated Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman," with the Georgia Tech's orchestra, quartette and dancing comedian as a supplementary feature.

Van and Schenck Appear at Shea's Buffalo

The stage program at Shea's Buffalo, Buffalo, last week featured Van and Schenck. The screen feature was Corinne Griffith in "Infatuation." The Publix presentation "A Bird Fantasy," produced by Frank Cambria, was included in the numbers offered from the stage.

Sissle and Blake In Stage Presentation At State

Sissle and Blake, negro stars of "Shuffle Along," "Chocolate Dandies" and other shows, made their appearance at the head of the stage program offered last week at the State Theatre, Minneapolis. The screen offering was "The First Year."

Fritzi Scheff Star at Rialto

The Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C., last week presented Fritzi Scheff as the star of the stage portion of the program. "The Gilded Butterfly" was the screen attraction. Added divertissements included Scott McKee, banjoist. The orchestra featured selections from "Mlle. Modiste."

Star With Herb Straub Bunch

The State Theatre, Detroit, last week offered an elaborate stage show in which Fred Stritt and Herb and the State Bunch were assisted by Mack and Long, eccentric dancers, Mary Jane, a musical comedy player, and Rinalda, the wandering violinist.

S. M. P. E. Celebrates 10th Anniversary

Attendance Large and Program Interesting at Washington Convention; Photographed with Pres. Coolidge

THE convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which ended May 6th, closed the tenth anniversary meeting of that society. The original meeting, which was held in the spring of 1916, was called by C. Francis Jenkins, the founder of the S. M. P. E., at Washington, and it was fitting that the tenth anniversary should be celebrated by the convention being held in that same city.

The programme was elaborately arranged and the attendance large, which was in direct contrast to the original meeting, at which a mere handful of far-sighted engineers in this industry met to found this organization to promote the technical development of the motion picture industry.

The meeting was opened Monday morning, May 3rd, with an address by Col. J. Franklin Bell, Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia, whose talk was followed by an address by the Society's president, Willard B. Cook.

At noon of the following day, the members and guests of the convention were received by President Coolidge at the White House, and later had the unusual honor of being photographed in a group with the President.

On Monday afternoon a sight-seeing tour was taken by the wives of the members and other ladies attending the convention.

A programme of papers was presented on Monday afternoon also, and that evening a session was held in the auditorium of the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Agriculture.

During the evening session, C. Francis Jenkins demonstrated his new chronoteine camera. This camera takes between 3,200 and 4,000 pictures per second—an almost unbelievable performance. During this performance, Mr. Jenkins allowed the film to fly out in the open room after passing the aperture, rather than having it remain in the camera. The terrific speed at which this film was thrown from the camera shot it straight up in the air until it hit the ceiling. This speed can readily be understood when it is realized that 3,200 pictures per second means that the film traveled at the rate of 200 feet per second.

The rest of that evening's session was devoted to a demonstration of stereoscopic motion pictures by J. F. Leventhal, and the early history and growth of the motion pictrue industry (a film demonstration) by Otto Nelson.

Tuesday morning, the second day of the convention, was devoted to the presentation of papers, as was all day Wednesday and Thursday morning.

Tuesday afternoon a sight-seeing trip was taken by the members, which included all the important places of interest in Washington.

Tuesday evening, the Society was entertained by Henry W. Crandall, at a special show at his Metropolitan Theatre, after which the M. P. M. O. Local 224 tendered a dinner and special entertainment to the members at the Lee House.

Wednesday night a banquet was held, at which Henry D. Hubbard, Secretary of the Bureau of Standards, was the guest and principal speaker. The dinner was broadcast from Station WCAP.

The members and guests attending the convention are as follows:

Inquiries and Comments

New Light on an Old Subject

Part V

Effect of Distance and Position on Glare

THE candlepower, or for that matter, brightness of a source, does not alone determine the glare for any set conditions. Two other important factors are distance and position of the glaring light.

While glare, as determined by Brunon A. Nowakowski, varied directly as the candlepower (and brightness) of the source of glare light a rather odd relation was found to exist between glare and distance.

It was found that glare varied inversely as the distance instead of inversely as the square of the distance (of the glare light) as would be supposed from a casual analysis of the situation.

The variation of glare with distance is shown by the curve in Fig. 3 in explanation of which the investigator has the following to say: "The equation fitting these curves was found to be:

$$\text{glare} + a = \frac{B}{\text{distance}}$$

or glare is proportional to

$$\frac{1}{\text{distance}} - \frac{1}{\text{constant}}$$

It is obvious, therefore, that the constant is the distance at which glare becomes equal to zero. We may express our distance law by saying that glare is proportional to

$$\frac{1}{d} - \frac{1}{d'}$$

It was expected that glare would be inversely proportional to the square of the distance, since the inverse law gives the rate of the decrease of illumination at the eye. The fact that it was found to be inversely proportional to the distance rather than to the square of the distance can be explained in the following way.

In the tests the eye was accommodated to the distance of the illuminated test object, but not to the distance of the glaring light and under such conditions, instead of a sharp picture of the lamp (test object) on the retina a more diffuse illumination was had over a larger area.

Inverse Square Law

It was expected, however, that the inverse square law would hold when the eye was accommodated to the distance of the glare light. In order to verify this some additional experiments were carried out with the test object placed at the distance of the large light.

Under these conditions the inverse square law holds. It is evident then, that the accommodation of the eye plays an important part in determining the degree of glare. Glare drops faster with the eye accommodated to the distance of the glaring light than with the eye focussed at a near distance.

Very interesting, too, is the fact that, by increasing the distance of the glare light, we reach a point at which glare becomes zero. This distance of zero glare varies at any given angle with the candlepower of the lamp, the higher the candlepower the greater the distance of zero glare.

Glare and Angular Position

The angle at which light enters the eye has an important bearing on the degree of glare. Fig. 4 shows the variation of glare with the horizontal angle (which the light makes with the axis of the eye) for two distances of the glare light from the eye.

Plotted in another way, the results of this test show that glare decreases as the distance of the glare spot on the retina from the fovea (center of the eye) increases. In other words, the greater the angle which the light beam makes with the axis of the eye, the less will be the glare.

For any angles up to 30 degrees the retina is approximately perpendicular to the light beam, but for larger angles this is not the case, and the angle (a) in Fig. 5 represents the angle between the retina and the perpendicular to the beam of light.

It is therefore necessary to multiply by cosine (a), as is usual in illumination calculation, when the surface illuminated makes an angle with the normal to the beam of light.

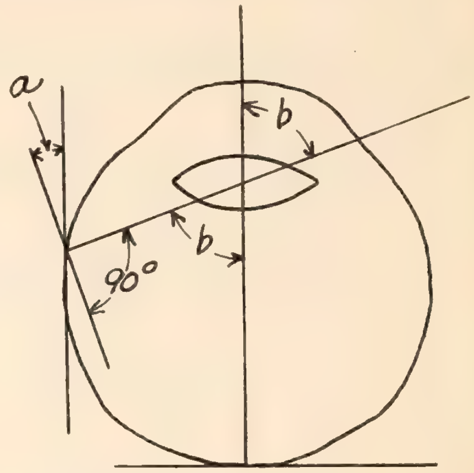

Diagram of Eye Showing Angles of Glare light

The values of angle (a) corresponding to different values of angle (b) are given below. This table will be found useful when the glare formula is explained later on.

Angle B	Value of Angle A Angle A
40	14
50	30
60	44

The relation of glare to vertical angle is the same as that for the horizontal with the exception that at 60-70 degrees we get zero glare due to the protection which the upper eyelid affords; whereas, at a horizontal angle of 90 degrees there is still some glare left due to the lens action of the eye in bending the light beam to make it strike the retina.

Ascher Bros. Secure Lease on Chicago House

Fitzpatrick & McElroy are completing their third large theatre, apartment and office building in Chicago. It is the Highland, located at 79th and Ashland Avenue and contains a twenty-five hundred seat theatre, seventeen stores, twenty-three apartments, a restaurant and a number of offices. Following their policy of not operating theatres in Chicago, the Highland Theatre has been leased to Ascher Brothers Circuit which expects to open the new theatre about the middle of May.

Get brighter Pictures

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

Theatre Plans Active in Northwest According to Recent Survey

THEATRE planning and construction in Seattle, Washington, and the Pacific Northwest continues to progress with rapid strides, according to a survey made last week. The following new deals and plans are included:

W. P. Armour is well under way with his new 650-seat first-run house at Montesano, and expects to have it ready for opening the latter part of the coming summer season.

R. A. Kelsey, owner and manager of the Ruby Theatre at Chelan, is planning the construction of a new house in that town, to occupy a lot 105 by 120, which he has just acquired. Plans call for a 750-seat first-run house to open in July.

George Purvis, former exhibitor of Longview, Washington, is back in the theatre construction business and is at present planning a 1,000-seat theatre at Fairbanks, Alaska, for A. E. Lathrop. This house is scheduled for opening early next fall.

On Queen Anne Hill, a fine residential section of Seattle, William Steele plans the erection of a 750-seat theatre to be called the Nile Theatre. A feature of this house will be a large Kimball organ. Mr. Steele now owns and operates the Queen Anne Theatre in that district.

H. C. Hartung announces that he will soon be ready to open his new Clarkson Theatre at Clarkson, Washington, one of the smaller towns in the territory.

The Garden Court Theatre will be the name of the new house being erected at Third Avenue and Union Street for Joe Danz, veteran Seattle exhibitor. It will have more than 750 seats, and will be one of Seattle's foremost second-run houses, according to advance information.

Leavenworth House Holds Successful Opening

The Abdallah, a Leavenworth, Kansas, motion picture theatre, held a most successful first night when it opened during the early part of April. Frederick Hayter and lessee Helvering expressed themselves as being particularly well pleased with the attendance at the premiere performance. More than two thousand people took advantage of the opportunity to view the new playhouse.

According to Manager Hayter, the new theatre will present two shows each night, with matinees Saturday and Sunday only.

Minnesota Project Held Up

I. H. Ruben, of Finkelstein & Ruben, to-day reported that high prices asked for sites in Rochester, Minn., are holding up the erection of the new $300,000 theatre planned for that city by the company.

Suzore Announces Plans for Memphis House

Alfred J. Suzore, of Memphis, Tenn., recently announced the completion of plans for a new Motion Picture theatre to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. Construction will start early in May and the plans call for a two-story brick, steel and stone building with latest equipment. The seating capacity will be about 2,000. The site is located at 271 Main Street and is 119 x 149 feet.

Suzore operates several theatres at the present and will close the house at Main and Market Streets at once.

Oldknow Leases House in Atlanta Suburb

Oscar Oldknow and associates have secured a five-year lease on a new theatre to be erected in the East Point section of Atlanta, Ga. Plans call for a two-story brick building which will house a 500 seat auditorium. Two stores will front on Main Street and five offices will be located on the second floor. Citizens of East Point, College Park and Hapeville are co-operating in the erection of the building. According to an announcement by the stockholders, construction will soon start.

Saxe's Tower, Milwaukee, Holds Opening

The Tower Theatre, Saxe's new Milwaukee theatre, will be the first $1,000,000 theatre in Milwaukee or Wisconsin to be operated outside of the principal business district. The formal opening was Saturday, May 1. The house is of elaborate design, has a seating capacity of close to 2,000 and embodies the most modern features of theatre building and equipment. It is located twenty-five blocks from the center of the business district.

Break Ground on Loew's Midland

Actual construction of Loew's Midland Theatre, Kansas City, to be the third largest in the United States, will start within sixty days, it was announced by M. B. Shanberg, who will be managing director. Additional plans of the structure, which will seat 4,000 persons, call for a 15-story office on the Main Street side of the building, which will be on Thirteenth Street between Main and Baltimore Avenue.

Push Work on Los Angeles House

Work is being pushed along at a rapid rate on the new Westlake Theatre building at 622 South Alvarado Street, Los Angeles. It is said that the investment will run in the neighborhood of $500,000 and that the house will seat about 2,000.

The structure is 115 x 180 feet in size and 60 feet high and of Class A construction. The Westlake Theatre Building Company is the owner.

Buckley Leases Los Angeles Site

Construction will soon start on a proposed $300,000 theatre and office building at corner of Pruess Road and Wilshire Boulevard, the active West End area of Los Angeles, Cal., according to F. J. Buckley, who has secured a 99 year lease on the property. Plans for the building are being rushed to completion.

Hollywood, Gowanda, N.Y. Holds Premiere

New House Donated to Thriving Western N. Y. Town by Local Manufacturer

THE new Hollywood Theatre has been opened in Gowanda, N. Y. It is the gift to the town of Richard Wilhelm, president and general director of the Eastern Tanners Glue Company and the Peter Cooper's Glue Company, both located in the thriving western New York town. Mr. Wilhelm lives in Gowanda a part of every year and is the town's guiding spirit in most civic, commercial and financial enterprises. He employs several hundred persons in his local plants and believes in the theory that good citizens and workmen are found only in a community where living conditions and environment are good. After the fire which destroyed the old Opera House in 1924, Mr. Wilhelm sensed the necessity for a new theatre. Real estate was purchased,—construction began and on Monday, April 19, the Hollywood was opened in Main Street on the site of the old theatre.

The house is as complete and as fine a theatre as could be built in a town of Gowanda's size. It is constructed of brick, tile, concrete and steel—as nearly fireproof as modern engineering has devised. It has a seating capacity of 1000. Seats were installed by the American Seating Cmopany.

The outside vestibule, 14 by 18 feet, provides wall space for eight poster cases where an entire week's program may be displayed. The marquise is massive and built in harmony with the general scheme of the theatre. It is illuminated with 48 electric lights. From the outside vestibule, entrance is gained to the lobby by three sets of double doors. The lobby is 18 feet wide and 60 feet in length with a wainscot of white marble, tiled floor and side wall decorations in old ivory, gold and blue. Ingoing and outgoing patrons are given separate aisles divided by a heavy red velours rope fastened to brass standards. The ticket booth is located about midway in the lobby and is a product of the celebrated Libman Spanjer Corporation, who specialize in the manufacture of high quality theatrical furnishings. The booth provides two windows with Automatic Ticket Machines and change devices.

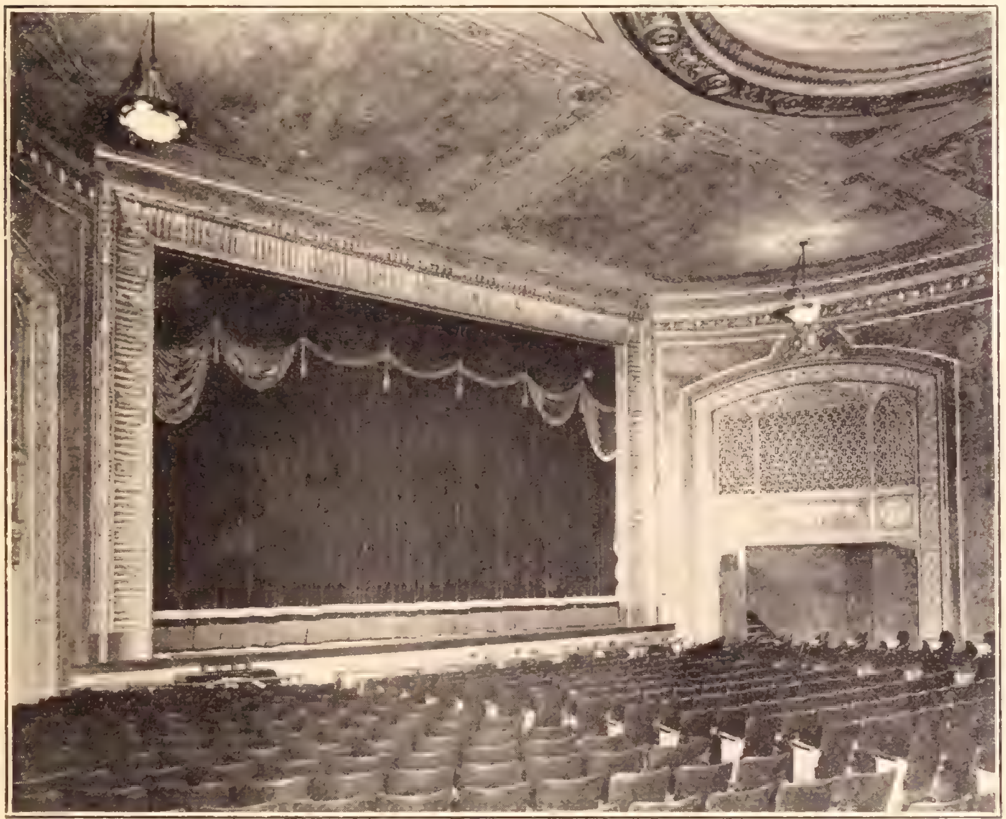
At the extreme end of the lobby there are three additional sets of double art leaded plate glass doors which give entrance to the foyer, which is 80 feet long and 12 feet wide and is constructed in a semi-circle. It is separated from the main auditorium by a standup rail carrying a draft enclosed glass shield.

From the foyer at right and left are wide stairways leading to the balcony and to the ladies' rest room and gentlemen's smoking room. These stairways are five feet, six inches wide with white Vermont marble treads and bronzed balustre with a draught enclosed glass shield.

The auditorium is 70 by 86 feet and provides spacious seating arrangement for nearly 700. The seats are of the box spring type, heavily upholstered and built for comfort. The interval between the rows of seats is the extreme used in the higher class theatres. There are four aisles, two center and one each at right and left of the auditorium. Here again one is impressed with the artistic decorative scheme. Old ivory, gold and blue blend perfectly with the beautiful red velour stage curtains and the velour drapes that adorn the stage entrances, at right and left. Murals find appropriate space in the side walls, making the whole decorative plan one of beauty and refinement. Corresponding with the modern theatre, the floor is built at a pitch of about four and one half feet with seating arranged so as to give a clear and unobstructed view from any point. A great convex bowl shaped dome, 22 feet in diameter, adds still further to the ceiling decoration. Indirect lighting in a series of soft colors make it a feature of great beauty.

The organ is a Wurlitzer two manual type with pipe lofts at right and left of the auditorium. The console is located at the left of the orchestra pit and has an electrically operated blower. The proscenium is another feature. Its heavy paneling and imposing size impresses one with the grandeur of the entire structure. The house has a stage, 30 feet deep and 70 feet wide. The extreme height is 38 feet. The equipment of the stage is complete. The balcony seats about 300 and has down and cross aisles, separated by finished brass railings. There are in all seven exits which operate entirely upon pressure, two from the balcony and five from the auditorium. The balcony exits are permanent steel stairways. The exits permit a five foot exit opening for every hundred persons, which more than complies with the requirements of the law.

The projection booth is at the rear of the balcony. It is large and affords ample working space for the operators. It contains two Simplex projection machines, Fulco rewinding apparatus and complete fireproof film filing cabinets. The equipment was installed by the Becker Theatre Supply company of Buffalo. The booth is located directly above the fireproof motor converter room. Peerless low intensity arc lamps, Superlite lenses and Brenkert spotlight are used.



Looking toward the stage in the recently opened Hollywood Theatre, Gowanda, N. Y. The dimensions of the stage are 30 feet deep by 70 feet wide and it is equipped to handle any type of show.

Hollywood Theatre Holds Auspicious Opening

An efficient ventilation system has been installed. Four 300 feet per minute, venturifin heating and ventilating units permit a change of air in the theatre every few minutes. The ventilation system is augmented by three large ceiling ventilators. The system also permits of recirculation of air in cold weather with a direct intake of pure air from the outside. The heating system is a vapor air plant operated from a central point located under the foyer. This system assures a uniform temperature in the coldest weather. The auditorium is further heated by wall radiators, sunk so as not to obstruct the passageways.

The lobby, foyer and auditorium are illuminated with chandeliers of the newest type, operated on a two circuit system. Five large dome lights, each three feet in diameter are set into the under part of the balcony.

A double control system of installation permits complete operation of all lights from the stage and also from the operator's booth. A large electric switchboard at the left entrance to the stage is divided into two sections, one for stage and the other for house control. At the rear in the foyer is located an emergency lighting unit which works independent of either stage or picture booth. This feature eliminates the possibility of the house being in darkness, except in case of power trouble.

The balcony is constructed around and suspended from a huge 40 ton girder which spans the entire width of the building. This feature, as before stated, eliminates pillars or columns that are a source of annoyance. The aisles of the auditorium and balcony and the foyer are covered with carpets of rich colors that blend with the general color effect of the place.

The business block, which includes stores, quarters for the Gowanda club and the theatre, cost $500,000 according to report. Mr. Wilhelm intends to have the admission charge, with a change of program daily, not to exceed 25 cents. "This was not designed for profit; if it pays its way I'll be satisfied," is Mr. Wilhelm's way of putting it. Paul Miller Jr., is the organist, Hoyt Eastwood, operator, and Joseph Schoos, assistant manager. A staff of girls will act as ushers.

Erect "Calamity" Theatre in 36 Hours

FIFTY men recently turned out at Harbor Beach, Mich., to erect the "Calamity Theatre," a temporary playhouse, and in one and one-half days a building resembling a tabernacle was complete with the exception of placing the windows. This building will serve until the Community building, recently damaged by fire, is rebuilt. The seating capacity of the "Calamity" is 520, which is larger than the old Community house.

Charleston House to Open Soon

Bids for the completion of the new Gloria theatre, at King and George Streets, Charleston, S. C., will be opened the latter part of April, according to a recent announcement. The Pastime Amusement Company will then push forward its plans to put the finishing touches on what is said to be one of the most modern and attractive theatres in the South.

SUPREME CRAFTSMANSHIP

The most productive part of your theatre

A THEATRE cannot be successful without proper projection. For that reason nothing you buy for your theatre should have more serious thought than your Projector. Just bear these thoughts in mind when you set out to buy one:

A chief requirement is efficiency. Does it give the best possible presentation of pictures on the screen?

Another is accessibility. Is it easy to get at any part of the mechanism, to oil, repair or clean?

Then economy. Does it operate smoothly and easily with scarcely any power lost in friction and but little wear on working parts?

Durability—will it last?

And appearance! If it could be seen by your patrons would it be a credit to your theatre?

Simplex Projectors meet all these requirements. They are designed by engineers whose ability has won world wide recognition. Every part is made of the best material obtainable, and to a degree of precision that is comparable to that employed in the finest watch making. And perfect balance is another important feature. For example, the take-up device is actuated from the main driving gear, thus balancing the entire mechanism and equalizing the strain on the main driving shaft.

A critical study of a Simplex Projector at your supply dealer's will convince you of its outstanding value. Let us send you our booklet on Simplex Service. It contains information that you should have. Just mail the coupon.

(No. 482—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Ca

THE MORE YOU STUDY UNIVERSAL'S GREATER MOVIE List, the more deeply you will be impressed with the fact that it is absolutely the last word in showmanship.

IT CAPS THE CLIMAX IN UNIVERSAL'S YEARS AND years of effort. We have made many a good list in the past, but we always made more or less mistakes due to the rush and hurry of getting ready.

THERE WAS NO HURRY IN PREPARING THE GREATER Movie List. We had time to pick stories with the greatest possible care, with an eye always on what your box office needed. We had time to select just the right directors and just the right casts in each and every case.

WE ARE NOW SO FAR AHEAD ON ACTUAL PRODUCTION THAT IN CASE ANY PICTURE SHOWS ANY WEAKNESS WE HAVE PLENTY OF TIME TO SEND IT BACK TO THE STUDIO AND HAVE THE WEAK PART STRENGTHENED.

THIS IS REVOLUTIONARY IN THE PRODUCING END OF the industry, but Universal has never been afraid of revolutionary methods if they held any promise of progress and improvement.

AS A RESULT WE ARE MILES AHEAD OF 'EM ALL.

COMPARE UNIVERSAL'S GREATER MOVIE LIST WITH all others. Do it in cold blood. Strip every one of them right down to the absolute box-office essentials and you will find more of the kind of showmanship you need in the Universal list than in any other.

ovie List Is the List Any Com- Produced

EXHIBITORS EVERYWHERE HAVE BEEN MAKING, AND still are making, more net profit on the Universal White List—which just preceded the Greater Movie List—than on any other collection of pictures.

AS A RESULT, THERE IS THE GREATEST DEMAND FOR UNIVERSAL PICTURES IN ALL THE YEARS I HAVE BEEN IN THE BUSINESS.

ALL OVER THIS COUNTRY AND ALL OVER THE WORLD, there is the wildest enthusiasm among the Universal sales staffs. This is nothing in the world but a reflection of the enthusiasm of exhibitors.

UNIVERSAL HAS THE LONGEST SUSTAINED RECORD of crackerjack, money-making, box-office pictures of any concern in the industry. Exhibitors who in the past have looked elsewhere for their product are now seeking us out and arranging for long term contracts for Universal pictures. This is the highest compliment paid to any company and it is the direct result of YEARS AND YEARS OF MAKING GOOD.

THE COMING YEAR WILL SHATTER ALL UNIVERSAL records to smithereens. If you want to coast along with us, now's the time to get busy.

are you paying the HOT

"OLD SOL" is the champion Hot Weather Income Tax Collector — and you don't have to make out returns.

He just collects!

He blisters the pavements to send 'em inside—he dares you to keep 'em inside.

But you can keep 'em inside. Hundreds of theatres are doing it. They're avoiding the Hot Weather Tax; they're turning Old Sol into a business booster.

Arctic Nu-Air is the answer—with up to 40,000 cubic feet of cool fresh air per minute rushing into your theatre.

C-O-O-L! Say, you never saw the like of it. And does the Box Office respond? Ask over 600 theatre owners—THEY'LL TELL YOU THE BOX OFFICE ANSWER.

You don't have to pay the HOT WEATHER TAX a day longer than you want to.

Arctic Nu-Air turns hot weather into an advantage for you!

We guarantee it to do the business or no pay. That's reasonable.

You can put in Arctic Nu-Air on easy terms. George Bromley says his Arctic Nu-Air system paid for itself in three weeks.

The Atmospheric Theatre

Reflecting the sunset from the burning sands—an inspiration from the land of the Pharaohs. The charm and peaceful grandeur of the Mediterranean sky. An Italian garden. Color—and complete illusion.

These are Atmospheric Theatres—startling and delightful departures from the orthodox.

Eight pages of full color reproductions of atmospheric theatres will appear in the spring edition of BUYERS' GUIDE. Eight pages of ideas that will give you an inspiration for that different theatre you are planning to build sometime.

And more. Besides an elaborate article by John Eberson, noted theatre architect, BUYERS' GUIDE will contain complete cross-indexed listings for buying all varieties of theatre equipment and supplies. The "industry's reference book."

What makes
GREAT
GENIUS
Here it is—
1926-27

CECIL B.

DE MILLE

THE Master-Craftsman of Motion Picture Production and Star Maker of a brilliant galaxy of box office favorites, transcends with each succeeding production the triumphs that have placed him in an exalted niche all his own.

The creative genius that produced "The Ten Commandments" and "The Volga Boatman"; the prophetic vision that was responsible for the development of such great stars as Gloria Swanson, Thomas Meighan, Wally Reid, Rod La Rocque, Leatrice Joy, Vera Reynolds, Jetta Goudal, Bebe Daniels, Sessue Hayakawa, Julia Faye, and other popular favorites; the forceful executive ability that has organized and welded together into a perfect production unit the amazing group of super-craftsmen responsible for P. D. C. product; these are the potent and fundamental faculties that Cecil B. De Mille has brought to the monumental task of motion picture production on a colossal scale.

Surrounding himself with a staff of eminent directors of proved ability—men of artistic showmanship caliber who can carry out De Mille's ideas of what constitutes the highest class of entertainment—the great director is prepared to deliver a product that will reflect that distinctive individuality and excellence that has made his name a glorious one in the history of the industry.

The name of CECIL B. De MILLE is emblazoned in letters of gold upon the annals of motion picture art. He will carry on to still greater achievements in the magnificent array of product which he will direct and supervise for P. D. C. in 1926-27.

WILLIAM C. DE MILLE

THE acquisition of William C. de Mille marks an addition of directorial genius and production craftsmanship to the brilliant array of directors on the roster of P. D. C. production units, that is significant and of distinct showmanship value.

WILLIAM de MILLE ranks among the foremost producer-directors of this or any other country. A noted playwright, the author of such stage successes as "Strongheart", "The Warrens of Virginia", "The Land of the Free" and "The Woman", William de Mille brought to the screen all the wealth of a thorough knowledge of dramatic values in his direction of such outstanding screen successes as "Bought and Paid For", "Miss Lulu Bett", "Nice People", "Clarence", "What Every Woman Knows", "Grumpy", "The Fast Set", "Icebound", "New Brooms", "Lost--a Wife", "Don't Call It Love", and many other productions that have reaped a harvest at the box office.

William de Mille's productions belong to a class distinctly their own. He makes his characters absolutely true to life, and delicacy of sentiment and humor are the musical chords which he plays with the touch of a master. His name never has been identified with a failure. His unbroken record of veritable box office sensations, attest to the high entertainment value of his product.

The association of William de Mille with P. D. C. marks the completion of a corps of directors unsurpassed in the industry.

His first production under P. D. C. banner will be "For Alimony Only", starring Leatrice Joy.

3 Directorial ACES!

Donald Crisp

Director of Douglas Fairbanks' "Don Q", most of th Bryant Washburn pictures; Vera Reynolds in "Sunny Side Up", her first starring picture; "The Yankee Clipper" and other specials.

Rupert Julian

The man who created a furore with "Three Faces East", "The Merry-Go-Round", and "The Phantom of the Opera". A great artist, a master showman, an inspired director, whose brilliant record is an open book.

George Melford

George Melford specializes in "money" pictures. This is proved by the success of such productions as "The Sheik", "Friendly Enemies", "Java Head", "The Great Impersonation", "Without Mercy", and other money-makers.

The amazing group of master craftsmen represented in the line-up of Directors on the P.D.C. program is a gilt-edged guarantee of money-making, Box-office attractions . . .

-and now! the KING of COMEDY

AL CHRISTIE

Al Christie has won the title of The Comedy King of Producers by right of achievement. In the sphere of Feature Comedy, he reigns supreme.

The record-breaking sensational successes of "Charley's Aunt" and "Madam Behave", prove that as a producer of laughter-provoking features that inundate the box office with dollars and send audiences away chuckling, Al Christie is without a peer.

The first big Christie Special on P. D. C. Program for 1926-27 is "The Nervous Wreck", based on the stage play which created a furore on Broadway and on tour.

American Season 1926

A Policy and A Purpose

In presenting for your consideration our schedule for the season 1926-27 we want first of all

To Be Rightly Understood

American Cinema Association is the First and Only National Distributing Organization comprised of leading independent distributors in every territory, supported by independent producing forces and organized to serve definite demands and requirements which we know exist.

These forces, combined and closely co-ordinated, make possible an economic procedure thru which a diversified program of consistently high class pictures without sacrifice to quality is made available.

David M. Hartford, President and Director General of Hartford Productions, is well known.

His Productions, "Back to God's Country," "Nomads of the North" and others, stand out as real box office attractions.

Mr. Hartford will supervise all and personally direct a number of the productions made by the producing organization bearing his name, thus insuring a program of the highest standard.

Upon the Distributors, listed on the opposite page, comprising A. C. A., falls the responsibility of presenting in a more complete manner all that A. C. A. represents and what we have to offer.

A. C. A., with ample resources and a personnel with many years of experience, is determined to maintain a policy which will go far toward establishing new precedents in the Motion Picture Industry.

Man Power

TIMES do change in the picture business! And how swiftly!

Today Broadway's biggest uptown building is going up with Adolph Zukor's picture under the corner-stone. The great structure puts the Times Annex within the shadow of its mass and height.

Yet only thirteen years ago Adolph Zukor occupied a little two-room office in the Times Building.

Further down the town, but not too far for Mr. Zukor to walk with some films in a suit case, was the grim edifice of the Trust. The mediaeval castle with its moat was never more inaccessible to the wayfarer.

It wasn't such a bad trust, at that. George Kleine was telling me the other day that the General Film Company seriously planned a theatre of its own on Broadway—a model theatre. But the proposition died because the Directors felt their exhibitor customers would object.

We congratulate Messrs. Zukor, Lasky and Kent for the astounding enterprise of Paramount Pictures as typified by the giant edifice of steel and stone.

It is, also, typically American and typically—motion pictures.

The true, inherent lesson, it seems to me, is that there are, there have been always, there always will be sky high opportunities in this industry of motion pictures for the right men, whoever they are.

There always will be; that's the point.

Right now, today, the way to the top is open to the right pair of shoulders and the right head above them—wide open.

The industrial situation is never locked. It simply won't stay locked. No human power is great enough to hold an agent which the whole world aspires to see and reacts to. The picture is a public possession. If the trade itself doesn't own it, certainly no part of the trade will believe that it can.

And I believe the above gentlemen, who have been wise enough to build a business which finds its Broadway expression in this great skyscraper, are also wise enough to subscribe heartily to the same views. The greater the piece of work a man does in this business, the more he realizes how small it is, in the world of motion pictures.

Every week I learn of new plans, new developments, new signal lights on the trade horizon which are significant enough to convince anyone that our industry today is pretty small and that the motion picture is mighty big by comparison, that the present is no indication at all of the future, that strong men, if such take hold, will do things around the world with motion pictures which are not in our trade category today.

It will take strong men and a good many of them.

I say that our industrial circle today is a small one. It is. The motion picture simply won't allow itself to be circumscribed by the hard and fast lines of entertainment now laid down for it. It won't stay put. It demands widening circles of expression and it will have widening circles of public appreciation; both vastly widening.

Opportunities? Yes, great ones today. Greater ones tomorrow.

Speaking Editorially

THAT was an interesting speech made last week to the members of the A. M. P. A. by Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the board of directors of F. B. O. and owner of the company. Mr. Kennedy, a Boston financier, who understands business methods thoroughly, took occasion to say:

"The motion picture industry is as ably financed, efficiently organized and economically operated as any other business, popular belief to the contrary.

"When I came into the industry actively, I found that an entirely erroneous idea prevailed outside the business as to its financial responsibilities and the manner in which the business was conducted.

"Instead of extravagance in cost of production, reckless waste in advertising and selling, inflated salaries and slipshod methods of operation, I found conservation one of the main factors, efficiency and a safe and sane handling of finances.

"THE motion picture industry," Mr. Kennedy continued, "is run as sensibly and as carefully as any business, and I have seen that the greatest possible care is taken to reach a mathematical ratio of expenditure. I am safe in saying that the motion picture industry does not have to take a back seat in this respect to any other organized form of enterprise. This may surprise the outsider, but it is indubitable."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has often commented upon the necessity of classifying theatres as to audiences and types of pictures, and it is interesting to have an opinion on this subject from a producer, Ray Rockett, of First National.

"On every side," says Rockett, "you hear people asking why there are not more 'highbrow' pictures. Why this and that is not put on the screen. Why Shakespere and Shaw and Plato and Aristotle and a lot of other people's works are not screened. Why there are not more fantasies, allegorical pictures.

"The reason is very evident. It is because the general public does not want such pictures; will not support them, and a company who makes them finds itself footing the bills and, in the language of the street, 'holding the bag.' No motion picture company can continue in that way, consequently so-called highbrow pictures have little chance.

"However, I believe that there is a distinct demand for such pictures among certain types of people throughout not only America but the world in general. There are many people who are not attending picture theatres now who would go if they had such pictures to see. But as they are in the minority nothing can be done about it at present.

"The solution to this problem, in my opinion, is fast approaching. It is coming with the placing of 'special' pictures in legitimate theatres at a price far above the charge of a regular motion picture theatre. People are beginning to realize that motion picture producers are making pictures which are worth two dollars to anyone. Of course, there are many who will not attend such theatres. For them will be the regular movie houses.

"THIS movement, I think, is going to spread throughout the country within the next few years. There will be at least one theatre in every big city where the 'highbrow' and the unusual will be seen and in which a real clientele will be built up; a clientele large enough so motion picture producers will be able to go ahead and screen stories which by reasons purely economical now keep them from the screen. With the coming of these theatres motion pictures will have taken a tremendous forward step and nothing will be impossible."

AN EDITOR ON BROADWAY

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

Louis B. Mayer

LOUIS B. MAYER said some things in his speech during the luncheon given in his honor Tuesday, at the Hotel Astor, that come mighty near being epigrams and if not, they at least, reflect so much sound common sense and sympathetic understanding of the picture business, that they are decidedly worth remembering.

Here are three of them, that have stuck indelibly in our memory, word for word:

"Great pictures are worth any price. Poor pictures are dear at any price."

"There is no great secret in making good pictures if you take the job seriously."

"Good pictures aren't just accidents if you have the organization."

We say amen with no reservations to Mr. Mayer's statements, and call attention to the fact that he speaks not from just theory but from the results of wide experience.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER has an organization that functions every day with no guess work and no "accidents." The results accomplished by this organization, built slowly but surely over the past two years, come as near perfection as human brains, unlimited expenditure and trained personnel, intelligently selected, can make it.

And there you have the reason for the unqualified success of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product of the past and current seasons.

Mr. Mayer tells you frankly that the credit is not particularly his except so far as he has been instrumental in building his organization. He professes no God-given intuition or supernatural talent.

But he does claim for himself that seriousness of purpose quoted above and a willingness to work and the heart to keep trying.

MANY kind things were said of Mr. Mayer at the Tuesday luncheon, not the least being the words of Mayor Walker who left affairs of state to be present, but nothing printed or spoken can pay a greater tribute than is obtained by reviewing M-G-M's pictures.

As David Harum told the Deacon, "That hoss' talks for itself."

THE youth of the screen! How important it is!

I have an idea that if a country-wide primary were made today it would reveal a strikingly new lineup of screen favorites.

Consider these contenders:

William Boyd, Louise Brooks, William Haines, Dolores Costello, Walter Pidgeon, Lois Moran, Elinor Fair, Olive Borden, Alberta Vaughn, George O'Hara, Ann Rork, Dorothy Seastrom, Joan Crawford, Georgia Hale, Fay Wray, Dorothy Gulliver, Buddy Rogers, Sally Rand, Richard Walling, Merna Kennedy, Walter Goss, Charles Brokaw, Marion Ivy Harris. These are just put down as they come to mind. I haven't covered the list.

And, of course, there are Vilma Banky, Clara Bow, Renee Adoree, Betty Bronson, Esther Ralston, Sally O'Neill, Mary Brian, George O'Brien—all still further up the ladder, yet all arrivals within the past year.

HERE'S the new youth of the screen; for the screen must ever have youth. Here is its life blood. Here's the hope of the future. And by that I do not mean that in these new faces in themselves lives the hope; many more new personalities will twinkle forth right along. The hope lies in the fact that the screen is widening its ability to rely upon this new talent and not upon a revolving list of featured players whose personalities are threadbare, however excellent their technique and whose excessive salaries make pictures profitable to no one but themselves.

I NOTE that in the new and imposing Fox program there is a singular absence of reliance upon the old-line names. With Famous Players-Lasky we are well aware of their intelligent and determined effort, starting nearly two years ago, to bring new talent to the screen. As for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer I need only cite their recent release "Brown of Harvard" to prove that they are making good pictures still better by new, clever and striking players. Cecil De Mille on his recent visit to New York said that what the industry most needs today is an all-around effort to bring forth the new and latent talent in which Hollywood alone abounds.

AND he is right. There is more ability in the background of Hollywood than appears on the screen. Showmen are needed to recognize it; directors are needed with courage enough to take a chance with it, instead of their blind reliance upon safety first; and last but most importantly the exhibitor must learn that the public is actually clamoring for a new zest in their screen fare.

IF the exhibitor doubts this let him sit with his audience more and get their reaction. In each case of the names cited above I have to my own satisfaction seen good pictures enlivened to no small degree and some pretty hopeless pictures made acceptable through these vivid characterizations by new and fresh personalities.

If I were an exhibitor I would go hunting for new names in the pictures.

JESSE L. LASKY, in his speech at the luncheon following the cornerstone laying of the new Paramount Building, called attention to the fact that his first offices were in the Putnam Building, which the new skyscraper replaces. He was producing acts, he said, for E. F. Albee.

When Mr. Albee arose his first words were: "I have always been called a vaudeville man. Of that I am proud. Now you can, if you will, call me a picture man. I hope you will."

A remarkable statement from a Roman! And a new epoch announced into the picture business.

ROBERT E. WELSH, recently assistant to the president of Associated Exhibitors, has been appointed by Carl Laemmle Advertising Manager of Universal. He assumes his new duties on May 24.

Bob Welsh, as everybody knows, was Managing Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS for several years and had a large part in its success. He came to us with a fine newspaper background and considerable experience in the picture business through his work as advertising manager for Kalem.

He has grown as the picture business has grown. Through his association with Wid Gunning he got a thorough knowledge of distribution problems. His work as Editor of Moving Picture World again showed his editorial ability, as well as his grasp of the industry as a whole.

Recently he has been in an important post at Associated Exhibitors, where he has been in contact, among other things, with production as well as advertising and exploitation and the administrative work of a film company.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

SIC TRANSIT

THE Famous Players-Lasky studio in Hollywood, which only a dozen years ago was a barn on a lemon grove rented by two ambitious young men with an idea, terminated its glorious career last Wednesday. With the stilling of whirring cameras and sputtering arcs on the last scene of "Mantrap," carpenters began demolishing the studio where so many stars and directors have risen to fame and to fortune, and from which had gone forth hundreds of photoplays to carry their message of entertainment and cheer to the world.

Axes and crowbars relentlessly tore into the dressing room walls on which Wallace Reid and other stars of yesterday hung the meager wardrobe that was theirs in the days when they were just starting their uncertain climb to screen success. The mirrors before which Gloria Swanson and Mary Pickford applied the rabbit's-foot in the days when their enduring fame was just being built, and which in more recent years have mirrored the anxious faces of hordes of extra players, were relegated to the scrapheap. Soon the site of the studio will be only a residential development, which will be pointed out to tourists as "where the Lasky studio used to be you know."

So passes the studio where Jesse L. Lasky and Cecil B. De Mille staked their slim resources on a film version of "The Squaw Man," offering the star, Dustin Farnum, his choice of $5,000 in cash or one-fourth interest in the company. He chose the cash.

Among other stars of the earlier days on the Lasky lot were Robert Warwick, Marguerite Clark, Geraldine Farrar, Marie Doro, Ina Claire, Carlyle Blackwell, Kathlyn Williams, Cleo Ridgely, Louise Huff, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Roberts and Harold Lockwood. Ethel Wales, now a character actress, was an actress then, too, but in addition she was casting Another well known vaudeville comedian to enter pictures is Lou Archer, who makes his screen debut in "Creeps," an Educational-Mermaid comedy. In this scene he is experiencing the sensation described in the title.

Doris Hill, leading lady in "The Better 'Ole" for Warner Bros., demonstrates that she bats 1,000 in the American Beauty League

Charming Peggy Shaw, well known in short subjects and now signed to play second feminine lead in "Subway Sadie" for First National

One of the latest recruits to the ranks of Mack Sennett beauties is Carmelita Geraghty, who will be seen in Pathe comedies director, bookkeeper, general office manager and secretary to De Mille and Lasky. What she did with her spare time is not disclosed.

The task of moving to the new 26-acre home at the United Studios will take about a month. Settings for "Old Ironsides" are already being constructed at the new plant, where shooting will commence shortly.

ALL-STAR ANIMAL CAST

FROM Fox Films comes a statement concerning a gander, some dogs, a jackass and a horse, which requires no comment or addition on our part. It reads:

That an all-star cast is no novelty on the Fox comedy lot at Los Angeles is emphasized by this presentation of a galaxy of famed comedians and the announcement that Brian Boru, the intellectual Celtic Gander, Pal the Smiling Dog, Purp the Presumptuous Understudy, Mike the Home Rule Democrat, and Prima Donna the blonde Filly have all been put together in a dazzling aggregation that will make "rib-ticklers" for laugh-lovers.

To attain fame in "Movie Land" the player must be either bright, brave or beautiful. Though many Foxites possess all of those atrributes that cannot be clamed for ALL of this newest comedy unit because Brian Boru, the philosophical Gander, is merely brave and bright. His birth proves him bright. Italian geese saved Rome by warning the guard that enemies were approaching. Nobody would claim that an Italian goose was as intelligent as an Irish gander.

Pal, Irish dog, has the speed of Tom Mix, the magnificent development of a George O'Brien, the patient and pathetic poise of an Alec B. Francis, but nobody would accredit him with the beauty of an Edmund Lowe. But Pal has a wealth of experience. He is an old-timer. He knows every camera trick. He thinks! He sees! He's an actor, is Pal.

And Mike the Jack (it's slander to call him mule) is a rare find. As the symbol of the political party that wins each Blue Moon but which gives Uncle Sam all his statesmen, Mike stands for human liberty and broad thinking. He is destined to attain a high position in the cinema world.

Last we come to Prima Donna, blonde as a Dakota wheatfield in October, sleek as a fresh dipped eel and richly equipped with youth, beauty, and brains. She may be said to be the equine Sandy of the screen.

A singularly fine cast—all richly equipped to do that for which they were engaged; make more comedies of such merit that the fame of Fox will go faster and further to all places where humor is appreciated and laughter is recognized as a gloom destroyer.

JOY IN NEW YORK

LEATRICE JOY, one of the Cecil B. De Mille stars, arrived in New York on Monday for a brief vacation and a view of the latest fashion creations. Her next picture, "For Alimony Only," makes heavy demands in the matter of gorgeous wardrobe, and Miss Joy decided to come East and make her selection at first hand.

A CANVAS CITY

OUT amidst the sagebrush in the sand wastes of Arizona, near Gap Trading Post on the Navajo reservation, stands a canvas city of more than two hundred tents, where Director George B. Seitz and members of "The Last Frontier" troupe are at work, while one hundred and fifty technical and construction men are building a reproduction of the old frontier town of Salina, Kans.

The duplicate of the old U. S. Frigate Constitution goes to sea to take part in the sea battles of "Old Ironsides" for Paramount off Catalina island. Unlike the historic vessel after which she is patterned, the new "Old Ironsides" carries radio equipment, through which the picture is directed

This peaceful invasion of the Navajo reservation was made possible through the efforts of Indian Commissioner Burke at Washington, who also authorized the director to negotiate for the services of more than fifteen hundred Navajo and Hopi Indians.

The Indians demand three dollars a day, no more and no less, out of which they provide their own lodging and food. The Navajos expect to be provided once a week with an elaborate barbecue, while the Hopis, in turn, expect occasional gifts of trinkets.

A NEW "OLD IRONSIDES"

THE ship that sired the American Navy, "Old Ironsides," sailed by proxy on Monday out of Los Angeles Harbor. While scores of small craft and water taxis filled with sightseers circled about and army and navy planes soared overhead, a replica of the gallant Constitution swung gracefully past the line of gray steel monsters of the modern battle armada and fired the naval salute of seven guns.

An order was given as the Constitution came alongside of the first of the Pacific fleet's floating forts, including the West Virginia, Nevada, Colorado and Arizona, and 100 stalwart ex-marines in the buff and blue uniforms of 125 years ago, stood in parade formation on the starboard side of the spar deck. The menacing black muzzles protruding through gun ports belched flame and smoke and from the decks and turrets of four modern warships clusters of sailors let forth a mighty cheer and swung their hats in tribute. It was a stirring moment, one that could scarcely have been exceeded by the sailing again of the original "Old Ironsides" which to-day is being rebuilt in the Boston Navy Yard.

The exact copy of the famous ship, that subdued Tripolitan pirates when America resolved on "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute," was completed at the Craig shipyards to participate in the Paramount historical sea pageant, "Old Ironsides," which James Cruze is directing.

Hundreds of people lined the dock when the mighty vessel got under way, sails bellying to the wind and towed by tugs through the confines of the inner harbor. The suspension bridge at Wilmington sheared air with its iron finger to let the giant-masted old sailing warrior pass through to outer harbor. From the high mizzen mast rippled the glorious flag that flew in triumph after the famous victory of Stephen Decatur in the Mediterranean Sea and from the main mast billowed the heroic blue pennant of the American Navy. Angry Neptune, the figure on the prow, cleaved the way with upraised club for the black hulk of the ship and vast webs of rigging swayed in the breeze, eager to carry more sail on its journey out into the Pacific where the historic sea battle of "Old Ironsides" will be fought again.

Tuesday the ship cast anchor off Catalina Island where Cruze, Wallace Beery, George Bancroft, Esther Ralston, Johnny Walker and Charles Farrel were waiting with 50 vessels and 3,000 sailors to begin the filming of the epic conflict on the waves that made Yankee courage the byword on the seven seas more than a century ago.

CADMAN PRAISES "GLORY"

THE picturization of "What Price Glory?" now being made by Fox Films will serve a helpful purpose in keeping alive the realization of what war really means, in the opinion of the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, expressed in a letter to the film company this week, in which he says: "I am reminded in this connection of what President Coolidge said on January 24, 1925, to a group of women attending the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War. In that address he said that it was for the generation who had seen the supreme demonstration of the futility and the horror of war to keep alive the sentiment against war. The motion picture art enables us to do this very thing; what the historian, the press, the pulpit and the platform cannot do, may be accomplished through the motion picture."

Meanwhile, production on "What Price Glory?" is partially interrupted by an indirect effect of the recent British general strike. Ten cases of sketches, photographs and war data loaned to Fox Films by the French Government were to have arrived in New York this week in the hold of the S.S. Cameronia. When they could not be shipped from London they were rushed to Glasgow to be loaded on the Cameronia, but conditions on the Clyde made it likewise impossible to load them there. The earlier sequences of the story, laid in China and the Philippines, are nearly finished, and work on the all-important French sequences may be partially held up until the material arrives from Europe.

A CREATIVE DIRECTCR

PAUL LENI, brought to this country by Universal, may be counted on to bring something new and vital to the development of the atmospheric prologue, in addition to the contributions which he will bring to pictures themselves. Leni is nothing if not versatile. In several notable instances abroad he designed both the picture and the prologue to accompany it, obviously an ideal arrangement when the designer is capable of both.

Regarding Leni's qualifications there can be no question. First a painter, he turned to the theatre many years ago as a richer field for expression, and achieved distinction both as a director and a designer. In pictures, likewise, has been both a director and a designer of setting and costume, though he prefers to be thought of as the former. In producing prologues he has the benefit of his stage training, plus his understanding of the needs of picture houses.

His first effort here is the prologue to "Outside the Law," now running at the Colony Theatre in New York City. This presentation, while neither pretentious nor elaborate, is strikingly novel and original. We understand that Universal plans to have Leni create additional prologues from time to time, with a scheme in view for making them available to houses playing the pictures.

Prologues, however, are not the primary reason for bringing Leni to America, and an interesting announcement will probably be forthcoming in a few days concerning his first directorial activity at Universal City. If the plan now under consideration materializes, it promises much. Watch Leni.

"ALOMA" ON BROADWAY

DESPITE the size of the Rialto Theatre, New York City, it was scarcely large enough last Saturday evening to accommodate the crowd that turned out for the premiere of "Aloma of the South Seas." Gilda Gray appeared in person in the prologue, supported by a considerable company of Hawaiians—an event in which there was practically as much interest as in the picture itself.

A brilliant aggregation of first-nighters turned out, and the picture received much commendation for its remarkable pictorial effectiveness and atmosphere.

BEBE CONVALESCING

BEBE DANIELS, Paramount star comedienne, has left the Harbor where she was a patient for almost three weeks, following a fall from her horse in Central Park. Miss Daniels is convalescing at the Hotel Biltmore. It is expected that her departure for the West Coast to make her new comedy, "The College Flirt," will be delayed for two more weeks.

THE ACADEMY PASSES

ONE of the all-too-few landmarks of earlier days in New York, that strange city that destroys and rebuilds itself every twenty years, came to an end on Sunday night when the last performance was given in the Academy of Music at 14th street and Irving place. The building where Adelina Patti made her American debut in 1859, and where the Prince of Wales, later Edward VII., was entertained in 1860, will make way for a 24-story structure to be built by the Consolidated Gas Company.

The Academy was built to take the place of Castle Garden and to meet the demand for a really gorgeous home of the opera and the drama. Among the illustrious stars who trod the boards there were Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, John McCullough, Helene Modjeska, Salvini the Elder, E. H. Sothern, Julia Marlowe and Blanche Bates. The opening night price was fixed at $3, which created a furore of protest and ended in a hasty reduction. These days, tickets for a Follies opening are frequently held by speculators at $25 to $50 each. So changes New York—and so passes the last landmark of the glory that was Fourteenth street, while the Great White Way creeps steadily northward past a spot that was rural when the Academy of Music threw open its doors.

A DUAL PREMIERE

BROADWAY'S first two dollar double feature bill opened at the Times Square Theatre, New York City, on Tuesday evening, when P. D. C. gave "Silence" and "The Prince of Pilsen" their premiere. Both are based on Broadway productions—the one melodramatic and sombre, the other farcical and hilarious, forming a striking contrast and providing a well balanced evening's entertainment. The presentation was staged under the direction of Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, who personally conducted the orchestra in brilliant fashion. The two pictures made widely varying demands upon Dr. Riesenfeld's ability in their musical requirements, and both were scored in a thoroughly satisfying and effective manner.

P. D. C. DELEGATES RETURN

HOME office executives of Producers Distributing Corporation and the New York district delegation returned to Manhattan last Friday from the International convention held in Los Angeles. In the party were: F. C. Munroe, W. J. Morgan, H. O. Duke, R. H. Clark, R. A. Morrow, George W. Harvey, James M. Flinn, J. N. Naulty, Frank Pope, Frank Wilstach, Carroll Trowbridge, George M. Dillon, Frank Drumm, Dave Gross, Robert Wolff, W. G. Humphries.

A STAR QUARTETTE

FOUR asterisks were passed out by the National Board of Review this week, but none of them found their way to the features reviewed. The short subjects to be selected for the honor included "Wild America," a Fox reel showing the wonders of our national parks and reservations, and three issues of Pathe Review, Nos. 21, 22 and 23, respectively.

FILM GOLFERS ON TOES

THE deadly driver, the militant mashie and the potent putter are receiving many a work-out these days at the hands of various prominent members of the industry residing in the East, in preparation for an event which tops in current interest the foreign situation, block booking or extended runs—the Spring Film Golf Tournament, to be held on Tuesday, June 8, at the Winged Foot Golf Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Plans laid look toward the liveliest time on record, and if you've attended past tournaments you'll know what that means. Motion Picture News, as in the past, will present a cup as one of the trophies. The golf standing of the News will be protected by the presence of William A. Johnston, Fred J. Beecroft (official collector of score-cards) and J. S. (Sarazen) Dickerson.

FASHIONS FROM BERLIN

NOT from Paris but from Berlin will come this year's new style trends, according to H. M. K. Smith, costume director for the Paramount Long Island studio, who returned this week from a European tour with photographic evidence of what the well-dressed woman will wear during the next twelve months. According to Smith, who was for many years executive manager of the famed establishment of Lucille, Lady Duff Gordon, virtually all of the fashions observed in the Paris shops may be found almost simultaneously in the smart Fifth Avenue stores. As it is essential that the clothes shown on the motion picture screen be from six to eight months in advance of the current mode, Smith plans to utilize German fashions, rather than Parisian versions, for next season.

ANOTHER WILLIAM FOX

THERE is now a second William Fox in the world, he having made his advent on Saturday morning, May 8, weighing in at 8½ pounds. Aaron Fox, brother of the William Fox, who is such an important figure in the film industry, is the father. Baptismal ceremonies were conducted at the parental home on May 15, with Mr. and Mrs. William Fox as godparents.

TOM HAMLIN IMPROVED

THOMAS J. HAMLIN, publisher of the New York Film Curb, is reported resting nicely following an operation at the Polyclinic Hospital. Best wishes are extended for a speedy and complete recovery.

Convention Program is Announced

Business and Entertainment Events Scheduled as Delegates Entrain for Meeting at Los Angeles

OFFICIAL announcement was made this week of the business and entertainment programs of the seventh annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which will open at Los Angeles on June 1.

The New York delegation's special train leaves Grand Central Sunday, May 23, at 3.30 o'clock, with many of the national leaders and officers, including President R. F. Woodhull, Business Manager Joseph M. Seider; Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board of Directors; A. Julian Brylawski, Chairman of the Administrative Committee; Nathan Yamins, National Director; L. M. Sagal, National Treasurer; E. Thornton Kelly, of the M. P. T. O. A. Contact Bureau; Louis F. Blumenthal; Leon Rosenblatt; Sam Sonin; and a large number of others.

The train will arrive at Los Angeles on May 31, and that evening the first important convention event will be held when the National Board of Directors and Executive Committee meets. Headquarters will be at the Ambassador Hotel, where all sessions of the convention will take place.

Under the direction of Glenn Harper, an elaborate entertainment program has been arranged. Each morning will be devoted to tours of the studios; the business sessions will begin at one o'clock and last until five, and the evenings will be given over to banquets and the like.

Wednesday night has been designated as Rodeo Night. On Thursday, one of the principal convention events will occur. This will be a Testimonial Dinner to Sydney S. Cohen on the occasion of his retirement from official position in the organization. Friday the Mardi Gras Ball will be given, with the Association of Motion Picture Producers as hosts to the delegates. All the screen celebrities of the film colony are scheduled to be present.

Each business session of the convention will be preceded by a luncheon at which delegates will be the guests of the various producing companies.

There was considerable discussion this week as to the probable next president of the organization. It is known that President Woodhull is a candidate for re-election, and it was also said that others likely to be in the race were Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh, and A. Julian Brylawski, of Washington, D. C. It was considered likely that the West would have several candidates.

Following is the business program, announced by the Convention Committee, consisting of Messrs. Cohen, Brylawski and Seider:

Monday, May 31.

8:00 P. M.—Meeting of the National Board of Directors and Executive Committee.

Tuesday, June 1.

No Picketing by Labor is Canada Judgment

A very important judgment affecting the local branches of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators was handed down in the law court at Vancouver, B. C., on May 13 when Justice Gregory granted a perpetual injunction preventing the members of the Vancouver labor unions from "unlawfully interfering with the business of John A. Schuberg," the latter being a well-known local exhibitor and owner of a group of moving picture houses. Schuberg was also awarded $1,750 damages for injury to his theatre business.

The action was the result of a picketing of a Schuberg theatre by the union men, following a disagreement. Schuberg had reduced the number of stage hands at the theatre from seven to five, whereupon the union men employed at the theatre were called or walked out, Schuberg replacing them with others.

The defendants then distributed handbills and announced by parading motorcars and sandwich men that Schuberg's Theatre "was unfair to organized labor."

G. A. Rogers Severs Relations With Fox Film

Gustavus A. Rogers, formerly general counsel of the Fox Film Corporation, William Fox Theatrical Enterprises and Fox Circuit Theatres, in a statement made this week announced that he has disassociated himself entirely from these corporations.

Rogers, according to his statement, has not been active in any of the Fox enterprises since February, 1920, though retaining his association in some of the Fox ventures. For the past several years there were pending negotiations for his retirement which have now been completed and he has sold to William Fox his interests and those of his associates.

Saul E. Rogers, Gustavus' brother, remains in his position of vice-president and general counsel of Fox.

F. & R. Managers to Hold Semi-Annual Meet

Managers of the Finkelstein and Ruben circuit will hold their semi-annual convention in Minneapolis July 13, 14 and 15. For demonstration purposes they will be divided into three factions: St. Paul, Minneapolis and key cities, composed of the Range towns, Duluth, Superior and key cities of North and South Dakota.

The convention will be far the most pretentious yet attempted by Finkelstein and Ruben. Extensive plans are under way for constructive business sessions as well as elaborate social functions.

Ohio M. P. T. O. Endorses Palmer's Candidacy

The Board of Trustees of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio has unqualifiedly endorsed the candidacy of Judge H. T. Palmer, present mayor of Fairport and a fellow member of the board, for state senator representing the 24th-26th State Senatorial District, which embraces Lake, Geauga, Summit, Portage and Ashtabula Counties.

Formal Ceremonies Mark Placing of Paramount Building Cornerstone

WITH suitable ceremonies and before a notable gathering, the cornerstone of the Paramount building now under construction on Times Square, New York City, was laid at noon on Wednesday by Mayor James J. Walker. Talks by Will H. Hays, by the Mayor and by the president of the Broadway Civic Association were an important feature.

Following the laying of the cornerstone, a luncheon was held, attended by an imposing group of leading figures in New York. Speeches were made by Adolph Zukor, by James L. Lasky, by E. F. Albee, Mayor Walker and others.

Mayor Walker, in his address in connection with the laying of the cornerstone, paid high tribute to motion pictures and to the officials of Famous Players-Lasky. He pointed out that the building was an unselfish enterprise, because although motion pictures were a commercial enterprise, the site of the new Paramount building is the most desirable in the world, from a realty standpoint, and might have been made to return a far greater revenue in some other manner.

Highlights of Will Hays' address were:

"The motion picture has been developed by the people. To this theatre, will come some 80,000 persons each week—80,000, and to see nothing more substantial than shadows—shadows cast upon a screen. For a mighty building, erected to house shadows, we will lay a cornerstone today. But those shadows will tell a story and to that screen, as to the screens in London, in Port Said, in Sullivan, Indiana, and at thousands of crossroads, will be brought the entire world outside for all to see. This spot is called the Crossroads of the World—and, indeed, it is, and indeed it more will be, for under this roof all the world, literally all the peoples thereof and all the places therein, will pass before our eyes.

"It is a wonderful thing, the newspaper, indeed—a wonderful agent of service. To the press of the country, the older method of expression, we look as to an elder brother, ambitious to serve as it serves. Within these walls millions will be entertained, educated, uplifted and made happy. My best wishes to them. My best wishes to you, Mr. Mayor, who personified not only this great city, but the success that can come to its sons. My best wishes to you, Mr. Zukor, and to you, Mr. Lasky. As the planters of the small acorn from which this great oak has grown, you are, indeed, benefactors of humanity. The motion picture brings three benefactions as possibly no other instrumentality can do. It entertains—and let us remember always that just as you serve the leisure hours of the masses so do you rivet the girders of society. It instructs—a truly noble function. And above all—it brings the peoples of the earth to know each other—to understand; and when men understand they do not hate, when they do not hate, they do not make war. The universal language of motion pictures will make an immeasurable contribution toward changing ignorance into understanding, misunderstanding into friendship, hate into love, constant combat into continued amity. And that the motion picture may so function under this roof, is my very best wish for the Paramount building, and those responsible for it."

M. P. T. O. A. Service Record Reviewed

Hundreds of Exhibitor Problems and Cases Handled by Joseph M. Seider as Business Manager of National Organization

IN an exclusive interview this week, Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. A., told in detail the story of the service rendered by the organization to the exhibitor since he took office a few months ago.

Service to the theatre owner has been the keynote—and service of almost every conceivable sort. Hundreds of complaints and appeals have been handled and settled. The organization, in more than one instance, actually stood between the exhibitor and financial ruin. Negotiations were carried on between exhibitor and distributor, with the M. P. T. O. A. as both counsel and intermediary. Disputes between exhibitors themselves were patched up. Legislative activities were carried on. And all this involved a tremendous mass of detail.

Summed up, so far as a record of this size can be summed up, here is an idea of what it means to be the Business Manager of the national organization for a few short months:

Adjustments on film rentals without recourse to arbitration—110.

Adjustments of other exhibitor disputes with distributors—250.

Exhibitor cases prepared, tried and won before Arbitration Boards—75. No case handled by National Headquarters was lost.

Fifteen hundred exhibitor letters received and answered on all kinds of problems dealing with theatre operation.

Scores of music tax cases throughout the country adjusted. In some of these, reductions were obtained in license fees after contracts had been made with the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. And all the cases were settled, Mr. Seider stated, "with the fine co-operation of the Society."

Exhibitors were supplied with arguments to be used in handling local or state legislation, in no instance did the M. P. T. O. A. attempt to interfere locally. The theatre owner was given advice, as required; but the national organization, respecting the principle of local self-government, kept in the background.

Co-operation with the Hays office in the interpretation, for national application, of contract clauses in arbitration proceedings.

In his interview with THE NEWS, Mr. Seider confined himself to facts. He opened his files freely and invited the fullest study of the correspondence and data bearing on service to the exhibitor.

"I prefer to let the evidence speak for itself," said Mr. Seider. "But let me sketch briefly the principles we followed. First, no exhibitor case was handled unless the M. P. T. O. A. was first convinced that justice lay on the exhibitor's side.

"Furthermore, our whole aim was co-operation and adjustment; the ending of quarrels and not their perpetuation; a constructive, not a destructive attitude toward the industry as a whole.

"The organization became not only a clearing-house for exhibitor troubles, but the exhibitor's counsel, in some cases his judge, but at all times his friend."

The extent of this service work is shown by typical cases taken at random from the mass of documents on file at national headquarters, representing practically every State in the Union.

Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager M. P. T. O. A.

A large number of cases dealing with exhibitor-distributor disputes included these:

A theatre owner refused to go to arbitration. Through the intervention of the M. P. T. O. A. a lawsuit was avoided and the matter adjusted satisfactorily to all parties.

Complaint was received from a theatre owner in the East that he had been induced to sign an unfair contract. An examination of the facts showed that the exhibitor was equally responsible with the salesman. However, there was an internal situation which made it necessary to obtain an adjustment, otherwise there would have been a dissolution of partnership in the exhibitor firm. Through the courtesy of the vice-president of the distributing company, upon presentation of the facts to him, the matter was adjusted.

A request was received from a theatre owner in New England for an opinion on a contract he had signed with a certain distributor. An analysis of the releases in question showed that the distributor failed to deliver four pictures and changed the titles and stories on six others and the stars in four. It followed that since the distributor had defaulted on his contract the exhibitor was relieved from the performance of the pictures unplayed. In order to arrive at this conclusion, it was necessary for national headquarters to send the exhibitor a thirty-page analysis of the company's entire product.

Still another theatre owner, in one of the Eastern States, met with the competition of a large producer-exhibitor circuit. This case is regarded by Mr. Seider as one of the most important of the year.

"We took the matter up with Mr. Hays," said Mr. Seider. "Mr. Hays brought about a meeting between the General Manager of the producer-distributor company, the principals involved and ourselves. From the evidence developed at this conference, we came to the conclusion that the distributor was not receiving a fair amount of money for the showing of his pictures and was practically locked out of the town.

"We made a plea for the exhibitor. In spite of the fact that the distributor was not legally responsible, a meeting was held between the theatre head of the corporation and the exhibitors, and, although the matter is not completely settled, the last word received from the exhibitor was that the theatre head had said: 'Submit your proposition. We do not want to fight you. We will work together with you as far as possible.'

"In Western Pennsylvania, a case had already been decided by the Arbitration Board, but the decision seemed to us to be unfair to the exhibitor. We took the matter up with the president of the distributing company and an adjustment was made with the exhibitor.

"Two similar cases arose in New Hampshire, necessitating an arbitration hearing at Boston. Nathan Yamins, a lawyer and member of the National Board of Directors, represented the exhibitors. We forwarded to Mr. Yamins a brief on the entire situa-

"The exhibitors' contention was that they were not bound to the contract because the distributor had deleted two pictures, and, since the offer of the exhibitor had been changed without his consent, there was no contract. The exhibitor was willing to proceed with the playing of the pictures, but maintained that he could not play them at a higher rate of speed than one picture in two months. The contract provided that the pictures should be played one a month.

"The Arbitration Board sustained the exhibitor in his contention, but, unlike a court of law, compromised the situation by assuming that since the exhibitor was willing to play the pictures at the rate of one in two months, the verdict should provide that the exhibitor was correct in his defense but should play the pictures as he had indicated that he was willing to do prior to arbitration.

"As a result of these cases, eight individual theatre owners from the vicinity paid their dues to the M. P. T. O. A.

"And now here is a very interesting case, in which, among many others, we had the co-operation of Will H. Hays in the solution of a difficult situation: a theatre owner lost his money and was compelled to close his theatre. The distributors brought an action against the exhibitor for unfulfilled contracts, the total amount involved in the suits being close to $25,000. When he referred the matter to Mr. Hays, he asked for certain proofs of the sincerity and honesty of the theatre owner involved.

"We furnished these, Mr. Hays took the matter up with the distributors and the legal actions were withdrawn."

Conference Held on Contract Changes

Exhibitors' Advisory Committee Meets with Hays and Distributors on "Added Clauses" Situation

MEETINGS, held this week at the Hays office on the "added clauses" situation, were concluded May 18, with the issuance of the following statement, signed by Charles L. O'Reilly, E. V. Richards, W. A. Steffes, R. F. Woodhull and Will H. Hays:

"A meeting was held today at the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., attended by the representatives of all national and regional distributors of motion pictures and the Advisory Committee of exhibitors appointed at the Union League Club meeting held in February of this year, consisting of Charles L. O'Reilly, E. V. Richards, W. A. Steffes and R. F. Woodhull.

"The subject matter of the meeting was a consideration of the administrative methods of the various distributors for putting into effect the Standard Exhibition Contract adopted in the industry by agreement between the distributors and the exhibitors. This Standard Contract being intended as a vehicle for the agreement between distributor and exhibitor for the exhibition of motion pictures contemplated the insertion of special terms peculiar to the distribution method of each company.

"No changes have been made in the standard clauses of the Exhibition Contract.

"Furthermore, there were accepted by the distributors at the Advisory Committee's suggestion the following constructive suggestions of the Advisory Committee, to wit:

"1. The establishment of a one-year statute of limitations preventing the assertion of stale claims before Boards of Arbitration and limiting such claims to those which have arisen within one year;

"2. An arrangement whereby Boards of Arbitration are given equity power to the extent of restraining anticipated breaches of contract by distributors or other exhibitors."

Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, on May 19 issued a statement in which he said:

"I am, to say the least, astonished that the distributors were successful in retaining some of the clauses that nullify the spirit of the Standard form of contract. We refer particularly to the clause that allows the distributor, upon finding that pictures turn out better than expected, to road show them and be relieved from delivering them to the contract holder. This clause, no doubt, was inspired by an unsuccessful attempt to "big brother" theatre owners into paying more money for a photoplay that they had already bought and contracted for.

"It is true that a greater majority of the clauses added had been withdrawn. The fact remains, however, that the distributors were successful in retaining the particular ones they really wanted.

"The contract originally agreed upon was a fair contract. What the contract is today, I cannot say. The contract now is uniform only as to the standard clauses. The added clauses are all different. Almost every distributor joined the procession in adding clauses. Those already not on the band-wagon joined just prior to the commencement of the Advisory Committee session. I do not believe there are two contracts entirely alike. It looks very much as if Mr. Hays, in all sincerity, tried to bring about a uniform contract but the distributors insisted upon having their own way.

"Two propositions proposed by a member of the Advisory Committee benefit the exhibitor. We would have preferred, however, that the original contract would have been given a fair trial and, upon experience, if any changes become necessary to make them.

"R. F. Woodhull, our National President, has authorized me to issue the following statement in his name:

"'I did not act on the Advisory Committee as the President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, but only as R. F. Woodhull, an exhibitor. I am not satisfied with the results of the conference, but it was the best obtainable under the circumstances.'

"I shall unbiasedly report the entire situation to the theatre owners at the Los Angeles Convention with specific recommendations so that the delegates representing the members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will know the facts and have an opportunity to take the necessary steps to protect the interests of those whom they represent."

Vaudeville on the Wane, Says Mayer

M-G-M Production Head States Feature Film is Deciding Factor in Establishing High Grosses; Few Plays Fit for Screening

LOUIS B. MAYER, vice-president and general manager of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in a speech at a testimonial luncheon tendered him at the Astor Hotel, New York, told exhibitors that "vaudeville is going out because of its sameness." Continuing he said: "Vaudeville to-day opens with a dumb act and closes with a dumb act. Motion pictures will put vaudeville out of business in a few years. The limited number of all-vaudeville theatres now operating cannot survive motion picture competition. This also is partly due to the continuous repetition during past years in vaudeville, of the same personalities in the same acts. The theaters which show vaudeville and pictures at popular prices will continue to have a large following, but even this type of entertainment will in many cases, give way to pictures with stage presentations such as have been in vogue in recent years.

"Stage presentations in picture theaters will continue to boost the low water mark of weekly box-office receipts. However, the feature film will more than ever be the deciding factor in establishing high grosses. For instance, at the Capitol Theatre, Major Bowes through his presentations has added considerably to the weekly receipts of that institution. Yet the fact remains that the business at that great theatre fluctuates between $40,000 and $75,000 in the week, depending upon the drawing power of the feature film he shows. This is true of every motion picture theatre in the country, in proportion to its seating capacity. Stage presentations are therefore great for picture theatres from the standpoint of establishing institutional prestige and making regular patrons, but the feature film production will always be the backbone of the theatre."

Turning to the stage as a source of material for motion pictures, Mayer was particularly emphatic in his denunciation of legitimate plays. He said:

"Few of the plays along Broadway today can be considered for the screen. No self-respecting motion picture producer would attempt to screen the type of story now prevalent in Times Square. The success of these plays is built on shifting sands that will ruin the legitimate theatre in due course if something is not done to clean the American stage.

"Because we believe that we cannot look to the stage or the printed book for the bulk of our screen material we have consistently obtained writers of note to create material directly for the screen. To-day we have 70 writers under contract, the largest galaxy of writers ever assembled by one company."

Discussing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's product for the new season, Mayer said the organization had four new stars in the making and named Sally O'Neill, Renee Adoree, Joan Crawford and William Haines as the people being groomed for stellar honors.

Mayor James J. Walker officially welcomed Mayer and eulogized his career both within and without the industry. Dr. A. H. Giannani, of the Bowery National Bank, was another speaker.

Sam Eckman, Jr., division manager of M. G. M. for Boston, Buffalo, New York, Albany and New Haven, presided. Several hundred exhibitors were present.

American Film Exports on Increase

British Exports and Imports Register Decline; Austria Passes 20 to 1 Contingent Law, Effective September 3

EXPORTS of American film during the month of March totaled more than 19,500,000 feet and had a value of $688,503, according to figures just compiled by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Shipments by classes included 1,965,360 feet of raw stock, valued at $81,469; 448,953 feet of negatives, worth $67,264, and 16,266,990 feet of positives, with a value of $525,750. In addition, 878,198 feet of film, valued at $14,020, were shipped to Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico.

By far the most important market during the month was the United Kingdom, whose takings included 721,364 feet of raw stock, valued at $28,006; 209,171 feet of negatives, valued at $50,868, and 617,617 feet of positives, valued at $52,041. The best market for positives was Australia, which country took 2,590,240 feet, valued at $80,011. Canada imported 1,898,580 feet of positives, valued at $65,436, and Mexico, Argentine and Brazil also took more than a million feet apiece.

British Exports Decline

British exports of motion picture films for the first three months of 1926 decreased in the aggregate by nearly 12,000,000 linear feet from the figure for the corresponding period of 1925, according to a Consular report to the Department of Commerce from London.

Despite the net fall above stated, the aggregate of British exports during the first three months of this year was over 12,600,000 linear feet larger than the total imports.

Contrasted with 1924, the only fall this year occurred in negative films, which were lower by about 34,000 linear feet, whereas there was an increase of nearly 7,000,000 linear feet of blank film, and of 1,600,000 of positive film, the value of which, however, was less than two years ago.

The following statement shows details of exports during the first three months of 1924, 1925, and 1926:

Blank film	1924	1925	1926
Linear feet	8,300,032	25,846,896	15,053,122
Blank film Values	$21,672	$69,668	$42,910
Positive film, Linear feet	4,927,801	7,682,541	6,620,707
Positive film, Values	$35,879	$44.640	$30,414
Negative film, Linear feet	134,290	107,275	100,509
Negative film, Values	$5,195	$3,126	$2,259

Imports Also Wane

British imports of motion picture films during the first three months of 1926 amounted to only 10,009,732 linear feet as compared with 36,924,931 linear feet received during the same period of 1925, but the decline in value was far from being proportionate, decreasing to $255,250 from $285,619, in the first quarter of 1925, ac- per cent. of that 1925 output was exported, cording to a Consular report to the Department of Commerce from London.

Ray Rockett, producer for First National.

The drop in footage this year is the more striking when considered in relation to imports during the first quarter of 1924, when 24,950,077 linear feet were received, as during that period and the prseent time the operation of the McKenna duties was in force; it would seem, therefore, that the fall has not been occasioned solely by the reimposition of the duties, but to some considerable extent by the flooding which occurred during the second quarter of 1925 in anticipation of the tax, and the non-absorption so far of such greatly increased imports.

In comparing receipts during the period in the three years 1924-26, blank films show the heaviest decline; as against 17,947,517 linear feet and 20,707,592 linear feet in 1924 and 1925 respectively, current imports totaled only 4,506,201 linear feet, whereas positive films, which rose from 5,180,721 linear feet in 1924 to 14,510,196 linear feet in the following year, declined to 3,908,668 linear feet in 1926, showing a difference of about 1,200,000 linear feet contrasted with 1924 when they were also subject to duty, against a fall in blank films, similarly compared, of nearly 14,600,000 linear feet. Of negative films the figures indicated comparatively small changes, 1,794,839 linear feet being imported in 1924, declining to 1,707,143 linear feet in 1925, and to 1,594,863 linear feet this year.

German Film Production

The total German production of motion picture raw film last year was about 120 million meters as compared with 40 to 50 million meters in 1921 and 1922, and 75 per cent. of that 1925 output was exported according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Assistant Commercial Attache Douglas Miller, Berlin. The value of last year's raw film production is said in Germany to be about 30 million marks.

The official German foreign trade figures show total exports of negative film last year to have been 56,747,300 meters, weighing 4,767 double centners, valued at 11,253,000 marks, of which about 30,032,400 meters were sent to the United States. Exports of positive film in 1925 were 4,215,200 meters, weighing 311 double centners, valued at 1,071,000 marks. Nearly all of Germany's exports of exposed positive film go to neighboring European countries.

Germany's exports of exposed negatives in the same year were 93,000 meters valued at 123,000 marks; of this amount 34,700 meters or more than one-third went to the United States.

Imports of negative film in the same year were 821,500 meters, weighing 76 double centners, valued at 157,000 marks.

Imports of exposed positives were 132,700 meters, weighing 72 double centners, valued at 466,000 marks of which 307,600 meters came from the United States and 137,800 meters from Great Britain.

Austrian Contingent

An Austrian decree establishing an import contingent for foreign films was published on May 13, to become effective on September 3, 1926, for a two-year period ending August 31, 1928, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache H. Lawrence Groves at Vienna.

During the above period import licenses will be granted to film importers to the extent of at least 20 for each suitable domestic film produced or purchased. Short films, cultural, and educational films are to be exempt from import restrictions until further notice.

In order to determine whether a domestic film submitted as a basis for import privileges is suitable, as described above, and whether an applicant for import privilege is entitled to such privilages, a Film Control Committee will be formed, to be composed both of government representatives and of representatives of the Austrian film industry.

Banned But One Per Cent. of Films in Alberta

Only one per cent. of moving pictures examined in the Province of Alberta have been condemned, according to a statement made by Howard Douglas of Edmonton, chief moving picture censor for Alberta, at a dinner given by Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, at the Palliser Hotel, Calgary, Alberta, on May 11.

One of the chief speakers was M. A. Milligan of Toronto, general manager of Famous-Lasky in Canada. Others who officiated included William Kelly, manager of the Galgary branch of the Famous-Lasky organization, who presided as chairman, and John Hazza, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Calgary, who represented Famous Players Canadian Corp.

Universal Chain Plans New Expansion

Present Holdings of 350 Houses to Reach 1,000; Community Houses Especially Desired, Al Fair Announces

THE plans of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises for theatre development during the coming year are unusually ambitious, as shown by an announcement this week at the Universal Home office. Not only will the present holdings of that organization, which includes ownership, interest or leasing arrangements with more than 350 theatres, be increased to 1,000 theatres, but the acquisitions of the corporation will be made according to a definite and well-studied plan for theatre betterment. The important phase of this development will be the emphasis on theatre locations in community and trade centers which will draw patrons from a radius of twenty to forty miles.

The theatres to be built or acquired by the Laemmle organization will be of the ultra-modern type, located in key cities and towns. Where possible, local interests will be sought and co-operative relationships with the various communities built up. This method of theatre founding is best illustrated in the new Candler theatre in Atlanta, which Universal has acquired on a long term lease, and which is tied up with the big Macy Department store being established in the same building.

"It is to the best interests of the local trades in any community to foster and encourage the motion picture theatres because they bring people into town from the nearby countryside and they bring the townsmen to the business section more frequently," explains Al Fair, general manager of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises. "In many instances the local interests are co-operating in the financing of our motion picture theatre propositions.

"It is not Mr. Laemmle's policy to build in communities that already have sufficient theatres, however. In negotiating for houses, the good will that Mr. Laemmle enjoys has been of tremendous help.

"It is well known in the business that Mr. Laemmle will never give anyone the worst of it. The days of slick trading in theatres is past. It is now a question of man power and dealing man to man. The personnel in this business is on a higher plane than ever before.

Hal Roach, producer of comedies for Pathe release.

"We have been making a thorough study of the theatre situation in this country and our plans are based upon our conclusions. Outstanding among the things we have learned are several basic facts. One is that many theatres now operating are obsolete. With the increase in good roads and the centralization of national life, it has come about that high-class theatres located in community and trade centers are the real drawing forces for sections thereabouts, even to a radius of twenty to forty miles. The cross-roads theatre is on the wane. Today the farmer and his family motor to the nearest industrial or trade center where they can see the latest pictures in attractive surroundings.

"We are figuring fifteen years ahead in the building of our present theatres. We are trying to make community show places and community foci of our theatres. For instance, our building policy contemplates a place in every one of our theatres, where women may meet as in a club. It will supply a point of contact for women when they come downtown to shop and see a picture.

"We now have a corps of experts operating throughout the country, negotiating for new theatres or the purchase of property to build on. It is of especial interest to note that we are planning extensive operations in factory and industrial centers, where we plan theatres to be run for the working people—theatres they will take pride in and which will be an essential part of their lives. In this we have the co-operation of business and financial people all over the country.

"Our completed chains of theatres will be operated regionally, just as several of our chains now are operated, such as our Nebraska, our Kansas and our Florida theatres, for instance. The men who handle the various regional chains will be actually on the ground. We find this system works out ideally and mean to build it up, as we enlarge our holdings."

Final arrangements were consummated on Tuesday between the Wolfson-Meyer Theatre Enterprises, Inc., and Universal Pictures Corporation, whereby the latter acquires a fifty per cent. interest in the new Capitol Theatre, Miami's latest film house. Sidney Meyer, well known in film circles both as a former sales executive and as an exhibitor, came up from Florida to complete the deal.

The Capitol is located in the downtown section of Miami on the main shopping thoroughfare. Its seating capacity is 1,500, with 900 seats in the orchestra and 600 in the balcony. The policy of the theatre will be first-run features only, with either weekly or bi-weekly changes of program.

The Wolfson-Meyer circuit consists of eight other theatres, all located in or near Miami and all acquired by them within the last year. These theatres are the Lyric, Lincoln, and Temple of Miami; the Grand and Dixie in West Palm Beach; the Hodges in Hialeah; and the Palace in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Pollack Interests May Build in Jersey

RIGHT on top of the announced merger between the Stanley-Fabian-Bratter and Pollack interests comes word that the latter concern contemplates another construction program in three New Jersey cities. Although these houses may eventually be absorbed by the Stanley-Fabian interests, the present report indicates that it is an enterprise apart from the parent company.

It is said that Bratter and Pollack have already purchased sites for the following theatres: At Vailsburg, N. J., they will build a theatre that will as near as possible duplicate Chicago's Capitol. Newark will also be the site of another large house and a 2,800 seat theatre planned for Belleville will supplant the Alpha at that point.

All are said to be million dollar projects.

Harrisburg Mayor Vetoes Daylight Saving

Mayor Hoverter, of Harrisburg, has told a committee of representatives of seven business men's and women's organizations that have been advocating the belated establishment of a daylight saving time schedule in that city, that he is unwilling to endorse the project or the suggested passage of a city ordinance on the subject, because of his opinion that no such action can be taken by the city without violating the State law which makes municipal recognition of such a plan illegal in Pennsylvania.

Americans Invited to C. E. A. Convention

IN a radiogram received this week, Chairman Lyons of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of Great Britain, announces that the annual convention of that body will be held at Brighton, England, from June 14 to 18, inclusive.

Members of the American film industry are extended a cordial invitation by Mr. Lyons to be present at this important meeting of representative British exhibitors. Many vital problems are to come up for discussion, and the convention sessions will be of considerable interest to members of the industry on both sides of the water.

"Movie Season" Press Book Out June 1

Letters Pledging Cooperation Received from Theatre Owners Throughout the Country by the Will H. Hays Office

JUDGING from the scores of letters arriving every day at the Hays offices from exhibitors who participated in the first Greater Movie Season last summer the second season, which starts in August, will find an even larger number of exhibitors enlisted in the drive.

Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley Company of America, wrote a letter to Will H. Hays in which he said: "I am very glad that your organization is again recognizing Greater Movie Season . . . . Besides being a money-making proposition, this is a great builder of good will.

Similar expressions of satisfaction with the results obtained during the first season and predictions for the second are contained in letters from L. S. Bard, Bard's Theatres, Los Angeles; Edw. B. Brown, San Francisco; H. E. Huffman, Huffman Enterprises, Denver; C. W. Simons, Simons Theatre, Las Animas, and Ray P. Allison, Colorado Springs.

H. M. Richey, general manager of the M. P. T. O. A. of Michigan, said "Campaigns carried simultaneously by nearly three hundred theatre owners brought a remarkable public interest and increase in business."

In New York City last year August was an extremely hot month. Legitimate theatres suffered a bad slump. A number of plays closed. But motion picture houses broke records.

Major Edward Bowes, managing director Capitol Theatre: "Business was unprecedented, especially for this time of year."

Throughout the eastern and southern part of the country greater Movie Season proved its worth judging from letters received from E. J. O'Keefe, City Square Theatre, Atlantic City; S. S. Stevenson, Henderson Theatre, Henderson, N. C.; Fred S. Meyer, Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, writing "I think Greater Movie Season should be made a compulsory event in every city of 5,000 or more population."

On June 1, a complete Press Book for the Campaign will be issued. This tells exactly how exhibitors should proceed in order to take part in Greater Movie Season. It is filled with the most valuable sort of suggestions as to advertising and publicity, and contains a great number of feature stories and smaller items that may be used in newspapers, programs and other publications, and in speeches.

It is of even greater scope than last year's Press Book. Following the issuance of this, there will be additional sheets of suggestions and advice.

Circuit Expansion, Building, Active

Seven Theatres Planned for Hollywood to Cost $4,500,000; Exhibitors in Texas Form Combine Involving 14 Houses

ACCORDING to permits issued four million, five hundred thousand dollars will be spent in the erection of seven theatres in Hollywood, says the Los Angeles Examiner.

The program contemplates seven theatres of various types which will include the Wilkes-DeMille Theatre, Vine near Hollywood Blvd., $300,000; Music Box Theatre, Hollywood Blvd. near El Centro, $260,000; Alice Calhoun-Hansen Theatre, Hollywood near Bronson, $250,000; Warner Theatre, Wilshire at Maplewood, $250,000; West Coast Maplewood Theatre, Wilshire at Maplewood, $250,000; West Coast La Brea Theatre, Wilshire and La Brea, $450,000; Playhouse, Vine near Hollywood Blvd., $1,000,000.

Other theaters under construction in Worcester are the Palace, to be operated by Sylvester Z. Poli, and seat 3,400; the Capitol, to be operated by the firm now operating the Olympia, to seat 2,500; the Steinberg, to be operated by Henry J. Steinberg, seating 1,200, and a theatre to be constructed by Mr. Steinberg at Piedmont and Main Streets that will seat 1,200. All these theatres will present motion pictures and musical divertisements.

A temporary organization, known as the Rio Grande Valley Theatres, Inc., has been formed in Dallas, and the organization of 14 theatre enterprises into one corporation is going forward. A Delaware charter will be sought.

Theatres to be taken into the organization include four in Brownsville, two in San Benito, two in Harlingen, one in La Feria, one in Mercedes, one in Weslaco, two in McAllen and one in Mission.

The Century and Parkway Theatres, formerly of the Whitehurst group in Baltimore, Md., have been completely taken over by the Marcus Loew interests now, and are under the general management of H. Stewart, formerly with Paramount, who represents Mr. Loew there.

The A. H. Blank Theatre Corporation of Delaware has been chartered with $100,000 capital. This is merely a subsidiary corporation which has been formed by Publix Theatres Corporation and A. H. Blank.

Jack Eaton, of the State, and James S. Hommel, formerly manager of P. D. C. in Denver, are forming a new theatre chain in local territory. Theatres already secured by them are the Alamos, American Legion and the American of Colorado Springs.

Charles Bryan, manager of the Walter Reade chain in Jersey, has announced plans for the construction of a new $1,000,000 theatre on the site of the Main Street Theatre, Asbury Park, destroyed by fire, in addition to the Mayfair, which is to open shortly.

The Comerford Amus. Co., Scranton, Pa., has purchased the Lee & Van Dyke Theatre at Wyalusing, and a house at Montrose has also been taken over. It is expected that shortly the chain will extend to Tioga and Potter counties.

Highlights of German Film Situation as Seen by the News' Berlin Correspondent

DETAILS of latest developments in First National's German exchange system, the United Artists-Phoebus deal and the Ufa production plans are contained in the latest dispatches to be received from Heinrich Fraenkel, Berlin correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, as follows:

First National has opened its German exchange system, and will handle 25 German productions with an equal number of its own. This does not mean production in Germany by First National, however. E. Bruce Johnson is now in Berlin arranging the details in connection with distribution.

Under the terms of the deal between Phoebus and United Artists, the two will produce 15 pictures jointly in Germany, United Artists agreeing to distribute in America the best five of the 15. The Phoebus circuit of houses now numbers more than 30, and will be considerably augmented shortly.

Ufa will centralize all production at Babelsberg, and sell the studio site at Tempelhof, so as to effect important economies. Rumor has it that Henry Ford will buy the Tempelhof site in order to start there his long projected German automobile production.

Dismisses Charges Against Tampa Managers

The charges of violation of the Sunday Blue Laws against J. H. McLaughlin, manager of the Franklin Theatre, on Franklin Street, Tampa, and eleven other managers and employees of Tampa theatres, were dismissed last Wednesday, May 13th, by Judge Hendry of the Tampa municipal court.

The charge of violation of the city ordinance which prohibits all work, except of necessity or for the comfort of the community, on the Sabbath was brought against McLaughlin and the others by Jesiah Richardson, proprietor of a dance hall at Sulphur Springs.

The defence was arranged by John B. Carroll, general manager of the Consolidated Amusement. Fifteen witnesses took the stand and upheld the Sunday showings, agreeing that it was for the comfort of the community as provided in the ordinance. Some of the witnesses were Judge L. Hazard, E. D. Lambright and Judge H. Blaine Pequock.

Yeggs Rob Olympia Theatres, Inc., of Worcester

A heavy safe in the offices of the Olympia Theatres, Inc., in the Olympia Theatre, Worcester, Mass., was blown open by yeggs early this week and $2,000 in cash, representing the Saturday and Sunday receipts of the Family Theatre of Worcester, also owned and operated by the Olympia Theatres, Inc., was stolen.

Entrance was gained through a rear door from an alleyway. The big safe was hauled from the ticket office to the main office, where the combination was knocked off and the safe then blown. A second safe, containing the receipts from the Olympia Theatre itself, was not touched, although in the same office. Fingerprints on the damaged safe are the only clue the police received to work on.

Move to Oust Fake Schools in Los Angeles

There is a movement on foot in Los Angeles to rid the city of all fake film schools. As many as five individuals have already been reported as operating without licenses and of false representation.

Those cooperating in the move are the State Labor Bureau, the Better Business Bureau, the Motion Pictures Producers Association, juvenile authorities and the office of the district attorney.

Laemmle Plans Hollywood Office Building

A $500,000 office building on the northwest corner of Vine Street and Hollywood Boulevard in the business section of Hollywood is planned by Carl Laemmle according to an announcement from the Universal president's real estate representative, A. W. Kleinordlinger.

This, it is reported, is the first of a series of real estate deals planned by the producer, who intends to invest several millions within the next few years. The building will be three stories high and so constructed as to permit the addition of more stories as the need arises.

De Mille Stops Work on "Deluge"; Conflicts with Warner Plans

THOUGH fifty thousand dollars has been spent in research work Cecil B. De Mille has decided not to produce "The Deluge" which was to be a companion piece to "The Ten Commandments." The producer, in a statement issued to the press, announced that the reason for the change in his plans is owing to the fact that the Warner Brothers had previously filed plans with the Hays office to make a production titled "Noah's Ark," which formed the basis of the De Mille picture.

While De Mille has not indicated the exact nature of the subject that will take the place of "The Deluge" as his next personally directed production he intimated that it will be one of equal magnitude.

Harris Expands N. Y. Circuit

Ties Up Heights Section of Manhattan; Independent Exhibitors Join Circuits

SEWING up of certain sections of territory and consolidation of independent theatres with the more powerful circuits as regards booking arrangements continues unabated in the New York and New Jersey zone.

One of the most recent deals closed by a prominent exhibitor is the consolidation of a section of New York City, which lies between 125th and 149th Streets on the West Side. It is reliably reported that Harry Harris has secured three additional houses in that territory where he is already strongly entrenched. The theatres involved are the Washington, 149th and Amsterdam Ave., a 1,500 seat house—the Gotham, 138th and Broadway, seating about 1,200 and the Grange at 137th Street and Broadway. The latter is a small theatre and along with the Washington was taken over from the Tri-Boro Amusement Co. According to report, the Gotham was an independent house.

All in all, Harris now has nine theatres in the Heights section and this deal gives him practical control of that part of the city.

Harmon Jaffa and J. Joelson, after disposing of the Grange and Washington, still control about ten houses in Brooklyn and New York City under the name of Tri-Boro Amusement Co.

Another New York City theatre deal reported is that of the Dyckman Theatre, 207th Street and Broadway. It is said that Jack Springer has added that house to the Springer and Hamburger circuit, which controls several houses in the middle West Side and Harlem. This firm is also engaged in remodelling the 103rd Street Photoplay Theatre to the extent of installing a new marquee, new tapestries—in fact, a general overhauling which will transform this house into a strictly modern and most attractive playhouse. On completion, its name will be changed to Essex.

A booking arrangement has been recently brought about over in Brooklyn with the consolidation of McNamara's Midwood with the powerful A. H. Schwartz circuit. The Midwood is located at Avenue J and Coney Island Avenue.

Just a block or two away from the Midwood Theatre is the Manor, a fine house opened a few months ago by Fleischman and Goldreyer. Both the Midwood and Manor will each accommodate about 2,000—and a tug of war between the two houses has been the result. It is said that the Manor will soon follow the footsteps of its competitor.

Over in Kearney, N. J., where Harry Hecht holds forth, and where Jos. Stern is building a new theatre, it is reported that a joint booking deal has been arranged with Mr. Hecht in charge.

Seek "Extended Run" Answer

Cleveland Test Case on Availability Period Hinges on Definition of Term

THE test case of the Ohio Amusement Co. against First National relative to the availability period of a picture following the first run engagement has just been heard by the Board of Arbitration and ended in a tie vote. A seventh arbitrator has been requested by the Ohio Amusement Co.

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatre, Inc., represented the distributor and Sam Horwitz the exhibitor side. Discussion centered mainly about the term "extended run." The Ohio Amusement Co. contended that "Kiki," contracted for by them during the lifetime of the zoning plan, which no longer exists, should have been available for one of their houses six weeks after the closing of the first run. Desberg contended that the protection rules, under the zoning plan, did not apply to extended runs.

The zoning rules state that "extended runs are understood to be runs of more than seven consecutive days' duration." The Ohio Amusement Co. contends that the minutes of the joint committee that formulated the zoning plan state that "extended runs are understood to be run of longer duration than runs under the regular policy of the theatre." "Kiki" was played at the Stillman, which holds a picture for one or two weeks, depending upon the success of the film.

It is understood that Cleveland exhibitors favor a return to the zone plan on some equitable basis, while the distributors feel that this would not be desirable.

Neil Hamilton Cast for Lead in "Diplomacy"

The leading male role in "Diplomacy," Marshall Neilan's first production for Paramount release, will be played by Neil Hamilton. Blanche Sweet will appear in the feminine lead. Others in the cast are Gustav von Seyffertitz, Julia Swayne Gordon, Arlette Marchal, David Mit and Earle Williams. Production is to start immediately at the Neilan studios.

"Flames," Associated Gold Medal Prod.

"FLAMES," the Lewis H. Moomaw production, made in Oregon with a cast consisting of Virginia Valli, Eugene O'Brien, Jean Hersholt, Bryant Washburn, Cissie Fitzgerald, George Nichols and Boris Karloff, has been selected by Associated Exhibitors as the first Gold Medal production to head the series planned for release next year.

The production takes its name from the roaring forest fire which is the climax of the production. More than two months of preparation preceded the filming of this one sequence which was done in natural color.

Amer. Cinema Lists Program

Will Distribute Twelve Features and Comedy Series; First Release Aug. 15

A PROGRAM of twelve feature productions and a series of twelve two-reel comedy-dramas is announced as the 1926-32 program of the newly organized American Cinema Association.

American Cinema Association, of which A. J. Moeller is president, is a national distributing organization that supplies independent distributors throughout the country. It is definitely supported by independent producing forces. The producing for the company is done in Los Angeles by David Hartford Productions, of which David M. Hartford is president and general director. The comedies will be produced in New York under the direction of William A. Schilling and T. Carlyle Atkins.

Of the contemplated productions four are already finished and three are in the course of production. The four are: "Then Came the Woman," with Frank Mayo, Mildred Ryan and Cullen Landis; "Jack of Hearts," an adaptation of the stage play; "Jack in the Pulpit," which has in its cast Cullen Landis, Vera Lewis, Gladys Hullette, John T. Prince, Lester Pegg, Antrim Short and Joseph Bennett; "Dame Chance," from Frances Nordstrom's novel in which will be seen Julanne Johnston, Mary Carr, Robert Fraser, Gertrude Astor and Lincoln Stedman. The final production completed is "The Man in the Shadow," by Anne Francis, with a cast that includes Myrtle Stedman, David Torrence, Mary McAllister, Joseph Bennett, Arthur Rankin, John T. Dwyer and Margaret Fielding.

The three additional productions are "The Beloved Fraud," by Frances Nordstrom; "Rose of the Bowery," from a novel by Pearl Doles Bell, entitled "Little Lady, Inc.," and "A Flash in the Night," from the Munsey Magazine story by H. B. Swope.

The following are also on the list of coming productions: "Kidnapped in New York," Barney Gilmore's stage melodrama, "God's Great Wilderness," a story by Spoteswood Aiken, "Your Brother and Mine," "Stronger Than Steel" and "Drivin' Mad." The comedies will be adapted from John Tainter Foot's stories, "Trub's Diary," which appear in Liberty Magazine. The author will cooperate in their editing and titling.

Fox West Coast Studio Active

"Return of Peter Grimm" Started; Eight Others in Midst of Production

THE Fox Film West Coast Studio is the scene of much activity these days with ten productions in full swing and many in the cutting room.

Victor Schertzinger has finished his fifth Fox picture, "The Lily," and is now working on the David Belasco stage play, "The Return of Peter Grimm." "What Price Glory?" the World War play by Laurence Stallings, is progressing under the direction of Raoul Walsh, with Victor McLagen, Edmund Lowe and Dolores Del Rio as the principal characters.

"The Pelican," with Alma Rubens in the chief feminine role, is being made by Frank Borzage while "Bunny" Dull, Borzage's assistant for many years, is directing "The White Eagle," a story by Max Brand which stars Buck Jones. A Gerald Beaumont story, "The Devil's Master," is being filmed under the direction of John Ford. In addition, Howard Hawks is engaged on an original story of college, as yet untitled.

Having finished "No Man's Gold," Tom Mix is working under the direction of R. William Neil on an Adele Rogers St. John story which has polo as its main theme. Irving Cummings is now engaged in the direction of a James Oliver Curwood story which will bear the title of "The Country Beyond," and Harry Beaumont will soon complete, "Womanpower," in which Ralph Graves and Katherine Perry have the leading roles.

Winfield R. Sheehan, General Manager, and Sol. M. Wurtzel, General Superintendent, are supervising all productions.

Gest Goes to Europe for Stars

Seeks World-Famous Cast for "Darling of the Gods;" First United Artists Film

MORRIS GEST, who recently signed with United Artists to produce six spectacles for that company, departed for Moscow this week on a trip of three months' duration. Gest will confer with the leading theatrical producers and artists of Europe including Reinhardt, Stanislavsky, d'Annunzio, and Gorky, while on the other side.

In addition to conferences regarding his theatrical productions for next season Gest plans to make an exhaustive search of the theatres in Europe for a cast for "The Darling of the Gods," which will be the first of his spectacles for United Artists release.

Although the theatrical season will practically be over many of the theatres have planned to keep open or recruit their companies once more to give special performances for Gest, as he is determined that the cast for his first picture shall include representatives of Russia, Germany, England, France and Italy and other countries. Everyone chosen will be submitted for approval to David Belasco before contracts are signed.

Box Office Value of Photoplay Stars

WE have reached a new period of crisis in the motion picture industry which will raise to new prominence the box office value of individual screen personalities.

At the present time the forces of the old dying stars are in a deadlock with the new climbing personalities who will replace them within the next few years. As everyone knows, this industry is, in its more important aspects, only a little over twelve years old, and during the past several years the older stars have had their own way. There was but little chance for newer personalities to supplant them. And as a result motion picture interest turned to the development of new effects in lighting; in settings in photography, both natural and trick. We will, of course, continue to improve in these technical lines, but I do not think we will see any very radical changes during 1926, such as the opening of the Red Sea in "The Ten Commandments," or the splendid chariot race shots in "Ben Hur."

During 1926 and 1927 you will see many new stars and featured players. You will see the passing of a number of stars who have held their position for six, eight, ten or twelve years, but who are now losing their vogue with the public.

Many New Stars

It is with the idea that 1926 is the psychological year for the entrance and development of strong new screen personalities that the Producers Distributing Corporation has committed itself to a policy of star development—of educating and bringing forward young people who are on the upward grade. It is easy to see what this means to the exhibitor. Just as the first miner into the Klondike skimmed the cream of that great gold rush, just so will the exhibitor who ties his wagon to an ascending star reap the most profit from new screen personalities.

Producers Distributing Corporation is offering among its six stars and twenty-one featured players, three new stars this year in Marie Prevost, Jetta Goudal and Vera Reynolds as well as a number of splendid new featured players who have just been signed. These include: Harrison Ford, Arnold Gray, Phyllis Haver and Kenneth Thomson.

It is unnecessary to indicate the value of Marie Prevost. Her worth has been adequately proven by her featured roles in a number of very splendid vehicles directed by Mr. Ernest Lubitsch.

Vera Reynolds Versatile

Vera Reynolds is a girl whom I offer as a star with very particular pride. However, I must take back that phrase, "I offer," for it was no doing of mine that Vera Reynolds became a star. She was made a star because in less than six months her fan mail has multiplied in number over six times, and now equals that of our biggest stars and is larger than nine-tenths of the stars of other companies. There is something about the remarkable naturalness of this girl which has an irresistible appeal. She would not, however, have attained her present position if she did not possess very remarkable acting ability. She first worked with me in ''Feet of Clay,'' displaying at that time an ability for strong drama as well as delicate comedy. Since then, however, she has been largely seen in vehicles of a lighter nature, such as ''The Million Dollar Handicap.'' Because of this, however, no one should class her as an exclusive comedienne. Those who see her in ''Silence'' will have the pleasure of witnessing one of the greatest dramatic performances I have ever seen on the screen. Vera Reynouds is a star of very definite appeal and I look for her to rise to the very highest heights of stardom.

Jetta Goudal "Different"

Jetta Goudal—she of the strange eyes and weird, exotic personality—captured the country with ''Three Faces East.'' She is an unusually colorful personality, and we have arranged for her a line of pictures designed to take adequate advantage of these definite box office values. Jetta Goudal is one of the most talked of women in America—because she is DIFFERENT! It must be remembered that the different and unusual will always be the backbone of the entertainment business.

One does not need to dwell upon the new personalities mentioned above—they all have achieved splendidly. The same applies to Priscilla Dean, Joseph Schildkraut, Rudolph Schildkraut, William Boyd, Lilyan Tashman, Victor Varconi, Robert Edeson, Walter Long, Clarence Burton, H. B. Warner, Marguerite De La Motte, Edmund Burns, John Bowers and Lillian Rich—all players who will have newer and greater opportunities in the line of stories we have arranged for next year.

Boyd Coming Forward

And in closing, I must present to you with special emphasis people such as William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Julia Faye, Sally Rand, Majel Coleman, Louis Natheaux and Junior Coghlan. Here is a group of real comers who have more than won their laurels during the past year and who will mean real dollars at the box office during 1926. Boyd's advance alone proves the value of developing personalities. When I took him for ''The Road to Yesterday,'' he was a comparative unknown. Now, after ''Steel Preferred,'' ''The Volga Boatman'' and ''Eve's Leaves,'' he stands as one of the greatest assets to any company. And the same thing applies to all of our other young people in varying degrees.

The company which succeeds during the next two or three years is the company which gives proper attention to the growth and development of what will always be one of the most important phases of picture making—namely, strong and effective screen personalities.

First National Completes Ten

Productions Now in Cutting Room; Ten More in Work at East and West Coast

FILMING of ten productions was completed this week at the First National studios and the pictures are now being cut and titled. Six more have been put in work on the West Coast and four are in the filming process at the eastern plant. Temporary arrangements have been made to house some units in the new studio at Burbank, which is to open in July.

Pictures in work in the Hollywood studios are: ‘‘Delicatessen,’’ the Colleen Moore starring vehicle adapted from the story by Brooke Hanlon which Alfred E. Green is directing; Constance Talmadge in the ‘‘Duchess of Buffalo,’’ a Joseph M. Schenck production of a story by Hans Kraly; ‘‘The Amateur Gentleman,’’ a story by Jeffrey Farnol, directed by Sidney Olcott. Dorothy Mackaill appears opposite Richard Barthelmess, who is starred.

‘‘Pals First,’’ is an Edwin Carewe production based on the story of Francis Perry Elliott. The cast includes Lloyd Hughes, Dolores Del Rio and Alec B. Francis. ‘‘Midnight Lovers’’ is being directed by John Francis Dillon with Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone in the cast; Harry Langdon’s ‘‘Johnny Newcomer,’’ his second vehicle, makes the sixth production in work at the West Coast studios. Gertrude Astor appears in support.

At the eastern studios the concluding scenes are being made for ‘‘Men of Steel,’’ the Earl Hudson production starring Milton Sills. George Archainbaud is directing a cast including Doris Kenyon and George Fawcett; work is almost finished on ‘‘Mismates’’ in which Doris Kenyon is starred supported by Warner Baxter. Charles Brabin is directing.

The A. L. Rockett unit filming ‘‘Subway Sadie,’’ an adaptation of the story ‘‘Sadie of the Desert’’ is ahead of schedule. Alfred A. Santell is directing a cast including Dorothy Mackaill, Jack Mulhall and Charlie Murray. ‘‘The Great Deception’’ is nearly through at the Cosmopolitan studios. Howard Higgin is directing the Robert Kane production.

F. B. O. Production Units Busy

Three Gold Bond Pictures Completed; Work on Star Series Being Rushed

PRODUCTION has practically been completed on ‘‘Bigger Than Barnum’s,’’ ‘‘Her Honor the Governor’’ and ‘‘Laddies,’’ the first three Gold Bond specials being made by Film Booking Offices for the new season.

‘‘Kosher Kitty Kelly’’ will be the next picture to start with a cast including Viola Dana, Vera Gordon, Nat Carr, Aggie Herring and others. ‘‘Breed of the Sea,’’ the Peter B. Kyne story, and ‘‘Rose of the Tenements,’’ the picturization of John Moroso’s novel ‘‘The Stumbling Herd’’ are scheduled to go into work in the near future. Following these two filming will be commenced on ‘‘Hello Bill,’’ the Elks picture by Milton Gardner and John W. Grey. These constitute the major number of the Gold Bond productions.

Preparations for the filming of the star series is also being pushed forward. The scenario department is at present lining up stories for Alberta Vaughn and George O’Hara. The first story for Miss Vaughn will be ‘‘Collegiate’’ written by Jean Dupont; it is now in the hands of the scenarists. F. A. E. Pine is working on the script of ‘‘The First Car,’’ by James Henry O’Brien.

Fred Thomson has finished interiors on ‘‘The Two-Gun Man’’ and has left the studio for the High Sierras where he will film exteriors, under the direction of Dave Kirkland. Evelyn Brent has just begun work on ‘‘Flame of the Argentine’’ with Eddie Dillon directing.

Tom Tyler is expected to start work shortly on ‘‘Jerry Settles Down’’ under the direction of Bob DeLacy. Sam Nelson is filming ‘‘The Dead Line,’’ the Barr Cross story with Bob Custer starred, and Lefty Flynn is busy filming ‘‘Mulhall’s Great Catch,’’ a story of the police and firemen written by Gerald Beaumont, under Harry Garson’s direction.

“Better Ole” Filming Finished

Lubitsch’s “So This is Paris” and “Footloose Widows” in Cutting Room

PHOTOGRAPHY on ‘‘The Better Ole,’’ the second Warner Brothers Special in which Syd Chaplin is starred under the direction of Chuck Reisner, has been completed and the production is now in the cutting room along with ‘‘So This Is Paris,’’ Ernst Lubitsch’s latest, and ‘‘Footloose Widows,’’ which Roy Del Ruth directed.

‘‘Manon Lescaut,’’ in which John Barrymore is starred, is now in its eighth week of production with Alan Crosland at the megaphone. Many big sets are being utilized for this Warner special. Dolores Costello appears opposite Barrymore.

The latest of the Warner productions to go into work is ‘‘Broken Hearts of Hollywood,’’ which is being directed by Lloyd Bacon, recently signed by Warner Brothers. Darry Francis Zannuck is responsible for the scenario, while the original story is by E. T. Lowe, Jr., and Phil. Klein.

The cast includes Louise Dresser, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Patsy Ruth Miller, Jerry Miley and Stewart Holmes.

Warner Portable Radio Creates Interest

WARNER Brothers portable radio broadcasting station, 6XBR, now working its way through the Northwest, is attracting considerable attention, at the theatres from which it broadcasts local programs.

Frank A. Cassidy

Splendid co-operation has been extended by the newspapers through the efforts of Frank A. Cassidy, showman and exploiter, who is out in advance of the station. A tie-up has been arranged with station KGO, one of the most popular stations on the coast.

Monty Banks Making First Pathe Feature Comedy

Space has been leased at the Hal Roach studios by A. McArthur, who is in charge of the Monty Banks production unit for Pathe, for the making of ‘‘Atta Boy’’ Bank’s first feature comedy under his new starring contract.

The story was written by Charles Horan, and Alf Goulding assisted in the preparation of the continuity. E. H. Griffith will direct, Jack Mintz will be technical man and Robert Wagner chief cameraman.

The length of the comedy will be six reels.

First National Leases Los Angeles Fine Art Studios

The Fine Arts studios have been leased by First National. Two productions will be made there, ‘‘Delicatessen’’ and ‘‘Midnight Lovers.’’ ‘‘Forever After’’ will be made at the Metropolitan studios and ‘‘The Yes Man’’ at the old United Studios plant. All units will be re-united at the First National studios at Burbank, now in the course of construction, and which are scheduled to open the middle of July.

Tom Moore in “Ashes” Corinne Griffith’s Next

Tom Moore has been selected for the leading role in Corinne Griffith’s next starring production for First National ‘‘Ashes,’’ a story of stage life in which Miss Griffith plays the part of leading lady in a stock company.

Miss Griffith is now in New York filming exteriors and will finish production work on the Coast.

May MacAvoy Signed for “The Fire Brigade”

The leading feminine role in ‘‘The Fire Brigade’’ will be played by May MacAvoy who has just been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. She will play opposite Charles Ray with a supporting cast which includes H. B. Warner, Tom O’Brien and Bert Woodruff.

The picture is now being directed by William Nigh under the supervision of Hunt Stromberg.

Motion Picture News Prize Contest For Branch Managers and Film Salesmen

GREAT interest has been aroused by the offer of a prize of One Hundred Dollars for the best article from any branch manager or film salesman on the subject:

Original Title "Cat's Pajamas" Retained by Famous

Due to the request of exhibitors attending the regional Paramount conventions throughout the country, the title of the Betty Bronson, Ricardo Cortez feature vehicle "The Cat's Pajamas" has been retained though Paramount had changed this tentatively to "The Voice With A Kiss."

"You'd Be Surprised" Next for Raymond Griffith

Paramount has chosen "You'd Be Surprised" as the next starring vehicle for Raymond Griffith. Clara Bow has been assigned the leading female role.

Work on "Kid Gloves" Put Off for Year

C. C. BURR, producer of Johnny Hines comedies for First National release, has definitely delayed for one year production on "Kid Gloves," out of regard to Famous Players who are about to present a picture with a similar title, "Kid Boots." The reason, Burr states, is that Famous once performed a similar courtesy when they abandoned the title, "The Early Bird," as a vehicle for Richard Dix when they learned that Johnny Hines' first First National picture would bear the same appellation.

"The Dancing Mayor," a comedy of New York life and politics, will probably take the place of "Kid Gloves" on the First National program.

Columbia in British Alliance

Film Booking Offices of England to Distribute Series; To Film Abroad

UNDER the terms of a contract just closed by the executives of Columbia Pictures Corporation and F. A. Enders, managing director of Film Booking Offices, Ltd., of England, the British Company will distribute 24 Columbia pictures in Great Britain and Ireland. Mr. Enders also represented H. & W., Ltd. of England, and obtained a similar franchise for the Continent for 1926-27.

Upon his return to England, Mr. Enders has set in motion a plan for the acquisition of reliable local franchise holders in each of the countries on the Continent. This, with a chain of British releasing offices, will completely internationalize the Columbia Franchise idea.

Going a step further, Mr. Enders and the Columbia executives have discussed and are now considering, the actual tying together of the producing and distributing interests of Columbia in company with the producing and distributing facilities of the Film Booking Offices, Limited, in England and the franchise holders on the Continent.

This unit will be sufficiently mobile to make pictures in England, on the Continent, or wherever the locale of the story might be, if in that part of the world. This internationalization plan will give Columbia an outlet which markets the world and will give to the foreign unit a possible release in America thereby helping to maintain a firm balance. The production plans will use largely local capital and labor wherever possible; the star, or stars, from the United States may be used, but the supporting cast will be essentially English or of the country in which the picture was actually being filmed.

Robert E. Welsh, who has resigned as Assistant to the President of Associated Exhibitors to become Advertising Manager of Universal Pictures Corp.

Studio Briefs

Casting has been completed on the Cosmopolitan production, "The Red Mill," based on the operetta by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert and which serves Marion Davies as her next starring vehicle. Besides the star there are Owen Moore, George Seigmann, George Fawcett, Karl Dane, Tully Marshall and Fred Gambold. William Goodrich is now directing from a script by Francis Marion.

Barney Gilmore, vaudeville interpreter of Irish characters, is the latest addition to the cast of "Almost a Lady," the Metropolitan production starring Marie Prevost. The other players are: Harrison Ford, Trixie Friganza, George K. Arthur and John Miljan.

Edward Everett Horton will play the featured role in "Taxi! Taxi!" It will be his third Universal production, the other two being "Poker Faces" and "The Whole Town's Talking." He will work under the direction of Melville W. Brown.

Karl Dane, film comedian, has signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Films in which he has appeared or is scheduled to appear are "The Big Parade," "La Boheme," "The Scarlet Letter," "The Devil's Circus" and "The Red Mill." His first motion picture part was that of the "Kaiser" in "My Four Years in Germany."

The role allotted to Helen Dunbar in "Love Me and the World Is Mine" will be portrayed by Mathilde Brundage, owing to the absence of Miss Dunbar in the East. In this Universal jewel, now being directed by Andre Dupont, U. F. A. director, Norman Kerry and Mary Philbin are starred. Also featured in the picture are Betty Compson, Henry B. Walthall and George Siegmann. The balance of the cast includes Albert Conti, Charles Puffy, Martha Mattox, Charles Sellon, Emily Fitzroy, Robert Anderson and Rose Dione.

Christy Cabanne, who is directing Mae Murray in her forthcoming picture, "Altars of Desire," has added Robert Edeson to the cast. The new picture is an adaptation of Maria Thompson's magazine story.

Louise Brooks, last seen with Adolph Menjou in "A Social Celebrity," has been given an important role in "The Show Off," which Malcolm St. Clair is directing with Ford Sterling and Lois Wilson featured.

The screen rights to Thomas Addison's short stores, "Come-On Charley," have been purchased by Samuel S. Hutchinson, producer of the Edward Everett Horton comedies for release by Associated Exhibitors. These stories will form the basis of Horton's third starring vehicle.

George Lewis, who played his first featured part in "His People," will play the leading role in "The Big Gun," Universal's naval story which Harry Pollard will direct as soon as he finishes his present assignment, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Lewis has also been selected for the two-reeler series, "The Collegiettes," which were written by Carl Laemmle, Jr. He also played a prominent part in "The Old Soak," which stars Jean Hersholt.

The cast of "Man Trap," Sinclair Lewis' latest novel which Victor Fleming is directing for Paramount, has been augmented with the addition of William Orlamond, Josephine Crowell and Tom Kennedy. In the principal roles will be seen Clara Bow, Ernest Torrence and Percy Marmont.

Off the Isthmus of Catalina the Battle of Tripoli is now being enacted by more than a score of square-riggers. The battle relates the historic conflict in which the Algerian pirates who demanded tribute of young America were subdued by "Old Ironsides," whose story is being filmed by Paramount.

In the Florenz Ziegfeld' production, "Glorifying the American Girl," now in production at the Paramount Long Island studio, William Collier, Jr., has been given an important part. Another addition to the cast is Louise Brooks. Edward Sutherland will direct.

Herbert Grimwood, English actor who appeared as "Savonarola" in the Lilian Gish spectacle, "Romola," has been signed by Inspiration to play the role of "Gaunt" in the Richard Barthelmess starring feature, "The Amateur Gentleman." The picture is now being filmed on the Coast.

"The Monkey Talks," Rene Fauchois' play which ran in London, Paris and New York, is now being adapted by Gladys Unger for Fox Films. Only two principals have been selected so far. They are, Madge Bellamy, who will play "Dora," and Jacques Lerner, "Foho." Lerner enacted the talking monkey in all of the stage performances, and this will be his debut in the movies. The story is that of a man who impersonates a monkey so well that he deceives everyone and is accepted and treated as such.

F. B. O. has signed Theodore Von Eltz to play the role of "Pagett" in "Laddie," a screen version of the Gene Stratton-Porter. Jack Luden was originally assigned this role, but Director Leo Meehan was prevailed upon by James Wilkinson, production editor, to release Luden so that he might play the leading role in the Paramount School.

Marjorie Schweinert, nineteen and a niece of Charles Schwab, the steel magnate, is playing a small part in "Lew Tyler's Wives," a screen adaptation of Wallace Irwin' novel which is being directed by Harry Knoles as a Preferred Picture.

Virgil Miller and Ernest Crockett, cameramen, have been added to the production staff of the Warner Bros. West Coast studio. They have signed long term contracts and will be given their initial assignments in the near future.

A featured role in W. C. Field's second starring vehicle for Paramount, "So's Your Old Man," has been given Buddy Rogers, one of the Paramount Junior Stars. The only other member of the cast thus far chosen is Alice Joyce.

The script for the next starring picture for Dolores Costello, "The Heart of Maryland," is now being prepared by Bess Meredyth. The production will be under the direction of Millard Webb. The first player assigned to the supporting cast is Charles Emmet Mack.

As soon as John Francis Dillon has completed directing "Don Juan's Three Nights," he will start work on the screen version of J. E. Terry's play, "Collusion," which will bear the screen title of "Midnight Lovers." Carey Wilson, who did the screen adaptation, will be editorial director on the picture.

During this week Warner Bros. "The Honeymoon Express," with Irene Rich and Willard Louis, will go into production. Originally it was a stage play by Ethel Clifton and Brenda Fowler, from which Mary O'Hara prepared the screen adaptation. The choice of director fell upon James Flood. The supporting cast includes Helene Costello, John Patrick, Jane Winton, Virginia Lee Corbib, Harold Goodwin and Robert Brower. Bill Cannon will serve as assistant director, while the photography will be in the hands of Willard Van Enger and David Abel.

The latest additions to the cast of "Forever After" are David Torrence, Eulalie Jensen and Halla M. Cooley. Production started this week under the direction of Harmon Wright.

Buddy Roosevelt has started work on "The Dangerous Dub," his first production for Associated Exhibitors. Richard Thorpe is directing from the story by James Madison.

Under the direction of Irvin Willat, "Paradise," Ray Rockett's first production for First National, was started this week at the Cosmopolitan studios in New York City. Milton Sills has the starring role in this feature with Betty Bronson in the leading feminine part. Settings are being designed by Clark Robinson.

Five additional players have been added to the cast of "Meet the Prince" which Joseph Henaberry is directing for Metropolitan. They are Marjorie Prevost, Michael Dark, Earl Crane, May Forster and Leon Holmes who will augment the featured cast which includes Joseph Schildkraut, Marguerite De La Motte, David Butler, Julia Faye, Vera Steadman and Helen Dunbar.

Lester F. Scott's second western feature unit for Associated Exhibitors began work this week when "The Dangerous Dub," starring Buddy Roosevelt was put into production on the Coast. This marks the first of six Buddy Roosevelt starring vehicles which Scott is making for Associated.

HIRAM ABRAMS

President of United Artists Corporation since its inception seven years ago—a progressive in the field of film distribution whose efforts recently have been crowned with a significant expansion of the membership, product and activity of that organization

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK

Chairman Board of Directors, United Artists Corporation and producer for that organization, whose career as a producer has been marked by an imposing series of achievements and successes and who is one of the outstanding figures of the industry

Sixteen Productions, United Artists' Schedule For Next Season

SIXTEEN productions, embracing works with Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Rudolph Valentino, John Barrymore and Buster Keaton as stars, and productions from Joseph M. Schenck, Samuel Goldwyn and Morris Gest, will make up the 1926-27 schedule of releases from United Artists Corporation, according to an announcement by Hiram Abrams, president of the organization.

The new product, which will reflect the most ambitious efforts of these famous stars and producers, is well under way, five of the new sixteen pictures already being scheduled for definite dates early in the fall.

Of the new producing members, Gloria Swanson will make two films, John Barrymore two, Buster Keaton two, Samuel Goldwyn three and Morris Gest one.

In addition to films the newly acquired producing units of United Artists will contribute, there will be Mary Pickford in "Sparrows" and another picture; Charlie Chaplin in his new feature comedy, "The Circus"; Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate"; and Rudolph Valentino in "Son of the Sheik" and another film that will have a Spanish locale.

The first five productions and their release dates are:

"Stella Dallas," Samuel Goldwyn's presentation, produced by Henry King with Ronald Colman, Belle Bennett, Jean Hersholt, Alice Joyce, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Lois Moran, released August 29th. Rudolph Valentino in "Son of the Sheik," with Vilma Banky, released September 5th. Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate," released September 12th. Mary Pickford in "Sparrows," released September 19th. "The Winning of Barbara Worth," Samuel Goldwyn's presentation produced by Henry King from the novel by Harold Bell Wright, released September 28th. Gloria Swanson's first picture will be "Personality." The star will make a second film thereafter, on a plan to make two pictures each year.

Charlie Chaplin's new feature comedy, "The Circus," will present the comedian, derby, mustache, shoes and all, in the sawdust rings under the big top.

Douglas Fairbanks, presently vacationing abroad, is considering material for his next film, but "The Black Pirate" is his only announced production for this season.

Rudolph Valentino, who is supported by Vilma Banky in "Son of the Sheik," an adaptation from an E. M. Hull novel, will thereafter make a second film, probably laid in Spain.

John Barrymore will first appear in a romantic role in "The Vagabond Lover." His second production will be an adaptation from a famous stage play.

Buster Keaton's first production, "The General," will be laid against a Civil War background. Later the frozen-faced one will make another comedy.

The third of the three Goldwyn offerings on the schedule will be the George Fitzmaurice production of "Beauty and the Beast," based upon the Delineator serial by Kathleen Norris, with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky again featured. It will follow "Stella Dallas" and "The Winning of Barbara Worth."

Morris Gest is presently preparing the screen version of "The Darling of the Gods," the David Belasco stage success, which will be the first Morris Gest Spectacle of six to be made in as many years.

Comprising the sixteen productions on United Artists' schedule for the year are:

Mary Pickford in "Sparrows" and another production.

Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate."

Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus."

Rudolph Valentino in "Son of the Sheik" and another play.

Gloria Swanson in "Personality" and another production.

Buster Keaton in "The General" and another production.

John Barrymore in "The Vagabond Lover" and a second production based on a stage play.

Samuel Goldwyn will present "Stella Dallas and "The Winning of Barbara Worth," Henry King productions, and "Beauty and the Beast," a George Fitzmaurice production.

Morris Gest will present a screen production of "The Darling of the Gods."

United Artists Expands Service to Exhibitors

W. W. Hines, general sales manager, and E. A. Eschmann, assistant to the President, of United Artists Corporation

IN anticipation of its notable increase of high-class releases, United Artists Corporation quite recently expanded its sales and exploitation facilities. Not only is an enlargement of its service to the key cities involved, but also a distinct broadening of service to exhibitors in the smaller communities. The addition of product from Gloria Swanson, John Barrymore, Buster Keaton and Morris Gest to that of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, D. W. Griffith, Rudolph Valentino, Samuel Goldwyn and the current productions made for Joseph M. Schenck by John W. Considine, Jr., and Roland West, forecasts an activity in bookings that requires a much larger organization than formerly.

In making the expansion announcement, Hiram Abrams, president, stressed the fact that the identical sales ideals prevailing at the inception of the company seven years ago—of selling each picture separately and individually, remains unchanged in the wider activities now beginning. This announcement was also emphasized in a review of the company's strong status by Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the Board of Directors.

With a total of sixteen productions for the coming season—and with an augmented sales and distributing system, a better service is available for the key centers, while at the same time smaller theatre localities will realize, without undue delay, on the value of key city advertising and exploitation.

Under the expanded organization, President Hiram Abrams continues active supervision over the entire system. At the head of the staff devoting all energies to distribution is E. A. Eschmann, known as a sales executive of the highest calibre, assistant to the president, and W. W. Hines, for several years general sales manager.

For the sake of more intimate contact with the field, United Artists Corporation has lately divided its sales energies into three sections—the Southern-Western, with Paul Lazarus, General Sales Manager; the Mid-Western, with Cresson E. Smith, Sales Manager; and the Eastern, with Moxley A. Hill, General Sales Manager. These executives make their headquarters in New York City.

In the Southern-Western Division, Kenneth Hodkinson is District Manager for Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Salt Lake City and Denver; W. F. Seymour is District Manager for Pittsburgh, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas and Charlotte.

In the Mid-Western, the District managers are: T. Y. Henry for Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City and St. Paul; Morris Safier for Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati, Chicago and Indianapolis.

In the Eastern Division, H. T. Scully is District Manager for Boston, Portland and New Haven; and Jack von Tilzer for Philadelphia, New York, Buffalo and the Canadian branches.

The following are the Sales Managers and branches of United Artists Corporation in the country at large: T. E. Dillard, 106 Walton Street, Atlanta, Ga.; H. T. Scully, 69 Church St., Boston, Mass.; Wm. Sherry, 265 Franklin St., Buffalo, N. Y.; C. C. Wallace, 804 Wabash Ave., South, Chicago, Ill.; C. E. Peppiatt, 505 W. 4th St., Charlotte, N. United Artists Celebrates Seventh Anniversary

SEVEN years ago with Hiram Abrams, these foremost film personalities—Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith, startled the motion picture industry with a distinct innovation. They launched an independent distributing service of their own and went at the market for their productions direct. It was an ingeniously contrived organization, to which they were to purvey the best product of which they were capable, and sell it to the trade—each picture on a strictly separate footing, under the direction of Hiram Abrams, expert in distribution. The organizers called it United Artists Corporation.

The move was indeed startling—and for two reasons. For one thing, it grouped the four outstanding box-office names of the time apart from their former connections. In the second place it presented them to the world allied in an undertaking for the physical handling of their own product, a thing which therefore had been monopolized by the specialized machinery of employer companies. The Big Names, in fact, went into business for themselves in a branch that up to then had always been a mystery to stars and directors.

Much skepticism greeted the innovation. But the distribution principles of United Artists Corporation's expert in this branch have today proved not only sound, but triumphant. As president of the organization, Hiram Abrams was felicitated by his fellow founders and their augmented associates in a most enthusiastic manner on last April 2nd, this being the seventh anniversary of United Artists Corporation's beginning. For, as compared to a much smaller schedule of releases in the earlier years, United Artists Corporation had on its seventh birthday reached colossal importance and effectiveness, with a schedule comprising sixteen productions of first magnitude for distribution in the season at hand.

Better even than that, it had so adhered, unswervingly to its original principle of conduct, that no question or doubt exists today that this principle was sound at the outset.

Adhering to the basic purpose of concentrating upon the superlative type of motion picture produced by its members, United Artists Corporation handles a definite, volume of material. The minimum of pictures from its members which it will market is twelve a year. On the other hand, the maximum will be sixteen. The producing units for which United Artists Corporation is the outlet are therefore under no abnormal pressure and free from the requirements of quantity production. They are making pictures under most favorable conditions for entertainment and artistic values.

Just as there is no program method among the members of United Artists Corporation, there is no program or block booking system of marketing their film. Each United Artists picture is received and distributed entirely on an individual basis. This has been repeatedly proclaimed as the platform of the organization.

A significant feature also is that United Artists Corporation is a distributing service and a selling service, on very simple and clear cut lines; but it is not a dividend machine. It is a service, not an employer of artists, nor an owner of film, nor a producer of pictures. It is substantially an employe of its stars and producers.

Notable Past Product of United Artists

A VALUE of permanency rarely achieved in photoplay production attaches to the pictures in the partial list of United Artists' past product, which follows:

Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna," "Suds," "The Love Light," "Through the Back Door," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Tess of the Storm Country," "Rosita," "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," "Little Annie Rooney" and "Sparrows."

Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush," and Charlie Chaplin's dramatic feature, "A Woman of Paris," with Edna Purviance.

Douglas Fairbanks in "His Majesty the American," "When the Clouds Roll By," "The Mollycoddle," "The Nut," "The Mark of Zorro," "The Three Musketeers," "Robin Hood," "The Thief of Bagdad" and "Don Q, Son of Zorro."

Showmanship Activities Enlarged in Scope

WITH the recognized group of producers making an outstanding array of box-office attractions, United Artists Corporation is dovetailing these activities with plans and ideas to give each and every picture both an intensive and extensive exploitation scope.

The home office publicity and advertising department of United Artists will function along lines considerably broader than previously. Concentrated drives will be launched as complementary to the sales drives of the sales department and of the various branches and, with sales promotion accomplished, the energy of these drives will be diverted to the direct aid of the exhibitor.

The advertising and publicity departments of United Artists Corporation recently have been enlarged and their expansion, like the organization of which they are a part, is to accomplish but one purpose, the further service of exhibitors booking United Artists releases. Victor M. Shapiro directs the department with a staff of executives as follows: Charles E. Moyer, foreign publicity; Fred Schaefer, exploitation; Bruce Gallup, advertising and sales promotion; Warren Nolan, publicity.

The Original Four of United Artists. Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, D. W. Griffith

Starring in United Artists New Pictures

THE schedule of sixteen productions which United Artists Corporation has announced for the coming season lists the names of stars elevated by their artistic achievements and the public's acclaim to a position of preeminence in the motion picture theatre of the world.

The stars, accompanied by brief sketches of their careers, who will be seen in productions to be distributed by United Artists during 1926-27, are as follows:

Mary Pickford

THE American public claimed Mary Pickford as its favorite before it was even aware of her name! This was in the days of the Biograph Company when Miss Pickford appeared in pictures directed by D. W. Griffith.

Miss Pickford's long list of productions for United Artists Corporation release are testimonials to her undisputed claims to name and fame. From "Pollyanna" down through "Suds," "The Love Light," "Through the Back Door," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Tess of the Storm Country," "Rosita," "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," and "Little Annie Rooney," these pictures stand as milestones in her ever-increasing popularity.

"Sparrows," Miss Pickford's latest film, will be released in the fall.

Gloria Swanson

GLORIA SWANSON issues dramatically into a career "on her own," as a United Artists Corporation affiliated star. Her pictures, under the United Artists idea, will be sold individually and separately, but under exceptional auspices.

Since her "Manhandled," Gloria Swanson's rise to eminence has been notable. Her talents, her magnetic personality, her beauty, her leadership in feminine styles, her position professionally and in popular favor, leave no room for doubt that she will long remain one of the most sought after personalities in modern stardom. At the head of her own producing organization she will be free to make pictures of the most ambitious standard, wholly independent of arbitrary production schedules or limited appropriations. She will exercise her own choice of stories, and avail herself of the ablest directors and writers. The best that money can afford will go into her new productions of which there will be two each year for United Artists.

Charlie Chaplin

DURING the past few years it has become the favorite occupation of the intellectuals to discuss Charlie Chaplin, his personality and his art. Writers of high literary and social degree have had their say about this great comedian—all to the same effect—that Charlie Chaplin is a genius.

Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush" is an international household word. His forthcoming picture, "The Circus," will be ready in the Fall for United Artists Corporation release. In this picture the comedian works in his favorite make-up of the derby, the cane and the loose trousers. In one episode only does he put on a high hat. This picture must not be confused with "The Clown," a subject which was proposed at one time.

Douglas Fairbanks

THE tremendous popularity of Douglas Fairbanks, year in and year out, needs no emphasis or elaboration. Fairbanks maintains his remarkable pace through his ability, in plain English, "to deliver the goods."

Since he started to make spectacular productions, he has never slipped backward nor even stood still. Progress has been his watchword. His vision is not dimmed by his own success.

He is the idol of the youth of America and of the world. Age, as well as youth, idolizes him. He is the epitome of energy, of clean-cut American manhood; he is romantic, and he is adventurous. He accomplished gigantic tasks, but he works and works to accomplish them. In his pictures and in his life Douglas Fairbanks is an example of what pluck, brains and perseverance will do for a man.

Rudolph Valentino

DESPITE a growing list of actors of the Latin type, there is only one Rudolph Valentino.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" gave this star his supreme opportunity to bid for fame. It was a difficult, though gracious opportunity. The picture was of such immense proportions that a player of but ordinary ability would have been utterly eclipsed. Rudolph Valentino, by reason of his personal magnetism, his ability and the freshness of his method, proved to be as great as the picture.

Valentino will have two United Artists releases yearly. "Son of the Sheik" will be his next starring vehicle, a production awaited with keen anticipation by his public.

John Barrymore

THERE is no more renowned nor dignified figure in the combined fields of the modern theatre and the motion picture studio than John Barrymore. Of a theatrical family, his first efforts on both stage and screen were in the light and farce comedy. Then, simultaneously, both the stage and screen discovered him as an actor possessed of unparalleled dramatic talents.

"Hamlet" and "The Jest," on the stage, "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," "Beau Brummel" and "The Sea Beast," on the screen, served to bring out his dramatic ability to its fullest extent.

Barrymore will be presented in productions of pictorial as well as dramatic magnitude to be distributed through United Artists Corporation. He will make two productions this year, the first of which will be "The Vagabond Lover."

Buster Keaton

FROM his very first film appearance in support of Roscoe Arbuckle in a two-reeler, Buster Keaton was marked for stardom.

Joseph Schenck realized Keaton's possibilities from the outset and, after the comedian had become thoroughly acquainted with his new medium of humorous expression, presented him as a star in his own two-reelers. Instantly successful in these, Keaton graduated to the five-reel feature comedy. And now, as his first United Artists release, he is at work on an elaborate feature comedy production, "The General," having as its background the Civil War.

Production is also scheduled to be begun for the second term in the forthcoming season.

Details of United Artists' Productions

IN "Sparrows," which Mary Pickford completed as her new season's release through United Artists Corporation, before leaving on her vacation trip abroad, the star returns again to that type of role which is the foundation of her enduring popularity.

Written especially for her with a new angle of universal appeal, "Sparrows," from the pen of Winifred Dunn, discloses Miss Pickford as the oldest of ten forlorn youngsters on a swampland baby farm, pitiful little human sparrows. Her trials and tribulations and little joys as the foster-mother of this brood, and the unusual climax in which she braves death and disaster to save them from oppression and from the reptile monsters in the bayous, are elements which are expected to make "Sparrows" the most impressive of her recent releases.

William Beaudine, assisted by Tom McNamara and Carl Harbaugh, directed "Sparrows," while the script was prepared by C. Garner Sullivan. Miss Pickford has another picture scheduled for production to follow "Sparrows."

"The Circus"

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S new feature comedy for United Artists Corporation is to be "The Circus." In it he will appear in his time-honored make-up with all the circus, including everything from the freaks to the trained fleas, as background for his imaginative talents.

Reports are trickling in from the Chaplin studio in Hollywood as to the wonderful touches that the star is putting into "The Circus." But reports are hardly needed to project an idea of the opportunities the comedian will make for himself before the broad and colorful setting that "the greatest show on earth" offers.

Chaplin walking a tight rope. Chaplin as custodian of the flea circus. Chaplin among the freaks. Chaplin with the animals. Every phase of the big top offers endless channels for the projection of Chaplin's marvelous humor.

There will be the fine balancing portion of sentiment in "The Circus" that Chaplin injects into all his comedies. It is this wistful, elusive touch that sets Chaplin's comedies definitely apart from the productions of all other comedians.

"The Black Pirate"

THE annual wonder of the nations is the thrilling stunt the "world's greatest showman" will introduce to rival his gasp-provoking achievement of the year before. There was the rapier-like action of "The Three Musketeers." Then followed the massive medieval background of "Robin Hood." Then came the splendors and phantasy of "The Thief of Bagdad." Anon appeared the whiplash, lightning prowess of "Don Q, Son of Zorro." Always bigger and better than ever.

And then came "The Black Pirate." Douglas Fairbanks in the crowning achievement of his career—that is, until 1927.

Each Fairbanks picture contained new surprises, but "The Black Pirate" adds to all the sure-fire devices of the star, a marvellous production in Technicolor, hailed as the modern triumph of color expression on the screen, every foot of the film being in fine hues and tones.

"Son of the Sheik"

RUDOLPH VALENTINO'S contribution to the new season's product of United Artists Corporation is an elaborate version of E. M. Hull's "Son of the Sheik." This was written by Miss Hull as a sequel to "The Sheik," a novel which sold sensationally for years.

Exchange managers were asked to ballot at the leading theatres in their territories as to what type of picture, as represented by "The Sheik," "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand," and "The Eagle," audiences desired to see the star in next. "The Sheik" won hands down. And "Son of the Sheik" was selected over all other possibilities for such a type of story.

Romance and adventure and keen dramatic situation, with the picturesque backgrounds of the limitless Sahara, go to make up "Son of the Sheik," which is a John W. Considine, Jr., production, under the direction of George Fitzmaurice.

Vilma Banky, Samuel Goldwyn's remarkable discovery, played opposite Valentino in "The Eagle," performs in the leading feminine role in "Son of the Sheik."

"Stella Dallas"

"STELLA DALLAS," the Samuel Goldwyn-Henry King production, has already come to be known as "the picture with the universal appeal." It is the poignant study of a mother's love for her daughter, enlivened with romance and laughter.

Now becoming generally released through United Artists Corporation, "Stella Dallas," is available to the exhibitor.

In Belle Bennett and Lois Moran, the picture made two new screen personalities who already are well known to film fans of the nation. In Alice Joyce, Jean Hersholt and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., it brought together three additional players whose work stands comparison with the best that the screen has offered.

"Stella Dallas" with its producer, Samuel Goldwyn, its director Henry King, its author, Olive Higgins Prouty, and its scenarist, Frances Marion, have received catalogues of praise from press, public, profession and trade.

"The General"

"THE GENERAL," a mammoth comedy of Civil War days will be Buster Keaton's first production for United Artists Corporation. Several months will be required in its making and it will be the biggest comedy that Keaton has ever set himself to produce.

Keaton says of "The General": "It has long been my ambition to make a really big comedy with a historical atmosphere. My entry into United Artists Corporation with no set time in which to complete the production and with no restrictions on how much to spend, makes this possible. While the picture will be designed primarily for laughs, it is my aim to make it historically correct and equally acceptable in the North and in the South. It will not be a burlesque, but a comedy spectacle of certain thrilling episodes in the struggle between the States."

Keaton will make two productions each year for United Artists.

Contributing artists of the United Artists Corporation. Gloria Swanson, Rudolph Valentino, Buster Keaton, John Barrymore

"Darling of the Gods"

WITH the entry of Morris Gest, noted theatrical producer, into the motion picture industry as an associate of United Artists Corporation, interest was keyed to redoubled pitch by the announcement that his first production of a series of six annual Morris Gest Spectacles would be "The Darling of the Gods."

"The Darling of the Gods" will be personally supervised by Gest, actual work to begin next March, with a portion of the film to be shot in Japan itself, the scene of the story. David Belasco will cooperate actively.

Produced by David Belasco, and written by him and John Luther Long, "The Darling of the Gods" was a sensation of the legitimate stage. Motion Picture rights to this subject had long been sought by many producers, but with Gest's decision to enter the cinema field and his offer to undertake filming the story for United Artists release, the dean of playwrights enthusiastically concurred.

"The Darling of the Gods" was first shown at the National Theatre, Washington, D. C., on November 17, 1902, with Blanche Bates starring. It then had its New York debut with a run of 186 performances, and following a summer vacation went on for 64 performances more.

"Winning of Barbara Worth"

"THE Winning of Barbara Worth," by Harold Bell Wright, which Samuel Goldwyn will present, is as a Henry King Production with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in the stellar roles.

The work holds a record for sales and circulation. Over two million, eight hundred thousand copies have been sold. Such books do not come along twice in the same generation or even in the same century. The book will be serialized in the newspapers and a photoplay edition sold also.

This remarkable story will be produced under the direction of Henry King, the man who made "Stella Dallas." The scenario has been fashioned by Frances Marion, who performed the same service on "Stella Dallas."

"Beauty and the Beast"

SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S third contribution to the sixteen new productions that United Artists Corporation will release during the coming season will be an elaborate version of Kathleen Norris' best selling novel, "Beauty and the Beast," which originally appeared as a serial in the "Delineator."

George Fitzmaurice, who has no superior in directing productions of this type, has been assigned the task of transferring Mrs. Norris' work to the screen. Frances Marion has already completed the adaptation of the story.

In the featured roles of "Beauty and the Beast," Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky will appear. A cast of uniform excellence has been chosen to appear in their support.

"Beauty and the Beast" promises another artistic and box-office triumph from a producer whose concern is only with pictures combining these elements.

"The Bat"

BEFORE he started the filming of "The Bat," for United Artists Corporation release, Roland West, its producer and director said:

"The story consists of the three ingredients which spell the best entertainments in the world—thrills, laughs and a touch of romance."

How well the picture has demonstrated this in the leading theatres, is a matter of record. If "The Bat" had never been produced on the stage it still would make a box-office picture of high calibre. However, as a film, the plot has behind it the prestige of a play which has shown to a gross of ten million dollars.

Mr. West was wise enough to add new elements to the picture so that its denouement would not be forcast even by those who had seen the play. He particularly emphasized the comedy in the film version.

The cast is exceptional including as it does, Jewel Carmen, Jack Pickford, Louise Fazenda, Tullio Carminati, Emily Fitzroy, Robert McKim, Eddie Gribbon, Arthur Houseman, Lee Shumway and Andre de Beranger.

It occupied the store adjacent to the theatre entrance, in the Colony theatre building.

Reproduction of "The Buster Brown Bugle," a Sunday supplement published by the New Haven Union in support of the Buster Brown Club organized in that city in connection with Universal's Buster Brown Comedies

PROBABLY the most comprehensive tie-up and exploitation campaign ever executed in one city on a short subject is now running in New Haven, Conn., in connection with the "Buster Brown" comedies being shown at the Olympia Theatre there.

By the formation of a "Buster Brown" Boys' and Girls' Club, Bob Wood, Universal's New Haven Exploiteer, working with William F. Buck, resident manager, of the Olympia Theatre, and the New Haven Union, one of New Haven's leading newspapers, the whole territory has been covered for the "Buster Brown" two reelers.

More than 2,500 boys and girls, between the ages of 6 and 16, living in and around New Haven, have signed up for membership in the club, are wearing the club buttons, and bringing their parents to the Olympia Theatre, and otherwise are boosting Buster Brown.

The Buster Brown movement has attained such a headway in New Haven that in addition to running a three column layout on the club daily, the New Haven Union has inaugurated a full feature page in their Sunday edition known as the Buster Brown Bugle which contains stories, pictures and other material concerning the Buster Brown movement and correspondence from various youngsters who are members of the club.

The club idea was based on a kindness to animals pledge and coupons to be filled out for membership were reproduced in the paper.

Buck arranged to have club members as guests of the theatre once a month to see a Buster Brown comedy and other pictures, a membership card in the club issued by the newspaper as a means of identification.

Following the first announcement, March 30th, the newspaper followed with three column stories and coupons every day, the Union staged a Buster Brown Club parade on April 17th. 1,200 children were in line and marched over a route through the business section of New Haven which led to the Olympia Theatre where they had their first Buster Brown preview. The picture was "Buster's Nose Dive," one of the most recent of the two reelers.

The paraders were accompanied by several fife and drum corps, and carried huge banners advertising the New Haven Union, Olympia Theatre, Buster Brown Comedies and the Club. This parade won great praise from New Haven officials and from officers of New Haven Welfare organizations because it was so well handled and such a novelty.

The interest of the campaign has been further increased by the offer made by Anthony Maresco, manager of the Connecticut Dog and Bird Store, to donate a full-blooded Boston Bull pup, named Tige, to the Buster Brown Club member who gets in the most members.

Hymans, Inc., a New Haven outfitter, has offered suits of clothes to the boy or girl member standing highest in the membership campaign now on the way, and a special allowance to all club members making purchases in their store. Buster Brown shoes, Buster Brown hosiery and other articles are being offered by the local merchants. There is a Buster Brown Boys' Orchestra in the making in New Haven. Also boxing bouts scheduled, under the auspices of the Buster Brown Club, and contests for girls. The club actually has taken on a municipal significance.

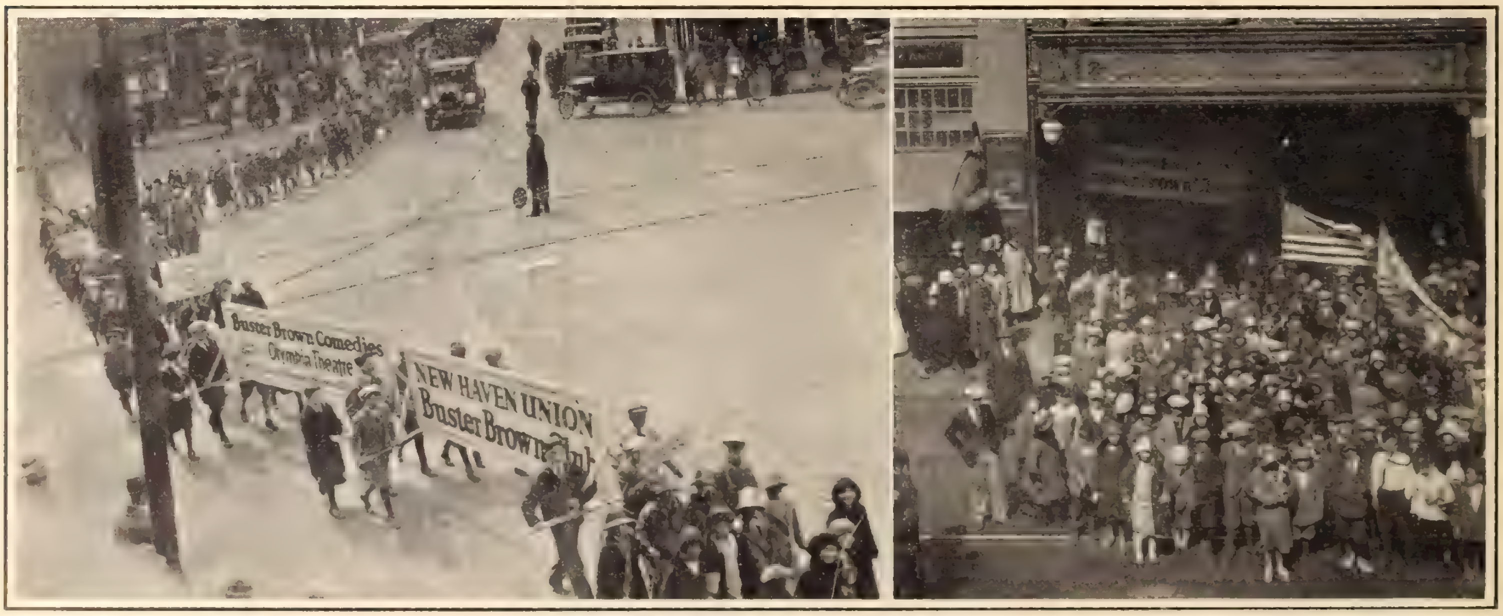
The New Haven Union officials can hardly believe the extent to which the movement has grown. Their use of a seven column streamer and layout on the front page, of the day of the parade, and their subsequent inauguration of the Sunday feature page indicates their confidence in the value of the club as a community idea.

Universal now has plans under way to duplicate this idea in every other territory.

Heralds in Form of Checks Mail Piece for "Secretary"

A Herald in the form of a check sent to all people on the mailing list of the Strand Theatre, Evansville, Ind., was the principal means employed by M-G-M Exploiter Chas. Glickauf, to exploit "His Secretary."

These checks were made out to "His Secretary" to the value of one thousand dollars (for a kiss), and signed by Lee Colman. On the back was the theatre's name as an indorsement, and the play date.



1,200 New Haven youngsters marched to the Olympic Theatre there in a remarkable demonstration launching the Buster Brown Club, organized by the theatre and the New Haven Union, as an important civic movement covering the entire city. The Club was formed in connection with the Buster Brown comedies offered by Universal.

Windows Exploit "The Volga Boatman"

Tie-Up With Radio and Motors Feature New York Campaign

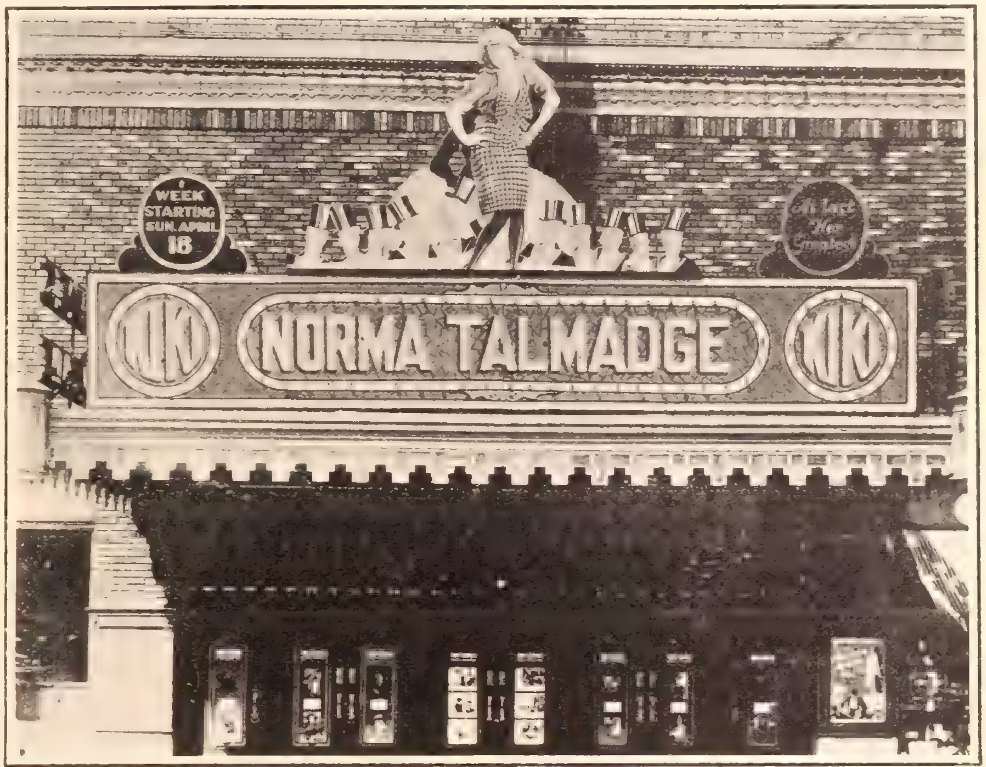
COOPERATIVE arrangements in which motor car and radio dealers are the leading factors have resulted in many first-rate displays throughout the city for the showing of "The Volga Boatman" at the Times Square Theatre in New York.

The Zenith Radio Corporation has supplied dealers in that product with a special window hanger, printed in two colors and with five scenes from the picture surrounding a photo of Julia Faye listening in on a Zenith receiver. These have received wide circulation and display. The tie-up line is "there is nothing so soothing to the ear as listening in on a Zenith Radio to the song of "The Volga Boatman."

These window hangers have been sent to all Zenith dealers, numbering 6,000 in 3,000 cities, where they will be displayed when "The Volga Boatman" is shown at the local theatres.

The most striking stunt was the window display in the Willys-Overland showroom at Broadway and Fiftieth Street. The Producers Distributing Corporation engineered the tie-up which consisted of a life-size cut-out of Volga boatmen hauling their barge along the Volga river.

The motion picture edition of "The Song of the Volga Boatmen" issued by G. Schirmer, Inc., is being displayed in the windows of dealers in sheet music, and the book stores are making window displays of "The Volga Boatman" novel just published by Grossett & Dunlap.



Stock paper supplied the figures for the attractive marquee display for "Kiki" (First National) at the Plaza Theatre in Waterloo, Ia.

Report "Driverless Car" is Success in Exploitation for Theatres

WORD comes from First National that the Johnny Hines "Driverless Car" which is touring the Southern States is proving a big exploitation aid for exhibitors in the cities visited and that this direct tie-up with "Rainbow Riley," as well as the comedian's other releases, is producing results for the theatre.

A recent letter from Glenn Condon, of the Wm. M. Smith Enterprises in Tulsa, Okla., states:

"Just a line to advise you that we have had with us Mr. Murray Lafayette and the Johnny Hines Driverless Car. We took a county police escort and a string of new cars, all properly bannered to Sapulpa, 15 miles distant and met him. We then escorted him to the city limits where we were met by local exhibitors, newspaper men, photographers, an aeroplane and city motorcycle police. We paraded the main streets and I doubt if any outdoor stunt ever pulled off attracted so much attention. As we had 'Rainbow Riley' at the Rialto the tie-up brought splendid direct results."

A letter from John Paxton, Manager of the D. F. and R. Enterprises, at Wichita Falls, Texas, said:

"The Johnny Hines Driverless Car appeared on the streets of Wichita Falls this morning and afternoon and created a great deal of excitement. With the klaxon shrieking its weird 'hello' the car roared through the business section with no driver at the wheel and wending its way in and around our heaviest traffic gave an unexpected thrill to thousands of people. We feel it will be a big boost for all coming Johnny Hines First National Pictures. In behalf of the D. F. & R. Enterprises, the writer wishes to thank you for your effort in including Wichita Falls on your route and thanking Mr. Lafayette for his cooperation and pleasant visit."

Short Subjects and Serials

Educational Starting New Comedy Series

Actual production has been started on three of the four series of comedies which Al Christie will produce for Educational release on the new season's program. These include the Bobby Vernon comedies, and a series from Billy Dooley and Jimmie Adams, also the Christie Brand.

Bobby Vernon has started on the first of eight comedies which he is to deliver for the new season. Billy Dooley will make six two-reelers of the "gob" type, the role which he played so successfully on the stage. The ten Christie comedies will have such featured players as Neal Burns, Jack Duffy, Bill Irving, Anne Cornwall and Vera Steadman.

With the exception of the unit to work on the Lupino Lane comedies, most of the companies working at the Educational studios have been organized and will start work early in June. Hamilton comedies, Juvenile series starring "Big Boy," the two-year-old star who is under a long-term contract to Educational, the Mermaid series, and the Cameo comedies, starring George Davis and Phil Dunham, will all be started on schedule.

Educational's advertising and publicity department is now at work on plans for extensive exploitation backing that will include a full line of accessories as well as national tie-ups.

Changes in Warner Bros. Sales Personnel

Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution for Warner Brothers, who just returned from a five weeks' trip, announced several changes in the sales personnel of the Warner forces.

Morris announced that F. Goodrow has been appointed manager of the New Orleans branch to succeed T. Guinan, resigned. J. N. Byrd has been transferred as manager of the Oklahoma City branch to the Dallas branch. T. B. Wildman will manage the Oklahoma branch. J. E. Huey will do special work under C. C. Ezell, division manager, with headquarters at Dallas.

Cast Chosen for Fox Comedy Feature, "Married Alive"

The cast has been selected for the Fox Film comedy feature, "Married Alive." The principal players are Lou Tellegen, Matt Moore and Margaret Livingston. The supporting cast is made up of Claire Adams, Gertrude Claire, Eric Mayne, Marcella Daly and Charles Lane.

The production will be directed by Emmet Flynn after an adaptation by Gertrude Orr from the novel by Ralph Straus.

Production Date Set for Mabel's Next Comedy

Mabel Normand will start the second of her Pathe comedies under the Hal Roach banner on June 10th.

Hal Roach Discusses Comedies

Pathe Comedy Producer Gives Reasons for Innovation of Star Series

"MY purpose of these Star comedies," said Hal Roach, discussing his recent innovation in the comedy field, that of bringing big star names to the short subject, "was to create an attraction so important in name value that no exhibitor would consider playing them without exploiting them. His recognition of the box office value would be so great that he would recognize immediately the folly of putting them on the screen without putting them in electric lights in front of his theatre."

The producer, in a recent interview, opened the discussion with an outline of his plans for the coming season, which will include four series, the Our Gang, Charles Chase, Mabel Normand and the Hal Roach Star Comedies.

In connection with the Stars Comedies, Roach named several well-known players at present appearing in feature length productions who would be seen next season in his special series. Continuing he said: "The motion picture business must progress in all its branches or it must go backward. It cannot stand still and this is what we are endeavoring to do to advance the two-reel comedy productions in keeping with the march of progress in other lines of business.

"We are not competing with other comedy makers, but with feature makers, and it is upon that basis that we expect the Hal Roach comedies to be sold and presented to the exhibitor and the public.

"The footage has nothing to do with the value of entertainment, and I believe the time is not far distant when it will be as easy to secure feature prices for feature short comedies, as it will be for a picture with a great deal more footage."

Roach pointed out that his production plans for the coming season called for an unusually large investment per reel.

"The short comedy can be a filler-in no longer," he said. "We cannot go back, for the public will not accept a lesser quality. We must go forward! No, we are not satisfied with our product and I never will be satisfied, for I am going ahead every month—every year—to make my comedies better, step by step, and keep pace with the progress of the industry."

Scenarists Busy on Scripts for Universal Program

The Universal program for the latter half of this season is being whipped into shape by ten staff writers and five free lance scenarists.

Harrison Jacobs is doing "Follow the Signs;" "Down the Stretch" is in Curtis Benton's hands; Harry Dittmar and Montagne are collaborating on "The Big Gun;" Winnifred Eaton Reeve is scenarizing "Brides Will Be Brides;" "Taxi! Taxi!" is being written by Raymond Cannon; "Butterflies in the Rain" is being adapted by Charles Kenyon; Emil Forst is working on "Lea Lyon;" "Another Woman's Life" is being done by Irme Fazekas; Leigh Jacobson is doing "The Love Thrill;" "Beware of Widows" is being scenarized by Graham Baker; "The Cheerful Fraud" is being written by Harvey Thew; "The Man in the Saddle" is being done by Charles Logue. Charles Whittaker is making the script on "The Man Who Laughs," while Joseph Jackson is working on "Advice to the Lovelorn."

Futter Plans European Tour in Search of Material

Walter A. Futter, producer of short subjects, is planning a tour of Europe where he will search for material and novelties for his series, "Curiosities—the Movie Side Show," which was recently added to the Educational schedule for 1926-27. He will sail June 2nd on the S. S. President Harding and will remain in Europe for a period of eight weeks.

Red Seal Will Distribute Bronte Dog Series

A new series of thirteen one reelers, featuring Lassie and Jean, dog actors, will be distributed by Red Seal Pictures during the coming season according to an announcement from Max Fleischer.

The series will be made by Emory B. Bronte whose studio is located at Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey.

Pathe Lists May 30 Releases

Schedule Includes One "Our Gang" Comedy and Two from Mack Sennett

HEADING the Pathe short subject schedule for the week of May thirtieth is an "Our Gang" comedy and two two-reelers from the Mack Sennett lot. Also included in the list are "Songs of Central Europe," one of the Famous Melody series; "R. P. M.," a Grantland Rice Sportlight; "The Bumper Crop," one of the Æsop's Fables; chapter six of the "Bar-C Mystery"; Pathe Review No. 22; Topics of the Day No. 22, and two issues of Pathe News.

"Uncle Tom's Uncle," the "Our Gang" two-reel comedy, produced by Hal Roach under the direction of Robert McGowan, shows the Gang putting on its own conception of the classic, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the dire results accruing when the audience hurls fire-crackers and rotten eggs at the actors.

"Muscle-Bound Music," is a Mack Sennett two-reel comedy directed by Alf Goulding, detailing the troubles experienced by a couple of embryo musicians trying to practice their art in a boarding house. The cast is made up of Natalie Kingston, David Morris, Patsy O'Byrne and Kewpie Morgan.

"A Yankee Doodle Duke," the second Mack Sennett two-reeler, deals with the trying adventures of a night club entertainer who fails in love, but becomes involved in a marital mix-up due to mistaken identity.

"Against Desperate Odds," is the title of the sixth chapter of the Pathe serial "The Bar-C Mystery," starring Dorothy Phillips. In this chapter, the enemies of the Bar-C are getting warmer and warmer on the trail of the hidden mine, for they acquire half of the information they need to learn a secret worth millions. This is a C. W. Patton production.

"Songs of Central Europe," featuring Peggy Shaw, was produced by James A. FitzPatrick. Some of the songs presented in this release are "Holy Night," "How Can I Leave Thee?" "Oh Where, Oh Where, Has My Little Dog Gone?" "The Fir Tree," and the student songs of Old Heidelberg.

"R. P. M." is a Grantland Rice Sportlight produced by J. L. Hawkinson. "R. P. M." is the abbreviation for "revolutions per minute," and refers, of course, to the speed of motors.

Fox Comedy Units Hard at Work

Name Last Five for This Season and Six for Next; Animal Comedy on List

THE Fox comedy units under the leadership of George E. Marshall are in full blast.

Six of the comedies for next season have been completed and others are now in production. Those completed are two Imperials, "It's a Pipe," "Lafayette, Where Are We?" two O. Henrys, "A Complete Life" and "Babes in the Jungle"; and a Van Bibber, "The Swimming Instructor." Also the first of a new series of eight animal comedies.

The comedies now in work will be completed within a few days. They are being directed by Ben Stoloff, Lex Neal, Al Robbins, Max Gold and others.

The five releases between now and August when the new year begins are, "Rah, Rah, Heidelberg," a Van Bibber with Earl Foxe; two O. Henrys, "A Lickpenny Lover," with Hallam Cooley and Gladys McConnell; "The Family Picnic," a Helen and Warren with Hallam Cooley, Katherine Perry and Art Housman; one Imperial, "Matrimony Blues" with Lige Conley, Dot Farley and Mildred June, and "A-1 Society."

Pathe Has Summer Sales Drive

To Be Known as "Great Scott Billings Round-Up" in Honor of Harry Scott

THE managers and salesmen of Pathe's thirty-four exchanges have launched a summer sales drive in honor of Harry Scott, general sales manager for the company, who recently put in operation the Pathe personal sales plan whereby the executives of the company come into closer contact with exhibitors. The drive, which started May 15th and will end at midnight, August 7th, is known as the "Great Scott Billings Round-Up."

A novel idea has been introduced whereby the contest will be made typical of a fast Western round-up. To carry out the Western idea the five major divisions of Pathe's field forces will be known as ranges, and the New York branch becomes the New York Ranch, the Omaha branch, the Omaha Ranch, and so on. Each branch manager becomes the foreman of the ranch and the salesmen, cowboys.

The prizes are exactly the same for the five ranges, or divisions, and consist of a monetary reward for the branch managers, assistants, salesmen, bookers and cashiers.

Following is the line-up of ranches as they come in the various ranges: Range No. 1 takes in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Cincinnati; Range No. 2 Detroit, Los Angeles, Atlanta, New Jersey, Dallas, Washington and San Francisco; Range No. 3 St. Louis, Double "I," Buffalo, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Indianapolis and Milwaukee; Range No. 4 New Orleans, Charlotte, Des Moines, Seattle, Albany, New Haven and Oklahoma, and the fifth range includes Omaha, Denver, Memphis, Salt Lake City, Portland and Butte.

Opinions on Current Productions

"Mr. Cinderella"

(Educational-Tuxedo—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THE diminutive, forlorn looking Johnny Arthur heads all-star cast in this comedy which combines the radio and the Cinderella ideas to achieve its purpose. Johnny is the brow-beaten stepchild in a hard boiled family where his presence is tolerated with as much attention as the doormat. The senior members of the family are about to attend a motormen's ball and use Johnny to press their clothes; but he burns a pair and for penalty has to stay home and listen to the radio. He dreams that Cinderella appears and bids him to go to the ball in evening dress which she creates with her magic wand, on condition that he must return before midnight or he will lose everything he has on. There is a lot of chuckles when Johnny being late, loses his clothing piece by piece until only the B. V. D.'s are left.

THE CAST

Johnny Arthur, Virginia Vance, Glen Cavender, George Davis, Stanley Blystone and Ella McKenzie. Directed by Norman Taurog.

Summary—Variety of ideas scrambled to serve for a good number of laughs, although it may strike fans as being trifle slow for a comedy.

"Say It With Babies"

(Pathe-Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

GLENN TRYON heads the cast in this two-reeler with an entirely novel twist to the story. Glenn is an official baby keeper in a large department store where the shopping mammas leave them in his care. But a keeper of the babies is a thankless job when one has no authority to spank, consequently there is no end of mischief the prankish kids play on him. The climax of all fun comes when one mother forgets her baby who leaves it in Glenn's care. He slips the baby in a newlywed's car just before both couples go out on a picnic. They are caught in the rain, and to add to their trouble, baby swallows the key to the flivver which has to be pushed home. When they are home, of course, the key is found. Glenn struggles along creditably enough but the gags are none too spontaneous in some of the sequences. Babies' atmosphere dominates the film and should appeal to women especially. Director Fred Guinol.

THE CAST

Glenn Tryon, Eva Novak, Martha Sleeper, Oliver "Babe" Hardy, Jackie Haines.

Summary—A comedy of average merit.

Comedy highlights from "The Ghost of Folly," a Pathe release.

"Don Key"

(Pathe-Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THIS is a burlesque on the original story idea, presented to the audience from diversity of angles which is worked as follows. A despairing movie producer is searching desperately for the great story which will salvage his business from bankruptcy. In comes the great author with an original masterpiece and proceeds to enact the various scenes which are visualized on the screen. The action shifts continually from the office to the place of its origin with greatly amusing result. Max Davidson's disconsolate expression as he listens to the author's recital is genuinely funny while Stuart Holmes exaggerates the acting to the extent that will prove a sure fire laugh-getter. But the lion's share of fun is furnished by the office attendants as they enter the office at various times ready to shoot, hang or dynamite the boresome author.

THE CAST

Stuart Holmes, Jimmy Finlayson, Vivien Oakland, Max Davidson, "Spec" O'Donnell, Jackie Hanes, Jerry Mandi, Frank Butler. Directed by Grover Jones.

Summary—A novel theme and an all star cast combined in a lively, entertaining comedy.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin"

(Pathe-Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

IN the opinion of this reviewer, Our Gang comes out with the sole exception of "Good Cheer" with a most significant contribution to the art of amusement in this picture. It may be an erroneous impulse which prompts one to wonder whether the juvenile rascals have ever done anything so heavily charged with keen, unadulterated humor, and so judiciously flavored with refined slapstick at the same time. The Gang plays Uncle Tom's Cabin and as is their wont on such occasions, manages to bungle things in an uproarious manner, while the town's urchins make up the audience. The Gang's conception of the play is riotously ingenious, with Mickey presiding as Simon Legree, Fatty Joe as Uncle Tom, Mary as Eva and Farina as Topsy, they succeeded in pulling gags that will make even the most crotchety person laugh. From making up the town mutts as bloodhounds with hot water bottles for ears, to pelting the performers with rotten tomatoes, the picture sparkles with merriment, clean as a hound's tooth.

THE CAST

Mickey Daniels, Joe Cobb, Mary Korman, Jay Smith, Jackie Condon, Johnny Downs, Farina. Director, Robert McGowan.

Summary—One of the best from Our Gang. Ought to lure coppers out of Scotch pockets any house, anywhere.

"Going Crazy"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

LIGE CONLEY brings forth lots of fun in this one which is mostly of the rough play variety with slapstick situations also strongly in evidence. Lige impersonates a rich heir who goes "crazy" so he can be near the girl he loves who is a nurse in a sanatorium. This problem keeps the comedian busy most of the time side stepping troubles until he finally attains his heart's desire. There are few irrepressible moments, as for example, when Lige assails the doctors with a museum sword calling himself Caesar, in order to convince the "docs" that he is violent. Or later when awaiting their verdict he overhears the cuckoo clock and promptly tells his friend that the examiners have called him a "cuckoo." The doctors were really crooks and meant to keep Lige locked up so they could possess themselves of his fortune, but they are exposed and everything ends happily.

THE CAST

Lige Conley, Estelle Bradley, Anita Garvin, Otto Fries, Eddie Lambert. Directed by Charles Lamont.

Summary—Lige Conley has done better before, but this comedy is of the average rating.

"A Bumper Crop"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

THIS issue of the Fable cartoon contains quite a variety of fun-evoking ideas which run true to form in the entertainment value. There is lots of fun when the pigs are seen diving from the spring board into the old swimmin' mud hole, also when Thomas Cat is forcing a hen to lay him an egg. Milton Mouse, seeing the latter stunt, tries it on a poor little chick but is fought off by a rooster. He gets his revenge however on the clock cuckoo which he forces to lay an egg; he then invites his gang and all play football with the egg until farmer Al chases them away. Clever, amusing cartoon.—M. T ANDREWS.

"Pathe Review No. 22"

(Pathe—One Reel)

COL. FRED LINDSAY, British officer and big game hunter, demonstrates the use of the Australian stock whip as a weapon of convenience. The magic eye of the camera revealing cell structure of wood constitutes the second part of the Review. The last part is a Pathe color study of The College of the City of New York in a number of charming shots.—M. T. ANDREWS.

Wet Paint

Not up to the Griffith Mark

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AFTER "Hands Up" and "This Side of Paradise," Raymond Griffith's new comedy, "Wet Paint," falters by the wayside—a work far below the high standard of its forerunners. Of course to those who have seen the above-mentioned pieces it will doubtless prove entertaining enough. It is crammed with gags of the slapstick pattern—and most of them go back to the early Sennett period. It starts from nothing and gets nowhere. The camera simply grinds and Griffith does the rest.

The introductory title announcing it as a version of the Bard's "Much Ado About Nothing" in modern clothes promised a sparkling hour. But after a few moments of spontaneous fun it spends itself. One sees a lot of horse-play—most of which concerns auto chases and ridiculous shootings.

Accepted as straight slapstick it offers merit in places, but Griffith's name has become synonymous with subtle pantomime—so that when he resorts to gags to gain the laughs those who have followed his antics are apt to become disappointed. There are some explosive scenes and a few are truly mirthful. Helene Costello and Natalie Kingston offer the pulchritude appeal.

The Cast: Raymond Griffith, Helene Costello, Bryant Washburn, Natalie Kingston, Henry Kolker. Director, Arthur Rosson.

THEME: Comedy of slapstick brand based upon a thread of "Much Ado About Nothing." Involves the goings-on of adventurous chap who gets in and out of various tight scrapes.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scene of star inebriated, having fun with a fire truck. The Turkish bath episode. The auto chase. The appeal of Helene Costello. The subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES Play up Griffith as one of the best comics on the screen. Surely fans are familiar with him and his style of comedy. Bill as a typical Griffith number. Feature Helene Costello.

DRAWING POWER: Star's name should draw them—although they won't see as good a picture as some previous efforts. Suitable for first runs and other types of houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, Six reels. Released July, 1926.

The Galloping Cowboy

An Engaging Star in Glamorous but Inarticulate Western

(Reviewed by Maurice T. Andrews)

THE outstanding feature in this picture is the appealing, youthful personality of Bill Cody, his rip-tearing performance, and above all the uncanny way in which he wields the thirty-foot Australian stock-whip. This form of weapon is a novelty so far as Westerns are concerned and should prove popular with fans. Bill uses the whip to snap a cigar from a man's mouth twenty feet distant, remove another's hat, and to catch and tie his adversary single-handed. The plot is woven along the familiar pattern required of all ordinary Westerns, interspersed at intervals with action of an aimless kind which appears to handicap the spirited performance of the dashing hero. Fortunately the incoherency of the story is overbalanced by a pulse-quickening situation and an adequate supporting cast with Edmund Cobb especially effective as the cold-blooded villain. Cody wears a picturesque cowboy costume which befits his ingratiating smile rather than the rugged surroundings, but this will no doubt serve to appeal to the imagination of the juvenile gallery, as well as the feminine admirers of screen cowboys.

The Cast: Bill Cody, Alex Hart, Edmund Cobb, Barney Gilmore, Florence Ulrich, Richard Cummings, David Dunbar. Author, Adele Buffington. Director, William J. Craft.

THEME. Western. Lighthearted nephew of cattle raiser is suspected of robbing his uncle, is captured by his cousin, a notorious bandit, and held captive; he achieves escape, rescues the girl from the gang and recovers the stolen money from his cousin, who is the real thief.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Cody's appealing personality, the sequences where he uses the whip in fighting, the stampede, the long, thrilling shots of the galloping cowboy, the fight in the gang's hangout and the effective climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost Bill Cody, who fights and rides like a demon. Exploit the Australian stockwhip and the stunts the star performs with it.

DRAWING POWER. Will satisfy those who are not particular about plot values, but like action, thrills, stunts and romance in plenty.

Produced by Western Star Productions, Inc. Distributed by Associated Exhibitors, Inc. Length, 4,639 feet.
Released May, 1926.

Aloma of the South Seas

Not up to Calibre

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a picture which has been over-publicized—with the result that it does not come up to expectations. As a play it didn't set Broadway on fire and as a picture it never seems to get anywhere in spite of its suggestion of melodrama. About the only points of recommendation are Gilda Gray's portrayal of a South Sea dancer (Gilda makes her screen debut and gives promise of going far under the proper direction and if she is given suitable stories), and the exteriors shot along some picturesque part of the coast of Porto Rico.

The story is tawdry, slow in unfolding, and tenuous all the way—and it fails to create any excitement. Scenes will build to a dramatic climax and then the punch disappears. As a result Maurice Tourneur hasn't accomplished anything.

It tells of the South Sea girl's love for a disillusioned white man who is on the island to forget an unhappy romance. For purposes of conflict her brown-skin admirer is ever ready to send his rivals to the deep. Indeed, William Powell goes down to the sea in sharks because these tigers love white meat. Miss Gray acts with simple naturalness and her grace and dancing—together with the drawing power of her name—should win her a lot of attention.

The Cast: Gilda Gray, Percy Marmont, Warner Baxter, William Powell, Harry Morey, Julanne Johnston, Joseph Smiley. Director, Maurice Tourneur.

THEME: Romance of South Seas in which native girl falls in love with disillusioned white man. When his erstwhile sweetheart finds him and becomes reconciled the native girl returns to her native lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The beautiful exteriors—especially the tropic storm. The grace and abandon of Gilda Gray and her natural performance. The effort to be convincing by William Powell. The dance of the star.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Here is a new star, who in the first run is making personal appearances. Her name should attract—also the title. But story is apt to prove disappointing so don't exploit it too heavily.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, Seven reels. Released July, 1926.

Intrigue and Comedy in Snappy, Entertaining Western

(Reviewed by Maurice T. Andrews)

A GOOD occasional Western after the usual pattern whose chief appeal lies in daring horsemanship, gun-fighting, and a more or less obvious out-wit-the-villain plot. Also it offers several enhancing curves by providing a sufficiently fervid love interest between the hero and a blind girl who sets out to kill him; only to learn that it was he who the cause of restoring her sight. Buffalo Bill, Jr., certainly lives up to the standard set by popular demand for the delineator of western types, as valiant, hard-riding, strenuous cowboy of the open spaces. He is adequately supported by Molly Malone whose sincere portrayal of the blind girl captures the sympathy, and by Harry Todd who generously contributes to the entertainment of the picture with his comedy. Others in the cast give good account of themselves. Richard Thorpe, the director, speeds up action from the opening of the first real, shrouds the hero with a shady past, then promptly begins to extricate him from difficulties via the channel of thrilling incidents culminating in a smashing climax. The redoubtable villain, engaging heroine, a gallant, sympathetic hero, plus moderate amount of comedy and furious riding, mark this as an acceptable program picture in houses where action Westerns are in demand. Direction and photography of good quality.

The Cast: Buffalo Bill, Jr., Al Taylor, Molly Malone, Joe Rickson, Charles Whitaker, Harry Todd, Ruth Royce, Lafe McKee. Author, Ralph Cummins. Director, Richard Thorpe.

THEME. Western. Rawhide is innocently suspected of killing his partner and ruining the latter's sister. He meets a blind girl, younger sister of the above, and pays for the operation on her eyes, later is cleared with her help and gains her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Buffalo Bill's spectacular riding, good malo twist to the story, fine outdoor photography and comedy supplied by Todd. The scene where Nan tries to kill Bill, the fight with villain and the effective climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Advertise Buffalo Bill, Jr., and his daring horsemanship. Promise them thrilling stunts, romance, crisp, swiftly moving action and good direction.

DRAWING POWER. Good one day program Western for small town houses.

Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. Distributed by Associated Exhibitors, Inc. Length, 4,460 feet. Released May, 1926.

The Social Highwayman

Much Below the Standard

IT was difficult at the start to determine just what the author and the director were shooting at here. Any attempt to take it seriously is fatal, for it is one of the most feeble films to flicker its way across the screen this season. You can't take it as farce, much as the players do their best to portray false heroics—and you can't take it as melodrama either.

Just as some point is introduced that looks reasonable, it is quickly dashed to pieces with some ridiculous bit of action. The idea has to do with a cub reporter assigned by the city editor to expose the police for not capturing a notorious highwayman. When he bobs up as the victim of a practical joke engineered by the boss of a rival paper, he is promptly catapulted by strong hands and feet through the door—a scene which was never true to newspaper life and never will be—for city editors use strong language which can be understood by a graduate of a kindergarten.

Of course the cub must make good. What follows is a lot of namby-pamby romance and adventure in which the action is pointless. One can guess that the director shot the picture, ad lib, as the ideas came to him. The players are swallowed up in the hokum.

The Cast: John Patrick, Dorothy Devore, Montagu Love, Russell Simpson, George Pearce, Lynn Cowan, Frank Brownlee, Fred Kelsey, Charles Hill Mailes. Director, William Beaudine.

THEME: Comedy-drama of cub reporter who is forced to make good and capture a highwayman before he can back his job. All of this calls for a lot of adventure sprinkled with romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The effort of the players to be convincing. Scene when villain is caught and the moment when train carries the crooks into prison yard. The romantic moments.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Might mention the cast—emphasizing such names as John Patrick, Dorothy Devore and Montagu Love. Bill as story of a young newspaper man who makes good when down in his luck. Take advantage of the ballyhoo possibilities suggested in the title.

DRAWING POWER: All right for small houses in towns and cities. Strictly a program picture which needs strong support from rest of bill.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers.
Length, Six reels. Released June, 1926.

Ranson's Folly

Military Story Is Fair Enough

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

RICHARD HARDING DAVIS' story of army life at a frontier post is brought forth on the screen with a good deal of conviction. True, it offers no great shakes as a work of moving, absorbing drama. It is so simple that a ten-year-old can "spot" the development of every scene. To overcome its plot shortcomings the director has dressed it up with appropriate atmosphere and detail—and the military flavor gives it a certain tang that lifts it out of the ordinary rut of films.

Barthelmess has had far better pictures—and he's done far better work, but at that he makes himself convincing in his role of the venturesome lieutenant. As Ranson he has more than one folly. The first comes when he saves the post from fire and the second—which provides the punch—arrives when he, for the sake of excitement, masquerades as a highwayman. It develops into a case of the officer and the father of his sweetheart attempting to assume the blame. But the happy ending is achieved.

Not so much to it, but suspense is well projected in the mysterious actions of the trader, a rough-and-ready sergeant and the follies of Ranson. Dorothy Mackaill makes the most of a weak role—and the others are competent enough. The film will not add laurels to Barthelmess, nor for that matter will it take any away.

The Cast: Richard Barthlemess, Dorothy Mackaill, Anders Randolf, Pat Hartigan, Wm. Norton Bailey, Brooks Benedict, Pauline Neff, Billie Bennett, Frank Coffyn, Jack Fowler, Col. C. C. Smith. Director, Sidney Olcott.

THEME: Romantic drama of army officer who craves excitement. When bored with life at the post he playfully stages a fake hold-up but is caught red-handed and court-martialed. However, he is absolved of guilt.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The exteriors. The fire scene. The moment when hero meets heroine. The hold-up. The court-martial. The atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up author, star and director. Tie up with army camps if situated near them. Also tie up with American Legion. Use military flavor for lobby display. Play up cast.

DRAWING POWER: Strong enough for the first run houses. Should prove popular in any type of house.

Length, 7,322 feet. Released June, 1926.

Rolling Home

Has All the Elements of a Popular Appeal

(Reviewed by Maurice T. Andrews)

THE indefatigable Denny puts it over again in the same pleasing, facetious manner with which all of his vehicles are stamped. Although the comedy cannot be classified as belonging to the rip-roaring type, the laughs are spread thick, and the waggish situations concocted aplenty. Rolling Home is just the picture for hot weather, its story leaves the gray matter undisturbed, you can stretch your feet comfortably, and still have enough laughs to last a month. The idea of having your hero coming home broke and bluff his folks that he is a millionaire, is not overburdened with originality. But in the case of Denny it's different. Somehow the problem seems to suit him very well. Denny is capitally supported by Marion Nixon, George Nicholls, Ben Hendricks and others, backed by a first-class direction and photography. The tempo of the picture is trifle slow in the first two reels until the preliminary situations are established, but past the second reel it accelerates and never slackens until the last fadeout.

The Cast: Reginald Denny, Marion Nixon, E. J. Ratcliffe, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Margaret Seddon, George Nicholls, Alfred Allen, Anton Vaverka, George Marion, Alfred Knott, Howard Enstedt, Adele Watson. Author, John Hunter Booth. Director, William A. Seiter.

THEME: Comedy-farce. Enthusiastic young promoter fails in his deals but the impression remains at home of his huge wealth. He visits his native town and is forced to bluff the folks that he is a millionaire, is discovered a failure but saved from defeat by putting a real deal this time.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Good quality of humor and capable comic pantomime of Denny and Hendricks. The Welcome Home sequence, the scenes where Denny is besieged for donations, where he makes speech on the waterfalls, the franchise and the strong climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Star is too well known to be ignored at the box office. The great title, the penniless millionaire idea, the American bluffing it idea.

DRAWING POWER: Safe booking. Will draw past the O. K. mark anywhere.

Produced and Distributed by Universal-Jewel.
Length, 6,993. Released May, 1926.

The Rainmaker

Plenty of Action and Incident Here

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S a racing story that unfolds here—one, which, while not so original in theme, manages to release a deal of novelty in its characterization and the manipulation of its scenes. Certainly it doesn't lack for dramatics and thrills—there being enough action to supply three complete features. Not only is there a racing scene to start it off, but it continues with its punch when a fire and epidemic are added for good measure.

Of course this all builds a plot which becomes very intricate and difficult to accept as entirely real. But no one can deny that it fails to entertain. The hero is a jockey who can foretell a rainy day. So he becomes a sure winner on a mud horse. Because of his arm, wounded in the war, becoming painful at the approach of rainy weather, he is able to beat the other boys. However, he meets an accident and lands in the hospital—and from this point the romance enters and stays with the melodrama to the finish.

To detail the subsequent events would call for reams of adjectives, but suffice to say it is crammed with adventure. William Collier, Jr., gives a most convincing portrayal, blending the pathos with some admirable humor to humanize the title role.

The Cast: William Collier, Jr., Georgia Hale, Ernest Torrence, Brandon Hurst, Joseph Dowling, Tom Wilson, Martha Mattox, Charles K. French, Jack Richardson, Melbourne McDowell. Director, Clarence Badger.

THEME: Drama of jockey who knows how to win on a muddy track. Meets with an accident which lands him in the hospital. There he meets nurse who is expelled. They renew their romance in a distant town.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The racing scene. The accident and the romance in the hospital. The fire and epidemic episode.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title affords teaser possibilities. Play up the central character and how he always wins on a muddy track.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all types of houses, large and small.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, Six reels. Released June, 1926.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Brown of Harvard"—M.G.M., Capitol, New York City

American: "Now I'm not among those who always shout at football games. But I did stand up and barely refrained from cheering at 'Brown of Harvard.' There's a football game worth making a noise about, and a picture that is a delight from beginning to end. It seems by far the best of all college plays. Besides that it is a good picture splendidly acted and directed. Major Bowes personally recommends 'Brown of Harvard,' so—and most heartily do I!"

Morning World: "'Brown of of Harvard' approaches very closely upon excellence in the motion picture play. Certainly it is one of the season's sanest, most amusing and most continuously dramatic comedies in films, and it so for surpasses anything of college life acted upon the spoken stage throughout the course of the now closing Broadway session as to render itself incomparable in this. its allied field. I enjoyed it from its opening caption to its last fleeting scene. It is infinitely fine and moving play-acting in pictures, and it is gorgeous football."

Telegram: "A genial, breezy tale that bounds along with a hop, skip and jump. The picture radiates the genuine, jolly atmosphere of college life. William Haines puts in the best work of his career as the boisterous, swell headed Brown. The shots of the Yale-Harvard game show a sea of faces, a barrage of hats and handkerchiefs, and the field where legs and arms and ball whirl in wild confusion, and the final victory after the neck to neck struggle. A good human interest touch is shown when Brown rushes back in triumph only to find that his roommate has died while he was away. Mary Brian is decorative as the girl."

Sun: "This film is another entertaining Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. William Haines gives one of the best performances of the season as a bumptuous, likable collegiate. It will prove to be a popular film all over the United States. 'Brown of Harvard' is the best of the college pictures."

Evening Journal: "A rollicking tale of college life, with 'Brown of Harvard' making the necessary touchdown at the climax to give the audience a thrill. William Haines steps out in the comedy role as an aggressive young freshman. One is shown all the spots of interest in and around Harvard, and besides there is a corking crew race, as well as the exciting football game."

Daily News: "'Brown of Harvard' made a touchdown on the hearts of the people at the Capitol. The intense joys and sorrows of youth played hob with people's emotions. The applause that greeted Haines when he threw off his blanket on the sidelines and dashed off to win the football game for Harvard was just as real as though the audience was seated in a stadium instead of a theatre. Young Haines fits like a glove in his part, and Mary Brian is the sweetest little sweetheart imaginable."

Evening World: "'Brown of Harvard' is good entertainment. Its humors, which are amusing, and its tragedies which seem so real, make no pretension to be anything else. It is not a milestone set, but it is bright, clean, interesting amusement."

Graphic: "Haines' grief when told of his buddy's death is a bit of emotional acting we shall not forget for a long time. That scene alone is worth the price of admission. Mr. Conway has injected plenty of college atmosphere into the picture. Good photography, plenty of laughs, some real thrills and some fine acting make 'Brown of Harvard' a worthwhile picture."

Herald-Tribune: "We never have had a bigger thrill in a motion picture theatre than when Tom Brown won the football game."

Evening Post: "'Brown of Harvard' has many a laugh, much athletic interest, love, excitement, and a judicious tear now and then It must, therefore, be a pretty good movie."

Daily Mirror: "William Haines is the shining light in 'Brown of Harvard.' He gives a rollicking performance, which is varied at intervals with splendid emotional work. Indeed, Mr. Haines' scene in the hospital when he learns that his buddy has passed away is an exquisite gem of superb acting."

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, Roosevelt, Chicago

Examiner: "It is of such simple material,—human to the core,—that 'Stella Dallas' is made. And it is in this simplicity that it has charmed millions and become the most praised picture of the season, perhaps many seasons."

Tribune: "Honestly, it's just great. It offers you life, not on a silver charger; not on the magic carpet of a director's hectic dreams, but life as it is lived by folks just around the corner."

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, Capitol, Hartford

Courant: "Belle Bennett in the role of Stella, the mother, does one of the finest bits of acting ever shown on the screen."

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, Forum, Los Angeles

Examiner: "Mother love has been the favorite theme for cinematic discussion, but in the picture which Samuel Goldwyn is now presenting at the Forum previous efforts are effaced."

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, Imperial, San Francisco

Chronicle: "A great picture-view in any light, and it is still great. Story, direction, acting, production all reach into the region of flawless beauty."

"'Stella Dallas' is a picture too full of fine qualities to be dismissed casually as 'great.' It is a fascinating example of cinematic art."

"A new skyrocket arrived to illumine the motion picture field. It is a sweetly powerful story of the sacrifice of a drab and vulgar woman in the interests of her daughter."

Jack Bellman, who recently formed Hollywood Pictures Corp., of which he is president, to distribute in the Greater New York territory

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, Loew's State, St. Louis

Post Dispatch: "One of the four or five best pictures ever made. See it."

"Hell Bent fer Heaven"—Warners, New York City

Daily News: "This is a picture that any one who sits in to see will follow from beginning to end with considerable interest.

"Probably it's an indictment against the conversion-system of 'gettin' religion.'

"Rufe, the backwoods boy, sees the light so strongly that it sets his poor brain afire and leads him to arrange no end of trouble for everybody else in the picture."

American: "'Hell Bent fer Heaven' is sure fire movie stuff, with floods, feuds and everything.

"We could have seen much more of Gardner James to advantage. He's excellent always, pathetic as an unhappy, jealous child."

Morning World: "James donates here a performance sincere, moving and intelligent, expressing from within tangled religo-sexual emotions without resort to grimaces, while Miss Selbie deserves the same three adjectives for her work as a hill mother."

Sun: "Thatcher Hughes's play, of course, is turned into a slightly more violent school of melodrama. Off stage dams, floods, shootings, etc., refuse to remain off screen when a play comes into the films. And 'Hell Bent Fer Heaven,' the play, had its share of these outdoor happenings."

Telegram: "The story deals with two families of Carolina mountaineers. A former blood feud between them is rekindled by a self-appointed pilot of the Lord, whose rage to save souls is surpassed only by his desire to sidetrack the course of true love which is to unite the two families. Working upon the family pride and traditions of the girl's brother, he all but accomplishes his dastardly design."

Telegraph: "Rufe, the camp-meeting fanatic who dominated the play, becomes in the picture a maliciously jealous youth whose relaxation is found, apparently, in reading Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress.' He is well played by Gardner James.

"John Harron, as the young lough-boy just returned from the war, is sincere and convincing in conventional situations, and has rarely, if ever, played with more directness and force."

Times: "For most of its length the film transcription of Hatcher Hughes' prize play, "Hell-Bent fer Heaven,' possesses a fine dramatic quality, capital acting, adroitly sketched scenes and stirring suspense.

Tribune: "J. Stuart Blackton has made an interesting picture of it. When Richard Watts was compiling his list of players of great merit who never have received their share of recognition, we suggested Evelyn Selbie. We have been watching her for years. But Mr. Watts said he never had seen her. Now we insist that he go to see 'Hell-Bent fer Heaven,' where Miss Selbie is so splendid in her playing of the mother.

"The flood scenes are interesting and the photography is fine."

"Outside the Law"—Universal, Colony, New York

American: "Five years ago Universal made a picture that at once caught the public fancy. It was a good picture then. Yesterday, to my surprise, it proved to be a good picture still. 'Outside the Law' is as full of thrills as ever. Audiences filling the Colony. 'Outside the Law' is bringing the crowds."

Daily Mirror: "Five years ago Tod Browning—he who made 'The Unholy Three,' 'The Black Bird,' etc.,—wrote and directed a rip-snorting crook melodrama yclept 'Outside the Law.' 'Outside the Law' created a sensation when it was released in January, 1921. Judging from the enthusiastic crowds storming the Colony doors, where it is now playing, its popularity to-day is just as great. The flicker has been re-edited and titled by Universal. The job is a good one. In our opinion the real test of a picture's bid for excellency is the reception accorded it years after it has been released. 'Outside the Law' is a whale of a melodrama! The ending of the picture is a darb, especially if you like 'melodrama de luxe.' Lon Chaney gives a shivery, realistic performance as 'Black Mike.'"

Daily News: "This picture is worth the revival given it so that movie-goers may see the best child actor I've ever seen on the screen—Stanley Goethals. Young Master Goethals as That Kid, is so doggone real with his smiles and tears and hugs and kisses that for a time I forgot I was watching merely a moving picture—and that in itself is extraordinary. Lon Chaney, gives two of his many compelling characterizations."

New England

IT was 18 years ago last Saturday, May 8, at 2.30 in the afternoon, that the Star Theatre opened for business at Bar Harbor, Me., and the seating capacity of the theatre, 340, was taxed to the utmost. The music was piano, played by Ralph Fortier, now pianist at the Opera House in Bangor and Fred W. Westcott, drums. Dolor Vielleux sang the illustrated songs. The partners in the business were then Otha Jellison, John Herlihy and J. A. Emery. Mr. Emery bought out his partners in 1910 and during the past sixteen years has conducted the business alone.

Today the theatre is one of the most attractive picture houses to be found. The seating capacity is 660 and the pictures offered are among the finest to be had. The big organ, which was installed in 1924, cost something like $20,000 and it happens that at this time, the 18th anniversary of the opening, Mr. Emery has just placed an order for additions to the big instrument.

The organist of the Star Theatre is Mrs. Pearl Otto Westcott and her ability as an organist, and her understanding of the unusual demands of playing for movies makes her an able musician.

Each year has meant the introduction of some new feature for the pleasing of his patrons and each year Mr. Emery has made an effort, always effective, to add something to the attraction of the building.

Sam Hasse of Producers, Boston, had his auto stolen from in front of his home Sunday night. At 4.30 next morning, the telephone aroused him and police informed him they had recovered the car.

C. W. Ratcliff, owner, and Jacob Frost, musical director of the Majestic, Holyoke, which is temporarily closed while undergoing extensive alterations and improvements, were in Boston during the week, booking films and other features for the reopening of the house within a few weeks.

Bob Cobe and Sam Goodwin have taken a long term lease on the former Taunto Inn property in the very heart of Taunton, Mass., and are planning the erection of a theatre and hotel on the site, with stores and bowling alleys.

The Film Exchange Transfer Co., which operates through New England, is branching out and will start handling films for the exchanges between Atlanta, Ga., and all points in Florida. It will continue the New England business as at present.

Stanley Waite, former branch manager at Boston for Pathe, and later sales manager at the home office in New York, has been promoted to divisional sales manager for the Central division.

"Bill" White has returned to his old home town of Westerly, R. I., and it is rumored that he will manage the Central Theatre in that town.

Reports say that the new theatre in Springfield, Mass., which is to be built on the site of the Massasoit Hotel and is to be operated by Arthur Friend, will have a seating capacity of 4,000, thus being by far the largest house in Western Massachusetts.

Frank Vine, formerly of the Fox sales force, has joined First National, Boston, and is covering Rhode Island and Southern Massachusetts.

George Hager, formerly of the First National staff, has returned to the Fox exchange and is salesman in the Western Massachusetts territory.

Miss Florence Scully, booker for Educational, Boston, has returned to her desk after a successful operation for appendicitis.

James A. Thornton of Westerly, R. I., where he runs the United Theatre, was a welcome guest to Film Row this week.

Inspector Booker R. S. Coyle, who has been at the Pathe exchange in Boston for some weeks, left this week and will make his next stop at Albany.

The entire sales force of Producers from the Boston exchange went to New York for the eastern regional sales convention.

Dr. Siskind and Frank Bosceti of the Broadway Theatre, Lawrence, Mass., are negotiating for the theatres operated by Toomey & Demara, it is understood. These include the Palace, Empire, Colonial and Premier in Lawrence.

Charles Brady, inspector auditor for Pathe, is at the Boston exchange for a brief visit.

Members of the New England Film Board of Trade "looked pleasant" this week, when a group photo of the members of the board was taken. It was the first time such a photo has been taken.

Saul Simons, poster clerk at Independent Films, Inc., was bereaved by the death of his father in Dorchester, Mass., this week.

Bookers of all of the Boston exchanges, who so successfully conducted a benefit dance for one of their number, who has long been ill and realized $2,500 therefrom, have formed a permanent organization for social and mutual aid purposes. Phil Fox, booker at Independent, is chairman of the general committee.

Harry Gustin of the Cumberland Theatre, Brunswick, Me., was a visitor to Boston Film Row during the week, coming through by motor. He reports the roads in Maine as rapidly getting back to normal.

The Bijou Theatre, Bangor, Me., has discontinued pictures for the present at least, and is now running stock.

Manager Scully of Educational exchange, Boston, has returned from an extended trip through Maine.

At the Palace Theatre, Norwich, Conn., from which Edward McIlvoy recently resigned as manager, Mrs. Alice M. Higgins has been appointed manager, and William H. Hickey of the Capitol Theatre, Middletown, Conn., will handle the booking of the house.

James Greeko of the Rialto Theatre, Worcester, is the envy of friends in his new Buick sedan.

L. J. Cartier, formerly a well-known exhibitor, who for a time ran the Town Hall at Westboro and who has been out of the game for some time, plans to reenter the field again as an exhibitor.

At the regional convention of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at Hotel Statler, Buffalo, May 10, Boston was represented by Branch Manager M. N. Wolf, Office Manager H. O. Worden, and Salesmen Emmanuel Cohen, William H. Gardiner, Benjamin Abrams, Joseph Devlin, J. O. Mckelburg and Frank J. Sullivan.

St. Louis

ONE of the most constructive and enthusiastic meetings ever held by a St. Louis film exchange was staged recently by the office organization of the local First National branch at the Coronado Hotel.

The Regular Republican Club of the Twenty-sixth Ward, St. Louis, gave a benefit motion picture show at the West End Lyric Theatre from May 10 to May 14. Members of the club sold tickets for the show.

T. Y. Henry, district manager for United Artists, visited the local office.

It convened at 2 p. m., with an address by Mayor Victor J. Miller. Routine business was then taken up for discussion. At 5.30 a. m., adjournment was taken and dinner was served to thirty employes of the office in the main dining room of the Coronado.

Al Eden is now traveling Northern Missouri for United Artists.

Ferris Frees, one of the veteran film salesmen of these parts, passed through on his way to Kansas City. While here, Frees worked for Realart, Select and others.

The New Palm Theatre, Union Boulevard near St. Louis Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., opened its doors for the first time at 7 p. m., Saturday, May 15.

The new house is owned and operated by Jacob Inger. Leo A. Benero is the manager. He formerly managed the Columbia Theatre. Ben Schram is the orchestra leader.

Southern Illinois houses closed in recent days include: Brighton-Hill, Brighton, Ill.; Strand, Equality, Ill.; Freemanspur, Ill.; Logan, Joppa, Il.; Grand, Odin, Ill.; Star, Omaha, Ill.; Standard, South Standard, Ill.; Liberty, Willisville, Ill., and Opera House, Odin, Ill.

Eastern Missouri houses closed were: High School Licking, Mo.; Dixon, Mo.; Rives, Mo.; and Empire, Moberly, Mo.

Harold B. Dygert formerly director of publicity for Loew's State Theatre here and now with Rowland & Clark in Pittsburgh, Pa., was married recently to Ruth Elize, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Hausman of St. Louis. Dygert met his bride when he called to furnish some press copy for "Know St. Louis," a local publication. The couple are at home at 3130 Bergman Street, Pittsburgh.

Harry Weiss, manager of the St. Louis First National office at the close of the recent sales convention held by First National in Chicago, gave a banquet at the Chez Pierre to a number of his friends. The party adjourned to catch the midnight train for St. Louis.

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING MOTION PICTURE FILM

New York and New Jersey

WITH more than 10,000 enthusiastic rooters of Fox Films, Metro-Goldwyn, First National and Warner Brothers in the stands, the Motion Picture Baseball League got away Saturday afternoon to the biggest opening in its history. A Fox News cameraman, with his machine mounted on an auto, headed twenty busses down Broadway under a special police escort, while Metro supporters followed with fifteen busses and First National and Warner Brothers with ten each.

John H. McCooey, Democratic leader of Kings County, tossed out the first ball, following a parade of the League teams led by a band of fifty pieces. Fox and Metro opened the festivities amid a din of noise-making instruments and shouts from the fans. After a hectic struggle, Fox emerged the victor, 7—3. Sensational catches were made by Freedman of Fox and Lowenthal of Metro. The score:

Metro	3	5	2

Batteries, Miller and Ragno; Borack and Loughran.

First National walked away with its game with Warner Brothers when the latter team blew up in the third inning, allowing 8 men to cross the pan. Final score, 11—3. The hitting of Williams, MacDonald and J. Powers for First National and the fielding of Punzo for Warners were features. The score:

Warner Bros.	3	5	2

Batteries, J. Powers and W. Powers; Wharmby, Morris and Burke.

The boys from First National clearly outclassed their opponents and were not extended to win. At times they showed flashes of their real form. Such sluggers!

Macdonald, who can take care of either side of the Keystone bag in an efficient manner, turned in a sweet pair of triples as his contribution to the cause.

This boy Williams looks like the class of the league at the third station. He covers his ground like a carpet. Besides lining one to the center that would be good for three cushions in any league, he smacked one to deep left that was labeled "four-bases" until Punzo, patroling that part of the park in the interests of Warner Bros., speared it in a fashion that would have been a credit to any big-time gardener.

In the third stanza so many men circled around Wharmby, who was on the mound for Warner, that he became dizzy and retired in favor of Morris. We counted as many as eight. In an effort to stem the tide everyone went in except Rin-Tin-Tin. If our memory serves us right, 'twas then that Williams cleaned the crowded hassocks and registered himself when the boys started throwing the ball around.

Powers, the First National slab artist, worked under wraps during most of the game. Their publicity claims that boy has more curves than Annette Kellerman!

There seems to be more belts in those First National bats than there are in a Hickok factory.

All in all it was an afternoon well spent and the team showed enough stuff to enable their backers to become enthusiastic over their chances of copping the old bunting.

Now for Fox! The line-up is as follows: Ragona, c.f.; Williams, 3rd b.; Baily, 1st; J. Powers, p.; MacDonald, s.s.; E. Werner, 2nd b.; W. Powers, c.; Kline, r.f.; G. Werner, l.f.; O'Rourke, r.f.; Wallace, l.f.

Next Saturday at the Polo Grounds Universal meets Warner Brothers and Pathe clashes with Paramount in a double-header at which a crowd of 20,000 is expected.

It is reported that scouts for the Pathe baseball team, which opens a double-header at the Polo Grounds Saturday with Famous Players, are combing the chicken farms of New Jersey for a giant rooster and Harlem and environs for a "double" for Farina, these two to form a mascot brigade which will chase away any jinx that may hover over Coogan's Bluff.

Here's the baseball schedule of the Motion Picture League: With seven teams entered double headers will be played every Saturday.

May 22, Polo Ground Opening—Famous Players vs. Pathe, Universal vs. Warner Bros.

June 5, Warner Bros. vs. Metro, First National vs. Fox, Famous Players vs. Universal, Pathe vs. ?.

June 12, Warner Bros. vs. Fox, First National vs. Metro, Pathe vs. Universal, Famous Players vs. ?.

June 19, Warner Bros. vs. Pathe, First National vs. Universal, Metro vs. Famous Players, Fox vs. ?.

June 26, Warner Bros. vs. Famous Players, First National vs. Pathe, Fox vs. Universal, Metro vs. ?.

July 10, Warner Bros. vs. Universal, Metro vs. Pathe, Fox vs Famous Players, First National vs. ?.

July 17 First National vs. Famous Players, Metro vs. Universal, Fox vs. Pathe, Warner Bros. vs. ?.

July 24, First National vs. Warner Bros., Fox vs. Metro, Pathe vs. Famous Players, Universal vs. ?.

July 31, Metro vs. Warner Bros., Fox vs. First National Universal vs. Famous Players, Pathe vs. ?.

August 7, Fox vs. Warner Bros., Metro vs. First National, Universal vs. Pathe, Famous Players vs. ?.

August 14, Pathe vs. Warner Bros., Universal vs. First National, Famous Players vs. Metro, Fox vs. ?.

August 21, Warner Bros. vs. Famous Players, First National vs. Pathe, Fox vs. Universal, Pathe vs. ?.

Jos. Stern's Ritz Theatre, Newark, N. J., reported as the finest house in the Stern circuit, opened its doors to the public on Monday, May 17. The location is at Springfield and Fairmount Avenues and the seating capacity is between 2,000 and 2,500.

The dedication address was made by Mr. Stern and was broadcast through radio station WOR.

Included among the guests of the evening were: Charles Stombaugh of Pathe, Joe Lee and Jules Sarzin of the Fox exchange, Gerson Weiss of Hal Hodes, Abe Blumstein of Commonwealth, Sam Rifkin of United Artists, Joe Vergesslich, J. Ullman and Hummell of First National, E. Hollander of Cranfield & Clarke, Nat Beier of Hollywood Pictures exchange, Jack Bellman, also of Hollywood, William Herman and M. Richland of Universal, Billy Gluck of Howell's Cine Equipment Co., Fox of F. B. O., Ben Schwartz of Renown, S. H. Fabian, Harry Hecht, H. Levinson, Messrs. Bratter & Pollack, Louis Blumenthal, Morris Kutinsky, Louis Gold and David Kaiserstein.

Being a hustling exhibitor in Southern Jersey is only one of the things that Lee Newberry is credited as able to do. In addition to operating his circuit of resort city theatres, Mr. Newberry has recently acquired the agency for the Jordan motor car and during the winter months developed and disposed of a considerable tract of land at Point Pleasant. However this summer season Newberry will take active control of his several houses.

Pat Campbell, Eastern Sales Manager for Pathe, addressed the New York and New Jersey sales force Tuesday at the local exchange.

Phil Meyer, New York manager for Associated Exhibitors, is clearing the decks for action pending the regional convention to be held next week at the Biltmore.

The Crown Theatre, Ditmas Avenue, Brooklyn, will go on a four-day schedule for the summer months beginning this week. That generally means the last four days.

B. K. Bimberg is building a new theatre at 89th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, New York City. Mr. Bimberg also operates the Schuyler at 82nd and Broadway.

The City Park Theatre, Park Avenue, Brooklyn, has closed for the summer months.

Bob Binckoff will reopen the Central Theatre, Wilson Avenue, Brooklyn, in the near future, according to report.

According to a New York daily newspaper report of some little time ago, the North Star Theatre 106th Street and 5th Avenue, New York City, will soon go into the discard, due to the fact that the building in which it is housed is to be torn down. The North Star is operated by Sydney Cohen, former President of the M. P. T. O. A., and is managed by Irving Cohen.

Adolph and Max Barr have recently announced the removal of their offices from Montague Street, Brooklyn, to 1560 Broadway. Barr Brothers' theatre holdings consist of the Peerless, 5th Avenue, the Peerless, 3d Avenue, the Palace, 6th Avenue, and the Sunset, 5th Avenue. All are in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn.

Butte

WEDDING chimes have been ringing for one of Bozeman's most cherished bachelors, Frank Boedecker, who is exhibitor at the Ellen Theatre, Bozeman, Montana. Frank Boedecker and Miss Ernestine Heilman, both of Bozeman, were married at Deer Lodge, Montana, Wednesday morning, May 5, in the presence of a large number of friends. E. P. White, exhibitor of the Strand Theatre in Livingston, was the groom's best man and Miss Helen Wilson, of Bozeman, was bridesmaid. "Boe," as the groom is commonly called by his friends, was one of the first theatre men in the state to take up motion pictures and has recently installed in his theatre one of the largest Wurlitzer organs in the state.

Another recent marriage was that of M. J. Sheehan, one of the owners of the People's Theatre in Butte, and Miss Ethel Harris, former cashier for the People's Theatre. The ceremony occurred May 5 at the Church of the Immaculate Conception and was attended by William Woolfal, manager of the People's Theatre, and Miss Margaret Schenbach, of San Francisco, who came to Butte especially for the wedding.

Among the exhibitors of the state lately signing up for new product are A. M. Russell, exhibitor of the Rialto Theatre at Bozeman; D. C. Scott, exhibitor for the Imperial and Margaret Theatres at Anaconda; Edward Lawlor, of the Harriet Theatre at Hardin, Montana, and E. P. White of the Strand, at Livingston.

E. P. White is not only the enterprising exhibitor of the Strand Theatre at Livingston, but is also president of the Livingston Country Club.

"Billy" Burke has recovered sufficiently from a broken leg sustained at a theatre in Anaconda several weeks ago, to be back again at his old job of exploitation and publicity work for the American and Rialto Theatres.

Mothers' Day was observed in all the theatres of Butte. The ushers wore red carnations and the theatre lobbies were beautifully dressed.

The beautiful Temple Theatre that has been closed for the past six months, except for special programs, was opened this week for a series of photoplay programs.

The first of a series of Charleston contests is now on at the Rialto Theatre, managed by W. J. Sullivan.

Wm. Hughardt, local manager for Pathe, is at home after spending some two weeks attending the big Pathe convention.

Miss Florence Gorden is recovering from a throat operation and will soon return to her office at the Famous Players, where she is film inspector.

Miss Bertha Crowl has recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia and her many friends are glad to see her back at her desk in the office of Famous Players.

Harry Kreiter, salesman for Universal, is covering eastern Montana.

Manager Gavan, who reported the loss of several thousand rubles in Russian money not long ago, in an interview at his Liberty Theatre says there has been no luck in tracing the theft.

J. J. Harrington and Vete Stewart, salesmen for First National, with headquarters in Butte, have returned from Chicago.

Frank Murphy, booker, manager for Famous Players, has been out of his office for two weeks, holding a heart-to-heart talk with exhibitors.

Dave Frazier, one time head of the Butte Universal office, is now with the P. D. C., heading the Seattle office.

"Buck" Wade, local manager of the P. D. C. office in Butte, is enjoying the convention at Los Angeles this week.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Home-Made Devices That Increase Ticket Sales

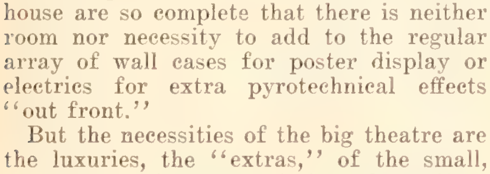
An Electric Sign Built by the Manager Proves Box Office Worth at Rialto, Tucson

IT is quite natural that the laboratory of showmanship at the small theatre should be an institution of more extensive and varied occupation than that of the big house which from its very beginning is thoroughly equipped with the accessories and devices calculated to give it the fullest scope in attracting the public to its auditorium. The specialist in posters, the electrician staff, the expert in advertising all are part of the big theatre personnel and the furnishings out front as well as inside the house are so complete that there is neither room nor necessity to add to the regular array of wall cases for poster display or electrics for extra pyrotechnical effects "out front."

But the necessities of the big theatre are the luxuries, the "extras," of the small, and the creation and building of the "extras" marks the point where the small theatre manager's work continues the march where his fellow at the large house completes his journey in any one direction from the center of activity.

Resourcefulness Required

Resourcefulness and courage permit the small theatre manager to rival in a modest way the big theatre in matters of showmanship. This has been done and is being done repeatedly in all phases of advertising and presentation, but it is most conspicuous in the matter of accessories. Exhibitors have made money with their home-made substitutes for factory-built accessories—enough money in most instances to permit them in a reasonable time to purchase the "extras" from some leading accessory manufacturer and thus keep up the steady improvement which their houses must show to continue the march of progress.



DRACHMAN'S FLASHER

Among the devices which have paid well are marquee displays, many of them fashioned from rough-and-ready materials but which nevertheless have functioned perfectly. An example at hand is a recent accomplishment at the Rialto Theatre in Tucson, Arizona, where Manager Roy Drachman erected an electric flasher sign which he built himself with materials readily available in the smallest town.

A Home Made Flasher Sign

The sign advertised the showing of "Irene" for which an extra campaign was staged at the Rialto. A photo of the sign and the flasher device are shown on this page. In describing the sign and its construction, Drachman writes this department as follows:

"The sign worked like a big-leaguer, never failing to operate perfectly. It was made of beaver-board, ten feet long and four wide. Oil paint was used to protect it against the rain. Fifty lamps were used, alternating blue and red, in the letters "Irene." The background was dark blue with a light border around it.

"The flasher was built with an eight-inch cylinder with a copper plate, cut step-like and which extended all around the cylinder in a continuous strip. The next strip was about two inches shorter and each strip in turn was about that much shorter than the one before it on the circuit so that the letters came on one at a time. A bicycle wheel was used to slow the speed of the motor, which was a 1,200 revolution motor. The current was carried to the plating on the cylinder from a finger which was in constant contact with it. As the cylinder revolved, the other fingers came into contact with the current and with the wires which lead to each letter the electricity was carried to the lamps in the sign. With the break of contact at the end of the copper plating the lamps were extinguished and after a brief pause the spelling process was repeated.

"We have used this form of sign on a number of pictures, and it has always proved a good ticket seller. In a small city it causes most comment as signs of this kind are a rarity there."

Equipment

Repair Bills

By P. M. ABBOTT

IGNORANCE of the care necessary to keep mechanical equipment in good condition, or just willful neglect on the part of exhibitors, permits theatre equipment to depreciate into practically scrap in many houses. And the most lamentable angle to this mistreatment of theatre equipment is that the performance of the apparatus keeps pace with its degree of depreciation and the show suffers accordingly.

Good equipment, properly maintained, can usually be counted on to give satisfactory service over a period of years. In fact, apparatus generally can be made to outlast its usefulness, becoming antiquated rather than worn out.

Exhibitors should at all times be ready to make any repairs necessary to all equipment used in their theatres. Furthermore, certain apparatus should receive periodic overhauling.

From all standpoints this procedure is the best. It is far cheaper to make minor repairs than to delay until a complete new unit or machine must be installed. Constant attention also means that good results will be had at all times.

No exhibitor can question the soundness of this procedure—not if he gives any consideration to his equipment. This matter of trying to economize by slighting equipment doesn't pay.

When new equipment is being selected durability is a feature that must receive first consideration, along with the ability of the apparatus to satisfactorily fulfill the performance required of it. Cheap equipment in regard to quality often results in excessive final costs. Frequent repairs can more than equal the first cost.

The purchase of good substantial apparatus, kept constantly in good condition, is one of the best investments an exhibitor can make. That and the acquisition of new models that give more effective results.

Midnight Matinees Popular Feature

Many Picture Houses Experimenting With Extra Night Shows

THE midnight matinee originally used only as a holiday feature and later as a special "invitation send-off" for a particular production is coming into more extensive use by picture theatres as a more or less regular attraction employed for added revenue, and in many cities the idea has proved a valuable asset.

The Arcade Theatre in Jacksonville, where the midnight show frequently was used as a publicity stunt for the forthcoming attraction and later became a fixed Saturday night feature, was among the first picture houses to develop the idea into a profitable enterprise. As reported in an article in Theatre Management some time ago, the Arcade has taken in as high as $540 at a single midnight showing.

Though the extraordinary success of the performances at the Arcade induced other houses, mostly stock and vaudeville theatres, to try the stunt in Jacksonville, they discovered that the all-picture program seemed to have an exclusive hold on public patronizing these performances.

The idea has been successfully used by picture houses elsewhere, Tampa, for example, and recently three of Charlotte's theatres inaugurated midnight showings on Sunday, with results which were highly profitable, according to reports.

A special midnight matinee was given at the Colonial motion picture theatre in Harrisburg, Pa., beginning at 12.01 a. m., Wednesday, May 19, at which the returns of the statewide primary elections of the preceding day were announced as fast as received. The interest in the elections, for the nomination of party candidates for United States Senator, Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of Internal Affairs, and other less important offices, was intense. The returns were announced in a way not to interfere with the showing of "Classified," a comedy, and the Pathe News.

Montreal Chain Featuring Double Bills in 8 Houses

The eight theatres in Montreal, Quebec, of United Amusements, Limited, Montreal, are now making a speciality of "double bills" regularly, this policy having been adopted for the circuit by Manager Director George Nicholas. The slogan used is "There's always a good double bill at the United Amusement Theatres." The latest releases are being doubled up under this plan. The theatres comprise the Strand, Papineau, Corona, Rialto, Regent, Mount Royal, Plaza and Belmont, all of which are first class cinemas.

Local Film Series Proving Success at Newman

A feature series of locally made films, "Know Your Kansas City," has proved a great hit at the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, of which Bruce Fowler is manager. Each week the inner works of various large industries are shown and each week the Newman wins scores of new friends.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

GEORGE LIVELY, who has been assistant to Jimmie Carrier at the Broadway Strand in Detroit, has been appointed manager of the house.

GEORGE GOETHALS, formerly manager of Kunsky's Strand Theatre, Detroit, has joined the Koppin organization as manager of the Highland Park Theatre in that city.

WILLIAM WHITE, formerly manager of Bliven's Opera House at Westerly, R. I., has been appointed manager of the Central Theatre at Pawcatuck, R. I., a section of Westerly.

DALTON BURGETT, who has been managing the Regent Theatre in Elmira, has just been transferred to Dunkirk, where he will handle the two theatres that were recently acquired by the Berinstein brothers.

HARRY ELLIS has again taken over the management of the Majestic Theatre at Beloit, Wis. He replaces Douglas McEachin, who will work for the Saxe interests as manager of the Tivoli at Milwaukee.

BERT JORDAN, formerly manager of the Majestic Theater at Memphis, Tenn., has been appointed manager of the Stuart Theatre at Wausau, one of the latest additions to the Saxe chain, which now numbers forty houses.

Transfer Keith Vaudeville to Toronto Hippodrome

With the closing of Shea's Victoria Street Theatre, Toronto, on May 15, arrangements were begun by Jerry Shea for the transfer of B. F. Keith's vaudeville in Toronto to the Hippodrome, a much larger house on Bay Street, opposite the City Hall, which will be opened early in the Fall as the home of Keith vaudeville.

The Hippodrome is now under lease of Famous Players Canadian Corp., but the latter has arranged to take over Loew's Uptown Theatre, Yonge and Bloor Streets, in August as first run theatre for Famous Players attractions. The Hippodrome has well over 3,000 seats while the Uptown has a capacity of 3,500.

Saxe Theatre Chain Staging State-Wide Charleston

Twenty cities were represented in a state-wide Charleston contest sponsored by the Saxe Amusement Enterprises and believed to be the first state Charleston contest under the auspices of a picture house circuit. The event was staged under the direction of Howard Waugh, district manager for Saxe, who supervised the twenty elimination contests in as many cities, and personally conducted the finals held in the municipal auditorium at Green Bay. Harry Hatfield, manager of the three Saxe houses in the latter city, was lieutenant to Waugh in putting over the finals. Record business was produced in each of the cities where contests were held.

High School Boys Recruited for Ushers Staff

A corps of fifteen boys from the Harrisburg, Pa., Technical High School have been installed as ushers in Loew's Regent Theatre, in that city, to supplant girl ushers there, Manager Russell A. Bovim declares the experiment has been most satisfactory. He employs only high school boys because he believes they are of a far better type than the average boy he could obtain elsewhere, and it is possible to have them do the work in the theatre without interfering with their school duties.

Bovim declares the boys make better ushers than the girls he formerly employed. They wear natty uniforms of light blue and gold, and receive special training in courtesy, the handling of crowds and are drilled so that each one will know what to do in case of fire or other emergency.

The boys hold a meeting once a week and are self-governed.

Sees First Movie at 85 as Fiddle Contestant

When Manager E. Christensen of the Capitol Theatre, Welland, Ontario, staged an old time fiddlers' contest on Thursday, May 13, he obtained much publicity for the house through the fact that one of the contestants, William E. Taylor, 85 years of age, attended a moving picture show for first time in his life in order to participate.

It was the very first time that Grandpa Taylor had seen a movie and he got so excited that he could not win one of the prizes. Over 1,600 people packed the Capitol for the feature.

12 Houses Set Records in F. & R. Special Drive

Twelve new house records were hung up by theatres in the F. & R. chain during the recent S. R. O. contest conducted by that organization. The winning managers are Bob Brose, Lagoon George Kruger, Loring; Lloyd Sinclair, Garden of Minneapolis, Bert Nix, Mounds, and Harry Dow, Dale, of St. Paul, and W. F. McKallor, Park, at Austin; Henry Sosnosky, Philo, at Chisholm; Bill Glaser, Grand at Fairbault; Joe Ryan, Lyric, at Madison; Ray Burton, Metropolitan, at Mitchell, and Al Larkin, Sherman at St. Cloud.

May Book "Singing Fireman"

Howard Melaney, singing fireman of the Northern Pacific railway, scored such a hit over the radio that he was booked at the Dale and Astor Theatres, St. Paul, where he was enthusiastically greeted. Now they're considering booking him at the F. & R. theatres along the N. P. route.

Free Checking System Installed

Frank Breymaier, now managing the Barcli in Schenectady, plans to establish a system of free checking in the hopes of securing heavier patronage from the shopping crowds during the afternoon. He is carrying the suggestion in all his advertising.

Philadelphia Vaudeville Houses Slump

Bigger Programs at Picture Houses Felt by Earle and Keith's

THE severe slump in business which vaudeville houses in Philadelphia are experiencing is attributable they believe, at least to a great extent, to the elaborate presentations which are being offered by both the Stanley and the Fox Theatres in addition to their regular picture policy.

Keith's Theatre and the Earle, a Stanley house at 11th and Market Streets, have been hard hit within the past few weeks and attribute the falling off in box office receipts to the keen rivalry between the Stanley and Fox Theatres, both of which are constantly improving and enlarging their programs.

The Stanley last week offered a stage program which included Tom Brown and his Eleven Minstrel Merrymakers, and Helena Marsh, former Metropolitan Opera singer in a program of operatic selections. The screen feature was "The Unholy Three." The Fox Washington's program, headed by the photoplay "Siberia, included Aunt Jemima and her piano duet, specializing in "Mamy" songs, and Irving Aaronson and his commanders.

Cleveland Palace Summer Policy to Start

B. F. Keith's Palace Theatre, Cleveland, will start its summer policy on Sunday, May 23d. On that date three performances will be given daily, prices will be reduced and the program will include vaudeville acts and a feature photoplay. The first photoplay to be offered under this policy will be "The Volga Boatman." A new organ is being installed in the Palace, which is scheduled to be ready for the opening next Sunday. During the winter season the Palace plays two performances daily, and a straight vaudeville program. Last summer was the first season for pictures in the Palace and it proved successful.

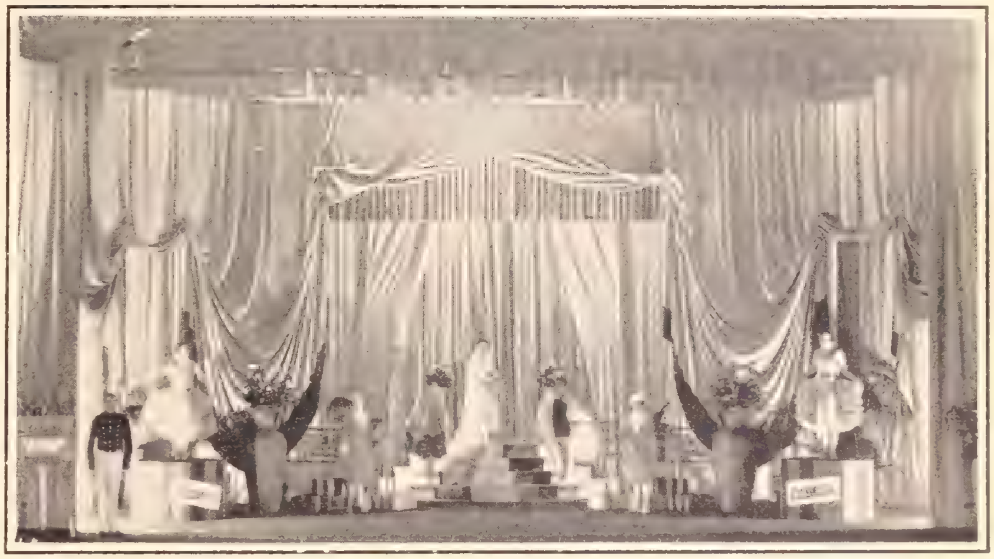
Gilda Gray Stars in Stage Prologue for "Aloma"

Gilda Gray stars on the stage as well as the screen at the Rivoli, New York, where "Aloma of the South Seas" opened an extended engagement last Saturday night at a special midnight performance.

In addition to her screen appearance as the star of "Aloma," Miss Gray is seen in an elaborately staged South Seas prologue presented by Gaillard T. Boag and produced by Walter Brooks. In her support are Prince Lei Leni and his Royal Samoans and a sextette of dancing girls.

Des Moines Capitol Presentation

The National Quartette in a varied vocal program which won a hearty reception from patrons at all performances was the feature of the presentation last week at the Capitol in Des Moines. "The Barrier" was the screen attraction for the week.



"IRENE" FASHION PROLOGUE

Anderson's "Grecian Urn" Playing at Rivoli

"Grecian Urn," a John Murray Anderson stage presentation based on Keats' poem, "Ode to a Grecian Urn," is the leading number of the program surrounding "The Rainmaker" at the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, this week.

Roy Smeck, "Wizard of the Strings" playing jazz music on an octochord, ukelele, banjo and guitar, is another stage feature at the house this week. The overture is "Musical Tid-Bits" with Irvin Talbot conducting, while Henry Murtaugh's featured solo number is "Poor Papa." A DeForest Phonofilm, "Radio Franks," an Æsop's Fable and Rivoli Movievents are other screen offerings of the current program.

Advance Capitol Schedule for "Stella Dallas"

In order that "Stella Dallas" may be shown in its entirety at the Capitol Theatre this week, the regular schedule of the theatre has been advanced; the doors opening at 12:15 instead of at 12:30 as is customary.

The presentation at popular prices is enhanced by a new music score. In addition to the special presentation, Major Edward Bowes presents several other musical numbers. The Capitol Orchestra of 85 opens the program with the "Merry Wives of Windsor" overture. William Robyn and Celia Turrill sing a group of ballads, including Brahm's "Lullaby" and "Mother Dear" by Sidney B. Harris.

Martha Graham Ballet Gets Premier at Eastman

The Eastman Theatre, Rochester, last week featured "The Flute of Krishna," an East Indian dance idyl created by Martha Graham, formerly with the Denishawn Dancers and now an instructor at the Eastman School of the Dance, in the stage portion of a program surrounding the photoplay "Irene."

The music for the ballet is by Cyril Scott. The Eastman presentation of the work, its first on any stage, offered Robert Ross in the title role with Evelyn Sabin as Radha, his bride. Thelma Biracree, Betty MacDonald and Susan Vacanti appeared as dancing girls. The scenery and costumes were by Norman Edwards.

Liberty Musical Feature Honors Local Composers

"Around the city with Kansas City composers" was the title of a novel musical feature presented last week by Samuel Carver, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Kansas City. The novelty proved an exceptionally popular success. It was presented with "Outside the Law," the photoplay attraction for the week at the Liberty.

Syncopation Week at Newman

The Newman Theatre, Kansas City, offered the photoplay, "The Devil's Circus" and "Rhapsody in Jazz," Publix unit show staged by John Murray Anderson, as the features of a "Syncopation Week" program. The Newman is now offering Noon Musical Hour programs every Sunday from 12 to 1. Marie Rosseli, harpist of the K. C. Little Symphony was the solo artist with the Newman Concert Ensemble at the concert last Sunday.

Mosque Presents Welsh Choir

An atmospheric presentation for "Beverly of Graustark" at the Mosque Theatre, Newark, last week featured the Royal Welsh Choir. The sixteen singers composing the organization rendered a musical program in an elaborate setting.

Rita Owin on Branford Stage

Rita Owin, eccentric dancer, and Sid Hall and his orchestra were the stage features last week at the Branford Theatre, Newark, which presented "The Blind Goddess" as the main attraction.

Rennie Opens at San Fernando

Public in High Praise of New House; Management Congratulated

During the early part of April the new Rennie Theatre was the outstanding social event of the San Fernando community. The Rennie was host to over a thousand people, many of them congratulating H. A. Holden, who represented the management—on the beauty of the new house and the super-class attraction policy adopted.

Manager Rennie explained to the visitors that it would be his policy to present only first class pictures, and also vaudeville on Wednesdays and Saturdays, with matinees on Thursdays.

In the main auditorium are 256 luxurious divans, finished in leatherette, with Morris springs in the back of the seats. In the family circle and parquet are 480 opera chairs with an additional 264 installed in the balcony. Beneath the seats on the aisle are lights to aid location. Down the aisles and throughout every necessary place, costly extra-heavy carpets cover the floor. A washed air ventilating system, modern in every respect, has been installed and is guaranteed to maintain a correct temperature.

To warm the theatre a heating system has been installed, with its housing on the roof, from which hot air is forced down through the pipes to the auditorium below.

In addition to the numerous chandeliers distributed throughout the house there are 360 red, amber and blue incandescents built into the coves, nitches and organ grills. Through the control located in the operating room various color combination effects may be obtained and all lights in the house are subject to three graduations of dimming.

From his office on the left of the foyer Manager Rennie is connected by indoor telephone with the box office, which is located immediately to the right of the foyer, the operating room back of the balcony, the organist in the organ pit, and the dressing rooms below the stage, etc.

Just off the foyer, on either side, are retiring rooms for both ladies and gentlemen, handsomely carpeted, with mirrors and sanitary lavatories and tiled floors in the lavatories.

Discriminating care was given to choosing the stage curtains and the draperies, the material and color of which harmonize with the decorations. In the foyer is a fountain, symbolizing the dolphin, with a bowl below in which gold fish disport themselves. San Fernando has in the Rennie Theatre a most outstanding asset, and the appreciation of the enterprise was not only attested on opening night but is being attested each evening.

Another Detroit House Planned

Alex Schreiber, who has the Frontenac and New Plaza Theatres, Detroit, is going to build a new theatre seating 1,000 on the north side of Detroit according to report. The building will also contain stores and offices.

Milwaukee Agent Appointed

Roy C. Wheeler, formerly manager of the Tivoli Theater of Milwaukee, has been appointed agent for the Arctic Air-Cool system and will be in charge of sales throughout the Wisconsin territory.

Install New Wurlitzer at Harrisburg, Pa.

Work of installing a new Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones organ in the Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, was completed during a period of two weeks, about the middle of May, without interfering with any of the performances. Manager Russel V. Bovin, of the theatre, declares the organ is the largest in Central Pennsylvania. The work of installation was done under the direction of George O. Warner, and the organ is the latest type in construction and percussion. It has all orchestral effects and unusually quick action. It imitates the chirping of birds, the locomotive whistle, automobile horn, the sounds of the wind, surf and falling rain, and dog barks and cat calls. It also reproduces the sound of the human voice. The organ is especially voiced for orchestral music to give the effect of a symphony orchestra. It is equipped with bells, harp chimes, xylophones, traps, trumpets and violin effects.

Complete Plans on Fox's Capitol, S. F.

According to A. P. Giannini, president of the Capitol Company which will erect the Capitol Theatre, a Fox enterprise involving the expenditure of about $2,000,000, and part of a $6,000,000 building at Hayes and Polk Streets, San Francisco, Cal., work will start shortly after the middle of May. Completed plans are expected to arrive from the East about that time. The theatre has recently been placed under lease to William Fox, of New York.

Great States Lease House at Waukegan, Mich.

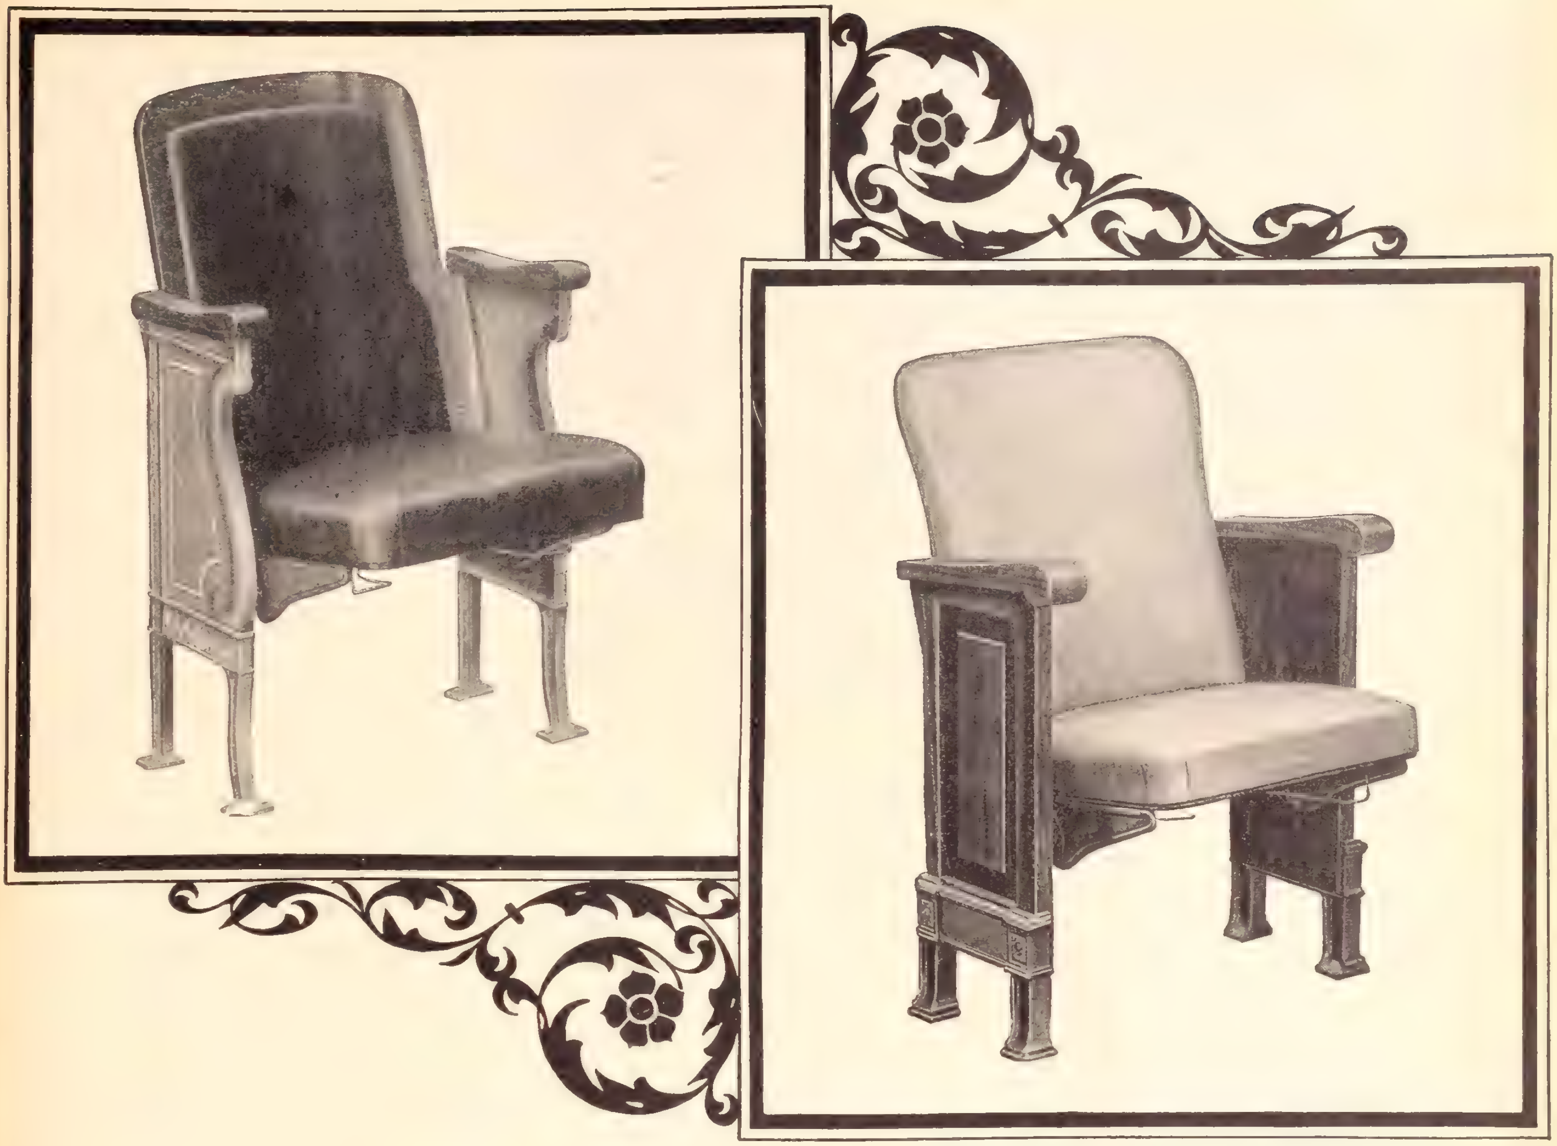
The Great States Theatres, Inc., will operate a new two thousand seat theatre which will be erected in Waukegan at an early date. This Balaban & Katz organization has leased the house and plan to operate it on the same policy as the other theatres controlled by Great States. According to Jules J. Rubens, the Great States Theatres recently took over the Academy at Waukegan from G. K. Spoor so that they will soon have two theatres in that city.

New Florida Open Air Theatre

S. J. Reynolds and son are to be owners and managers of a new open air theatre, now in the course of construction at Wauchula, Fla. The theatre will have a roof over the stage and be open throughout the other space. It is expected to open about the middle of May.

John Eberson Secures Large Chicago Contract

Architect John Eberson has designed and will be in charge of the erection of a theatre in Chicago, to be located on North Avenue, occupying the entire block between Troy and Albany. The house will be of Egyptian design and one of the largest de luxe theatres in the city. The commercial units of the building will include seven stores, a one hundred room hotel and one of the towers will house a radio station of the latest type. The American Amusement Company, headed by Clarence P. Lautenschlager, will be the owners.



Looking Toward the Future

For a year or so, almost any theatre seating will look well and give little trouble. But after that, it takes really good seating to stand up in appearance and service.

Steel Furniture Company seating is built for the practical man who looks toward the future. It is making enviable service records all over the country in theatres both small and elaborate.

Investigation will show you that Steel durability costs nothing extra. Like Steel beauty, it is over-value, made possible by long experience, wide facilities and consistent volume production. Let us send you the catalog.

Break Ground for London's Largest Motion Picture Theatre

BUILDERS have just commenced the construction of what will be the largest motion picture theatre in London. It is at the Oxford Street end of the Charing Cross Road, a very prominent site formerly occupied by the great food canning concern of Crosse & Blackwell. December 1st is the probable opening date. The theatre is to cost £150,000 (approximately $750,000), and will seat 3,000 people.

Housebreakers have removed the floors of the old warehouse and practically gutted the existing building, leaving only the four 70-ft. high walls standing. It is proposed to utilize three of the walls. The fourth, facing the street, will be replaced by one of white stone. The new roof will not rest on the existing walls. It will be supported by four steel stanchions each 70 feet in length, set up in concrete beds against the existing walls. This in itself is a remarkable engineering achievement.

When the workmen tried to move the stanchions into the building lengthways they found that the ends were likely to hit the shop windows on the other side of the road. So the stanchions had to be lifted right over the top of the 70-ft. wall.

The seating accommodations of the theatre will be on the ground floor and on one huge tier. The decorations are in Pompeian style. A stage behind the screen will be available for theatrical productions or interludes between films when required.

Beneath the theatre will be a dance hall with dancing accommodation for 1,000, and around it will be a balcony where refreshments can be served to the same number at one time. The admission prices will be those charged ordinarily at the best suburban picture houses, and less than those usually charged in the center of London.

The enterprise is an entirely British one but films from all countries will be shown.

Miami Strand Declared Finest Open Air Playhouse in America

THE Strand Theatre, Miami Beach, the new open air theatre which opened a few weeks ago, is declared by all who have seen it to be the most beautiful open air theatre in America. Built in Spanish architecture the entrance suggests an ancient mission. The interior, in which there are 1200 seats, is handsomely decorated with cocoanut palms and other plants among which electric fountains play during the performance.

The Strand Theatre is owned and operated by the Motion Picture Corporation of Florida. William A. Cowee is the president, and Max Spiegel vice president. Mr. Spiegel who conceived the building of the Strand Theatre, New York, also promoted the Strand at Miami Beach, the first of a string of Florida theatres to be erected by this firm. The second theatre, the Mirimar Strand, located at Second Ave. and N. E. 22nd Street, is now under construction and will be opened in the fall. At this theatre motion pictures, stage presentations and music by a large symphony orchestra will be offered.

Dr. J. Victor Wilson who for over seven years was director of publicity at the Strand Theatre, New York, and later managed the Watertown, N. Y. theatres for Nathan Robbins of Utica, N. Y., is the managing director of the Strand, Miami Beach, and will also act in this capacity in all the Miami houses, the third of which will be devoted to the presentation of dramatic stock.

Pattie's Grand Opens at Frankfort, Ky.

The new Grand Theatre, Frankfort, Ky., recently opened under the management of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Pattie. While a small theatre the Grand is entirely on a par with the larger houses as far as equipment is concerned; nothing but the very best having been used.

Interior decorations are done in silver gray with blue and gold silk tapestry. Catering to a select patronage, this new house is said to be the finest small theatre in the State of Kentucky.

Powers projectors with More-Lite low intensity lamps and an Arctic Nu-Air cooling and ventilating system are included among the equipment.

Lubliner & Trinz Open 22nd of Circuit

The twenty-three hundred seat Grove Theatre at 6th Street and Cottage Grove Avenue was opened on Wednesday, May 12th, by Lubliner & Trinz, bringing the number of theatres operated by this circuit to twenty-two. The house is of Spanish design and the interior, instead of being in browns, reds and golds, the customary treatment of Spanish interiors, is touched off in splashes of red, blue and terra cotta giving the influence of moorish design. Sam Harris, for four years manager of L. & T.'s Michigan Theatre, has been put in charge at the new Grove.

Permit Granted at Bogota, N. J.

The Queen Anne Road Theatre Company has been granted permission for the erection of a modern Motion Picture theatre on Cypress Avenue and Queen Anne Road, Bogota, N. J. Although the house will be in the residential section of the town, a permit was granted in view of the fact that the front of the building will be placed back over twenty feet from the curb.

Colony, Washington, D.C., to Open

The Colony Theatre, Washington, D. C., being built by the Stanley Crandall Company of that city, will be opened to the public in the near future. It is a residential house with a seating capacity of about 1,500 persons.

Property Owners Balk B'klyn Exhibitor

MORE than 50 property owners in Tompkins Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., appeared recently before the Board of Standards and Appeals to oppose the application of Joseph Parascandola to expand his Motion Picture Theatre located at 292-4 Court Street, through the block into Tompkins Place. There were 48 objections entered on the record and no consents.

Court Street, where the theatre now stands is a business district. The application would extend it into the residential zone on Tompkins Place. Although Parascandola told the residents that they would benefit through higher class of entertainment being offered and that the rear of the building would be ornamental, vigorous objections were made in answer—and to the effect that property value would suffer, should assent be given. Parascandola was denied a similar application three years ago.

N. Y. C. Projectionists Elect Delegates

A RECENT communication from Local Number 306, Motion Picture Machine Operators, discloses the election of a new Business Agent and those who will attend the Cleveland convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and M. P. Operators of the U. S. and Canada.

Simon Terr was unanimously elected as Business Agent for Local No. 306, as was Sam Kaplan, delegate to the 4th District convention.

The following will attend the Cleveland convention, commencing June 19: Sam Kaplan, Dave Engel, Harry Sherman, Simon Terr, Joseph Basson, Max Feinberg, Harry Levine, Edgar Stewart, Richard Weis, Jacob Winick and James Lefante.

Huge Cooling System for St. Louis Theatre

Installation of a gigantic cooling system for the St. Louis Theatre, Grand boulevard at Morgan Street, St. Louis' largest theatre, has been completed. The plant is said to insure a temperature of approximately 70 degrees no matter how torrid is the atmosphere outside.

The plant, which is operated by electricity, cools the air by passing it over refrigeration coils. It is then pumped into the theatre through mushroom openings under the seats.

Plan Several New England Theatres; New Haven Project Opposed

ASSOCIATED THEATRES, INC., have had plans prepared for a motion picture theatre at Whalley Avenue and Norton Street, New Haven, Conn., which will cost approximately $150,000.

It will have a frontage of 55 feet on Whalley Avenue and a depth of 160 feet, will be built of steel, brick and concrete and will be fireproof throughout, with facade of terra cotta, stucco and tile. It will seat about 1,500 and will be constructed along lines similar to the large recently completed theatres.

Some opposition to the site has developed among residents of the neighborhood.

Plans have been prepared for a new motion picture theatre on Broadway, South Boston, to cost approximately $300,000. Samuel Liskner and Mr. Weinberger, 601 Carney Building, Boston, are the owners and Krokyn, Browne & Rosenstein, of 220 Devonshire Street, Boston, are the architects. The theatre will seat about 1,500. Work is to start at once.

Fishman Brothers, of New Haven, Conn., have awarded the contract for a new motion picture theatre on Dixwell Avenue, Hamden, Conn., to J. Alpert, 136 Sherman Avenue, New Haven, and foundation work will start this week. Sub-contracts will be awarded within the next few days.

J. B. Eames, Littleton, N. H., is to build a theatre, stores and apartment building in that town and bids are in hand. Contracts will probably be awarded within a fortnight. Haynes & Mason, of Fitchburg, Mass., are the architects. Original bids for the structure were rejected and refigured bids are now being studied.

Attleboro, Mass., is to have a new motion picture theatre costing approximately $175,000. A permit for the erection of the theatre has been issued to the Attleboro Eagles' Building Association for the theatre, to be erected on Bank Street, to be two stories, of brick construction. Five houses on the site will be demolished. Negotiations are already under way for leasing the house for a period of years.

Crandall Acquires Miami Site

Plans for the erection of a Miami Beach, Fla., theatre to cost in the neighborhood of $350,000, were announced recently by W. B. Crandall, Westfield, N. Y., and John C. Strain of Pittsburgh. Discussing the proposed theatre, Crandall stated that he and his partner had already acquired an option on a site.

Dahnken to Build at Boise

F. Dahnken and associates, operating the American Theatre in Salt Lake City, recently announced that they would soon begin construction on a new house in Boise, Idaho, that will represent the latest word in theatre construction for that territory.

New Light on an Old Subject
Part VI
Factors Involved in General Problem of Glare

So far the effect of only one glare light has been investigated. Usually, especially in factories and offices, a number of lights are found in the field of view of any one person. These lights are usually of the same candlepower, but different as to distance and angular position. In other words, under actual viewing conditions, glare is usually multiple.

The question arises whether, under such circumstances, the resulting glare is equal to the sum of the effects from the different glare lights or not. In order to test this an experiment was conducted in which the glare of each light was measured separately and the calculated sum compared with the value of the glare produced by all lights simultaneously. The result was found to be that the effect of multiple glare is equal to the sum of the effects of each glare light taken singly.

Extent of Glare Field

The fact that, on moving the glare light away, a point is reached where glare becomes zero, together with the fact that by increasing the horizontal or vertical angle we finally get out of the field of view, leads us to the conception of a three dimensional glare field.

Within its limits glare is produced, which is measurable by a drop in visual acuity at low illumination. Its limits are set by the candlepower, distance and angular position of the glare light, on the one hand, and by individual differences among different observers on the other hand.

The most interesting part of it is the effect of distance, which at a certain point, determined by the distance of zero glare, allows one to have a light source within the field of view without any disturbance of vision. With the angular position fixed, this increase in distance means, in other words, a decrease of the illumination at the eye. The distance of zero glare, then, indicates the minimum intensity of illumination necessary to produce glare as measured by the lowering of visual acuity.

Formula for Glare

The formula which was found to measure the relative glare of any light source at any distance from the observer is as follows:

where cp equals candlepower of the glare light in the direction of the observer, D is the distance of the glare light from the observer, d is the distance of zero glare and the angles (cos a and sin b) are those described in last week's article.

Aside from the angles (which can be measured) the only unknown factor is d, which can be figured as follows:

$$d = \sqrt{\frac{0.27}{CP}} \times K,$$

where the distance is measured in feet.

Since d varies with the angle at which the light enters the eye, the value of K for any angle must be determined from the table following:

Values of K

Horizontal angle in degrees	K
10	1.0
20	0.988
30	0.940
40	0.866
50	0.767
60	0.640
70	0.500
80	0.380
90	0.173

Considerable care must be exercised when using the formula to see that the proper factors and their correct values are substituted. For oblique angles the formula is rather more complicated.

General Factors of Glare

In choosing the method of approach to the problem of glare, the lowering of foveal (center of eye) vision was taken as the basis of measurement. This, however, is not the only trouble arising from glare, for the sensation of discomfort is at least of equal importance.

The first means that the eye efficiency has been impaired and the second that the conditions under which work has to be performed are made less favorable.

In general, discomfort increases with the candlepower of the glare light, and decreases with distance and angle.

It is interesting to note the following: a clear bulb lamp of 35 cp and brightness of 800 cp per square inch, appears less glaring than a frosted lamp with a brightness of 13.6 cp per square inch, but 96 cp. On the other hand, a lamp with similar brightness, 15.6, but 172 cp was distinctly more uncomfortable.

It can be stated that glare is due to a lack of evenness in the degree of stimulation of different parts of the retina. To entirely eliminate glare, we must eliminate contrasts in the visual field.

Two Kinds of Glare

The difference between central and peripheral (as concerns the eye) glare, is largely one of degree. With central glare the local irritation is very great, owing to the lack of an adjusting mechanism in the fovea of the eye. However, the fact that the local irritation (of the eye) depends on the contrast between the glare spot and the retina still holds true.

The same light will give intense central glare when the surrounding retina is adapted to darkness (as in a theatre), whereas it gives no central glare when the surrounding retina is light-adapted.

An excellent example of this is the lack of glare from an automobile headlight in daylight. The lowering in visual acuity becomes infinite in the case of central glare, and in actual practice, of course, the glare light and the object seen never occupy the center of the field at the same time.

Definition of Glare

Glare, therefore, is a condition of visual discomfort which is dependent upon two factors, both due to contrasts of illumination on the retina. One factor is due to the failure of the eye to adapt itself to a stimulus of small area and high intensity, in consequence of which there is irritation of the extremely sensitive retina.

The other factor is a lowering of visual acuity when there is a sufficient contrast between the illumination of the glare spot and the illumination of the fovea and may be associated with an action on the cones of the eye.

Summary

Direct peripheral glare is found to produce two effects, at least, in the eye. One, the local irritation, is due to contrast between the glare spot and the surrounding retina, and is proportional to the brightness of the glare light.

Besides this local irritation there is a lowering of central vision which is due to too great a difference between the illumination of the glare spot and the illumination of the fovea. This lowering in visual acuity for any given angle of light, is independent of the brightness of the glare light, but proportional to its candlepower. Discomfort is associated with both effects, local irritation and depression in visual acuity.

Since the latter decreases with the distance of the glare light, and its angular position, there are distances, at every angle, where the depression of vision, due to the glare light, becomes zero. However, the local irritation and discomfort still persist if there is still sufficient contrast between the glare spot and the surrounding retina.

The degree of depression of visual acuity was measured in the following way. The minimum illumination was measured, necessary to see a certain test object clearly without a glare light, and then with a glare light of different candlepowers, at different distances, and at different angles.

The difference between the two values of minimum illumination give a measure of the degree of glare, in so far as it affects visual acuity. The minimum illumination at zero glare was taken as the unit of glare, and it was thus possible to say how many times more glaring one light was than another.

This is the final result obtained by use of the glare formula given above.

Kurlander Joins Brenkert Engineering Staff

J. H. KURLANDER, who for the past four years has been with the engineering department of the Edison Lamp Works of Harrison, N. J., specializing on incandescent lamp projection, has left there to take charge of the engineering department of the Brenkert Light and Projection Company, of Detroit. Mr. Kurlander will be in charge of all the technical developments.

This addition to the Brenkert staff is in keeping with their present policy of expansion.

Stanley to Rebuild Two Phila. Theatres

The Stanley Company of America is having plans prepared for two houses, one to be built in the Kensington and one in the Frankford district of Philadelphia on sites now occupied by old theatres. Work on these houses, it is expected, will start some time during the summer.

Grant Charter on Kansas House

A State charter has been granted to the Jayhawk Theatre Company of Topeka, Kans., the new corporation having capital stock of $100,000. The Jayhawk Theatre now is under construction in connection with a large hotel of the same name. The incorporators are W. L. Dean, Garfield Hooper, Maurice Jencks, H. Everett, George T. McDermott.

Cruz Building at Corona, Cal.

Construction has commenced on a new theatre on lower Main Street, Corona, Cal., next to the store of J. J. Cruz & sons, and will be conducted by them. Mr. Cruz states that his new playhouse will be ready by July 15, and that he will expend in the neighborhood of $12,000 for equipment. The building measures 120x25 with a stage for stock performances as part of the plans.

Great States Co. Acquire Batavia Site

Great States Theatre Company, Chicago, Ill., have purchased 120 foot on Batavia Avenue at First Street, Batavia, Ill., where they will build a high class Motion Picture theatre and several store buildings. The Great State Company also conduct a Chicago circuit of theatres.

M. P. Men Play Prominent Part at Canada Fire Convention

MOTION picture officials played a prominent part in the deliberations at the annual convention of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association, which was held in the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, April 28 to 30.

One of the principal speakers was Hickman Price, of New York, chief assistant to Will H. Hays in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, whose subject was "Arousing a Fire Consciousness in Industry."

Col. John A. Cooper, of Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors Association of Canada spoke at length on the subject of "Safeguards in the Moving Picture Industry," in which he pointed out that fire hazard had been greatly reduced in Canada through the adoption of increased protective measures. In Ontario particularly there was an excellent code of regulations for the safety of theatres and their patrons. Every effort was being made by his association in preventing films getting into the hands of unlicensed operators for presentation in private homes, church halls and hospitals. If possible, no films were delivered to anyone in Ontario not holding an operator's license. Col. Cooper declared that film exchanges in Canada had greatly increased their fire protection until they were now reasonably safe.

The Dominion Fire Prevention Association appointed a publicity committee, the members of which comprise several moving picture officials, including Col. Cooper, head of the film distributors organization, N. L. Nathanson, of Toronto, managing director of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., and others.

The Film Hazard Committee, another important unit of the Dominion Association, includes Col. Cooper and Ray S. Peck of Ottawa, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio. Associate members of this committee include the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester; Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, New York; Province of Ontario Motion Picture Bureau, Trenton, Ontario, and the Canadian Kodak Company, Toronto.

Ritz at Houston, Texas, Sets New Pace in That Territory

AN electric sign hanging on Preston Avenue between Travis and Main Streets, flashed into operation last week to announce the opening of Houston's newest moving picture palace, the Ritz. This is the first of the large cinema houses to be opened and its full capacity of 1,260 seats was taxed to accommodate the crowds that welcomed the new enterprise.

The opening of the Ritz marks the beginning of a new era in picture houses in Houston. It is a picture palace of the most modern type, and opened at popular prices, 5c. and 15c., that are expected to win high favor with family attendance. Everything about the Ritz is in keeping with the fittings and accoutrements of the higher-priced houses. From the front door to the rear exit only the most beautiful of decorations and theatre fixings were used.

The latest model Smith unified organ has been purchased, at a reported cost of $15,000, and two organists have been engaged to insure the best in musical accompaniment.

The decorations and hangings are to be orange velour throughout, and will contrast vividly and pleasantly with a three-phase electric circuit of red, blue and incandescent lights.

The ground floor is equipped with 725 comfortable, air-cushioned seats, and there will be an accommodation on the mezzanine balcony for those who desire to smoke. The upper balcony will be devoted to taking care of the downstairs overflow, and seats will be sold at reduced prices.

Stage facilities have been provided to care for prologue presentations and such other novelty acts as may be engaged from time to time. The most modern of cooling systems has been installed.

Theo Polemanakos, who with associates own and operate the Olympia Theatre, are managers of the new Ritz.

Views of two of West Coast Theatres, Inc., recently opened houses on the Pacific coast. On the left is the Balboa, a 1,250 seat theatre opened April 6 and in the centre, a view of the interior of the same house. At the right, a section of the Manchester Theatre is shown. The latter seats 1,800 and is doing a large business in the outlying districts of Los Angeles and Moneta, Cal.

Gold Strike Promotes M. P. Theatre

CONTINUED growth of Kramer Hills, the site of California's latest gold strike, is reported to be responsible for a recently announced motion picture theatre enterprise at that point. According to information received, H. Clyde Williams, of McCabe and Anderson, have prepared plans for a theatre building with a seating capacity of 1,000. Electricity is available at Kramer for projection purposes.

Gold bearing ore, estimated at $40 a ton, was recently uncovered at Kramer Hills according to word from the veteran miner, Pat McLaughlin.

Saxe Plans Two Theatres at Milwaukee

Plans for the construction of the proposed two new Milwaukee Theatres of the Saxe circuit are being considered at the present time. A set of plans, for one of the new houses, it is understood, is being drawn up under direction of officials from the Saxe office. The two new houses will be named the Ambassador and the Uptown, and their construction will mark the completion of the present Saxe building program in Milwaukee.

Yost Theatre, Santa Ana Almost Complete

The new Yost Theatre at Santa Ana, Cal., is almost finished according to a statement made by the architect a few days ago. The formal opening is scheduled for May 17.

The building is 80 x 175 in size and three stories high and of steel and concrete construction. This unit will be the third to be operated in Santa Ana by the Yost Theatre Company.

Quash Protest on Boston Theatre

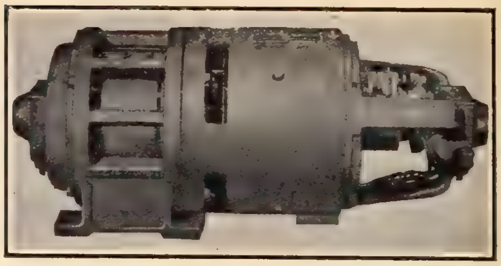
Miss Julia E. Sonnabend has had plans prepared for a $250,000 motion picture theatre to be erected at 213-215 Hanover Street, Boston, and has applied to the building department for a permit. Some opposition to a theatre at that locality has developed. To counteract the opposition, owners of 138 pieces of property in the immediate neighborhood has been submitted, all favoring the erection of the theatre.

Montana Project Announced

Eugene O'Keefe and his partner, who operate the Babcock Theatre, Billings, Montana, announce that they will build a new house to cost about $120,000. The theatre will occupy a site midway in the block on North Broadway between Second and Third Avenues. Work on the structure will start within the next month or two.

Grant San Diego Theatre Permit

According to a recent announcement, a building permit for a new theatre and office building involving expenditure of $340,000, was recently issued to the Southwest Income Properties, Inc., San Diego, Cal. The structure will be eight stories in height and will be located on C Street, from Fourth to Third. Construction will be of steel and concrete.



The new Hertner M. A. 20-40 85 volt Multiple Unit set just put on the market by the Hertner Electric Co. for use with mirror arc projection apparatus.

Wilkinson Leases Theatre at Edinburg, Tex.

C. R. Wilkinson, of Lockney, Texas, has recently taken a eight-year lease on the Edinburg Theatre, Edinburg, Tex. J. W. Bush is the owner. Wilkinson will remodel the entire house.

In addition to this enterprise and being the owner of several other theatres in Texas towns, Wilkinson has taken an option on two lots in the business section where he plans to build a larger theatre than the Edinburg.

Start Work Soon on F. P. L. Florida Theatre

According to a recent announcement by Mayor John Alsop, of Jacksonville, Fla., construction of the new Famous Players-Lasky Florida Theatre will begin by June 1, and possibly by the middle of May. The new house, involving a reported expenditure of $1,500,000, is to be erected on the site of the present police station and start of construction hinges on the day which will complete the removal of the city department.

Break Ground at Oroville, Cal.

According to an announcement made by I. Morris, Sacramento representative of West Coast Theatres, Inc., work will soon start on the proposed Senator Theatre at Robinson and Meyers Streets, Oroville, Cal. The first task will be the dismantling of an old building now on the theatre site.

Box office value

When the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film, good photography in the negative means good photography on the screen—the art of director and cinematographer is saved for your patrons to enjoy.

And photographic quality has real box office value—the house expects it.

Prints on Eastman have the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in the transparent margin. Look for it.

What makes
Here they are STUDIO FACILITIES

CECIL B. STUDIOS

DE MILLE
Culver City, CALIF.

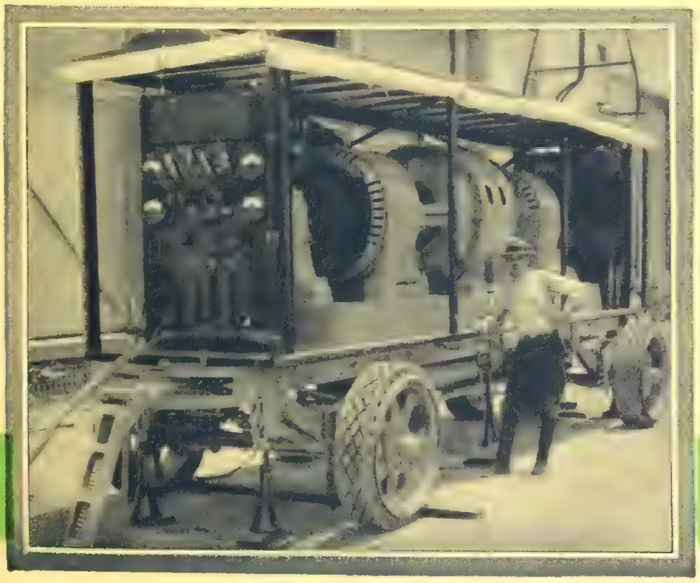
THE home of the great Cecil B. De Mille productions is one of the largest, best equipped and most efficiently arranged plants in the world for the production of motion pictures.

Covering a vast area at Culver City, the De Mille Studios form a veritable beehive of artistic production activity, functioning with perfect coordination in every department under the able supervision of the brilliant production staff with which Cecil B. De Mille has surrounded himself.

Through the recent signing of a lease, an additional forty-two acres have been added to the present site, thus making this film plant one of the largest in the world.

Expansion of the studio is now under way to facilitate the carrying out of the coming season's monster production program. Several additional large stages are being constructed, under the supervision of William Sistrom, General Manager. A new power plant capable of generating electric power for the enlarged studio, is being installed. Paved streets connecting the various sections of the studio, additional equipment and the enlarging of the wardrobe department, are other improvements under way.

No production is too spectacular or too colossal in proportions to be accomodated by the vast stages and perfect mechanical equipment of these studios. Here was made De Mille's latest and greatest screen triumph, "The Volga Boatman," with its magnificent, gigantic sets and superb lighting and scenic effects. Here will be made the big De Mille Specials and the great array of Features presented by De Mille on the P. D. C. program.



THE mammoth Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood form a powerful unit in the production plants making product for the P. D. C. program of releases.

Combining the most advanced facilities for the making of scenically perfect productions, under the efficient and progressive management of William Sistrom, Metropolitan Studios have been improved and brought to a state of technical perfection that makes it a model plant.

Among the recent improvements effected by Mr. Sistrom was the construction of a new stage, 125x450 feet long. This gigantic stage is new in every sense of the word, embodying new types of construction, equipment, wiring and ventilation.

New features incorporated in its construction are:

A semi-domed ceiling which permits, in long shots, the securing of outdoor atmosphere. A cinematographer's experimental room where light and lens tests are made.

A new system for overhead wiring which eliminates time usually lost in hanging overhead lights. A system of suspended tracks, used to hoist large sets into position, covering every foot of the stage.

Among the big productions in the making and to be made at the Metropolitan Studios are: Five pictures starring Marie Prevost; three starring Priscilla Dean; two Junior Coghlan pictures; and the big Metropolitan Specials.

METROPO

STUDIOS

LITAN

Hollywood, Calif.

Christie STUDIOS

Hollywood Calif.

THE story of the Christie Studios is paralleled only in the annals that record the phenomenal growth of the motion picture industry itself.

Al and Charles Christie are trail-blazers in motion picture production. When the art of picture making was in its adolescence, Al Christie brought the first caravan of players to Hollywood. This was on October 27, 1911. In an orange grove where a hotel of theirs now stands they shot three hundred feet of picture for Nestor.

It is a far cry from that first three hundred feet of negative to "CHARLEY'S AUNT." The pygmy has grown into a Colossus. The orange grove into the magnificent Christie studios which extend a city block along Sunset Boulevard, a production plant that embraces every modern equipment for the making of big Comedy Specials, complete in all departments.

The reputation of the Christies has kept pace with their physical and financial growth. What that reputation means to the industry, was aptly expressed by Bill Reilly recently in the Moving Picture World, when he said:

"What's right with the movies? It is a pleasure to write it—the CHRISTIE BROTHERS. In olden days majesty was surrounded with the HOKUM dictum, 'The KING can do no wrong.' The rate of exchange on the kingly crown has fallen low. The head that used to be uneasy under a crown is now glad to ease under a Stetson. But we'll gamble that if we were to propose: 'The CHRISTIES can do no wrong,' there would be joy in every movie Mudville from coast to coast."

A FIRM FOUNDATION

Imposing, substantial structures can be built only upon firm foundations. The studio production units contributing to P.D.C. program combine every physical means - every modern mechanical and technical device that makes for material excellence in motion pictures --

They constitute the solid base upon which is reared the magnificent superstructure of superb P.D.C. releases

Warner's elaborate and Unique New "Egyptian" Theatre in Seattle, Wash. Designed by E. A. Miller, Portland, Ore., architect.

1400 Heywood-Wakefield seats of this type were installed in the auditorium.

Equipment Experts Chose H-W Seats For New Pacific Coast Theatre

HEYWOOD-WAKEFIELD opera chairs are selected, as a matter of course, where theatre seating must be comfortable, lasting and in keeping with the architecture and interior scheme of the finest playhouses.

The H-W line offers a wide selection in design and upholstery to harmonize perfectly with any decorative plan no matter how elaborate.

Such advantages influenced B. F. Shearer, Inc., who equipped the "Egyptian," to choose Heywood-Wakefield seats.

H-W seating engineers, backed by 100 years of seat-building experience, will gladly collaborate with you, without charge, in efficiently seating the theatre you plan.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's
PARADE OF HITS

1926~27

Announcements will be made shortly regarding
BEN-HUR and THE BIG PARADE

LA BOHÈME Lillian Gish and John Gilbert, the stars. Plus Renee Adoree and Karl Dane of "The Big Parade"; Roy D'Arcy of "The Merry Widow"; Frank Currier of "Ben-Hur." Directed by King Vidor, director of "The Big Parade." Direct from its long runs at $2.00 admission at Embassy Theatre, New York, and other points.

MARĒ NOSTRUM (Our Sea) Rex Ingram's production. Blasco Ibanez' famous novel. Alice Terry. Antonio Moreno. Now running, $2 admission at Criterion, New York. Has 1001 thrills, notably—the sinking submarine—the beauty and the octopus—the net-work of spies headed by Europe's most fascinating woman—the vampire and the firing squad. A showman's attraction.

THE TRAIL OF '98 By Robert W. Service. Directed by Clarence Brown. Cast includes Karl Dane, Tully Marshall, Pauline Starke. This picture will stand as the last word in the film dramatization of the American rush to Alaska. A gigantic enterprise. More later about this one.

THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND By Jules Verne. Directed by Maurice Tourneur. Undersea scenes by J. E. Williamson. Cast includes Lionel Barrymore, Marceline Day. This is perhaps the most ambitious film venture ever undertaken by any company since "Ben-Hur." It will be done entirely in Technicolor and is a spectacular thriller. The action takes place on earth, under sea, inside the earth and up in the air.

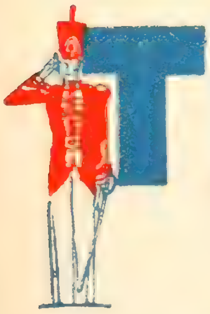
MAMAN An all-star production of the famous play that has been running on the Continent for three years. By Jose Germain. A gay Queen of Paris and Biarritz. Gowns, luxury, beauty amid the mad Jazz wave that swept from America to Paris.

THE FIRE BRIGADE Directed by William Nigh. Cast include H. B. Warner, Charles Ray, Tom O'Brien, Marceline Day, Bert Woodruff; also Irene Butler and Joyce Coad, the M-G-M contest winning infants. The many thousands of fire chiefs of the United States and Canada and their departments are pledged in co-operation, as well as the Kiwanis, Lions and other organizations. The picture is the story of the American fire hero, just as "The Big Parade" is the story of the American soldier. M-G-M will back this one to the limit and it will be an epic film.

THE SCARLET LETTER Lillian Gish, the star. Victor Seastrom, the director. Nathaniel Hawthorne's classic novel. Supporting Miss Gish are Lars Hanson, Henry B. Walthall, Karl Dane. "The Scarlet Letter" has been screened privately and it is truly a big picture, greater than "The White Sister." It is legitimate attraction size.

OLD HEIDELBERG Ramon Novarro in a big special of "Four Horsemen" size. The famous stage play will be made into one of the mammoth productions of the screen with Ramon Novarro as the young, amorous prince, carousing with his fellow students. A most romantic role, with plenty of gallant, dashing action and a love story that is nobody's business, but will be everybody's.

ANNIE LAURIE Lillian Gish. Directed by John S. Robertson. Author, Josephine Lovett. Unquestionably another mammoth attraction, a story of the Highlands, with Lillian Gish in an ideal, piquant, yet highly emotional part. And a title that is Exploitation itself.



THE COSSACKS John Gilbert. From the drama by Tolstoi. A stupendous undertaking involving the importing to America of a celebrated band of Cossacks, 250 in number, at a cost of a quarter of a million dollars. The hoof-beats of the Cossacks will be heard throughout the world and the way M-G-M will get behind this one will be startlingly profitable.

TELL IT TO THE MARINES Lon Chaney in a big special, directed by George Hill. Plus William Haines and Claire Windsor. Author, Richard Shayer. This picture is produced with the co-operation and endorsement of the U. S. Marine Corps. It is an attraction of "Big Parade" size and will be exploited heavily.

THE MAGICIAN Rex Ingram. The novel is by Somerset Maugham, author of the story for "Rain." Alice Terry and Paul Wegener in the cast. Rex Ingram is completing this picture now and it is a large-scale production of a highly dramatic and powerful nature and worthy to be classed with "The Four Horsemen," "Scaramouche" and "Mare Nostrum." The title of this one is unusual and lends itself to display.

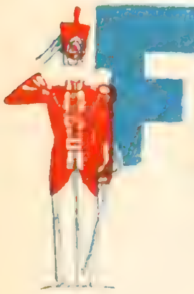
FAUST Never has the screen revealed such spectacular effects as in this UFA Production. The storm alone will make it famous. Absolutely 100 percent box-office. This is Goethe's famous work which features Emil Jannings and is directed by Europe's greatest—F. W. Murnau. The heroine (whose name is being kept a temporary secret to further an exploitation stunt) is a world-famous beauty. This is a truly great picture and costs a fortune.

TWELVE MILES OUT John Gilbert. In William Anthony McGuire's great Broadway melodramatic success. A whirlwind action drama of rich Long Island Society, with hi-jackers and rum-runners, private wars, gun fights and everything. Every producer in film business has tried to get this vehicle, but M-G-M got it—and for Gilbert.

3 LON CHANEYS Lon Chaney, star of "Unholy Three," "Blackbird," "Road to Mandalay" and others will have three productions during the coming season with equally forceful and unusual characterizations. You can bank on this.

ROMANCE Ramon Novarro in the modern classic by Joseph Conrad. The story of a youth forced to flee his native England; is carried by a sinister, mysterious crew to Cuba and becomes the center of a hot-bed of intrigue and terror. Out of this he emerges triumphant through the taunts of a dark-eyed senorita who dared him to laugh at death. NOTE: THERE WILL BE AN ADDITIONAL RAMON NOVARRO STARRING PICTURE. Title later.

THE WANING SEX Norma Shearer, the star. And one of filmdom's topmost drawing cards. A story of modern New York. Miss Shearer plays the part of a beautiful girl who falls for the bug of a woman's career, a la "His Secretary." Robert Z. Leonard, director. Authors, Fred and Fanny Hatton. Plus Lew Cody, Renee Adoree, Sally O'Neil. What a cast!



FREE SOULS Norma Shearer. Directed by John M. Stahl. Author, Adela Rogers St. John. Widely serialized by the Hearst organization. The story of a girl and a gambler sweetheart, probably the most compelling theme that audiences have seen in years. The girl's father decides to bring up his daughter as a "free soul," and the consequences develop into drama of a most unusual kind. This will be backed by a big campaign.

POLLY OF THE CIRCUS Norma Shearer. Directed by Tod Browning. Margaret Mayo's famous drama. A lovely, beautiful girl of the circus, thrilling thousands nightly in daredevil stunts, troupes through a love story that has become an American classic. The happy combination of the star, the director of "The Unholy Three" and the well-known vehicle needs no heralding.

UPSTAGE Norma Shearer. Directed by Monta Bell. A dramatic comedy of vaudeville life written by Walter De Leon, who is both author and vaudeville performer himself. Norma Shearer's part is one of a team of hoofers who, in the vernacular of tin-pan alley "knocks 'em dead in Keokuk." Rich in intimate, colorful scenes of life on the small time stage.

ALTARS OF DESIRE Mae Murray. With Conway Tearle. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Maria Thompson Davies' story is now running serially in the American Weekly which has eight million circulation, the largest of any publication in the world. Mae Murray plays a beautiful society girl whose reputation in her home town is soiled by a blackguard. At a great ball his final taunt enrages her. She picks up a knife, stabs him, and escapes. Then in the mountains she finds true, passionate love. Few pictures go to exhibitors with such advance selling.

PUPPETS Mae Murray. A glittering romance of Spain of "The Merry Widow" type. Author, Benjamin Glazer. Highlights: Torn from the glitter of a cafe in Spain, shipped to an island of convicts, befriended by a gambling soldier, forced into marriage with a hunch-back murderer—then saved by a hero.

SHOW BUSINESS Mae Murray. Thyra Samter Winslow's best-selling book. A marvelous story of show-girls, their life, the glitter and heartaches. A novel twist. A good girl gone right. Miss Murray will be supported by a cast of big box-office names and this will be produced on an expensive novelty scale. NOTE: WATCH FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF ADDITIONAL MAE MURRAY PICTURE.

THE RED MILL Marion Davies, the star. This is the internationally known musical comedy success, with Marion Davies as dare-devil Gretchen, daughter of a Holland burgomaster. The adventures which follow her interference with the arrest of two stranded American youths furnish her with a role rich in comedy. M-G-M is making it with a great supporting cast as a Cosmopolitan production.

POLLY PREFERRED Marion Davies starred. Guy Bolton, well-known playwright, is author of this famous stage success. Another Cosmopolitan production for M-G-M that will receive the great National promotion and exploitation made possible by the Hearst chain of newspapers and magazines.

MARY OF VASSAR

Marion Davies, the star. A follow-through success to "Brown of Harvard." Every girl in America has looked with hungry eyes at old Vassar, where the cream of America's society beauties spend exciting college days. Every year photographs of the Vassar daisy-chain at graduation is splashed in rotogravure sections all over the world. To be produced on the lavish scale characteristic of all Cosmopolitan productions for M-G-M.

THE FLAMING FOREST

The famous novel on which this big Cosmopolitan production for M-G-M is based, is one of James Oliver Curwood's million-copy sellers. It was serialized before publication and ran for months in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Reginald Barker is to direct this elaborate photoplay, which will be backed to the limit by Cosmopolitan promotion.

THE UNDERSTANDING HEART

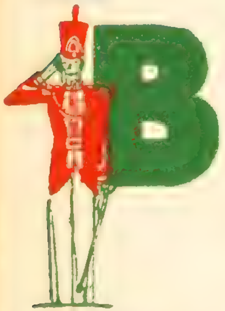
By Peter B. Kyne. This great fiction masterpiece is now running in the Cosmopolitan Magazine and will appear in novel form this Fall. You know the kind of circulation a Peter B. Kyne novel gets—millions! Like "Never the Twain Shall Meet"—also by Kyne—"The Understanding Heart" is to have an all-star cast and is to be produced by M-G-M on a spectacular scale. Plus Cosmopolitan's million-dollar promotion.

CAPTAIN SALVATION

A novel by Frederick William Wallace soon to be serialized in the chain of Hearst papers. Millions will read it and watch for the picture. This powerful story has a picturesque locale in Nova Scotia. Its picturization is one of the big Cosmopolitan bets for the new season and will receive the benefits of an unprecedented promotion campaign in the Hearst newspapers and magazines and elsewhere. A Cosmopolitan production for M-G-M on a lavish scale.

THE WALTZ DREAM

In this film Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has another and merrier "Merry Widow." This big UFA Production is a wonderful combination of comedy and drama that makes it irresistibly appealing. This big stage hit has played all over the world. Its title is as famous as the title of "The Merry Widow," and the well-known music by Oscar Straus will be as valuable to "The Waltz Dream" as the Lehar music was to "The Merry Widow."

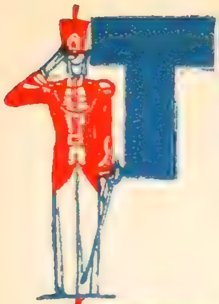


BATTLING BUTLER

Buster Keaton's newest, directed by himself with Sally O'Neil heading a strong supporting cast. This M-G-M picture is based on the big stage hit. The prediction is made by those who have seen "Battling Butler" that in this picture Keaton delivers the most important comedy of his career — not excepting "The Navigator" and his other big ones.

A LITTLE JOURNEY

Rachel Crothers' famous stage play. To be directed by Harry Millarde. The amazing adventures of a penniless girl on boarding a train, including a sensational train wreck. Dramatic all the way and always sympathetic. Slated for unusual popular acclaim, and to be produced by M-G-M with a strong cast.



THE BOY FRIEND Marceline Day and John Harron have the leads in this new Monta Bell production for M-G-M. This is a big picturization of the John Alexander Kirkpatrick stage success known in New York and Chicago as "The Book of Charm." It will be one of the year's important comedies.

BLARNEY Renee Adoree, Ralph Graves, Paulette Duval and others. This picturization of Donn Byrne's Saturday Evening Post story, "In Praise of James Carabine," is a knockout. It is a true epic of the prize ring in the '80's in New York, when bare fists were in vogue. It has a fine cast and has been handsomely produced by M-G-M. Count it among next season's best.

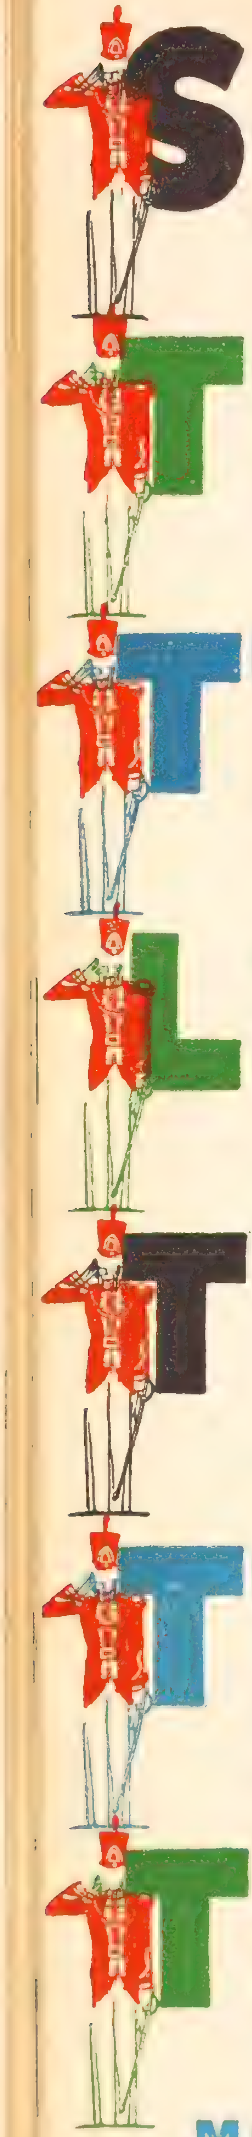
THERE YOU ARE Conrad Nagel, Edith Roberts and George Fawcett, head the cast of this important M-G-M production. Jess Robbins is the director of this F. Hugh Herbert story. This gives promise of being one of the M-G-M's greatest comedy hits since "Excuse Me!"

I CAN DO IT Max Marcin, famous Broadway playwright, brings his skill again to the screen by devising one of the cleverest and most absorbing plots the M-G-M studio has ever handled. Full of interest as well as comedy and action. It will have a strong cast recruited from M-G-M's great star galaxy.

HEAVEN ON EARTH Renee Adoree, Conrad Nagel. Director, Phil Rosen. Author, Harvey Gates. Brimming with action and color. A wealthy Paris youth tackles the gypsy life, gets into the war, and finds that the girl has been carried off by a rival. Renee Adoree plays the part of the French girl just as she does in "The Big Parade" and this type of part is ideal for her and her rapidly growing number of fans.

WOMEN LOVE DIAMONDS Directed by Monta Bell. Story by Carey Wilson. This original narrative traces the history of a valuable diamond, relating the strange powers, the sinister spell that lurked in the facets of the gem, tracing its influence in the lives of a chorus girl, her manager, her young sweetheart. The story ranges from Kimberley and the mines to mad party-loving Broadway.

FRISCO SAL Edmund Goulding comes through with his story of America's famed Barbary Coast, the apache-land of America. This one will be a big box-office bet for all types with a cast of notables that will give that plus value which characterizes all Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures.



SHADOW LANE

Both written and directed by Edmund Goulding and shortly to be published in novel form. The novel is certain to be a best-seller and that means more power to the picture. Nothing like it has ever been attempted in the way of drama of the home. It will be a revelation to every family in the land.

TIN HATS

Owen Moore, Claire Windsor and Bert Roach are the three merry-makers in this merry-go-round of mirth, "Tin Hats," a post-war comedy riot of American doughboys on the Rhine. Edward Sedgwick is both the author and director of this money-getting laugh wallop about three Rolling Rhine-stones.

THE GAY DECEIVER

John M. Stahl's first production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mortgage everything and bet on it to win. It can't help it, what with Lew Cody, Carmel Myers, Roy D'Arcy, Dorothy Phillips and Marceline Day in the cast. Leo Dietrichstein cleaned up with it on the stage when he played it as "Toto," the play by Maurice Hennequin and Felix Dusquesnel.

LOVE'S BLINDNESS

A special by Elinor Glyn — that Wizard of Romantic Fiction. John Francis Dillon (remember his "Flaming Youth"?) has made it a stunner. There are such box-office names as Pauline Starke, Antonio Moreno, Lilyan Tashman and Sam de Grasse to put over this story with a background of wealth, titled Englishmen and women and the fast social set of England's advanced aristocracy. A thing of splendor throughout!

THE CALLAHANS AND THE MURPHYS

Kathleen Norris. They'll fight for her picture just as they're fighting for her books. It is a classic in Irish-American, a narrative full of humor, of kindly nature and true-to-life episodes. Here at last is one picture that can draw every type of audience into the theatres at once and make 'em all feel glad they came.

THE TAXI DANCER

Newspapers all over the country will tell picture-goers that this wonder is coming. Robert Perry Shannon's story will be a cinch to sell because it will first be serialized. And then Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is behind it full force. It is a story about a small town girl who came to New York in search of work and runs into enough dramatic incidents to satisfy the demands of a nation.

THE NIGHT SCHOOL

We can't tell you about this knock-out in full as yet, but as we go to press Irving Thalberg, who is sponsoring it (and you know what that means), urges us to include it by all means in this list of sensations.

KANSAS CITY MISSOURI

October 2nd, 1925.

Mr. J. E. Foland,
Arctic Nu-Air Cooling and Ventilating Co.,
Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Mr. Foland:-

The two Arctic Nu-Air Cooling and Ventilating Systems that we installed in our theatre in June are more than doing their duty. As you know we have a house that seats close to two thousand with a large balcony and your systems during the very extreme heat of the summer just passed, put clean, cool fresh air in every nook and cranny of our house. Our patrons were cool and comfortable at all times.

We are of the opinion that you have the really good system and one that is not so expensive that it lets the average house out. We know that your system will do everything that you say it will do.

With kindest personal regards and wishing you every success, we are,

Very truly yours,

GLOBE THEATRE

700 Places Where They Make Hot Weather Profits

SEVEN hundred theatres where the hot weather is a blessing—not a curse; where cool, fresh, inviting air attracts patrons off the sweltering streets—and sends them away happy and eager to come again.

Seven hundred theatres where heating for cold weather is made easier and more economical.

Seven hundred theatres where good will is growing faster and where box office receipts are hitting new records.

Join the 700 now—don't wait until blistering weather cuts into your receipts.

Arctic Nu-Air Cooling and Ventilating System puts a continuous supply of cool, fresh, sweet air into every corner of your house—surely, and quietly.

It supplies up to 35,000 cubic feet of fresh, cool air every minute.

Its cost is moderate — a reasonable down payment puts the system into your theatre; the balance is paid as you profit, in 12 small monthly payments. The system is guaranteed to do exactly what we claim.

Mail this coupon now—while deliveries are prompt and sure. Get your share of the hot weather profits.

This Book tells how the "700" do it—

Costs

THE other day I learned of a neighborhood house which on Saturdays and Sundays takes in enough to pay the entire week's expenses. Last week the amount exceeded $1,100.00.

The rental paid for the feature for the two day run was $50!

"But," I asked the manager, "how do you expect the producer and distributor to exist on this scrap from your table?"

"Oh, to Hell with them," said he.

Granted that this is, in every way, an exceptional case; granted, also, that many theatres today pay rentals they cannot afford; nevertheless I invite here the attention of the average exhibitor to what constitutes his very own and a very big problem.

I mean the present cost of production.

And by that I mean the present and future supply of pictures for any exhibitor's house.

It seems to me that the Los Angeles convention could well give the matter a large part of its business program.

If I were an independent producer today I'd quit the business and go into something hopeful.

The plain facts are these: with salaries as they are and costs in general what they are, it is impossible today to produce a grade of picture of first run calibre, and still make an assured or reasonable profit.

These are facts, not hearsay. After three to six months of gruelling work a producer may make what many a theatre clears in a week,—or he may lose that amount and more.

Which isn't as attractive as playing the races. Which, also, is why we have so few independent producers left.

The producer I take as an example is economical. His overhead is slight. Between pictures his office is his hat. He doesn't exceed his budget except when the elements and other accidents force him to.

So the consequence is that the same picture made by one of the big companies would cost still more money. This, again, is a fact.

And the further fact is that the big companies get by today on production because (1) they make a lot of pictures out of which one or more ten strikes may lift the average gross from fifty to a hundred thousand dollars, and (2) because they distribute, and (3) because they own theatres.

But I've no doubt but that the big companies today would much rather own theatres and let the others do the work and stand the worry of production.

You can put down a dozen reasons why pictures to-day cost so much and net so much. We'll say they are all valid.

Perhaps, again, the entire present scheme of production—distribution—exhibition is out of date, that we need something radically new and revolutionary. Possibly, not many years from now we will handle pictures in so entirely a new way that the present method will be only a memory.

But there is one thing that can be done right now and right along, to alleviate the present high cost of production, and that is to encourage the new people of the screen, and so add to its assets and reduce production cost.

This is, importantly, the exhibitor's job. Right here he can solve the problem, which is his just as much as anyone's.

For one thing the public wants these new personalities; so the exhibitor's job won't be one of duty to the industry, but simply to himself.

He will always ask for names. But why doesn't he ask for the new and good names of fresh public interest? Why insist blindly upon the old coterie of featured players whose number is as small as their salaries are big?

If he handles this "why?" as any good showman can, he'll make it decidedly easier for production and better for exhibition.

Speaking Editorially

CHANGES and extensions in the theatre field continue to be among the outstanding events in the industry. The Stanley Company, recently become one of the most formidable contenders for circuit honors through the acquisition of the controlling interest in the Moe Mark, Fabian, Rowland & Clark groups, and now in negotiation for the Fred Levy circuit, will likely reach clear across the country and become a national chain.

Universal has 350 theatres and is headed for 1,000, according to official announcement. United Artists enters the field through the twenty-theatre pre-release project. Publix and Loew are steadily expanding. So is Fox.

Producers Distributing Corp. and E. F. Albee, of the powerful Keith circuit, are in partnership.

Every major feature concern in the industry is now definitely committed to exhibition, in one form or another, with the exception of F. B. O. and Associated Exhibitors.

LOOKED at in the light of five, four—even two—years ago, this is a complete revolution. For that reason, if for no other, it is the duty of the trade paper to keep step with the news of theatre progress, as a matter of course. It is also the trade paper's plain duty to inform itself and the industry fully of the facts of the theatre field—its statistics and what they mean to the whole world of motion pictures.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is performing that duty. In this week's issue we offer the second of a series of articles and statistical tables giving theatre facts. There will be others just as important. This is pioneer work in the picture publication field. No other trade paper has even undertaken the job. Yet the plain necessity of doing it was apparent to us more than two years ago and we have since been steadily engaged on the task, the results of which are now available for publication and for service.

HERE is an interesting item, which appeared in La Cinematographie Francaise, which we print without comment because it tells its own story:

"'The Light of Asia' has just been shown at Windsor Castle before the Queen and her court (the King, that day, was at the Newmarket races). This is a film which was taken in India, and the British press, more enthusiastic than well-informed, was loud in its praise of royal favor extended from time to time to British films, even those taken in India.

"The scenarist and director of the film, Miranjan Pal, showed it and was congratulated by Her Majesty, who expressed her desire to see more frequently such good British films. The denouement is: The money for this film was put up in Italy, and the two operator-directors are Germans."

IN connection with the increasing demand for original screen stories, Percy Heath, F. B. O. scenario head, believes that the establishment of scenario schools by the producing companies themselves will be the next logical step, just as Paramount has already a school for training players.

"True, there are many 'scenario schools' about the country, but by far the majority are utterly worthless, and do little beyond depriving their trusting pupils of whatever money they possess," says Mr. Heath. "The real requirements—what can and what can not be visualized, the 'what' and 'how' and 'why' that must be thoroughly taught, makes a studio training imperative.

"We have many scenarists now, invariably men and women with film experience, who are entirely competent to, and do, turn out original stories. But we have not one-tenth the number that will be required in a few years' time, and the problem of supplying these writers will devolve upon the picture companies themselves. And the establishment of scenario schools within the studio, run by and for the studio, is the only logical method of securing writers with thorough understanding of the 'rules of the game'."

AN EDITOR ON BROADWAY

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

SEVERAL weeks ago, in this department, we predicted that a new development in the theatre field was to be put forward by Joseph M. Schenck and Sid Grauman. With the announcement this week of United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., the matter takes definite form and becomes a factor to be reckoned with in considering the future of the theatre map.

It is far too early to begin making predictions as to the probable result. It will probably be two years, Mr. Schenck feels, before the circuit is in full operation, and many things may happen in that length of time—to theatres and to the picture industry itself—which would alter the entire complexion of the exhibition field.

In itself, however, the formation of this circuit is a significant and vitally interesting move. For some time now we have been recognizing the importance of pre-release or road-show runs of certain pictures. This, when well handled—and when the picture justifies this expensive form of exploitation—seems to react to the benefit of subsequent engagements. Certainly, if not overdone, it removes a picture entirely from the general run of program attractions.

So far, we have resorted to the use of legitimate theatres for this purpose, and not always with satisfactory results. Legitimate theatres are badly suited for the purpose, being built for acoustic rather than visual perfection. Now, for the first time, a chain of theatres is to be built for the specific purpose of housing such runs—mainly for the product of one company, to be sure, but it is a move in the proper direction.

Mr. Schenck, in commenting on this, remarked:

"When a picture opens in a Broadway house, the audience attracted is not the usual picture audience. The special attraction in a legitimate theatre draws many people who do not ordinarily attend pictures at all. Our pre-release houses will draw many such persons regularly, and since we will change programs only once in several weeks, they will be led to go to other theatres as well, and we will have made new picture patrons, and created the photoplay habit among a class of persons now seldom reached."

LEE SHUBERT, we understand, had a great deal to do with bringing the United Artists Theatre Circuit deal to definite fruition. He is an old friend of Joseph M. Schenck, and on his last visit to the West Coast it was his enthusiasm for the project, coupled with his practical knowledge of theatre realty problems, that went far toward deciding its organizers on a definite plan of action.

It is to the far-seeing and level-headed judgment of Joseph M. Schenck, however, that the major portion of credit must go. With a definite trend toward pre-release showing of all important pictures, and another toward classification of houses—with virtually every company allying itself in the theatre field—this was the logical next step for United Artists. Mr. Schenck makes it very clear that it does not mean an invasion of the first-run field. These are, he emphasizes, houses for extended pre-release showings only, and will not interfere with subsequent first-runs in any manner, just as the present road show does not. There will always be, he points out, the regular picture clientele which prefers to wait until the picture comes to their theatre at regular prices.

Grauman, in turn, will be faced by the most difficult problem of his highly successful career in the presentation of such pictures throughout the country. In Los Angeles he is an institution, but the rest of the country will demand to be shown—and, no doubt, he will show them.

WE are surprised at the intense opposition to "The Big Parade," on the part of the British lay press. The picture, needless to say, has only been regarded here as a piece of entertainment. It was never originated nor handled with any idea whatsoever of exploiting this country's part in the World War. The story was written as a human-interest document of the war, as seen through the eyes of an American soldier. As a picture it grew into what it is through the effort—and a most intelligent one—to build dramatic effects. This is the sole reason, for instance, for the mass movements which give the picture its inspiring sweep. If the camera's eye saw only the operation of the troops from the United States, that will have to be set down, as any technician must know, to the limitations and ends of photography and photodrama.

IT may interest the British newspaper critics to know that this picture has had, as have few others, a shaping effect upon American picture production. It has shown a way so clearly that the whole production policy here will, consciously or unconsciously, be moulded by it. So, because of "The Big Parade" and in spite of the present antipathy to it, England will get better pictures from this country—pictures wider in concept, more intelligent and less confined to the movie rut.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the United Artists Corp. and Theatres of United Artists, Inc.

ALL of which brings me to Dr. Ferdinand Bausback, head of the German UFA, to whom Adolph Zukor gave an interesting luncheon last week.

Dr. Bausback came here with certain ideas and left with certain other ideas. By which I mean that he acquired here an understanding of, and therefore a sympathy with, our policies of production, distribution and theatres. A fine ambassador, by the way, a dignified, scholarly man, a director in the Deutsche Bank and many industrial concerns and a Doctor of Political Science.

WILL HAYS, in his speech at the luncheon, said that the international film will bring international amity. Very true, and what a great mission that is! But it would seem, at times, that we need first a measure of international amity—international film amity, at least—in order to bring about the international film.

WE need a constant interchange of film ambassadors between Europe and America, sincere students of film markets and of the public taste, and traditions in each film country; unbiased men, too; that is to say, men who will put the truth above their own jobs and objectives.

CHARACTERISTIC of the calm and collected manner in which Great Britain met the recent General Strike (which would probably have meant a bloody and turbulent revolution in almost any other nation) is the Strike Number of The Film Renter and Moving Picture News, which lies on our desk. It totals only 24 pages with cover, but it came out as usual, and only the words "Strike Number" overprinted on the cover indicates any deviation from the normal.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

MOVIE SLANGUAGE

TERRY RAMSAYE, the official chronicler of the legends of the cinema industry, contributes an article to the April issue of "American Speech" which details in interesting fashion the contributions to the American vocabulary being made by the leaping tintype trade. He divides our argot into three groups: first, the words used by the public, which it receives from the screen itself, such as "vamp" and "sheik"; second, the technical expressions of the studio and the laboratory; and third, the terms used in the trade itself, among exhibitors, distributors and such.

Ramsaye traces interestingly the origin and usage of such words as "movie," "cinema," "kinema," "photoplay," "pictureplay" and the like, tells how a film factory became a "laboratory" in order to attract a better class of workers to a failing concern, how "features" and "super-features" came about, and much more that is of great interest. He tells, for instance, how until 1913 stock subtitles, such as "Wedding Bells," "That Night" and "A Year Has Passed," were made up in rolls and lopped off by the foot to fit any picture. Commenting on the brevity and directness of film trade language, Ramsaye says:

"In addition to the influence of ethnic and racial factors, the facts of motion picture geography contribute to the staccato of its working language by the necessity of the use of the telegraph between New York, the distribution and financial centre, and Los Angeles, the producing centre. An exchange of letters takes about ten days, which is too large a fraction of the life cycle of a motion picture. The result is that almost all casual communication is by telegraph, with the long distance telephone for emergencies and personal journeys for really major matters."

One important word has been overlooked by Ram-

Watt L. Parker, director of advertising and publicity; Hal Wallis, studio publicity representative; and Frank A. Cassidy, showman and exploiter, at the Warner Bros. studio to say good-bye to the 6XBR portable radio broadcasting station.

Mayor James J. Walker of New York meets Renee Adoree, M-G-M player, on the Trackless Train; Major Bowes and Director Clarence Brown may also be seen saye—the indispensible "wow," of which Nat Rothstein is the popularizer, if not the originator.

Since the publication of Ramsaye's article, another new word has come into being and bids fair to attain wide circulation—the word "zib," a contraction of exhibitor (which in many circles is pronounced ex'-i-bi'-ter.) "Zib" has been coined by Phil Meyer, New York exchange manager for Associated Exhibitors, who says that he sees no reason for using a four-syllable word when one of a single syllable will do the trick. And so a new word comes into the lexicon of the screen.

Will H. Hays and Adolph Zukor at the luncheon following the laying of the cornerstone for the new Paramount building being erected in New York City

A RUSSIAN SEASON

FOLLOWING "The Eagle," "The Volga Boatman" and "The Midnight Sun," we seem to be in for a strongly Russian season. One of the projected Russian tales is Tolstoi's "The Cossacks," which M-G-M will picturize, and the prospects for a thrilling and authentic screen drama are bright. Major General Theodore Lodijenski, formerly of the Russian Imperial Guards, is technical director, and last week Gourseir Bey Sosoff, representative of the Cossack troupe which has been imported to play in the picture, arrived at Culver City to confer with Lodijenski. The Cossacks will play an engagement at the New Madison Square Garden before proceeding to the Coast, and they provide a colorful sight these days on the streets of New York.

REID PILOTS "CLASSIC"

LAURENCE REID, who has been reviewing pictures for MOTION PICTURE NEWS since the days when the two-reeler was a super-drama, and more recently editor of Movie Monthly, has now assumed a similar post with Classic, another Brewster publication. The splendid work which he has done in boosting the sales of Movie Monthly, editing it fearlessly and impartially along radically different (and practical) lines needs no comment. We shall now hope and expect to see him infuse as much of novelty and new vigor into Classic.

HAL HALL

IF you enjoy (as we do) sitting around comfortably and watching somebody else work like a beaver, we suggest a trip to the First National Eastern Studios, with a side excursion to the office of Hal Hall, studio publicity purveyor. You probably won't find Hal in his office, unless you are very lucky, because he probably will be on one of the stages, or at another of the studios, or showing a visiting newspaper man through the place, or in the still department, or in the carpenter shop, or the wardrobe department or any one of a hundred other places—for sending out publicity is the smallest of a studio publicity director's tasks, his title to the contrary notwithstanding. Somehow, we've noticed around the various studios, whenever a job is too difficult or too tedious or too unpleasant for anyone else, it's "Let the publicity department do it!" And the publicity department does.

All of which is by way of a novel prelude to telling just how busy First National's Eastern units are at the present time. We wandered up there the other day and found Charles Brabin and Earl Hudson hard at work finishing "Mismates" on one stage; on the floor above, Al Santell directing Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill in "Subway Sadie" for the Al Rockett unit on an indoor "exterior" set, while the carpenters were just demolishing an elaborate reproduction of a New York subway train at the other end of the stage. Down in the miniature department some important novelty shots were being made to complete Al Rockett's previous "Puppets."

This taking up all of the floor space at the Biograph plant, we found Ray Rockett's unit at the Cosmopolitan studio, with Irvin Willat directing Betty Bronson and Lloyd Whitlock in a charming sequence for "Paradise." We noted with particular interest the splendid realistic detail in the sets, made under the art direction of Clark Robinson, whose work at the Capitol Theatre and for the Music Box Revue is widely known.

And, as though two studios were not enough for one company, another set was waiting at the Tec-Art Jackson Avenue studio, which was to be used a few days later—and the studio publicity man must keep in close contact with all three studios!

Mayor James J. Walker, of New York City, snapped in the act of laying the cornerstone for the new Paramount building now under construction in Times Square, following a stirring address.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING

ONE of the outstanding social events of the season in Philadelphia was the wedding at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on May 20 of Miss Louisette Mastbaum, daughter of Jules E. Mastbaum, to Elias Wolf, of Elkins Park, Pa. Nearly one thousand guests were present, including many picture celebrities, Joseph M. Schenck and his wife, Norma Talmadge, among them.

WHAT PRICE BLISTERS?

THERE are going to be some very poor golf scores by certain Hollywoodsmen next season. Prospective visitors to Hollywood are warned against betting on the scores of the following gentlemen, all of whom will be off their game: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen, Leslie Fenton, William V. Mong, Barry Norton, Ted McNamara, Sammy Cohen, August Tollaire and J. Farrell MacDonald.

This little group of serious golfers makes up the masculine part of the cast of "What Price Glory?" Director Raoul Walsh some time ago issued orders that all the members of the cast must be in fit condition when the camera shoots them in the war scenes of the production, and under the command of Top Sergeant Thomas Brady, borrowed from the U. S. Army, these actors are drilling and marching with the "extras" most of the time they are not working on the lot. In consequence their golf is being neglected. Not that they haven't time for it—but because blistered feet and sore muscles make golf totally unnecessary these days.

Jesse L. Lasky receives the key to the United Studios from M. C. Levee; others in the picture are Betty Bronson, B. P. Schulberg, Hector Turnbull, Lois Wilson and Milton E. Hoffman.

MEASURING THE LAUGHS

THE volume of laughter in a theatre can now be measured with scientific precision by means of the Western Electric audiometer (the instrument recently used in testing the noise in the New York subways), a fact which was taken advantage of in recent tests made by Topics of the Day at the Riverside Theatre, New York City, before an audience of 2,000 persons. Twenty-six test jokes were flashed on the screen, and the 19 which recorded the greatest volume of laughter were used to make up that week's release. The joke which registered the highest point of merriment was this:

Jones: "Sorry, old man, that my hen got loose and scratched up your garden."

Smith: "That's all right. My dog ate your hen."

Jones: "Fine! I just ran over your dog."

CHANEY'S SON WEDS

CREIGHTON TULL CHANEY, son of Lon Chaney, whose "Outside the Law" revival at the Colony Theatre, New York City, has awakened wide interest, was married last week in Hollywood to Miss Dorothy Hinckley, a non-professional.

*"HER BIG NIGHT"

ONLY one asterisk was bestowed by the National Board of Review this week. The feature to be so favored was Universal's "Her Big Night," which was recommended for the general audience.

"BEN HUR" MURALS

FRED NIBLO, who returned recently from Europe, will begin construction this week of his new mansion on a high peak in Beverly Hills, and an important feature of the house will be a "Ben Hur" room, with friezes composed of scenes from the picture to be painted by studio artists, and to be hung with photographs of other scenes from the film. Several of the other rooms will be modeled after rooms in European mansions visited by the director and his wife, Enid Bennett, during their tour.

A. M. P. A. OLD HOME WEEK

LAST week's meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers was "Old Home Week." Aileen Pringle was to have been the guest of honor, but her work at the studio prevented, so Al Fineman, James Hood MacFarlane, Barrett Kiesling, Frank Wilstach, George Harvey, Charles Giegerich and Randall White were called upon for talks by President Glendon Allvine.

This week's affair was scheduled to be a closed meeting, with the election of officers.

CAN THIS BE?

SEVERAL unique claims to distinction are possessed by "Mantrap," which Victor Fleming has just completed for Paramount. It has no villain, no heavy, and not even a "menace." It has a leading woman, but no heroine; it has a leading man, but no hero. It is laid in the Canadian woods, but there is no snow; there are Northwest mounties but they are not engaged in tracking down their man, though one of them does flirt with the leading woman. All of which sounds too good to be quite true.

A CINEMA PAINTER

LOUIS USABAL, Spanish artist whose paintings have lent distinction and color to many a Fox insert, has arrived at the Fox West Coast studios to make portraits of thirty of the stars and players. Usabal is especially noted for his portraits of theatrical celebrities, done here and abroad, including Eleanora Duse, Cleo de Merode, Loie Fuller, Ruth St. Dennis, La Belle Otero, Pablo Sarasate, Vincente Ballester and Conchita Piquer. He has taken prizes at exhibitions in Valencia, his birthplace, Madrid, Rome, Paris, Berlin, Munich, Vienna and London.

Ralph Ince engaged a real, honest-to-goodness circus for some of the scenes in "Bigger Than Barnum's," an F. B. O. Gold Bond special. In addition to directing, Ince plays the heavy role in the production

A PROMISE KEPT

FIVE years ago, when Richard Dix was a first rate actor but hadn't yet begun to worry about the income tax, he knew a property man named William Beaudine who hoped to become a director. One afternoon they agreed that when Dix became a star, Beaudine was to direct him in a picture.

A few days ago, when "Say It Again" was nearing its close, Dix went into conference with William Le Baron on his next picture, "The Quarterback." "Who do you want for a director?" asked Le Baron. Dix thought for a moment. "Holy smoke!" he exploded. "I almost forgot! Why, Bill Beaudine, of course." So the wire was sent to Hollywood, and back came the answer: "O. K. Will arrive in New York the first week in May."

Requests Reopening of Famous Players Case; B. T. Hainer Asks Order

THE Federal Trade Commission has been asked to order the reopening of the Famous Players case for the introduction of almost unlimited testimony along lines which the film company contend that they were deprived of an opportunity to develop as a result of the examiner's ruling striking out all testimony.

The application of the order, filed by B. T. Hainer, chief counsel for Famous Players, came as a surprise to the commission. It asks that the commission vacate all rulings made by the examiner sustaining motions to strike out evidence introduced by the respondents; that all such evidence already physically incorporated in the record shall be received and considered and that respondents be granted the right, at their option, to introduce additional competent and material evidence upon any matter in issue and that the attorneys for the commission shall be given the right to be present at the taking of testimony, to cross-examine witnesses, etc.

The motion will be argued by counsel for the company at the hearing before the commission on June 3rd.

Ufa Head Guest at Luncheon

Dr. Bausback Forecasts Closer Friendship Between American and European Leaders

DR. BAUSBACK, head of the Ufa organization, declared that "the standard of the theatres and the management of the business far exceeded my rather high-placed expectations" at a luncheon tendered by Adolph Zukor in his honor at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, New York City. He also stated his pleasure at the fact that "besides the business agreements entered into between Ufa, Famous Players-Lasky and Metro-Goldwyn Corporation, a bond of a personal nature is now being created between the leading men of the two groups."

Glendon Allvine of Paramount presided as toastmaster and after brief remarks of welcome and comments on Bausback's mission to this country had been voiced by Adolph Zukor, Sid R. Kent, Will H. Hays and J. Robert Rubin of M-G-M, Bausback addressed the gathering, saying in part:

"Insofar as organization and finance is concerned, the United States is a great leap ahead of Europe at the present time. These conditions reflect the fact that the World War was won by America and lost by Europe. But where individual talent and inspiration play a role in the film industry I find that both countries can learn their share from one another."

Dr. Bausback said that he sees the way and possibilities for German films in Amercia, films that must remain German in their conception although they will have to learn much in their execution, which America is able to show in an exemplifying way.

He asserted that he has gained special confidence for the task he had taken over in Germany by knowing that he could depend on the very necessary co-operation of the leaders of the American industry.

The speaker said that the problem to be solved concerns combining product of "the highest ethical value" with that which is ensured of the largest possible market and a good profit. "Only when the film has completely developed" will there be international peace, he said.

Double Feature Bills Barred

First National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Famous and U. A. Stop Cleveland Abuse

EXHIBITORS of Cleveland will not play double feature programs with First National, Metro-Goldwyn, Paramount or United Artists any more. These companies have added a clause to their contracts specifying definitely that no photoplay longer than three reels may be played with any of their features. The clause, rubber stamped, and initialed by the exhibitor when he buys a picture from any of the above named companies, reads:

"The exhibitor agrees not to exhibit or permit the exhibition of more than one of the feature photoplays specified in the schedule hereof or any other motion picture subject exceeding three reels in length at any performance at the theatre herein named on the date or dates each of the said feature photoplays is there exhibited unless with the written consent of the distributor, first had and obtained."

The double feature practice has been growing steadily in Cleveland until it is now estimated that about eighty per cent. of the neighborhood houses are offering double attractions. It has been shown that one neighborhood house doubled on "The Ten Commandments" and "The Gold Rush," showing them both on the same program. These houses are showing double features all the way from one night a week to four nights a week.

Many of the leading theatre owners are heartily in accord with the attitude taken by the exchanges in refusing to sell features for double feature programs. The circuit owners favor it. The large theatre owners favor it. The small neighborhood house is the only one objecting.

Bandit Holds Up Cashier of Cleveland Theatre

A hold-up man held a gun to the side of Rose McGuire, ticket seller at the Lexington Theatre, East 55th Street, Cleveland, last Sunday evening, while a crowd stood in line buying tickets. Pressing the gun into her back, he calmly told her to go on selling tickets and turn over the cash box to him. When he had emptied the box containing about $400, he commanded her to keep quiet and fled in the crowd. As soon as she dared, she raised the alarm, but the robber was gone. The Lexington Theatre belongs to J. J. Harwood, who is president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association.

Appoint Another Inspector for Pa. Censor Board

H. Yadusky, of Shenandoah, Pa., has been appointed an inspector for the Pa. State Board of Motion Picture Censors. Yadusky will spend a brief training period in the vicinity of his home, after which he will be assigned to Philadelphia. Yadusky's appointment brings the total number of inspectors operating in the State of Pennsylvania under the Board up to 12, the largest number it has ever had at one time.

Frank J. Harris Nominated for Senatorship

Frank J. Harris, of Pittsburgh, an officer of the M. P. T. O. of Pa. and W. Va., and brother of the late Senator John P. Harris, was nominated on the Republican ticket at the Pennsylvania primaries on May 18th as the party candidate to succeed his brother in the Senate to represent the forty-fifth district.

Northwest M. P. T. O. Adopt Improvement Resolution

THIS week the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest adopted a resolution pleading for the earnest cooperation of the exhibitor in all matters pertaining to the betterment of the community and the high standard by which all theatres should be run. The resolution follows:

Be it hereby resolved, that the members of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest in convention assembled are urged to operate their respective theatres at all times at a high standard with proper consideration for proper pictures, cleanliness, ventilation, service, courtesy and discipline, and that exhibitors be urged to establish a close contact in a civic way and to participate actively in every movement tending towards community betterment; and that exhibitors be urged to meet with individuals and organizations who oppose them and discuss constructive criticism, censorship and other forms of opposition or objection that appear; and by continuous and constant effort on the part of the exhibitors to aid, to co-operate, and to work with the citizenship of their respective communities, much will be accomplished to lessen the exhibitor's problems and aid substantially in strengthening exhibitors' investments and increase of theater patronage.

In preparation: Figures showing average daily attendance in all theatres compiled from actual survey by MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Small Town Theatres on Wane, Survey of Entire Field by NEWS Shows

With the completion of figures showing the distribution of motion picture theatres by states and by population groups, based on the MOTION PICTURE NEWS survey over a period of two years, it now becomes possible to draw certain interesting conclusions, based, not on opinion or guesswork, but on final and authoritative data, concerning the present tendencies in theatre expansion and business failures.

Although there are no satisfactory figures for previous years with which to make definite statistical comparison, it is obvious, after even a cursory examination of the table opposite that the number of theatres in the smaller towns is declining rapidly.

The following table showing the average number of theatres per town or city in each population group will illustrate:

AVERAGE NUMBER OF HOUSES PER CITY

Under 1,500	1.005
1,500—2,500	1.079
2,500—5,000	1.383
5,000—10,000	1.704
10,000—15,000	2.851
15,000—25,000	3.466
25,000—50,000	5.584
50,000—100,000	9.342
Over 100,000	44.226

It will be seen that towns under 1,500 and those from 1,500 to 2,500 average practically one theatre per town. Only a few years ago, many of these towns had at least two competing houses. Towns from 2,500 to 5,000 average only about one and one-third houses per town. A few years back, towns of this size had two, three and even four small houses. From 5,000 to 10,000 the average is one and three-fourths houses per town; from 10,000 to 15,000, less than three houses per city; from 15,000 to 25,000, not quite three and one-half houses per city. This, to anyone at all familiar with conditions, obviously represents a heavy falling off in the communities from 25,000 down.

The average number of theatres per town is 1.76, for the entire country.

Another interesting comparison which can be drawn from the table opposite, is the number of cities in each population group and the number of theatres in those cities. For instance, more than 52 per cent. of the towns in this country are under 1,500 population, but these towns contain less than 30 per cent. of the theatres. Cities over 100,000, on the other hand, number less than 1 per cent. of the total number of towns, but contain more than 22 per cent. of the theatres. The complete table is as follows:

PROPORTION OF CITIES AND THEATRES IN EACH POPULATION GROUP

	Cities	Thea.
Under 1,500	52.6	29.9
1,500—2,500	15.9	9.6
2,500—5,000	14.9	11.6
5,000—10,000	8.4	8.0
10,000—15,000	2.8	4.7
15,000—25,000	2.2	4.2
25,000—50,000	1.5	4.7
50,000—100,000	.8	4.7

The total number of theatres divides about equally between towns above and below the 5,000 mark. Towns of less than 5,000 contain 51.2 per cent. of the theatres, while 48.8 per cent. are in towns of more than 5,000 population.

The following table shows the proportion of the theatres in each state that are in towns of less than 5,000 population. North Dakota, for example, has 91.8 per cent. of its houses in less than 5,000 towns, while Massachusetts has but 20.9 per cent., and District of Columbia none. The complete tabulation, by states, follows:

PROPORTION OF THEATRES IN TOWNS UNDER 5,000, BY STATES

Motion Picture News Making Small Town Theatre Survey

WITHIN the last few weeks thirty-three small town theatres in Western Missouri and Kansas have been forced to close. According to C. E. Cook, Business Manager of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri: "A mesh-work of concrete roads in the vicinity has made big town patrons out of small town theatregoers."

This situation has an interesting parallel throughout the country. MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in its comprehensive statistical survey of the whole field, is now engaged in tabulating a check-up from the towns themselves which will show just what the status of the small town theatre is.

The results will be printed in an early issue. The situation to which Mr. Cook refers has been going on steadily for some time. It was apparent to us about two years ago; and, for that reason, among others, we then began our survey of the theatre field, the results of which are now being made available to the industry.

Incidentally we may remark that MOTION PICTURE NEWS is the only trade paper which is rendering this all-important service.

47.	New York	1,208	24.0
48.	Massachusetts	440	20.9
49.	Dist. of Columbia	58	00.0

The distribution by states is also interesting. Ten states contain 49.6 per cent., or practically one-half, of all the theatres in the country. These are New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Texas, Michigan, California, Iowa, Indiana and Massachusetts. The state with the largest number of theatres is New York, with 1,208. The state with the smallest number is Nevada, with 23.

The relation of number of theatres to population is also important. The following table compares the percentage of the total number of theatres in each state with the percentage of the total population of the U. S. residing within that state, as shown by the U. S. Census:

Certain important facts which have been brought to light in the NEWS survey do not show in these tables, for the reason that the all-important matter of seating capacities must be shown in another table, to be completed shortly. This, in relation to the data here given, will prove several startling points concerning changes which are taking place in the theatre field, and will show that the small theatre in the small town is virtually disappearing.

Stanley Expansion May Carry to Coast

Officials Silent on Reports Circuit Will Acquire Control of Other Large Chains Including California Theatre Company

TRADE circles continue to hum with reports of continued expansion planned by the Stanley Company, which recently acquired control of the Mark Strand Theatres in New York and New England, the Fabian chain in New Jersey and the Rowland and Clark Theatres in Pittsburgh. It is rumored that the organization looks forward to a theatre circuit which will include houses dotted across the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The officials of Stanley maintain a noncommittal air of silence with regard to reports that one of the big chains on the West Coast will eventually come under the Stanley banner as the result of plans now being worked out. With regard to the South, where Stanley is known to be carrying on negotiations toward the acquisition of a circuit of theatres, John J. McGuirk, vice-president of the company, recently declared that there were no new developments to be reported officially.

As a result of the recent Stanley-Mark Strand-Fabian-Rowland & Clark merger, the Fabian circuit will become the Stanley-Fabian Co., of which Jules Mastbaum will be president; J. Fabian, vice-president; Irving Rossheim, treasurer and director, Abe Fabian, assistant treasurer; John J. McGuirk and Abe Sablosky, of the Stanley Company, will serve on the board.

Practically the same arrangement will become effective with regard to the Mark Strand and Rowland & Clark organizations. Moe Mark will be vice-president of the former, and James B. Clark, vice-president of the latter, with a similar distribution of representation of both interests on the boards.

It is said that the Stanley Company paid $16,000,000 in cash and stock for a controlling interest in these three circuits. It is understood that for the present the booking arrangements for these chains will remain as heretofore, though a centralized booking department is being contemplated for the future.

A new stock issue of the Stanley Company will be the means of financing the organization, with present holders of Stanley stock issued rights to subscribe to the new stock at $60 per share.

West Coast Theatres File Stipulations

NO further testimony will be taken in the cases brought against the West Coast Theatres, et al, by the Federal Trade Commission in Washington, D. C., as a result of an agreement between the counsel for the commission and the respondents to permit the latter to file stipulations covering the points on which testimony was to have been offered.

The stipulations admit that officers and agents of the respondents would disaffirm or deny the testimony of the Government witnesses and that such testimony would apply only to transactions prior to January, 1924, and that only "four or five" instances could be cited of the use of methods after that date which, if true, would be unfair.

It is further agreed in the stipulation that, with respect to the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., Educational Film Exchange of Northern California and Principal Features Corporation, the Government has no evidence that they ever participated in any of the alleged unlawful acts recited in the complaint.

Applies for Sunday Showing License in R. I. Town

The first formal application for a Sunday license to show pictures in a town in Rhode Island has been made by A. Votaloto for the Georgiaville Town Hall in Smithfield, who has filed the request with the Town Council. The recent Sunday bill permits Sunday shows only in the cities and Mr. Votaloto plans to test its validity by showing pictures in a town.

Questionnaire Shows Pupils Fond of Movie

In a questionnaire among pupils of the Rockland, Me., High School, six pupils out of more than 300 never attended a motion picture show, six others attended some show every night, 80 attended twice a week, 109 attended at least once a week and a scattering attended occasionally. The questions were among a group of questions asked by the Rockland Chamber of Commerce.

Stanley Company Gets Six More Houses

Takes Controlling Interest Under Terms of Ten-Year Lease; Keith-Albee to Build in Baltimore; Other Deals Reported

REPORTS of new theatres being constructed and expansion of circuits throughout the country continue unabated throughout the week. The Stanley Company of America acquired six more houses situated in New Jersey. Wilmer and Vincent circuit in Pennsylvania in association with Keith-Albee plan to expend more than two million dollars in the improvement of the houses which they took over recently from the Wells Amusement Company. Deals of equal magnitude are being consummated throughout the states.

Jacob Fox, owner of the Fox Theatre, Bordentown, N. J., the Bever Lee Theatre, Beverly, N. J., the Auditorium, Burlington, N. J., the Birch Opera House, Burlington, the Mt. Holly, N. J., and the Fox Theatre, Riverside, N. J., has entered into a contract with the Stanley Company of America whereby the Stanley Company takes a controlling interest in the six theatres under the terms of a 10-year lease.

The agreement also involves the formation of a Fox-Stanley Company of New Jersey, with Fox receiving in exchange for his entire interest in the six houses a block of Stanley Company stock. The houses represent an investment of approximately $1,999,000 and have a total seating capacity of 7,000. The agreement becomes effective as of June 1, 1926.

Fox will make his headquarters at the office of the Stanley Company of America, 1916 Race Street, Philadelphia, and will continue to act as general manager of the theatres.

The William Penn Theatre, West Philadelphia, which has been owned by Miller Brothers, has been sold outright to the Stanley Company for $260,000. The new owners will spend approximately $200,000 on improvements and will take possession July 1st. The house was formerly operated by George Metzel.

A large, modern moving picture theatre, to cost approximately $2,500,000, will be built in Baltimore in the downtown section when a site has been located by the Keith-Albee interests, according to an announcement by Fred C. Schanberger, of the executive staff of that company, who represents them in Baltimore.

Reports Link Joe May to Universal Production

JOE MAY, the well-known producer-director, according to reports emanating from Berlin, has signed with Universal to produce an elaborate special, either in Europe or America. The deal is understood to have been closed by Burstein, who has been Laemmle's Swiss representative for several years and now represents Universal's interests in Germany. Burstein is also financing two productions, presumably for Universal, which Georg Jacoby, German director, is now starting.

The new playhouse will have a seating capacity of about 4,500 persons and the lines of the Palace in Cleveland and the Albee in Brooklyn will be followed in the design.

Plans are being prepared now for the new $1,000,000 motion picture playhouse to be built at Fulton and Pennsylvania Avenues, Baltimore. Clyde and Nelson Friz, Baltimore, are the architects.

It will be called the Ambassador and will seat about 2,500 persons. Actual construction work will start in September and the building will be finished in about a year.

The Walker Amusement Company of Aberdeen, S. D., is taking steps to combat the entrance of Finkelstein & Ruben into that city. The company is now racing to complete a new theatre, and has purchased the Princess, State and Garrick Theatres from E. G. Anderson to get control of the city.

Wilmer and Vincent, who, in association with Keith-Albee, last week purchased the entire theatrical interests of the Wells Amusement Co. in Norfolk and Richmond, will expend more than $2,000,000 in the next three years in improving their newly-acquired holdings.

Plans include radical changes in the policies of several Richmond theatres, taken over in the recent deal, and the building of at least three new playhouses in Richmond. Sites have already been acquired for these projects.

Work of razing buildings on West Clinch Avenue and State Street, Knoxville, at the intersection of the two streets, to make room for the new $1,000,000 theatre to be erected by the Publix Theatre Corporation of New York City, was begun this week and construction of the new theatre building will begin within six weeks. Total seating capacity of the theatre will be 2,100.

Warner Brothers studio began excavations for its $2,000,000 theatre in Hollywood this week. This theatre will be one of the most magnificent movie palaces ever erected, according to G. Albert Lansburgh, the architect.

Announcement was made this week that Famous Players-Lasky Company has completed plans for the erection of a $150,000 picture theatre in Concord, N. H., to be located on Park Street, opposite the State House.

An important transfer of theatre interests took place in Atlanta this week when R. B. Wilby and Thos. G. Coleman took over the Tudor Theatre after effecting its purchase from Universal, through Dan Michalove, district manager for Universal.

The handsome Coral Gables Theatre, now nearing completion at Coral Gables, Miami, has been leased by Harry A. Leach of Miami and Publix Theatre's Corporation. The lease covers a period of ten years at an annual rental of $40,000.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Regional Sales Convention Luncheon in Washington, D. C., given in honor of Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production at the Culver City studios. Mr. Mayer's distinguished guests at table are Fire Chief Watson, Congressman Connery, Commodore H. P. Jones, of Annapolis, Major-Gen. LeJeune, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Admiral Shoemaker, Gen. Williams and Toastmaster Chas. Linkins.

Stage Set for M. P. T. O. A. Convention

DELEGATES to the seventh annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were arriving rapidly in Los Angeles, as this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS went to press, and the stage was all set for a lively week's stay in the film capital.

One of the big issues that loomed before the delegates went into session was the uniform contract and the "added clauses" situation, which brought about an exchange of statements between Joseph M. Seider, business manager of the organization, and W. A. Steffes, head of the M. P. T. O. of the Northwest and member of the National Board.

It also appeared that the move for selection of a national figure to head the organization would receive a large part of the convention's attention. In this connection, it was reported that the Middle West was prepared to suggest Col. Edward M. House, former unofficial adviser to the late President Wilson, for the post, but this could not be confirmed.

The New York delegation of fifty, traveling on a special train, left Sunday, May 23 for the Coast and was due in Los Angeles May 31. In the party were a large number of officials of the organization, including President R. F. Woodhull; Business Manager Seider; Julian Brylawski, chairman of the administrative committee; Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of the board of directors; Louis M. Sagal, national treasurer; former President M. J. O'Toole, and others.

The Illinois delegates, headed by Business Manager Jack Miller and Secretary Ludwig Siegel, of the Chicago Exhibitors' Association, left on a special train on May 26. They were joined at Omaha by the delegation of Northwest exhibitors led by Mr. Steffes. Among those on the Illinois special were Frank Rembusch, president of the M. P. T. O. of Indiana, and the delegates from his state.

Others on the Illinois train were: V. R. Langdon, V. T. Lynch, Wm. Mueller, J. D. Abramson and family, Fred A. Gilford and family, Sidney Selig and son, Arnold Schaak, J. C. Gordon, Joe Pastor, Mr. and Mrs. James Stepanek, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Lamm, Mr. and Mrs. Morris A. Choynski, Aaron Saperstein and family, Mrs. J. Berry and party, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Mandel, and Dorothy Straus and party from Copperhill, Tennessee.

Big Mid-West Delegation

Ohio sent a large delegation. Twenty-five exhibitors went from Cleveland, and they were joined by eighteen theatre owners from Columbus and Southern Ohio. Among those from Cleveland: Jules Schwartz, Homestead Theatre Company; Frank Gross, Superior and Grand Theatres; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Deutch, Sun Theatre; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Harwood, Lexington; Henry Lustig, S. Klinger and M. Berkowitz, of the Ambassador Amusement Company; Howard Reiff, of the Scoville, Essick and Reiff circuit; Sigmund Vermes, Eclair; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Horwitz, Olympia and Cedar Theatres; John Kalafat, Ohio Amusement Company; R. C. Steuve, Orpheum, Canton; J. Silverman, Altoona, Pa.; Joe Schagrin, Park, Youngstown; Mr. and Mrs. B. Marx and Mr. and Mrs. Grill.

St. Louis sent a delegation of twenty headed by Fred Wehrenberg, president of the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

The Michigan delegation left Sunday, May 23, from Detroit, at which time reservations had been made for President A. J. Kleist, Jr. and wife of Pontiac, Directors Glen A. Gross and wife of Battle Creek, John Niebes and wife and daughter of Detroit, Roy Adams of Mason, and Floyd Wadlow and wife of Detroit. Paul Krause of the Pastime Theatre, Detroit; H. M. Richey and wife as a delegate from the association, Mrs. W. H. Whitman.

From the Kansas City territory the delegates included: C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas-Missouri; Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meyn, Kansas City, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Hooper, Topeka, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wallace, Leavenworth, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Pattee, Lawrence, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Baker, Kansas City, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Frazier, Pittsburg, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Liggett, Kansas City, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Miller, Wichita, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Chambers, Wichita, Kas.

Texas sent about twelve delegates, headed by President H. A. Cole of the state organization.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Hays organization, went to the convention via Denver and Salt Lake City, in which cities he conferred with the Film Boards of Trade.

Eastern Delegation, on Special Train, Sees the Great West

ABOARD M. P. T. O. A. Special Train En Route to the Coast, Colorado Springs, May 26.—Lake Michigan's dampness over Chicago, replaced a few hours later by the hot winds of Kansas prairies, have been abandoned for the frost-biting 15,000 feet altitude of Pike's Peak. Palm Beach suits and flimsy gowns are being packed away while the larger traveling bags are being relieved of heavy ulsters and fur pieces. The pilgrimage to the West by theatre owners and their families of the East reaches the halfway mark.

So far the transcontinental tour has been a tremendous success. Unmarked by any incident except 100 per cent enthusiasm and the firmer conviction that the Seventh Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be the greatest from the standpoint of material fruition in the history of the national organization.

Accommodations on this special are par excellence. Nothing has been overlooked so far as the luxurious comforts of every conventionee are concerned. Business Manager Joseph M. Seider and Passenger Agent George Stanton, who arranged the complete tour with the New York Central, are deserving of the utmost credit. Almost every mile has recorded an acknowledgment of appreciation in this respect.

Everyone in the industry knows who is on this train and everyone knows what a royal send-off these box office pioneers of the Atlantic seaboard were given in the Grand Central on the afternoon of May 23rd. One of the outstanding events of the first meal was former President M. J. O'Toole's dissertation on his work as a newspaper man. The speech was a private communication to Nathan Yamins and his family but the writer, who was at an adjacent table, could not help but enjoy a little eavesdropping.

Business Manager Seider, his wife and two boys were the next to enjoy the first soup of the trip. National President Woodhull and his wife also enjoyed the soup. The president observing: "Between every mouthful there was a contract." Sydney Cohen, Lou Sagal, chairman of the board of directors and treasurer, respectively, selected seats on the sunny side of the train and looked longingly at passing golf-links. Joe Walsh, president of the Con-

Somewhere north of Albany, the train experienced its first unified manifestation of good fellowship. Somehow or another, Clinton Weyer, an A-1 insurance man, assumed the role of community song leader. His appointment was announced following the first get-together on the trip. ''Good Night Ladies'' terminated the program which was broadcast up and down the corridors of the entire train.

Just before pulling into Chicago, Dave Adams of New Hampshire, who is known as ''a theatre owner who has never missed a national convention,'' pulled out his watch. ''This old train is making pretty good time. She's going just sixty-one and one-half miles per hour,'' he declared.

In Chicago, after dinner at the Congress Hotel, the conventioneees split up, most of the crowd, however, reviewing the film theatres for which Chicago is so noted. Louis Kramer, director of publicity for Lubliner and Trinz, personally conducted some of the tourists to as many of the houses of that unit as could be seen before the New York Central train was switched to the Sante Fe road to continue the transcontinental trip. Just before midnight when the train pulled out of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. A. Julian Brylawski (the former is chairman of the administrative committee) stepped aboard, having taken a direct route from their home in Wahsington, D. C. The last newcomer was E. Thornton Kelly, head of the contact department. Mr. Kelly had left several days before the general entourage so as to take care of last minute arrangements for the other special trains conveying Mid-Western exhibitors and leaving later in the week. On the outskirts of Chicago the conventionees, led by President Woodhull, indulged in some community singing in the observation car. A real treat was provided by Mrs. Brylawski, who, without accompaniment, rendered several solos.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., May 27.—The M.P.T.O.A. Special crashed into a motor truck 20 miles north of Albuquerque this morning. The driver and truck were carried for half a mile on the pilot of the engine before the engineer could stop the train without injury to passengers. The driver was taken to Albuquerque and placed under the care of a physician, who said that he would probably live.

Checking Reactions to "Movie Season"

Psychological Effect of Campaigns is to Stimulate Public's Interest in Pictures and Attitude Toward Theatres

The Scene: Lobby of Family Theatre, Monroe, Michigan.

Time: Middle of December.

First Lady: (While waiting to get into the theatre, in conversation with her companion) ''Looks good, doesn't it'' (speaking of the picture they were about to see).

Second Lady: ''Fine, but haven't you noticed they have been having much better pictures this year.''

First Lady: ''Of course, but you know why, don't you. The picture people are trying to make this Greater Movie Season and I have noticed a marked improvement.''

The above is almost a verbatim report of what has happened not once, but several times, in several localities where theatre owners have put on aggressive Greater Movie Season Campaigns.

Whether pictures have actually improved this year or not, this is true, that the psychological effect on the public has been the creation of a new interest in pictures, a feeling that they have improved and a desire to see more of them. Such is the statement of Joseph R. Deniston of Monroe, Michigan, former President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, in commenting on the success of the Greater Movie Season Campaign of last year.

What greater endorsement of the idea could be given than the statements of such men as August J. Kleist, Jr., of Pontiac, Michigan, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, E. C. Beatty and W. S. Butterfield of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises of Michigan, George W. Trendle, General Manager of the Kunsky Theatrical Enterprises, Detroit, all theatre owners who invested last year large sums of money in an idea that turned out to be eminently successful. Smaller theatre owners commenting on the success of the Greater owners are just as enthusiastic.

Of course, Michigan is going to celebrate Greater Movie Season this year, like P. T. Barnum ''Bigger and Better Than Ever.''

Thirty Theatres Added to Universal Chain

DURING the month of April Universal added thirty new theatres to its chain, thus bringing the approximate total up to 350. It is expected that one thousand houses will be acquired during the next two years by the company in areas where Universal pictures are being shut out.

The foreign business of the company is also expected to show an increase of fifteen per cent during the present year.

Few Firms Incorporated in New York State

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York State at Albany during the past week revealed the following incorporators and capitalization: S. and L. Productions, Inc., $20,000, Edward Petigor, Nathan Raff, Leslie Herold, New York City; Ritzora Theatre, Inc., $1,000 and Demgo Theatre, Inc., $1,000, with E. F. Weigal, N. S. Cohen, L. Edenbaum, New York City; 1118 Jamaica Avenue Corporation, capitalization not stated, J. J. McGinty, K. L. Zimmerman, M. R. O'Shaughnessy, New York City.

United Artists Enter Theatre Field

Plan 20 Pre-release Houses to Replace Road Showing; Schenck, Shubert, Grauman, Pickford and Fairbanks Back Plan

The four persons who, in association with Joseph M. Schenck, are responsible for the organization of United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc. Left to right, they are: Sidney Grauman, president; Lee Shubert; Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford

TWENTY pre-release motion picture theatres, designed to give extended runs to United Artists product and replace the present plan of using legitimate theatres for pre-release showings, will be constructed by the United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., organized under the laws of Maryland by Joseph M. Schenck, Lee Shubert, Sidney Grauman, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

Definite locations for the houses have not been decided upon, but they will be erected only in cities large enough to support a house of such a type. Most of the houses will be of new construction, though a few may be leased. None of the Shubert legitimate houses are considered suitable, but the present Grauman houses will become part of the chain.

Sid Grauman, Pacific Coast theatre owner and showman, becomes President of United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., with Joseph M. Schenck as chairman of the board of directors. Grauman, with headquarters in New York City, will stage the presentations and lay out the general program of all the houses.

The banking interests involved are J. & W. Seligman & Co., who have associated Spencer, Trask & Co. and other bankers with them in a public offering of $4,000,000 of 7 per cent. Convertible Preferred stock, each share carrying a bonus of one share of common. The preferred stock is cumulative. Application is to be made to list the preferred and common stock on the N. Y. Stock Exchange.

A ten-year contract will be signed between United Artists Corporation and the U. A. Theatre Circuit whereby the new chain obtains preferential rights to pre-release the United Artists' product.

The houses will have an average seating capacity of 1,800. Local capital will augment that of the new corporation in each city. Sites are being considered in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Boston, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis and Cleveland. Performances will be continuous, instead of the two-a-day policy of pre-release showings in "legit" houses. The top admission price will vary, with the size of city, from $2.65 down to $1.10.

Joseph M. Schenck, when interviewed this week, stated that he hoped to have all of the theatres completed within two years, and to have the first open by next April. It is likely, he said, that the first will be erected in New York City.

"We have been offered a site at 46th Street and Broadway," he admitted, "but it is unlikely that we will take it, as the type of theatre in which Mr. Grauman specializes demands plenty of space, making it desirable to build where realty values are not so high—probably on Sixth or Eighth Avenue."

He emphasized that the new move does not mean that United Artists are entering the first-run theatre field.

"These will be pre-release theatres only," he said, "and the showings in them will not interfere with the regular first-runs. Rather, the first-runs will benefit by the prestige and publicity which the pictures have received during their pre-release showing at advanced prices in our theatre. The run in our theatres will simply be substituted for the present road-show engagements in legitimate houses.

"When a picture opens in a legitimate theatre, it attracts a public which does not ordinarily go to pictures. We hope to do the same with our houses. Many of these people, who now go to pictures rarely if ever, will thus be gradually led to become regular picture patrons and other houses will benefit as well."

Bookings of the new circuit will not necessarily be confined to United Artists' product, Schenck stated.

"United Artists pictures will make up the backbone of the program," he said, "but we will always be open to exceptional product from any company whatsoever. If, for instance, we had had these theatres in operation when 'The Iron Horse' was made, I should have made Mr. Fox a proposition to pre-release it in our houses. It is impossible to say at this time how many pictures will be needed. Houses in the smaller cities will need more pictures than those in the larger cities, where runs will be longer. Engagements of a picture will open simultaneously in as many cities as possible, but this again will depend upon how other pictures stand up."

Except in unusual instances, it is understood that the pictures will be played by the circuit on a percentage basis, with theatre expenses, depreciation and preferred dividends provided for first from the box-office receipts.

Schenck will leave for the West Coast next week, accompanied by his wife, Norma Talmadge. He will return to New York in about six weeks, accompanied by Grauman.

Details of U. A. Theatre Incorporation

PAPERS of incorporation for the United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., formed in Baltimore, Md., on Saturday, May 22, have been approved by the Maryland State Tax Commission, and the resident agent for the $64,000,000 amusement corporation is J. Bannister Hall, Jr., attorney.

Sid Grauman is named as president and Joseph M. Schenck as one of the directors, the others being Bertram J. Laysack, Elliott Paley, Harry D. Buckley, Dennis F. O'Brien, Edward J. Clarke, Chester A. Olbert, Charles D. Berg and Millard J. Bloomer, Jr. The incorporators named are Douglas H. Rose, Jr., Leslie E. Mihm and R. Dorsey Watkins.

The State of Maryland was paid $1,980 incorporation tax. There are 40,000 shares of preferred stock at $100 and 600,000 shares of common which have no par value.

Endert Elected Seattle Film Board of Trade President

George P. Endert, manager of the Seattle Famous Players-Lasky exchange, was elected president of the Seattle Film Board of Trade at a special meeting of that body held in the Northwest city last week. He succeeds Jack Sullivan, former president, whose resignation as branch manager of the Fox exchange was announced last week.

In addition to the election of a new president, the Board voted gifts to two of its retiring members; Mr. Sullivan was the recipient of a handsome thermos set, presented as he left this city for service at the Fox exchange in Los Angeles. William H. Drummond, former manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange, who also severed his connections with the local office recently, was presented with a fine gladstone bag.

First National Puts Out Million Dollar Bond Issue for Studio Construction

THROUGH New York and St. Louis banking houses a million-dollar bond issue has been offered by First National Properties, Inc., in first mortgage 6½ per cent. serial gold bonds (closed mortgage, to be dated May 1, 1926, and to mature serially, May 1, 1927 through 1936.

These bonds will be the direct obligations of a corporation which has been incorporated under the laws of California as a subsidiary of First National Pictures, Inc., and which has acquired 62 acres of land at Burbank, California, just outside of Los Angeles, on which there is now being erected a modern plant for the production of motion pictures, which plant will be leased to First National Pictures, Inc., for a period of ten years. The name of this corporation is being changed to First National Properties, Inc., and either that name or some other appropriate name will be used.

Shorts Now in "Movie Season"

Plans for Annual Drive Expanded so as to Include Short Subject Association

AT a meeting last Friday of the short subject producers and distributors, called by the Will H. Hays office, plans were laid which will bring short subjects into the nation-wide campaign accompanying Greater Movie Season. The meeting was called at the suggestion of Fred C. Quimby, Fox short subject manager.

It was agreed that the Hays organization would strive to make up for its initial omission by sending out special stories to its various lists of trade, fan and daily newspapers and would in many other ways point out to all the great importance of the one and two-reel pictures.

Among the other methods that will be employed to boost the short subjects are:

Stories from leading humorists as to their reaction to comedies to be sent out to the hundreds of newspapers which will support the campaign.

Cuts setting forth the entertainment possibilities of comedies, scenics, news reels and other pictures.

Suggestions that producers have noted film comedians make personal appearances.

Suggestions that exhibitors display in their theatre lobbies sundry matters dealing with such pictures.

Supplementing this general publicity, each short subject company will publicize its own product individually. This will be done by sending to the various exchange centers publicity stories, posters and other material to be readily obtainable by exhibitors.

Mr. Beatty was chairman of the meeting. The following were present: Joseph J. O'Neill, assistant to Will Hays; Fred C. Quimby, Fox short subject sales manager; George Roberts, Fox assistant short sales manager; Nat Rothstein, Universal Pictures special publicity representative; Gordon F. White, Educational Pictures publicity manager; Hyatt Daab, publicity manager for Film Booking Offices, and Jack Pegler, special representative of the Greater Movie Season campaign.

A. E. Installs Foreign Dept.

Sidney Lehman Placed in Charge of New Division by Price and E. J. Smith

OSCAR Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, and E. J. Smith, general sales manager, have appointed Sidney Lehman to head the new foreign department recently installed, in line with the company's policy of expansion.

Price, who has been active in the development of an improved foreign market for the releases of his company expects his firm will have a hundred per cent foreign representation within a short time.

General Sales Manager Smith, who at one time was director general of European activities for Universal, has made a thorough study of the stability and dependability of foreign distributors in every quarter of the globe.

"The fact that our productions are not made with an eye to pleasing any particular type of audience," said Smith, "makes them especially suitable for widespread distribution. The primary purpose of our pictures is to entertain and after all the essentials of entertainment do not vary greatly throughout the world. We have taken the likes and dislikes of every type of audience into consideration in forming our production policies and because of this are marketing a product that everyone can enjoy regardless of where they reside."

Lehman has gained a thorough knowledge of the European market over a period of ten years of active contact, having been assistant manager of the Universal foreign department, which position he held prior to his appointment as head of Associated's foreign division.

Cranfield and Clarke Head Resigns

Jobyna Ralston will play opposite Lloyd, as her contract with the comedian calls for another picture.

Robert A. Golden is again assistant director while the scenario department will be headed by Ted Wilde in association with John Grey, Seymour Brown, Howard Green and Tom Crizer. Walter Lundin and Henry Kohler will handle the cameras.

"Sorrows of Satan" Main Scenes Filmed

Work on Latest D. W. Griffith Production for Paramount Almost Finished; Large Cast and Many Elaborate Sets Utilized

D. W. GRIFFITH, at the Paramount Long Island studio, is in the final stages of production on "The Sorrows of Satan," a picture which, according to Paramount executives and to the director himself, will rank as one of the finest in the list of outstanding attractions which Griffith in his career has made, among them "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

Cameras, under the supervision of Harry Fischbeck, have been grinding constantly on the special since March 1. At the present moment all scenes in which principals of the cast appear have been shot. Very important sequences, fantastical in nature and portraying heaven and hell, remain to be transferred to celluloid. In these scenes, Griffith is assisted by Norman-Bel Geddes, scenic designer, and Fred Waller, a master of cinematic illusions.

Between March 1 and May 19, 22 sets were used in the main course of production. These sets ranged from a cheap boarding house to a gorgeous hotel dining-room, a London street scene and an elaborate garden on an English estate. So large were some of these sets that on several occasions it was necessary to telescope them, building one within another.

More than 2,000 persons were employed to work in these various sets as extra players, in addition to the principal actors, Adolphe Menjou, Ricardo Cortez, Carol Dempster, Lya de Putti and Ivan Lebedeff.

After weeks of consultation with various writers Griffith finally accepted Forrest Halsey's screen arrangement of Marie Corelli's novel. He outlined the plan to his art director, Charles M. Kirk, who has designed the settings for Griffith productions since "Way Down East."

When he outlined a dining-room in a first-class hotel he simply told Kirk he wanted an impressive room done in good taste where players would enter in the foreground from both left and right and descend stairs to the main dining floor. He also indicated to his chief cameraman and assistant that he would like to have an elaborate entertainment for the dining-room guests.

Kirk outlined a pencil sketch which Griffith approved. A cardboard model was then constructed. When the room was completed it was 200 x 120 feet with large windows, Corinthian columns and was a composite of Italian renaissance painted in soft tones. Paul Oscard, in charge of presentations for Publix Theatres Corporation, secured and trained a group of women dancers for the cabaret entertainment.

While Griffith was working in this set, he conceived the idea of using a part of the set for scenes in another restaurant. The day the big scenes were finished in the dining-room a force of decorators re-designed one end of it and repainted it for another sequence of the story showing a meeting in another restaurant.

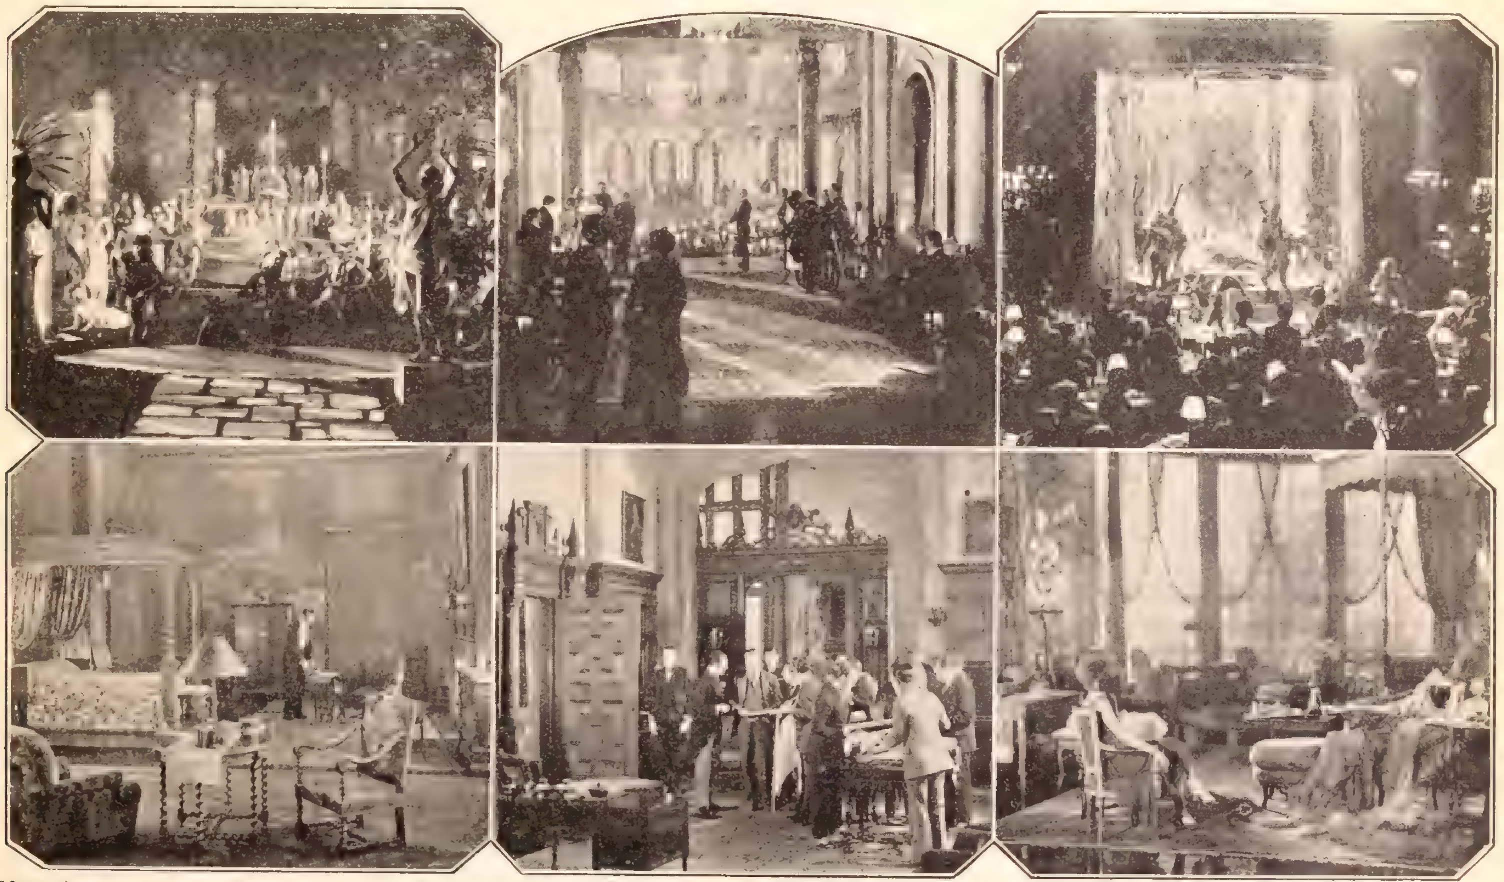
While this was being done, Griffith had directed scenes showing the departure of the young novelist from his shabby rooms and Mavis Claire's grief. This had given him an idea for the exterior street scene of the same sequence.

To finish this scene it was necessary to remove a big exterior set from the back lot. In five days the fronts of 30 buildings had been put up and painted and plastered, and a street had been paved. The casting director had engaged and costumed 68 men and women for this street scene the first day. On four subsequent days 58, 51, 32 and 49 players were engaged, costumed and rehearsed for the remaining action.

In addition to directing the scenes as they were made, Griffith was viewing film at night and visualizing a big garden fete which was described at great length in Miss Corelli's novel. He summoned Kirk, told him what he wanted, and four days later a force of designers and carpenters working night and day had produced a magnificent garden 220 x 120 feet on the main stage of the studio without interfering with four other productions then in progress.

Work began in this set at one end and worked toward the other. As fast as part of it was finished the set was torn down and an impressive Georgian hall, with staircase, was erected in its place. By the time Griffith had finished this sequence, the interior of Lady Sybill's mansion was waiting for him.

This was on May 14. Four days later all camera work requiring the use of large numbers of players had been completed. So that he would have pictures from all angles, Griffith frequently used six or eight cameras simultaneously. Nearly 600,000 feet of film was used in this way.



Magnificent settings and scenic investiture incorporated in D. W. Griffith's latest production for Paramount, "The Sorrows of Satan." About two thousand people, in addition to the principal players, were used in the filming of the big scenes of this production

Fox Delivering 1925-26 Product Strictly in Accord with Schedule

WITH the completion of all pictures on the current season's program definitely in sight, Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, who has spent the past few months on the Coast supervising work at the studios, has notified the home offices of the company in New York that the organization is assured of completing the year with the enviable record of having lived up to every letter of its contracts with exhibitors in delivering, as per schedule, all productions for which they signed.

The significance of this achievement by the organization, a feat requiring the perfect functioning of all departments of the company, from scenario staffs to the exchange branches, is pointed out in the letter from Mr. Sheehan in Los Angeles to James R. Grainger, general sales manager, in New York.

The letter of Mr. Sheehan follows in part and is self-explanatory of the accomplishment of his company:

"We sold them (the theatre owners) 35 special pictures one year ago. By July 1, we will have delivered each one of the 35 pictures as contracted and sold, ON TIME. In addition thereto, we have given them 'SANDY,' one extra release, which they were free to buy or pass up. Therefore, we have kept faith, and delivered pictures in accordance with our contract and promise.

"We sold them seven Tom Mix and Buck Jones' pictures. They were delivered on time, as contracted.

"We sold and contracted 26 varieties subjects. On July 1, we will have delivered each one sold under contract on date specified, and have kept faith in accordance with contract and promises.

"We will deliver 104 issues of Fox News as contracted.

"We sold under contract eight Van Bibber Comedies, eight O. Henry comedies, eight Married Life Series pictures, twenty Imperial Comedies. We have delivered all, except one Imperial, which will be shipped next week; and, by June 15, we will have delivered 44 two-reel comedies, which we sold them one year ago under contract for delivery during the year, and we have kept faith, carried out our contract and kept every promise."

Two Additions to Warner Sales Staff

Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution for Warner Bros., announced last week the addition of two new members of the Warner Bros. sales staff, namely, Abe E. Fischer as Midwest division manager to embrace the territory of Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City and St. Loius, and Louis J. Blumberg as manager of the Minneapolis branch.

Fischer has been, for the past eight years, Minneapolis manager for Metro and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and president of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade for five years. Blumberg, for the past several years, has been associated with Fischer as assistant manager of the Minneapolis branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Rothstein in Production Post

Leaves Soon for Universal City to Direct Work of New Department

NAT ROTHSTEIN, who recently rejoined the Universal Company, will start June 2 for Universal City, where he will undertake a new feature of production work as an exploitation specialist devoting his entire time to the development of tie-up possibilities and advertising ideas for incorporation into productions during the course of their preliminary work and actual filming at the studio.

For the past three months Rothstein has been preparing to take over the work he will execute at Universal City, where he will work directly under Henry MacRae, director general, and in cooperation with the scenario and production departments.

It is Carl Laemmle's plan to have Rothstein inject the exploitation angles, which are so important a consideration in the exhibition of pictures at the theatres, into Universal pictures before they are put in production. Heretofore the home office staffs of nearly all distributing companies have worked up the exploitation ideas for productions after their completion. The system which Universal will introduce at the studio under Rothstein's direction will seek to improve the publicity values of films from the standpoint of practical theatre exploitation by working up ideas in advance of the filming and giving them definite association with the pictures in a manner that will not interfere with the proper artistic development and treatment of the scenarios.

Since he first joined Universal, at which time he left an established advertising business in Chicago, Nat Rothstein has devoted his dynamic energies to putting over motion pictures. He attained marked success in this field, his accomplishments in exploiting such pictures as "In the Name of the Law," "West Bound Limited," "The Mail Man" and "The Third Alarm" with national tie-ups standing as conspicuous achievements in motion picture showmanship.

Immediately upon his arrival in Los Angeles, Rothstein will attend the meetings of the M. P. T. O. A., then convening in that city. He will be the official representative of the Universal Sales Force, personally representing Mr. Laemmle and the three Universal Sales Directors, Lou B. Metzger, Earl Kramer and Ralph B. Williams, now in the East.

Sunday Showing Hostilities Continue in Manson

The Sunday movie fight between R. L. Stewart, exhibitor at Manson, Iowa, and the Rev. J. G. Waterman of Manson, is still heatedly in progress. Twice the theatre has been operated on Sunday in spite of the Sunday closing law and each time the Rev. Mr. Waterman has filed suit against the exhibitor.

Another Iowa exhibitor who has been fighting the Sunday closing law is Glenn Miller, of the Strand Theatre, at Liberty. He financed an election to decide whether Liberty should have Sunday shows. The election was lost to the Blue Law program by a vote of 394 to 297.

Doug and Mary may Start Jointly in Story by "Miracle" Author Under Reinhardt

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, recently in Berlin with his wife, Mary Pickford, has had several conferences with Karl Vollmoeller, author of "The Miracle," according to the Berlin correspondent of THE NEWS. Fairbanks told the press that Vollmoeller is adapting an old stage idea of his for a picture in which he and Miss Pickford may star, to which, she added, that they would like to have Max Reinhardt direct them in this production. They have now gone to Venice, where Reinhardt is taking a short vacation, to confer with him on details of their joint plan.

Although nothing definite has been decided upon, apparently, Fairbanks also stated to the press that most of the exteriors of the picture would have to be made in Europe, probably during the present trip.

Fund Started for Permanent Memorial Golf Trophy in Honor of Danny

AT the suggestion of Ralph A. Kohn, member of the Board of Directors of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, a fund has been started to create a permanent memorial trophy at the Film Golf Tournament in honor of the late Joe Dannenberg, Editor of Film Daily. Mr. Kohn starts the subscription list with a check for $50.

In his letter to William A. Johnston, Editor of Motion Picture News, Mr. Kohn writes: "For the last few years, you and I have been among those who have enjoyed the Film Golf Tournaments that were created and carried through by the late Joe Dannenberg. It is about time for the playing of the first tournament since his demise and all of us will feel his absence keenly. It seems that this is the proper time for us, in some way, to create a permanent memorial trophy in his honor, and I am taking the liberty to enclose my check, to your order, for $50 toward such a fund."

The Late Joe Dannenberg

Following Mr. Kohn's suggestion, Motion Picture News will be glad to receive subscriptions to this fund, and it is suggested that those who wish to contribute to the memorial send in their checks to William A. Johnston at once, so that the nature of the trophy may be decided upon and the first award made at the Tournament June 8.

The News is happy to subscribe $50 to the fund in honor of this splendid newspaper man and editor, who was a real constructive force in the industry and whose passing was keenly regretted by the whole film world.

After Mr. Kohn's suggestion had been received, it developed that Jack Alicoate, Publisher of Film Daily, had planned himself to present a Gold Cup as a permanent memorial to Danny, but inasmuch as the movement for the memorial came spontaneously from the industry, Mr. Alicoate has decided to give up his plan. He asks Motion Picture News to announce that he is contributing $50, in line with other contributions already made.

Informed by a News representative at the Hotel Astor Wednesday of the Danny memorial, Dr. A. H. Giannini, prominent banker, and Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, immediately contributed $50 each toward the fund.

Australia Banned Only 68 Films During Past Year

According to a report issued by the Commonwealth Censorship Board of Australia, 1324 films were passed, eliminations were ordered in 371 and 68 were rejected. 1,763 pictures were imported and 1,555 of the total came from the United States. 146 was England's quota, and all other countries combined came to 22.

Practically every variety of subject was included in the report. Less than one half or 721 of the imported films were features. Of these 674 came from the United States, 25 from England and 22 from other countries. The footage totaled 5,572,92 feet; with extra prints, 24,021,778 feet. The value is listed as £181,678 or $882,967 in United States currency. £130,895 was collected as import duty, the duty being 1 and ½d. per foot on all films except British which pay 1d. per foot.

The report goes on to say that of all advertising matter coming into the country the press books cause the most violations. It also notes that there has been a great improvement in film advertising in Australia.

Quebec Censor Board Makes Interesting Report

The annual report of the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors, submitted at Montreal on May 6th for the fiscal year ending April 30, makes highly interesting reading in view of the censorship situation in Quebec Province and because of the flare-up between film producers and the Quebec authorities.

The report shows that nine per cent. of all pictures examined during the 12 months was rejected; the number modified after examination was 22 per cent. and the total passed without change was 69 per cent.

During the year, 2,224 subjects were reviewed by the Quebec board, comprising 6,708,000 feet of film. The number of subjects condemned was 204, totalling 1,057,000 feet. Subjects modified or reconstructed totalled 492, or 2,574,000 feet of celluloid. The number of releases accepted was 1,528, or a footage of 3,077,000.

These figures show that pictures comprising considerably less than half the aggregate footage examined without alteration of any kind. Some of the pictures changed or having deletions lost much of their original sense, it has been claimed. Not long ago it was reported that one feature of 8,000 feet was cut 2,000 feet by the Quebec Board of Censors.

William Sistrom, P. D. C. Studio Executive,

To the public the stars who actually appear on the screen, are, at present, the all-important factor. To the exhibitor who makes and maintains his reputation by purveying good entertainment in an original manner, the unseen stars behind the screen have, at least, equal if not greater values.

The intrinsic value of every production is, in its final box office analysis, determined by the genius and skill of its many contributing factors. And exhibitors will find in this fact a new and unlimited source of invaluable exploitation material.

For instance: Under modern methods of picture making, a supervisor has become extremely important. The supervisor's work starts with the motion picture from its inception as an undeveloped idea. He supervises its writing by a capable author, keeps close watch upon it as it is being directed and finally cuts and titles the picture and makes it a finished product.

In the De Mille and Metropolitan organization we are fortunate in having an extremely able group of supervisors. Bertram Millhauser, Jack Cunningham, Elmer Harris, Will M. Ritchey, C. Gardner Sullivan, F. McGrew Willis—all of whom have succeeded splendidly during the last year and have been given increased responsibilities for 1926. In addition, Beulah Marie Dix is supervising one picture and Jeanie Macpherson will likewise give her talents in a supervisory capacity to, at least, one production this year in addition to her regular duties as special writer for Cecil B. De Mille.

The work of these supervisors during the past year is the best sort of public recommendation for the pictures that they will supervise this year. Certainly, it would seem highly advisable from a box office standpoint to herald the fact that the supervisor of such past successes as, "Three Faces East," "Braveheart," Red Dice," "Silence," "Rocking Moon," "The Prince of Pilsen" and "Hell's Highroad" is the supervisor of the production being shown current in any theatre.

Jeanie Macpherson, who is credited with the writing of over thirty box office successes, heads our list of staff writers which also includes: Rex Taylor, Jack Jevne, Charles Logue, Beulah Marie Dix, Jane Murfin, Harold Shumate, Garrett Fort, Douglas Doty, Lenore J. Coffee, Anthony Coldewey, Gladys Unger, Marion Orth, Margaretta Tuttle and Zelda Sears. Negotiations for the services of other writers, equally prominent, are now in progress.

Then comes the dressing of each production. The settings of a picture contribute a large percentage to box office intake. The pictorial backgrounds allure, quite as much as the action and each is a distinct and distinguishing reflection of the individual artistry of an art director.

In our De Mille and Metropolitan organization we have recognized this in securing the services of such men as Paul Iribe, special art director for Mr. De Mille, who has just returned from Paris to assume responsibility for Mr. De Mille's next big picture with Mitchell Leisen as his associate. Max Parker and Charles Cadwallader, art directors at the De Mille and Metropolitan Studios respectively, are as excellent as they are efficient in their calling.

Stresses Importance of Production Experts

The matter of costuming has an appeal particularly its own. Here there is a tremendous appeal to women and this responsibility is splendidly handled by Adrian, the famous designer who came to us from his successes in "The Music Box Revue" and previously notable costuming efforts in Paris and other European style capitals.

The most marvelous acting and the cleverest stories can easily be ruined by poor photography and here we also need stars of the photographic profession.

Peverell Marley, special cameraman for Cecil B. De Mille, has shown his worth in "The Volga Boatman," "The Road to Yesterday" and the Rupert Julian production, "Silence." Arthur Miller proved his worth in photographing "The Coming of Amos." He, too, is one of the great artists in the business. Lucien Adriot came with William K. Howard from Paramount and has splendidly handled the photographic details of the William K. Howard pictures.

Norbit Brodine excelled himself in "Paris at Midnight"; Charles G. Clark and Joe La Shelle in "Rocking Moon" and other George Melford productions. Devereaux Jennings, Gus Peterson, Alex Phillip, Hal Rothen, Dave Kesson, Georges Benoit, Ray June, James C. Van Trees, J. Badarracco—all these clever cameramen and a number of others contributed their talents to the 1925-26 releases of Producers Distributing Corporation and they will be entrusted with the recording of our 1926-27 group of attractions.

Executive direction of the studio is always an extremely important factor. I am very fortunate in having closely associated with me Louis Goodstadt, assistant general manager, whose wide knowledge of the business of attracting artists to the screen makes him an extremely valuable factor in both De Mille and Metropolitan productions.

The skill of the director always has been and always will be of inestimable importance. Producers Distributing Corporation is, I feel, rarely fortunate in the directors who have been attracted to its banner. Cecil B. De Mille, of course, needs no introduction. Rupert Julian, Joseph Henabery, William K. Howard, Scott Sidney, Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, Robert Thornby, Paul Sloane, George Melford, Frank Urson, Frank Reicher, are men of real achievements. As general manager of the De Mille and Metropolitan Studios I am very proud of the unseen stars who build the stories which our players later bring into life on the screen.

Mayer Finishes Contact Trip

M-G-M Vice-President Back in New York After Meeting Many Exhibitors

LOUIS B. MAYER, Vice-President of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in charge of production, returned to New York this week after a six-thousand mile trip throughout the Eastern States whither he went to discuss M-G-M's program for the coming season with exhibitors. Mayer met and addressed approximately two thousand exhibitors during his tour of the cities which included Buffalo, Chicago, Boston, New York and Washington.

Mayer's trip was marked by enthusiastic receptions by exhibitors as well as civic officials, the heads of fire and police departments turning out to welcome him as a tribute to his activities in fire prevention work and his picturization of "The Fire Brigade" now in work.

While in Washington, Mayer attended a luncheon in his honor at the Mayflower Hotel and among the speakers who paid him tribute were Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Admiral Shumaker, U. S. N., Major General Le Jeune, Commandant of the U. S. Marines, Representatives Thomas Kahn of California, Connery of Massachusetts and T. Weber Wilson of Mississippi.

In Boston, Mayer's visit took on all the aspects of an "Old Home Week," due to the years he spent there as a theatre owner and exchange man.

He will confer with home office officials of M-G-M during the next few days after which he will return to California to launch his new producing program. Accompanying him on his Eastern tour was Pete Smith, director of publicity on the West Coast.

Among the home office executives who accompanied Mayer to a number of cities visited were Felix Feist, in charge of distribution, Howard Dietz, director of publicity and advertising in the home office, William Rogers, Eastern sales representative, Edward Saunders, Western sales representative and William Ferguson, exploitation manager.

Vitaphone Set to "Don Juan"

Warner President Arranging Broadway Premiere of Latest Barrymore Vehicle

THE Vitaphone, the musical synchronization device controlled by Warner Brothers, will be used for the first time in connection with the Broadway premiere of "Don Juan," the latest John Barrymore starring vehicle, announced Harry M. Warner, president of the company on his arrival this week in New York with a print of the picture.

Warner Brothers have leased the Manhattan Opera House in New York City to be used as a studio for the synchronization of music with their pictures and it is here that the music for "Don Juan" will be applied to the film.

Harry Warner, who is here primarily in connection with the showing of the picture, announced that in line with the policy of the company three Warner Road Show Pictures would be playing simultaneously on Broadway this Summer. Two of these will be the Barrymore picture and "The Better 'Ole," in which Syd Chaplin is starred. No theatre, as yet, has been selected to house the Barrymore picture.

Warner will remain in New York until the latter part of July when he will sail for Europe to complete plans whereby Warners will produce pictures in England, France and Germany.

First National's June List

Schedule Includes One from Colleen Moore and "Sweet Daddies" from Levee

FIRST NATIONAL will release Colleen Moore's latest starring production, "Ella Cinders," on June 6th, "Sweet Daddies" on the 13th, "The Sporting Lover" on the 20th, and "Miss Nobody," starring Anna Q. Nilsson, on June 27th. These are some of the productions promised exhibitors by First National to avoid the Summer business slump.

"Ella Cinders," the Colleen Moore vehicle, is based on the cartoon strip by William Conselman and Charlie Plumb. Alfred E. Green directed, and Lloyd Hughes has the leading male role in support.

M. C. Levee produced "Sweet Daddies" with Charlie Murray, Jack Mulhall, George Sidney, Vera Gordon, Gaston Glass and Jobyna Ralston in the cast. Alfred A. Santell directed. Conway Tearle is starred in "The Sporting Lover," a picturization of "Good Luck," a Drury Lane melodrama which ran in London for two seasons. E. M. Asher produced and Alan Hale directed a cast comprising Barbara Bedford, Ward Crane, Arthur Rankin and Johnny Fox.

"Miss Nobody," in which Anna Q. Nilsson is starred, was directed by Lambert Hilyer. Included in the cast are Walter Pidgeon, Mitchell Lewis, Clyde Cook, Arthur Stone, Louise Fazenda, Jed Prouty, Carrie Ranklin, George Nichols and Anders Randolph.

P. D. C. Now Planning 1927-28 Program

CHARLES BEAHAN, head of the Eastern story department of Producers Distributing Corporation, departed from New York this week for Los Angeles, where he will confer with Cecil B. De Mille, Al Christie and Mrs. E. K. Adams, Chief of the West Coast story department, on material for the 1927-28 program.

Film and Theatre Have Simultaneous Opening

"THE VOLGA BOATMEN" had its West Coast premiere at the new Carthay Circle Theatre in Los Angeles. This was the initial offering of the theatre and both, according to reports, proved successful.

John C. Flinn of Producers Distributing Corporation received a personal telegram from Cecil B. De Mille which said: "Opening here in New Carthay Circle a decided success for both picture and theatre."

Filming Finished on "So This Is Paris"

Ernst Lubitsch has completed the photography on "So This Is Paris," his last program production for Warner Brothers and he will now start on the special productions to be made for the new season.

"So This Is Paris" is an adaptation of the original story by Henri Neilhac and Ludovic Halevy. Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller have the leading roles and the supporting cast includes Lilyan Tashman, Andre Baranger and Myrna Loy.

Leads Chosen for "Romance of a Million Dollars"

J. G. Bachmann, president of Famous Attractions Corporation, has chosen Glenn Hunter and Jacqueline Logan to play the leads in "The Romance of a Million Dollars" the first scenes of which were shot this week at the Tec-Art studio under the direction of Tom Terriss.

Edward Laemmle Picks His Next "U" Picture

Edward Laemmle has selected "Held By the Law" as his next directorial effort for Universal. Casting will start as soon as Charles Kenyon has completed the script. It will be a sequel to "Outside the Law," the five-year-old picture which Universal recently revived.

Agnes Ayres Returns in "Son of the Sheik"

In "The Son of the Sheik," Agnes Ayres will appear opposite Rudolph Valentino after a five-year separation since "The Sheik."

The new film is a sequel to "The Sheik" and was written by the same author, E. M. Hull.

Monta Bell to Direct Norma Shearer's Next "Upstage"

When Norma Shearer has finished "The Warning Sex." Her next starring picture will be "Upstage," a story by Walter de Leon. It will be directed by Monta Bell.

Columbia Pictures Signs Billie Dove

COLUMBIA PICTURES CORPORATION has signed Billy Dove to appear in the screen version of the latest Louis Joseph Vance series, "The Lone Wolf Returns."

Billie Dove

Preparations are now being made on the picture which will have Bert Lytell in the role of the "Lone Wolf." Ralph Ince, one of Columbia's recent acquisitions, will direct the production.

Another Story Purchased for Colleen Moore

John McCormick, general manager of First National production on the West Coast, has acquired another story for Colleen Moore. It is "It Could Have Happened" an original story by Jerome N. Wilson. This is the fifth story for Miss Moore, the others being "Delicatessen," "Twinkletoes," "Naughty but Nice" and "Orchids and Ermine."

"Delicatessen" is now in production with Alfred E. Green directing. It will be ready for release in August.

Casting Completed for "The "Amateur Gentleman"

The complete cast for the Richard Barthelmess feature, "The Amateur Gentleman" which has been in production for two weeks with Sidney Olcott directing, has been announced. Dorothy Dunbar supports the star and others in the company are Gardner James, Nigel Barrie, Brandon Hurst, Erik Arnold, Edwards Davis, Billie Bennett, Herbert Grimwood, Gino Corrade, Sidney de Gray and John Peters.

Lilie Haywood prepared the treatment and scenario.

F. B. O. Releases "Heavy Parade," Fat Men Comedy

"The Heavy Parade," the tenth issue in a series of fat men comedies by Joe Rock, produced for Standard Cinema Corporation, will be released by F. B. O. this month.

The picture, as the title indicates, is a burlesque of "The Big Parade," with the three "fatties," Alexander, "Kewpie" Ross and Hilliard Karr in the limelight. Lois Boyd is in the cast. The picture was filmed under the direction of Gil Pratt.

"Ham" Hamilton in Shape for New Series

F. B. O. Fills Stock Company

List of Players Includes Present Stars and Several New Additions

IN addition to other preparations for the new season, Film Booking Offices has completed its line-up of stock players at the Hollywood studio, which will make its feature productions for the new year with the exception of the Gold Bond specials which will be made with special casts.

The list includes: Evelyn Brent, Fred Thomson, Tom Tyler, Alberta Vaughn, George O'Hara, Bob Custer, each of whom will head their own units making feature productions; Al Cooke, Kit Guard, Grant Withers, Johnny Gough, Dorothy Dunbar, Margaret Morris, Jack Luden, a recent Paramount Screen School graduate whose services also are available to Famous Players-Lasky, little Frankie Darro, who plays with Tom Tyler in his Westerns, and Adamae Vaughn.

George O'Hara, who has been added to the stock company and who will star in a series of six feature productions, began his career on the F. B. O. lot, appearing in many of its featurettes, and has since risen to a high position in leading roles.

Alberta Vaughn comes out this year as a full-fledged star at the head of her own unit. She will make six pictures on the new program. Jack Luden appeared opposite Evelyn Brent in "The Jade Cup," and will have the leading juvenile role in the "Bill Grimm's Progress" series of new featurettes; he will appear opposite Margaret Morris.

Dorothy Dunbar has made one picture under the F. B. O. banner and has been loaned to Richard Barthelmess for his next picture.

WARNER BROTHERS' portable radio station, 6XBR, which started on a tour of the country on May 4th, is attracting considerable attention in the cities through which it is passing.

Frank A. Cassidy, showman and exploiteer, who is out in advance of the station, reports that the Board of Education of Red Bluff, California, anticipating the coming of the station, ordered the schools closed for a day that the children might see just how the radio operated. It was the first time in the history of the California city that the schools were ordered closed for such purpose.

As part of the official program at Red Bluff, one of the schools provided an orchestra which performed over the radio, later receiving many letters from around the countryside praising its work.

The 6XBR successfully negotiated the mountain passes in the rough country of Northern California and is operating this week in Oregon and Washington, from where the same enthusiastic returns are forthcoming. At the present time sixty-six cities have been booked for the tour of the portable station with additional demands from exhibitors everywhere.

Filming Round the World Tour

Universal-Jacoby Producing Features with Unit Now on Second Leg of Six Months Trip

THE round-the-world tour of a production unit which will film three feature pictures in the various lands visited, a project which Carl Laemmle is sponsoring, started on the second leg of the globe girdling journey on Wednesday of this week. The unit departed on the Sixaola of the United Fruit Line for Kingston, Jamaica, which island is to be the "Equailidor" in "The Isle of Forbidden Kisses," one of the trio of features, during the six months' tour.

The company, consisting of ten persons under the leadership of George Jacoby, the director who made "Quo Vadis," arrived in New York Sunday on the Belgenland.

There are five players. Jack Trevor is the lead, George Alexander, the comedian, and Stewart Rome, the heavy. Elga Brink plays the adventurer's roles and Marietta Millner, the ingenues.

The first stop will be Kingston, Jamaica. From there they go to Cuba, New Orleans, the Apache Trail, The Grand Canyon, Los Angeles, Universal City, San Francisco, Hawaii, Japan, China, Manchuria and back to Europe via the trans-Siberian Railroad.

The pictures will be distributed by Universal and will be known as Jacoby-Universal Productions.

T.O.C.C. Members Form Booking Combine

AT a meeting of a group of exhibitors held at the offices of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce on May 20, the owners of 133 theatres subscribed to the formation of a Film Service Corporation.

The corporation is a booking combine of independent circuits and has been under consideration for several months. It is understood the exhibitors subscribing to the plan will contribute five per cent of their gross to the maintenance of the buying office, and distributors with whom business is done will contribute the same. The combine, according to present plans, will control 300 to 400 days.

With Florence Vidor's first Paramount starring picture, "Love's Magic," just completed, Director William Wellman has started preparation for the filming of "Wings," the roadshow production which will feature the part played by airplanes in the World War.

It is hoped to start production at the new Lasky studio on June 15. Practically all exteriors will be taken at San Antonio, Tex. Clara Bow is the only member of the cast selected.

Scott Sidney has been assigned to direct.

Three on F. B. O. June List

Six Short Subjects Included in Release Schedule; One from Talmadge

THREE feature-length productions and six short subjects are listed for release in June by Film Booking Offices. There will be no Gold Bond special on this month's schedule as the next "Bigger Than Barnum's" is scheduled for August distribution.

The first of the feature releases for June is "The Better Man," starring Richard Talmadge as an English lord, masquerading as a servant. Clifford Howard and Burke Jenkins wrote the story and the supporting cast includes Ene Gregory, who plays the female lead, John Steppling, Margaret Campbell, Herbert Prior, Charles Hill Mailes and Percy Williams. The picture will be released on the sixth.

A Fred Thomson starring vehicle, "The Two-Gun Man" will be released on the thirteenth. It is the first of three that Thomson will make from novels by Stewart Edward White. David Kirkland directed and the supporting cast includes Olive Hasbrouck, who appears opposite Thomson, Joe Dowling, Sheldon Lewis, Frank Hagney, Ivor McFadden, William Courtwright, Billy Butts, Arthur Millet and Willie Fung.

Bob Custer's latest feature release, "The Dead Line," will be released on June 27. Nita Cavaleri plays opposite Custer and others in the cast include Marianna Moya, Robert McKim, Tom Bay, Billy Francy and Gino Corrado. Barr Cross wrote the story and continuity and Jack Nelson directed the production.

Two episodes of the "Fighting Hearts" series of featurettes with Alberta Vaughn, Larry Kent, Al Cooke, Kit Guard and Grant Withers will be released in June. These are "The Big Charade" and "Up and Wooing." Other short subjects to be released in June are two Bray cartoons, "Dinkey Doodle's Bed Time Stories" and "The Cat's Whiskers;" a Standard comedy, "Three of a Kind," and the Blue Ribbon comedy, "Vamping Babies."

Returns With African Pictures

Burbridge, Explorer, Has Film Showing Gorilla Hunt and Equatorial Wilderness

BEN BURBRIDGE, explorer and big game hunter, recently arrived in New York with pictures of his expeditions into Central Africa. The film is in eight reels and shows hitherto unphotographed parts of the jungle, Gorilla hunting, and includes views of the pygmies of Equatorial Africa, said to be recorded for the screen for the first time in this picture.

The picture will be offered under the title of "Ben Burbridge's African Gorilla Hunt." The work is the result of two expeditions which the explorer made into Central Africa during the past several years. Burbridge spent a total of two years in the jungles making the scenes which are revealed in the eight reels of film.

The completed picture represents a painstaking effect on the part of the explorer to make an authentic and realistic pictorial record of the African wilderness, its physical appearance, its inhabitants and their mode of existence. In particular it is concerned with the Gorilla, denizen of the loneliest and darkest spots of the dense African forest. Burbridge's camera cranked on the capture of eight of these beasts and caught the thrilling episodes connected with the stalking and bagging of the animals. One of the highlights of the film shows the charge at the camera of a giant male, weighing 400 pounds, an attack which followed the capture alive of four young Gorillas. Burbridge brought to this country a young male, which is now at the explorer's home in Jacksonville. It is said to be one of the only two Gorillas alive in captivity, the other being at the London Zoo.

In the course of his adventures in Africa, Burbridge made pictures of the pygmy villages and also cannibal tribes. These pygmies attain a height of about three and a half feet at full growth. The explorer covered a distance of 2,000 miles on foot during the travels he made on the two expeditions shown in the picture.

Valentino's Latest Film Is Nearing Completion

Exteriors of "The Son of the Sheik" may be finished this month if the production schedule of Director George Fitzmaurice can be followed. The close-ups with Vilma Banky will be taken thereafter. Karl Dane, Montagu Love and George Fawcett are in the cast.

Toronto Charleston Contests Aid M. P. T. O. Delegates

Massey Music Hall, Toronto, held a crowd of 3,000 persons for the Toronto Charleston championships which were staged under the direct auspices of the Ontario Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association for the purpose of establishing a special fund to be utilized for the sending of Ontario representatives to the M. P. T. O. convention in Los Angeles to bid for the 1927 convention of the association.

The Toronto Convention and Tourist Association co-operated with the Ontario officers of the M. P. T. O., the local newspapers assisted materially and all local exhibitors put in a boost for the Charleston contest and the M. P. T. O. convention. Announcements were made through a Toronto radio station as well.

Delegates from Toronto for the Los Angeles convention included J. C. Brady, Madison Theatre, president of the Ontario Division; H. Alexander, Park Theatre; J. C. Cohen, Classic Theatre and Duchess Theatre; H. Ginsler, Iola; Sam Lent, Dundas Playhouse; Sam Bloom, Danforth, LaPlaza and Christie theatres; George Lester, King Theatre, and Ray Lewis, secretary.

Montreal Deputation Asks Relief from Civic Tax

Practically every exhibitor in Montreal, Quebec, was included in the big deputation which waited upon the Municipal executive committee in the commission chambers on May 19 to lay a request before the city fathers for relief from the civic seat tax.

The case was laid before the Administration by several speakers who pointed out that Montreal exhibitors were paying a greater seat tax than was found anywhere else. Montreal theatres pay 85 cents per seat per year to the city government and, in addition, an annual tax of 50 cents per seat is paid to the Quebec Provincial Government, making a total annual seat tax of $1.35. This was considered very high, particularly in view of civic assessments on property and business, Government profits tax, tax on dividends, poster fees, censor fees, sign taxation, taxes on equipment, etc., apart from the civic amusement tax which the general public paid on admission tickets of about 10 per cent.

Two Ottawa Houses Closed Because of Tax Wrangle

Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, suddenly found itself with two less theatres on May 20 when the Police Morality Squad, under the direction of Inspector Tom McLaughlin, ordered the Francais and Capital theatres closed immediately. Action was taken under instructions from the Theatres and Cinematographs Department of the Ontario Provincial Government, the order being issued to close the theatres because of alleged discrepancies in the collecting of the Provincial amusement tax.

The two houses will not be allowed to open again without entirely new Provincial theatre licenses. It is understood that the Capital Theatre, a downtown house under the management of Peter Kehayes, will not reopen. The manager of the Francais, which has been successfully operated for the past 10 years or more as a moving picture house, was A. Donaghy.

In and Out of Town

W. W. HINES, general sales manager of United Artists, has left for a fortnight's trip to Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Chicago. He will return to New York early in June.

GEORGE F. DEMBOW, general manager of Robert Kane productions, has left New York for a two months' trip throughout the United States and Canada. He will visit all First National exchanges in an endeavor to create more business.

LOUIS WEISS left New York on May 23rd on his semi-annual selling trip in the interests of Artclass Pictures. He will take in all principal exchanges in this country and Canada, and will wind up in Hollywood, where he will spend two weeks in conference with the West Bros.

E. A. ESCHMANN, assistant to the president of United Artists, left last Thursday for Atlanta, Ga., in the interests of the sixteen productions listed for United Artists release for the coming season.

Albany Film Board of Trade Officers Elected

The Albany Film Board of Trade held its annual meeting last week, at which A. J. Herman, local manager for First National, was re-elected as president, and J. H. Morgan, of Educational, was again selected as vice-president. Miss Jane Holloran, who has served as secretary of the board since its beginning, was elected as secretary and treasurer as it has been decided to combine the two offices.

In addition to the president and vice-president, the board of directors will consist of J. H. MacIntyre, manager of the Paramount exchange, Jack Krause, manager of the Associated Exhibitors' exchange, and Isador Schmertz, manager of the Fox exchange.

Arthur G. King Becomes DeMille Financial Aide

Arthur G. King, for the past six years head of the Ocean Terminal at Norfolk, Va., has become associated with Cecil B. De Mille as personal business manager and financial adviser. This position was recently held by John H. Fisher, who resigned a short time ago to devote his time to the Equitable Investment Company, of which he is the head.

In his new capacity King will handle all of De Mille's business activities apart from the motion picture industry.

Blues Oppose Iowa Exhibitor on Sunday Openings

Manson, Iowa, is out to fight the state's Sunday blue law to a finish. R. L. Stewart, of the Cee Bee Theatre, was fined $5 for operating his theatre on Sunday on complaint of a clergyman. Now he is continuing his Sunday programs and paying the fine each week. He was elected to the school board on a Sunday show platform.

Both Mr. Stewart and the complaining minister are out to settle the matter of Sunday closing once and for all.

Asso. Screen News Obtains Canadian Federal Charter

The Associated Screen News, a producing organization of Montreal, Quebec, closely identified with the Canadian Pacific Railway and other big corporations, has been incorporated under the laws of Canada with a Federal charter, the authorized capital stock being $750,000. B. E. Norrish, former director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio at Ottawa, has been the general manager of Associated Screen News, Limited, for a number of years.

Clark Robinson Engaged as Art Director for Roxy

Clark Robinson has been engaged by S. L. Rothapfel as art director for the Roxy Theatre. Robinson was associated with Roxy when the latter held sway at the Capitol Theatre. He also made the sets for several Broadway attractions, "Dearest Enemy," "The Cradle Snatchers" and "The Greenwich Village Follies."

At the present time he has charge of the scenic design courses for the John Murray Anderson-Robert Milton School of the Theatre.

Ohio Amusement Gets Writ Against Exchange

JUDGE PEARSON settled the argument of the validity of a contract by issuing a permanent restraining order last Saturday against the First National exchange of Cleveland, Ohio, prohibiting the exchange from giving a print of "Irene" to the Southern Theatre for a simultaneous showing with the Dennison Square Theatre, one of the houses belonging to the Ohio Amusement Company.

Because the Dennison Square Theatre is a First National franchise holder, its owners demanded that the theatre be given regular franchise protection over its nearest competitive house, meaning the Southern Theatre, and was granted such protection. However, "Irene" was sold to both houses for simultaneous showing on the basis that it is an open market picture. However, the Ohio Amusement Company succeeding in securing regular protection for the picture, and M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Ohio Amusement Company, to which the Southern Theatre belongs, was notified that he would have to follow the Dennison Square Theatre instead of playing simultaneously with it. Horwitz took his case to the Board of Arbitration, and the Board of Arbitration upheld him.

So First National found itself in the embarrassing position of having to supply both houses with the picture on the same date, in accordance with the verdict of the Board of Arbitration. And, on the other hand, it had a contract with the Ohio Amusement Company, guaranteeing that company protection.

The Ohio Amusement Company settled the matter by securing a permanent injunction against the local First National exchange, restraining the distributing corporation from supplying the Southern Theatre with a print of "Irene" for Sunday, May 23.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In the way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Studio Briefs

Work was started early this week at the West Coast studios of Gotham Productions on the final picture of the current season's series which is entitled "Racing Blood." Robert Agnew has been assigned the principal role with Ann Cornwall co-starred. The continuity was prepared by James Bell Smith. The picture will be released to exhibitors during June.

Max Fleischer, president of Red Seal Pictures, has selected a number of chorus girls from "Artists and Models" and the "Vanities" for chorus roles in his forthcoming series of thirteen two-reel comedies to be known as "Carrie of the Chorus." Hazel Harmon will play the title role and Rolland Flanders will be seen as the leading male. Vonda Chase and Ruth Florence are also in the cast.

Following six months of studying the writing methods and mechanics of motion picture production, Alan Brooks, stage and vaudeville star, has abandoned playwriting and has decided to act instead, with the result that he signed a contract this week to appear in several De Mille and Metropolitan pictures.

"Young April," the screen interpretation of the novel by Edgar Castle which started this week at the De Mille studio, under the direction of Donald Crisp, is the first picture in which father and son portray characters which reflect their actual relation. Rudolph Schildkraut will play the role of the father and Joseph Schildkraut, his son, will be seen as his cinematic offspring.

Richard Walling, son of William Walling, the actor, has been picked to play the part of "Robin" in "The Pelican," thus replacing Leslie Fenton, the original choice. Fenton, it is said, will appear in "What Price Glory?"

The complete cast of the Universal production, "Love Me and the World Is Mine," now being directed by Andre E. Dupont, will consist of Norman Kerry and Mary Philbin in the principal roles with Henry B. Walthall, Betty Compson and George Siegmann among the featured players. The balance of the cast includes Albert Conti, Robert Anderson, Emily Fitzroy, Charles Sellon, Helen Dunbar, Rose Dione and Martha Mattox. Paul Kohner is supervising production and Jackson Rose is chief cinematographer.

The supervising editor on Richard Dix's next starring picture for Paramount, "The Quarterback," will be Julian Johnson, once sporting editor of the Los Angeles Times.

Edwin C. King, vice-president of F. B. O. in charge of production, has selected Stanhope Wheatcroft to play a role in "Laddie."

Hale Hamilton is now on his way from the Coast to appear in the Paramount production, "Tin Gods." The picture is being directed by Allan Dwan at the Long Island studio wth Thomas Meighan in the starring role. The supporting cast is composed of Aileen Pringle, Lowell Sherman, Renee Adoree and William Powell.

Jas. H. Hennegan Passes Away in Cincinnati

JAMES H. HENNEGAN, founder of the Hennegan Co., of Cincinnati, died at his home in that city on Wednesday, May 26. His passing marks the close of a distinguished career in the motion picture industry and came as a blow to his many friends in this field.

James H. Hennegan had the distinction of printing the first poster used in connection with the advertising of a motion picture and also originated the heralds now so extensively used in theatre exploitation. He was a pioneer in the theatre field as well, for with Sigmund Lubin he started the first high-class cinema theatre in Cincinnati. In addition to these activities, Hennegan was one of the founders and general manager of The Billboard. His printing concern, the Hennegan Company, has furnished advertising material to theatres throughout the country for the past 20 years.

Tom Kennedy has been placed under a long term contract by Paramount, according to an announcement by B. P. Schulberg. He has just completed an important role in "Mantrap."

Jocelyn Lee and Majel Coleman have been added to the cast of "Almost a Lady," the Marie Prevost starring vehicle which E. Mason Hopper is directing at the Metropolitan studio. Lucille Miller has also been assigned a small part in this P. D. C. release.

"Forlorn River," a Zane Grey story, is now being adapted by George C. Hull. Paramount will produce this picture and the featured player will be Jack Holt. John Waters will direct.

Fred Thomson's next picture, "The Lone Hand," will be directed by Reeves Eason, according to Milton Gardon, production manager for the Thomson unit of F. B. O. The story is an original by Frank M. Clifton, and Dell Andrews is working on the continuity. Production will begin next week.

F. B. O. has engaged Eddie Dillon to direct Evelyn Brent's next starring vehicle, "Flame of the Argentine." The cast so far announced is Orville Caldwell, Frank Leigh, Dan Makarenko and Evelyn Selvie. Work will be begun within a few days.

S. S. Hutchinson has engaged Lloyd Ingraham to direct his entire series of Edward Everett Horton comedies, which he is producing for Associated Exhibitors release.

J. G. Bachmann has signed Gaston Glass to play an important role in "The Romance of a Million Dollars," a Preferred that has just gone into production with Tom Terriss directing.

"The Lodge In the Wilderness," the next Tiffany release, now being made under the direction of Henry McCarty, is nearing completion in the Hollywood studios. The cast includes Anita Stewart and Edmund Breese.

Warner Bros. have signed Charles Whitaker to scenarize "College Widows," an adaptation of George Ade's stage play, "The College Widow." Dolores Costello will play the principal role and will be directed by Lewis Milestone.

This week saw the completion of "Mismates," Earl Hudson's production for First National. Warner Baxter and Doris Kenyon play the featured roles, under the direction of Charles Brabin.

After viewing Northwest Pacific sites for his comedy for United Artists, "The General," Buster Keaton announced that the picture would take about six months to make. The scenario of Keaton's Civil War comedy was written by Al Boasburg, Clyde Bruckman, Paul Gerald Smith and Charles Smith. The star will be the director.

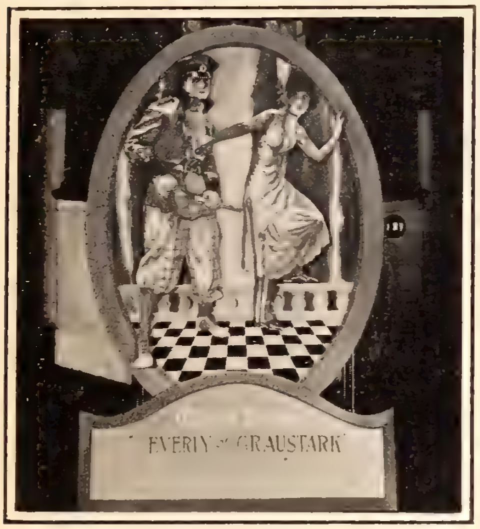
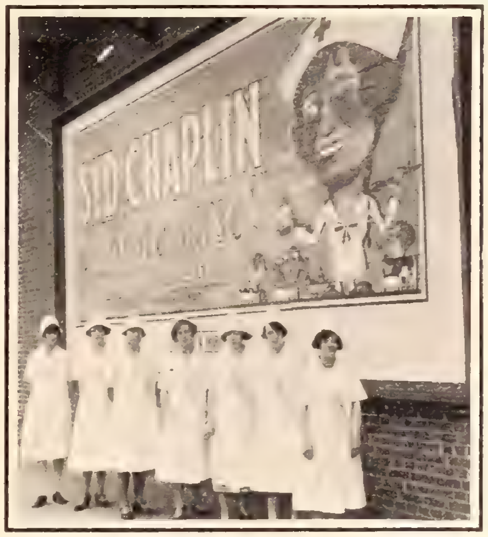
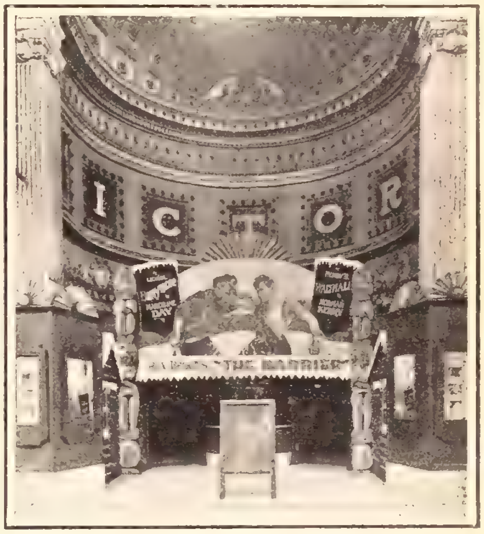
Exhibitors Service Bureau



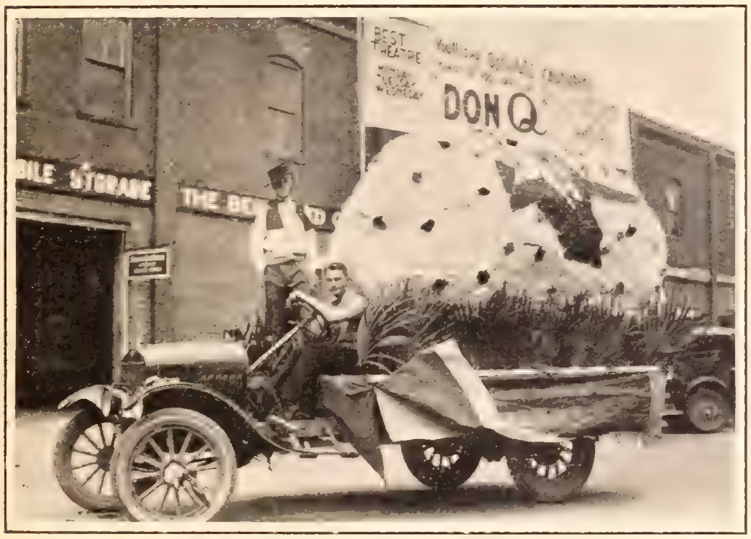
Attractive centerpiece of the lobby display for "Beverly of Graustark" (M-G-M) at the Empire Theatre, Montgomery, Ala.



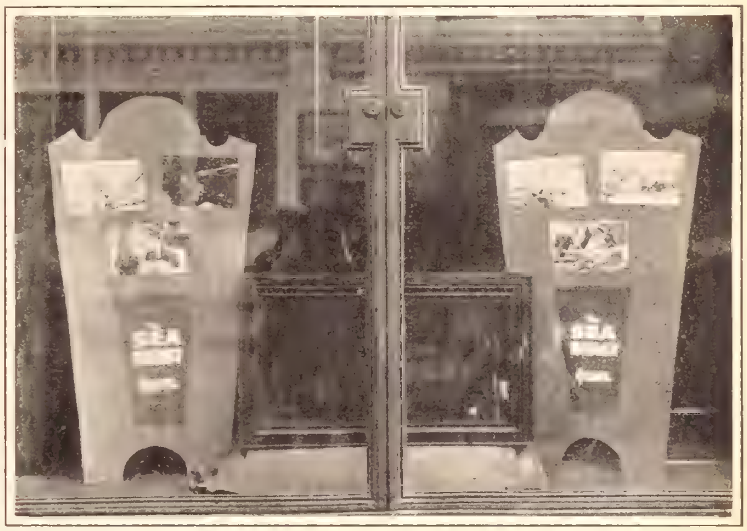
Usherettes at the Kingsway Theatre, Brooklyn, wore nurse uniforms during the showing there of Warner Bros.' "Oh! What a Nurse"



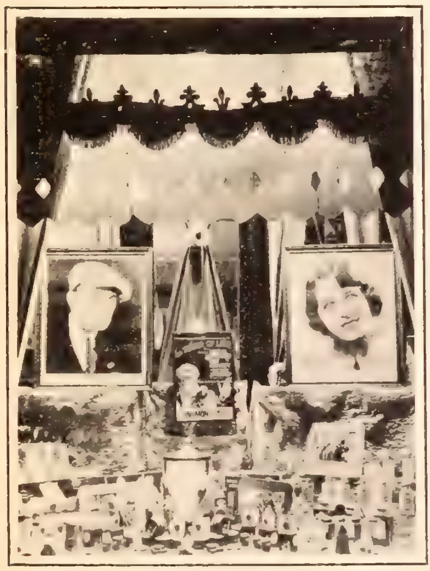
Colorful display for "The Barrier" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) within the restricted limits of the lobby of the Victory, Denver



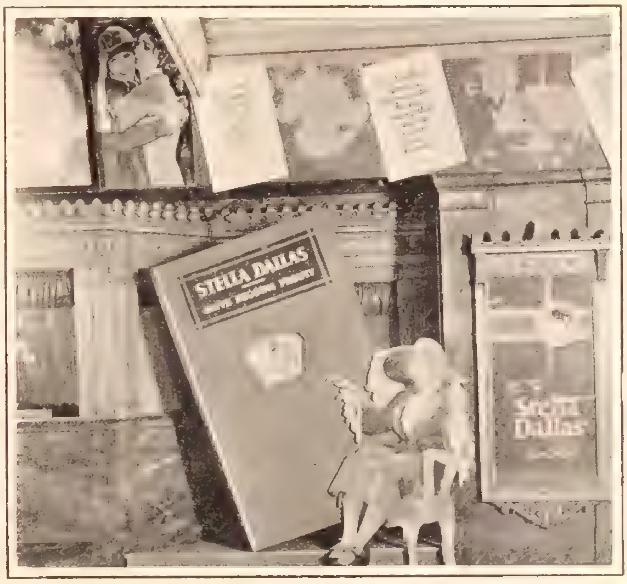
Manager Theo. P. Davis of the Best Theatre, Parsons, Kans., entered the float shown above in the "Egg Day" parade in that city to exploit his showing of United Artists' "Don Q, Son of Zorro." The egg was made of paper and featured a cutout of Douglas Fairbanks



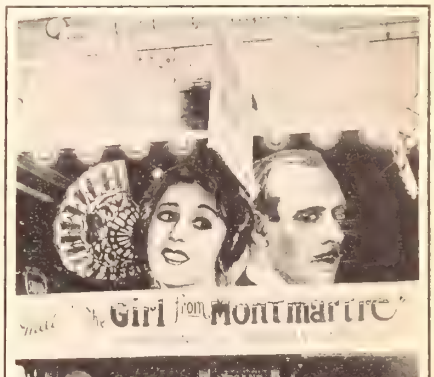
A ship model, glass encased, with cutout still boards made an attractive display for the "Sea Beast" (Warner Bros.) in the window of a Galveston store, where it exploited the showing at the Queen Theatre in that city



Window display by drug store in Longmont, Col., tying-up with the showing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Tower of Lies" at the Longmont Theatre



Spectacular display for United Artists' "Stella Dallas," at the Roosevelt Theatre, Chicago. The huge book and cutout of the leading character and reproductions of pages from the diary shown on banner under marquee were unusual and distinctive features of the arrangement



Lobby display for First National's "The Girl from Montmartre," at the Strand, Nashville. Arranged by Manager H. C. Judkins.

Tie-Ups Feature "Polar Flight" Drive

San Antonio Taxis and Ice Co. Exploit Picture at Palace

ONE of the most effective campaigns executed in behalf of the showing of "The Amundsen Polar Flight" goes to the credit of Louis Santikos, owner and manager of the Palace Theatre in San Antonio. Santikos practically blanketed the town with a group of stunts executed with the cooperation of local firms.

A tie-up was made with the Lone Star Ice Co., which delivers ice to 6,000 people daily with 60 trucks, whereby 6,000 cards announcing the showing of the picture were delivered to each customer. The cars of the Yellow Taxicab Co. carried on their spare tires or discs a placard reading, "The Yellow Taxi will carry you even to the North Pole with Amundsen in his famous fight."

Three police dogs, muzzled, were used as a street ballyhoo, with signs reading, "We were with Amundsen on his famous dash to the North Pole, see us at the Palace Theatre." These dogs were led by a man dressed after the fashion of North Pole explorers. An airplane, roped off and guarded by two soldiers, was placed in the Alamo Plaza, bearing a placard reading, "This is a model of the plane Amundsen used on his dash to the North Polar region."

In the local papers a double column ad was used with a cut of an automobile, reading, "Amundsen will use this type of machine on his next dash to the North Pole, as far as civilization will permit." This was used in conjunction with a big automobile show held in San Antonio.

Kelsall Grasps Opportunity To Sell "Casey" Serial

Opportunity had to knock but once for Manager Ray Kelsall of the Garden Theatre, Burlingame, Calif., when "Casey of the Coast Guard" was being screened at his house. "Casey of the Coast Guard" is bound up with the thrilling deeds of the Coast Guard and during its run at the Garden, a rum boat was wrecked on the coast a few miles from the town and local citizens believed that it was all a publicity stunt which would focus attention on the serial.

In a special story printed in black type and boxed, with the heading "Kelsall Denies Rum Wreck Was a Publicity Stunt," the Burlingame Advance printed a story which enabled Manager Kelsall to cash in on the wreck.

"Rainbow Riley" Namesakes Guests at Showing

All the Rileys living in Austen were invited to be the guests of the management of the Queen Theatre there during the engagement of "Rainbow Riley," a stunt which Manager L. R. Guyer used with good results in the way of getting widespread publicity for the theatre.

There were additional prizes, consisting of passes, for the oldest and youngest Rileys, and the biggest Riley family in town.

Manager Jack Rowley attracted patronage to the Rialto, smallest of the three houses he operates in Laredo, Texas, with the display shown above for "The Enchanted Cottage" (First National)

EVA NOVAK AND MARTHA SLEEPER

Say it with babies and you'll hear from it with laughs.

Produced under Roach's big new production policy of having one or more feature stars in his short feature comedies.

Tryon as the baby expert in a department store; he qualifies because all his ancestors were at one time babies!

These new Roach comedies are the greatest picture value in the field, and that doesn't bar features.

'SNOWED

A MYSTERY DRAMA OF THE HIGH

Honestly we believe this serial to be just as great as "Into the Net" and "The Green Archer".
You know the business those serials did for you, the way they turned bad nights into best nights, the way your public raved over them.
"Snowed In" is one of the most wonderful mystery stories ever filmed. Not a chapter but leaves you breathless, mystified, eager for more.
Produced by the same company that made the "Green Archer", from a scenario by the same writer, with the same stars.

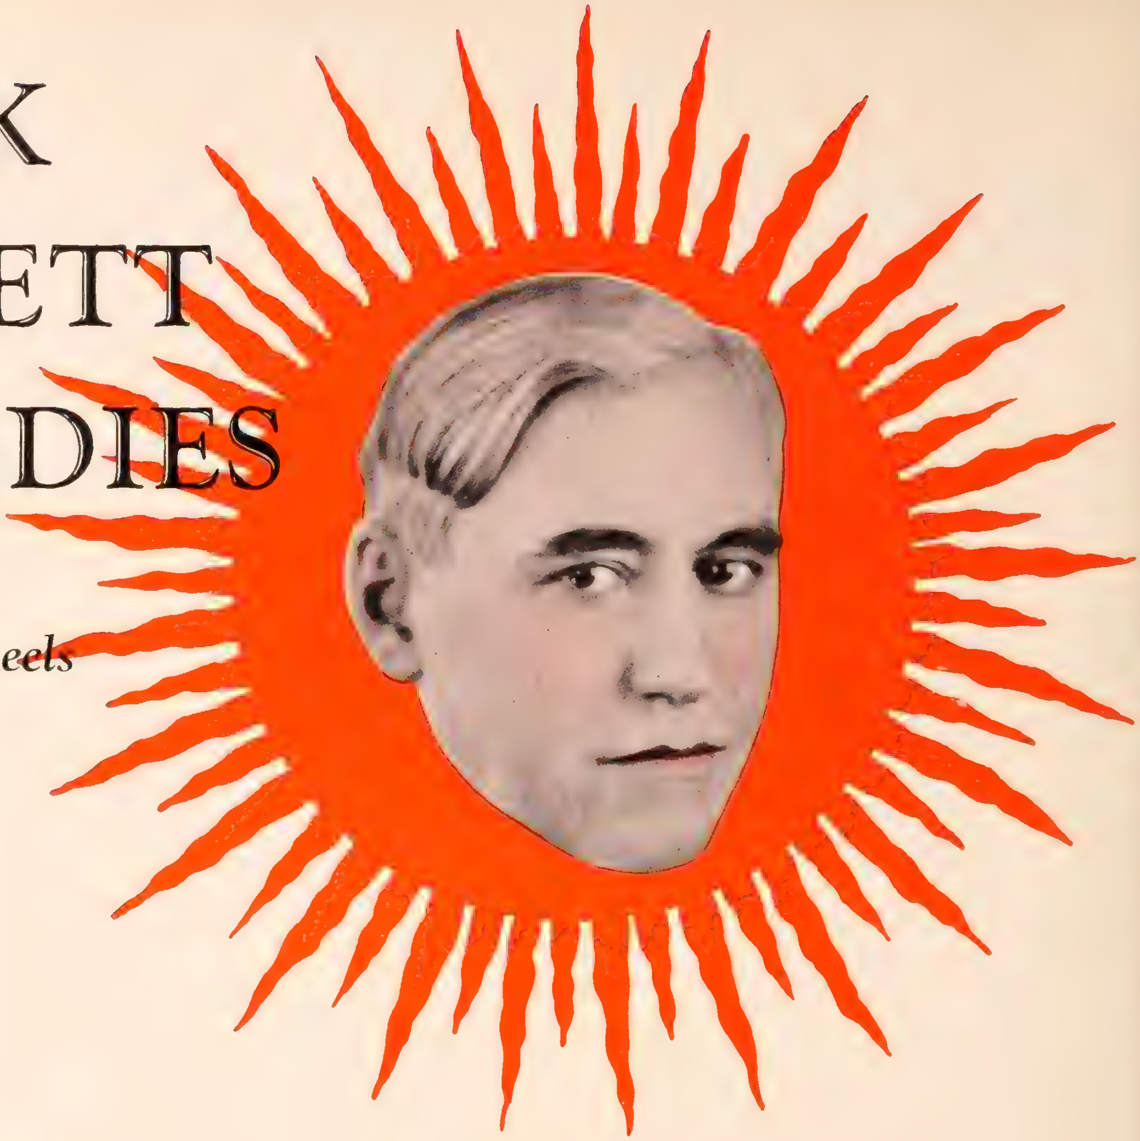
MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

Two Reels



One of the greatest box office names in the business is that not of a star but a producer.

Mack Sennett.

Known by everyone. Identified with uproarious laughter.

Synonomous with "bathing girls." A dozen years ago he went into history as the finder of great comedians and the world's prettiest girls, the father of the Keystone Cops, the inventor of screen comedy.

Ever since then he's been getting bigger and bigger.

A Mack Sennett Comedy gives you the benefit of that big draw.

Box Office Stars? Here's one in his own right with a bigger fame than anyone. Mack Sennett Comedies will prove it, if you advertise them.

Short Subjects and Serials

Snub Pollard Will Star in Artclass Comedy Series

Snub Pollard, who has been appearing in comedies for the past seven years has been signed by Louis Weiss of Artclass Pictures to appear in a series of twelve two-reel comedies. The pictures will be produced on the Coast and are expected to be released during the early Winter months.

Artclass has also acquired a series of twenty-six reels to be released under the general title of Popular Song Paradies. The first song to be done in animated cartoon form will be Berlin's "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Cranfield and Clarke Sign for Roxy and Flagg Series

Cranfield and Clarke have signed a contract with the Ontario Government for the exclusive handling of a series of pictures taken when Roxy and his gang traveled through Canada as guests of their Canadian friends. Roxy and the gang are both in the series.

The company has also closed a contract with James Montgomery Flagg to make a series of two-reel satires. Full details will be announced later.

Educational Preparing for "The Blue Boy"

The home office staff of Educational Pictures is now busy preparing for the release of the second of the Romance productions, "The Blue Boy," on which production was started on May 10th under the direction of Arthur Maude. The cast will consist of John Roche, Philip De Lacy, Jane Thomas, Montague Shaw and Esther Rhoades. A last minute change in the cast was necessary due to the death of the mother of Ethel Grey Terry who had been cast for one of the principal roles in the picture.

Red Seal Pictures Changes to Larger Quarters

Red Seal Pictures has obtained newer and bigger quarters on the sixth floor at sixteen hundred Broadway. Red Seal's offices were located at 729 Seventh Avenue, on the twelfth floor.

"U" Serial Features Boy Scouts as Heroes

In the opinion of E. B. De Groot, scout executive of the Los Angeles council of the International Scout Organization, "The Radio Detective," a Universal serial adapted from the novel of the same name by Arthur B. Reeve, the Boy Scout is really and interestingly represented on the screen.

This picture, which will be dedicated to the Boy Scouts of America, has Jack Daugherty as the star, with Margaret Quimby, Jack Mower, John T. Prince and a troop of Los Angeles scouts in the supporting cast. It was directed bv William B. Craft.

Clyde Cook Film on Pathe List

Schedule of Release for Week of June Sixth Also Includes Alice Day Comedy

Alice Day and Clyde Cook share the two-reel starring honors on the Pathe list of release for the week of June sixth; Cook appears in "He Forgot to Remember," a Hal Roach contribution, and Miss Day is starred in the Mack Sennett comedy "Puppy Lovetime."

Other releases are: "The Big Idea," a single-reel Roach re-issue with "Snub" Pollard; chapter seven of the Pathe-serial, "The Bar-C Mystery"; "The Big Retreat," one of Æsop's Film Fables; Topics of the Day No. 23, Pathe Review No. 23, and two issues of Pathe News.

"Puppy Lovetime" presents Alice Day with a cast including Eddie Quillan, Danny O'Shea, Ruth Taylor, Mary Ann Jackson, Joseph Young and Patsy O'Byrne. Eddie Cline directed this Mack Sennett two-reel comedy.

"He Forgot to Remember" presents Clyde Cook with a cast including Noah Young, Yorke Sherwood, and Blanche Mehaffey. Tom Buckingham directed this two-reel comedy for Hal Roach.

"The Big Idea" is a Hal Roach single-reel re-issue with "Snub" Pollard in one of his funniest comedies.

"Back From the Missing" is the title of the seventh chapter of the Pathe serial, "The Bar-C Mystery," starring Dorothy Phillips. When thieves fall out, the plot is sure to get thicker and that is what happens in this chapter.

Pathe Review No. 23 offers: "Where East Meets West," Japan meets America in Hawaii; Princeton college in Pathecolor; "Where Fishes Flourish," scenes of a California hatchery of rainbow trout.

"The Big Retreat" is one of Paul Terry's animated cartoon creations of the Æsop's Film Fables series. Topics of the Day No. 23 presents the latest wit and humor from the press. Two issues of Pathe News complete the June 6th schedule.

Quality Counts, Says Hammons

Footage Immaterial in Future Prophesies Educational President in Talk

Pictures are going to be judged by the entertainment value and quality and not their footage in the near future, is the prophesy made by E. W. Hammons, President of Educational Film Exchanges, in a statement this week. Hammons says this condition must come about before motion pictures can offer the public ideal entertainment.

"The persistent efforts of short feature producers and distributors with such special campaigns as Laugh Month and a number of fine exploitation tie-ups have had much to do with the progress along this line during the current season," continues Hammons. "However, it is a re-awakening on the part of the exhibitor himself with a better recognition of the box-office and entertainment values in the higher type of short feature that is doing most to move us toward the time when a producer can make a picture in whatever length the story justifies without fear that short length will make it impossible for him to get a fair showing in the theatre presentations and advertising, or a fair return of profit for his efforts.

"The pictures in short length that have been released during the current season and the elaborate plans for 1926-1927 surely show the short feature stepping out with a more confident stride than ever before. Such pictures, for example, as the Romance Productions in technicolor, show an advanced attitude on the part of producers toward the making of films in briefer lengths.

Comedy Production Costs Go Up

L. G. Darmour Says Increased Budgets for Features Necessitates New Move

L. G. Darmour, vice-president of the Standard Cinema Corporation, in announcing that plans have been completed for the continuance of the Standard Fat Men series of two-reel comedies on the F. B. O. release schedule for the coming season, said his company's production budget for next year would be increased over that allotted to this year's schedule, despite the fact that fewer pictures would be made for the 1926-27 program.

Mounting costs of short comedy production, he said, were due to the growing tendency of exhibitors to book short subjects on their individual merits instead of block purchasing of a whole series or brand, and to the enlarged budgets which feature producers have mapped out for their schedules this year.

More spectacular features will cause a natural demand for greater production values in the short comedies which must accompany these features on theatre programs and therefore must stand comparison with them in regard to details of settings, costuming and photographic effects.

New Comedies Started At Universal City

Two comedies are now in production at Universal City under the supervision of Scott Darling. They are "That's My Baby" and "Ball and Chain." Dick Smith is directing the first in which Charles Duffy is starred, supported by Elise Tarron and Harry Lorraine.

Arthur Lake is starred in the second and Dorothy Kitchen plays the lead under the direction of George Summerville.

New Series of Two-Reelers Started by Universal

Universal has started production on a new series of two-reelers based on the "Magpie and Dirty Shirt" series by W. C. Tuttle.

Ben Corbett and Peewee Holmes are featured, with Dorothy Kitchen playing the leading feminine role in the first picture. Others who will appear in the series are Les Bates and Robert McKenzie. They will be made as short Western comedies under the direction of Vin Moore.

Opinions on Current Productions

"Four Square Steve"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

EDMUND COBB appears in this two reeler which is of a pale calibre, although the star rides and fights as good as ever. Cobb impersonates Jack, a roaming cowboy hoofing it with a pack mule, when he comes upon a villain attacking Milly, a pretty ranch girl for a kiss. Jack promptly interferes in Milly's favor, beats up the scoundrel, and is invited by Milly to accompany her to the ranch where he gets a job. Later Milly is lured away by the villain to a deserted shack where the latter is forcing her to marry him, but Jack finds the note which Milly dropped, notifies her father and the cowboys and starts the pursuit. He surprises the villain in the shack and a terrific battle takes place, Jack is stunned and villain escapes with the girl via the cable car, but Jack revives and gives chase. Another fight follows in which the heavy is kayoed, and Jack saves Milly just as her father arrives with the cowboys to the rescue. Directed by Edward Laemmle.

Summary—Plenty of fast action, fights and excitement, but the result is only mildly entertaining.

"Honeymooning With Ma"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

A ROUGH and tumble slapstick farce with the strong arm of the mother-in-law as the central idea. Charlie and his wife are about to give a party when mother-in-law arrives and takes a hand in the affair. She takes a dislike to Charlie for reasons of her own and proceeds to hand him an unmerciful mauling on slightest provocation. She even pretends teaching him new steps but really is pulverizing Charlie's toes with her ponderous feet. In due time the family goes out picnicking but trouble trails like a shadow in their wake, with Charlie taking the full responsibility for it. The tent is blown and the canoe loaded with supplies, upsets. Charlie takes advantage of the moment and escapes with his wife, leaving the avoirdupois mother-in-law splashing in the creek.

Summary—Good satire on the kind of mother-in-law who seems to thrive on the amount of rough abuse she hands her meek son-in-law.

"Dinky Doodle's Bedime Story"

(Bray-F. B. O.—One Reel)

THIS cartoon will amuse the youngsters in particular and appeal to the mature audience in general, because it deals with the well known characters from Fairyland. Humpty Dumpty, Tom, Tom, the piper's son, and Mary with her little lamb are all there. The bedtime story is told over the radio as the artist, trying to tune in on his station, tunes in on Fairyland accidentally, and the Mother Goose characters faded in on the radio tube and are joined by Dinky and his mutt. The station Fairyland, however, signs off when Dinky, angered at Mary's refusal, knocks her lamb for a pile of lamb stew. Extraordinarily good cartoon. Directed by Walter Lantz.—M. T. ANDREWS.

"Felix Braves the Brinv"

(Educational Cartoon—One Reel)

THE antics of Felix, the wonder cat, are always sure to produce laughs. There is a generous supply in the latest adventure of this redoubtable feline. By using his head, and for that matter, that Aladdin's lamp which we have never yet seen, but which is surely apparent in everything he does, Felix obtains information concerning the location of Captain Kidd's treasure. He goes down into the bottom of the sea in a wonderfully improvised submarine to search for it—a lone cat braving the dangers of the deep. There he meets an octopus whom he eventually conquers only after an heroic fight which everyone is sure to enjoy. Anyway he finds the treasure, but is hard put to ward off an attack by a swordfish. Everything ends O. K. though. We believe the majority will like it. —RAYMOND GANLY.

"Who's Boss?"

(Educational-Cameo—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THIS comedy is greatly amusing, principally because of the good work by George Davis who is featured in it. George is one of those meek, henpecked creatures, misnamed husbands, who will stay home to wash dishes and mind the baby while his wife must entertain. However, even the most abject mutt will have his day, accordingly George using important work at the office as decoy, steals away for the evening to enjoy a quiet game of poker with his Dinty Moore friends. Wifie in the meantime misses her party and decides to join her hubby at the office. Right here George pulls enough funny gags, in effort to extricate himself from this muddle and to provide a satisfactory alibi, to cause even the most solemn undertaker to forget his dignity at a funeral party.

THE CAST

George Davis, Cliff Bowes, Fay Holderness. Directed by Jules White.

Summary—A good, snappy comedy, with the poker game and a domineering wife for a background, this is a safe booking for the average house.

"Wise or Otherwise"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY, the roly-poly comedian, is featured in another matrimonial adventure, this time his troubles begin after he gets safely married. A mysterious stranger equipped with a miniature radio set, which he wears on his head, communicates the news alternately to the young couple. He first warns the wife that her husband is a dangerous Bluebeard, and as Puffy is about to cut himself a slice of cake in the pantry with a carving knife, her fears are confirmed. Next the stranger installs suspicion in Puffy's mind by telling him that his wife has a mania for poisoning her husbands. The sparks of marital discord are about to blaze forth, when a penitentiary guard apprehends the stranger who really is a lunatic at large. Puffy and his wife express relief and are happy.

Summary—Puffy suffers from lack of adequate gags and droll situations but will satisfy the average fan.—M. T. ANDREWS.

"Muscle-Bound Music"

(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THIS two-reeler will bring a good assortment of laughs from the average comedy fan, chiefly because of the slapstick absurdities which pervade it. Billy and David are the two musicians who do not play in Vincent Lopez' orchestra, and so find it difficult to pay the rent, long overdue. However they manage to retain their room by flirting with the landlady. The music of Billy's horn and David's drum is so soothing that it rocks the house and everything in it, including the two musicians who find themselves "rocked" out on the street by the furious landlady. Having failed as a musician, Billy turns his talents to the manly art and accepts a good offer to wrestle the great Unknown, who proves to be no other than Kewpie, the star boarder. Billy's courage fails him when he enters the ring and he promptly executes about face but the landlady's daughter tips him off that Kewpie is weak in the bunions. Billy stays and by stepping on the sensitive parts wins the bout and money. Directed by Alf Goulding.

THE CAST

Billy Bevan, David Morris, Natalie Kingston, Patsy O'Byrne, Kewpie Morgan.

Summary—Snappy subtitles and enough slapstick gags to hold its own in the average house.

"The Tin Bronc"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THIS is a lively, entertaining Western in which Edmund Cobb does some furious stunts in order to recover the stolen payroll and regain favor with his girl's father. Miggs, Edmund Cobb, bought himself a flivver in town and while preoccupied with the tin bronc, as he calls it, the bandits take advantage of his absence, hold up his boss and make off with the payroll. When Miggs returns to the ranch he is promptly fired and told that if he wants his wages, he may take them out of the stolen payroll. He follows the gang to a deserted shack and fights them single-handed, until sheriff and his boss arrive to the rescue. Of course the troubles are patched up between Miggs and the boss who further rewards Miggs with his daughter for a wife.

Summary—Cobb pulls some new gags when he tries out the tin bronc; then finishes up in the usual smashing windup. Good average two-reel Western.

"Neptune's Domain"

(Educational—One Reel)

LYMAN H. HOWE'S latest offering of sense and nonsense is an entertaining bit of novelty. The subject is the sea and there is a little story woven in it which should delight the children. There are some exceptionally fine shots of Hawaiian surf riders and of a ship with sails outlined against a beautiful sky lit up by a setting sun.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Some of the funny moments in "His Private Life," an Educational two-reel production starring Lupino Lane

"Puppy Lovetime"

(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

ONE of the most pleasing features in this comedy is the diminutive, brown-eyed Mary Ann Jackson. This precocious juvenile star provides a number of entertaining moments, which are equally humorous, with her wistful expression. Outside of her contribution, Alice Day and Eddie Quillan furnish bulk of the comedy as well as interest, so that the total result is acceptably entertaining. Such tricks as a loaded cigar given by the grocer boy to his sweetheart's father, the latter skidding on a freshly soaped floor, and similar gags of the old school are resorted to with only a mildly amusing result. The central idea here revolves around Alice and the two rivals for her hand, Eddie, the grocer boy, and Danny, the village sheik. Alice's father dislikes Eddie but hates to break up the romance until he has paid up the grocery bill. In the meantime a city vamp lures Danny away, so Alice tries some hurried tactics on Eddie in order to make him propose.

THE CAST

Alice Day, Joseph Young, Eddie Quillan, Danny O'Shea, Ruth Taylor, Mary Ann Jackson, Patsy O'Byrne. Directed by Eddie Cline.

Summary—Pretty thin in comedy values, but the child prodigy and Eddie Quillan will satisfy the average fan.

"Movie Madness"

(Universal-Stern—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

A SLAPSTICK burlesque on movie company on location; in spots quite funny but as a whole the vehicle does not render justice to Edna Marian's talent as comedienne. Edna lives on a farm where a travelling movie company arrives in search for a location. The leading lady quits so the director asks Edna to take her place, and later the unit takes possession of her house to make some interiors. They fairly wreck the house by cutting extra windows and doors and also dismantling the roof in order to admit more light. Just then it begins to rain and the movie folks leave, giving Edna the leading man's picture to be remembered by. Her father returns and seeing the house demolished thinks he got the wrong place, but he finds Edna waist-deep in water in the rain-flooded room, kissing the movie hero's picture. After some spectacular diving after her, he administers his paternal drubbing. Directed by Francis Corby.

Summary—Edna Marian delivers the laff goods in a tumbling fashion.

"The Big Charade"

(F. B. O.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THE customary non-stop action is not over conspicuous in this two-reeler which is No. 8 of the Fighting Hearts series. The central problem here revolves around a roll of $500 which Tod Raleigh has had planted by a hired crook in Harry Grayson's pocket, and later by the way of revenge accuses Harry of stealing it. Fortunately for Harry, his sweetheart Sally overhead the plot and discloses this fact to the police who arrest the crook and Harry is cleared. The comedy interest is supplied by Jerry and Tom who engage in a game of pool, going through contortioning acrobatics to get a perfect shot at the ball. The cue ball takes an animated form, knocks the other balls cold, each time Tom hits it, and drags them in the pocket.

THE CAST

Alberta Vaughn, Larry Kent, Grant Withers, Kit Guard, Albert Cooke, William Tucker and Stanton Heck. Directed by Ralph Ceder.

Summary—Not up to the standard of the previous numbers of this series. Slow action handicapped by a poor story idea.

"The Big Retreat"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

THIS number of the Fable cartoon keeps the straight lines consistently away from one's face, with its hilarious ideas. It is a travesty on the war. Thomas Cat and Milton Mouse display their musical talents before Mildred's house for whose hand they are rivals, when a war is declared. The recruiting stations are kept well supplied by a vacuum wagon which scoops everybody in sight including Thomas and Milton. The pair soon find themselves in military regalia adventuring over Noman's land, in a huge Rhino for a tank. An unusually amusing number.—M. T. ANDREWS.

"An Alpine Flapper"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

THE current cartoon might have well been named an Alpine masher, for the central idea concerns an Alpine villain. Cats, dogs, mice and goats, are having a wonderful time sliding down the snow-covered Alps. George Goat takes his best girl to the frozen lake and there, while she is watching him do a few tricks, along comes the villain, a wolf in goat's clothing, and flirts with her. Later, deciding on stronger tactics, the wolf carries the girl off, but is pursued by George Goat who kayos the villain, for which he is rewarded with kisses by his sweetheart. The moral of this cartoon, which is well up to the standard of those gone before, is: Kissing is the language of love and some of the boys speak several languages.—M. T. ANDREWS.

"The Pelican's Bill"

(Bray-F. B. O.—One Reel)

THIS is one of the Unnatural History cartoons, a sugar coated lesson for mischievous youngsters who like their strawberry jam best when it's stored away in a pantry. By the way of scolding, mother tells the culprit boy a story how a thievish monkey and a greedy pelican became partners in looting everything in sight. The scenes where the monkey conceals all his loot in the pelican's basket-like bill, and himself rides in it, will no doubt tickle the juvenile palate, and elicit an occasional chuckle from the adult. The lesson ends with the monkey hammering rocks in jail. —M. T. ANDREWS.

"The Planting Season"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

THE idea of planting the seeds of physical endurance early, is here emphasized by Grantland Rice in a very interesting way. The springtime of life is youth, this is the season for inculcating in human minds and bodies, the stamina that will make of them real men in after years. The planting here is limited to sports among the boys and girls of America. Golf, swimming, skiing, skating, horseback riding and boxing are the subjects. It is very unusual Sportlights.—M. T. ANDREWS.

"Pathe Review No. 23"

(Pathe—One Reel)

WHERE East Meets West," the first part of the Review, presents a very sympathetic study of the Japanese colonists in Hawaii who are the subjects of Uncle Sam. The second part is a Pathecolor camera record of Princeton University, in a series of charming campus scenes, with an emphasis on the gothic architecture of the college buildings. The last part presents a remarkably interesting shots of the government fish hatchery, with the rainbow trout as the subject.—M. T. ANDREWS.

"R. P. M."

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

THIS title is an abbreviation for "Revolutions Per Minute" and is glorifying the efficiency of the American motor. The issue begins with a motor 1906 model, and dwells on the present day gasoline engines, their marvelous development and high efficiency. There are numerous shots of the race speedways which are alluded to as laboratories of efficiency. Racing shots are supplemented by views of boat races with a comment on the marine motors. A highly entertaining number.—M. T. ANDREWS.

The Broadway Gallant

A Whizzing Six Reels of Action With a Two Reel Story

(Reviewed by Maurice T. Andrews)

DICK TALMADGE manages to entertain throughout the six reels almost single handed and every time he decides to take a rest, the picture goes with him. The central idea, even for a western, does not assert itself as firmly as it might. The yarn is so fashioned as to afford Dick the opportunity to display his athletic prowess as tumbler, which he does with the skill of a circus acrobat who doesn't seem to care whether he falls on his head or heels. He isn't idle for a split second and manages to maintain fair interest well enough, but outside of slapstick buffoonery on the part of the village "hicks," he gets little support, although picture doesn't seem to suffer because of it. There is no doubt that the love interest, could have added a little flavor to the picture, if Talmadge were given a winsome heroine and a more capable supporting cast. No need for continuity here, the entire picture interest centers in hero's evading the sheriff and his posse. Direction and photography O. K.

The Cast: Richard Talmadge, Clara Horton, Joe Harrington, Jack Richardson, Cecil Cameron, Ford West. Author, Frank Howard Clark. Director, Mason Noel.

THE THEME: Action western and farce. Idle son of a millionaire is charged to recover $75,000 worth of bonds which are thought to be worthless by the owner. He runs into difficulties with the local constable, but finally recovers the bonds, foils the crook who plotted to steal them and wins a girl and her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Astonishing athletic prowess of Richard Talmadge and the incredibly thrilling stunts he performs while eluding the posse, the comedy relief, the pleasing finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Nothing outside the stormy action here go the limit on promising thrilling athletic stunts, fair comedy relief and play up the star.

DRAWING POWER: Good for certain type of audience who like action and stunts but don't care a whoop for the story.

Produced by Richard Talmadge Productions, Inc. Distributed by F. B. O.

Length, 5,510 feet. Released May, 1926.

Hands Across The Border

A First Class Western With Silver King the Marvel Horse

(Reviewed by Maurice T. Andrews)

THE intrepid Fred Thompson and his incomparable horse, Silver King, deliver another rapid-fire picture, one that should win wherever shown. Thompson is an established personality on the screen, there is no doubt about that. His hair-rising stunts and thrilling escapades, so reminiscent of the early Fairbanks, may seem trifle exaggerated to the meticulous fans, but they surely will more than please the crowd in the gallery. As to Silver King, there is no surpassing the art of that sagacious equine star. He registers the understanding of the situation, scents danger, acts on impulse and performs other incredible tricks. In fact his work is so good that the continuity writer spoils it at times by far-fetched situations and forced subtitles; but these are minor defects.

Another creditable quality of this film is the magnificent photography and impressive settings; indeed, some of the long shots are quite stirring in their appeal.

The Cast: Fred Thompson, Tyrone Powers, Bess Flowers, William Courtwright, Clarence Goldert, Tom Santschi. Author, Frank M. Clifton. Director, David Kirkland.

THEME: Western romance. Young American joins U. S. secret service to apprehend a band of counterfeiters operating on the Mexican Border. With the help of his intelligent horse he succeeds, after innumerable and thrilling escapades, and gains love of the girl he saved from danger.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Remarkable tricks and byplay of the Silver King, Thompson's vigorous action and acrobatic stunts, the sequence in Castra's hacienda, eye-luring photography and vivid Spanish atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Go the limit advertising that unbeatable film combination of Fred Thompson and Silver King at their best. Promise them a thrilling western romance crammed with ace high action and fine photography.

DRAWING POWER: Silver King's tricks alone will captivate any audience. Can't go wrong on this one.

Produced and distributed by F. B. O.

Length, 5,267 feet. Released May, 1926.

The Brown Derby

Rollicking Number, Zippy All The Way

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

JOHNNY HINES surely hits the bell with this one. It is as lively a comedy as we've run across in a couple of seasons, being crammed with many original gags and punctuated with laughs throughout. Even the familiar incident has been dressed up to look like new and the piece is so well timed that the action moves with rhythmic precision.

We cannot remember seeing a number which contained more breezy and laughable high jinks than "The Brown Derby." It carries a first rate idea built around a happy-go-lucky chap suffering from an inferiority complex. He is willed a brown derby by an eccentric uncle—the same derby, incidentally, which the deceased wore when he put over his big deals and accumulated his fortune.

The derby is the piece-de-resistance here and figures to place Hines in all sorts of jams, tight and otherwise. To detail them would necessitate an entire page. Suffice to say however, that the fun is particularly bright since it hits upon all eight cylinders.

The Cast: Johnny Hines, Diana Kane, Flora Finch, Bradley Barker, Edmund Breese, Ruth Dwyer, Harold Foshay, Herbert Standing, J. Barney Sherry, Bob Slater. Director, Charles Hines.

THEME: Farce-comedy in which youthful laborer strikes romance and riches after getting confidence in himself through being rewarded with a brown derby.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The gag of the bath-tub attached to the motor-cycle. Scene when Hines steps into the party. The bedroom episode. The chase of the derby. The romantic moments. The chase to the boat. The timely gags. The witty subtitles. Scene attending the reading of the will.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title affords excellent teaser possibilities. Also tie up with hatters for ballyhoo of picture. Ballyhoo with man representing Hines wearing brown derby, etc. Bill as one of the liveliest comedies of the season.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all types of houses, large and small. Surely will get them.

Produced by C. C. Burr. Distributed by First National Length, Seven reels. Released June, 1926.

The Wise Guy

Crook Story Is Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE hasn't been a picture story based upon the redemption of religious fakers in a long while. Some seasons ago "The Miracle Man" set the fashion for this type of production—and the screen became surfeited with redeemed crooks who used the cloth of the clergy to fleece the innocent.

Now comes Frank Lloyd's picture, "The Wise Guy," and it shapes up as rattling good entertainment—one that approaches fairly close to the realities. Like the central figure in "The Miracle Man" the preacher (?) here is surrounded by crooks and he finds redemption in the same way—by falling in love. So he starts a small mission—one that travels on wheels and the yokelry fall for his game. His fame spreads so rapidly that he is given the job of saving the fallen in a city tabernacle. And James Kirkwood is just the ideal actor for the part. He is just one step ahead of the sheriff until he is caught. But in building the suspense the director has worked it out with keen understanding and sympathy.

The Cast: Mary Astor, James Kirkwood, Betty Compson, George F. Marion, Mary Carr, George Cooper. Director, Frank Lloyd.

THEME: Crook drama in which fake preacher gets redemption when he develops romance and tries to save life of companion by praying.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: James Kirkwood's characterization and the excellent support contributed by Mary Carr, George Cooner and George Marion. Scene at burial. Moment when heroine denounces preacher. Scene when preacher tries to save companion's life. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title is magnetic and if exploited on its religious theme—that right always triumphs, it should attract them. Mention the cast.

DRAWING POWER: Cast should draw them—also any appropriate exploitation. Good enough for all type of houses—including first runs.

Produced by Frank Lloyd. Distributed by First National.
Length, 7,775 feet. Released May, 1926.

Houston

A. W. SPRINGER, South Texas manager for Pathe, Inc., has just returned from a three-weeks' trip to Dallas, Texas, where he attended the annual Pathe convention.

Ed Breamer, local manager of the Interstate Amusement Company Majestic Theatre, has returned from a business trip to the home office, Dallas, Texas. Mr. Breamer will leave shortly for a two weeks' vacation, leaving Bennett R. Finn as manager of the Majestic. Mr. Finn is local manager of the Palace, owned by same organization, which is closed for the season.

F. X. Clark, in charge of the theatre department for Saenger Amusement Company, was in town for a short visit with Al Lever, local Saenger manager. Mr. Clark is from the home office, New Orleans.

B. W. Bickert, manager of the Old Mill Theatre, Dallas, Texas, and special representative for Saenger Amusement Company, passed through Houston en route to Galveston, where he attended the annual bathing girl revue.

The Strand Theatre will be completely remodeled and a new pipe organ will be installed, according to an announcement made by Morris Schulman, manager.

A contract has been let to install an ice-cooling system in the Iris Theatre. It will be the same type system as now in the Texan, its sister theatre.

M. Silverburg, owner of the Crown Theatre, has been on the sick list for several days.

New York and New Jersey

FLYING the house flag of the B. S. Moss' Circuit, the Strand Theatre at Far Rockaway opened last evening with a gala performance of Keith-Albee vaudeville, motion pictures and music.

Remodeled, redecorated and refurnished, the Strand was in apple-pie order and set a new standard in beauty, comfort and luxurious appointments.

Many prominent residents of the Rockaways and public officials, as well as vaudeville celebrities attended the opening. Among the theatrical people who were there last night were: E. F. Albee, head of the Keith Circuit; B. S. Moss, head of the Moss Circuit, and a business associate of Mr. Albee's, J. J. Murdock; E. G. Lauder, J. J. Maloney, Pat Casey and many others.

The lobby and orchestra foyer were heaped with flowers. Though the Strand seats 2,000 people, it was far too small last night to accommodate the theatre-goers of Far Rockaway who wanted to visit the smart theatre.

The Strand will give two performances daily, with the entire programs changed twice weekly, every Monday and Thursday. The vaudeville and photoplay bookings for the near future indicate that the Strand will present the foremost attractions.

The Paramount baseball team will open its season next Saturday at the Polo Grounds in a game with Pathe. The contest is a regularly scheduled Motion Picture league game. Ten thousand invitations have been issued. Universal and Warner Brothers will play the second game.

Will Hays, the Judge Landis of the films, is expected to toss out the first ball. Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, will occupy a box. Noted screen stars, including Thomas Meighan and Richard Dix, also are expected to attend.

Sam Baker's building program down on Long Island is progressing nicely, according to a recent report. At Bellaire, a 1,400 seat house is under construction; and at Floral Park, Mr. Baker is putting up a house which will accommodate 1,800. The new house being built at Ozone Park will house about 1,200 while the Land Bush Theatre is said to have a seating capacity for 1,200 persons. All of the projects are said to be under way and are expected to be completed in time for fall openings.

Standing left to right in First National's "Winner Group" are J. Powers, Captain, Usischon; MacDonald; Kelly, Manager; Kline; O'Rourke; Bailey; Wallace. Sitting—Biano; G. Werner; W. Powers; Ragona; Williams and E. Werner. They took Warner Brothers over at a 11-3 clip at Ebbets Field last Saturday. On June 5 they will tackle Fox

"Mike" Glynne is reported as negotiating for the new Mineola Theatre, a 2,000 seat house located at Mineola, L. I.

M. Kokalis, operator of several theatres over in Elizabeth, N. J., will soon leave on a four months' European tour with Athens, Greece, as his chief destination.

Abe Luff, of the Star Theatre, Southern Boulevard, is another exhibitor who will shortly embark on the high seas. As both Kokalis and Luff are scheduled for a June 5th sailing date, the two are likely to be fellow passengers.

Chester Sawyer, treasurer of Howell's Cine Equipment Company, has recently returned from a ten day trip to Boston, Mass.

Joe Hornstein, general manager of Howell's, who was slated to leave last week for Chicago, has postponed his date of departure until sometime this week. Joe will undoubtedly have some interesting information for the trade on his return to New York City.

Chrisedge Theatres, Inc., composed of Matthew Chrystmos and Harry Eldridge, expect to open two new theatres during the week of June 15. They are the Interboro and the Bronxville.

Another large theatre for the East Side of New York will soon be under way according to report. Max Kramer is said to have taken a lease on property at the corner of 1st Avenue and 57th Street where construction of a 2,500 seat motion picture theatre is contemplated.

Several local theatres are scheduled for summer openings. Those reported this week include the New Mecca, 14th Street and Avenue A, scheduled for the second week in June. The Mecca is under control of Messrs. Steiner and Blinderman.

Rosensweig and Katz' new theatre at 18th Avenue and Coney Island Ave., Brooklyn, is slated for August 1st, and Morris Blinder's Lenox Avenue Theatre, 140th Street and Lenox Ave., will open during the first week in June. The latter is a 600 seat house.

The Forest Park Theatre, recently purchased by Fred Wilson, will close its doors on June 1 to allow for extensive alterations. It is reported that Mr. Wilson will spend a considerable sum on improvements.

Henry Suchman, who has been amusing himself by dabbling in Florida real estate, has returned to his native city and the motion picture business.

Sam Baron is planning a new theatre at Crosby Avenue and the northeast corner of Eastern Boulevard, Bronx.

Red Seal Pictures Corp. have moved their offices from "729" to 1600 Broadway.

Theatres recently purchasing new equipment from Howell's Cine Equipment Company include the Palace at Lakewood, N. J., and Interboro and Bronxville Theatres of the Chrisedge circuit, New York City.

Detroit

RUMOR has it that the city authorities of Bay City have condemned the Wenonah Theatre and that the house is to close some time this month.

Many Michigan exhibitors will regret to learn of the unexpected death last week of Roy E. Marcotte, photoplay editor of the Detroit Free Press for the past six years. Death was the result of heart trouble.

W. E. Wilkinson of the Hays organization was in town last week on a very important mission.

Carl J. Sonin, connected with the home office of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is spending a few weeks at the Detroit office.

Joe Friedman, former manager of the Detroit Universal exchange and now holding a responsible position with this company in New York, paid a visit to Detroit last week.

Although Leon Kimm does not take possession of the new Macomb Theatre, Mt. Clemens, Mich., until February 5, 1927, we understand he is getting ready to buy product.

Another new theatre is being erected on Detroit's west side—the exact location is Dix and Ferndale Avenues. The owners are the Retty & Stoia Company. The new theatre seats about 600 and will have a policy of pictures and vaudeville. Actual construction of the building was started last week and will be completed by Labor Day.

Salt Lake City

FRANK SHEPHERD, from the Associated Exhibitors home office in New York, has arrived here and is now in charge of the local exchange in place of Bob Boomer, who has resigned. Shepherd is leaving the exchange immediately for the Idaho branch; Miss Dora Maycock, booker, being in charge during his absence.

Boomer has been added to the Fox sales force and will be the Montana representative in the place of H. A. Black, who was recently transferred to Seattle.

H. Bradley Fish, manager of the local Fox exchange, is leaving within a few days with Boomer to visit the key town of Montana in the interest of the new product.

Branch Manager J. R. Epperson, of the Pathe exchange, is covering the Boise, Idaho, territory. C. J. Hafal and Bob Epperson, representatives out of this exchange, are making their respective territories in Idaho and Wyoming. George Jensen is in the office for a short stay, from the Utah territory.

Clyde H. Messinger, local branch manager for Educational, just returned from a highly successful trip in the western part of Wyoming. Mrs. Windsor has been added to tthe Educational exchange personnel and is acting in the capacity of booking clerk

Educational will be moved into their new quarters in the new film building by the 25th of May, according to Manager Messinger.

Branch Manager Jos. F. Samuels, Booker C. M. Stern, and all of the sales representatives out of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange here are now in attendance at the divisional convention in San Francisco. They are expected to return the latter part of this week.

Branch Manager, L. J. McGinley, is in Montana on an extended trip. Clarence Key, chief accountant, who is in charge of the office during his absence, reports that Helen Speirs of the Famous Players-Lasky office force, has recently changed her name to Mrs. Harry K. Miles.

Joe Goss, owner of the Orpheum Theatre at Ogden, Utah, has been in this city for a few days in the interest of his house.

Al O'Keefe, local manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, has left for an extended trip through Idaho and Montana.

Jack Connors, sales representative out of the local Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, returned from a trip into Nevada and left immediately for Wyoming and the Montpelier, Idaho, branch. C. C. McDermond has left for an extended trip into Southern Utah. Eddie Walton is in the Idaho section meeting with success according to reports.

Sales Manager Walter S. Rand, of the local United Artists exchange, is leaving this week for Boise and other Idaho points. Milton Cohn, salesman out of this office, is back from his territory in Montana and will make the Idaho territory before returning into Montana.

J. W. Simmons, owner of the Orpheum Theatre at Oakley, Idaho, is visiting Film Row this week.

James R. Keitz, manager here for the Columbia Exchanges, is back from a trip through Southern Idaho.

R. L. Wicker, of the Delta Theatre, at Delta, Utah, is conferring with local exchange managers this week on the new season's product.

The Peery Brothers of the Egyptian Theatre at Ogden, Utah, are also in this city lining up new business for their house.

Branch Manager Mathew Aparton, of the Universal exchange here, has returned from tthe Idaho territory. Tony Hartford and Jimmie Beale have been in from their territories and left again within a short time.

L. A. Davis, manager of the F. B. O. exchange of this city, is now in Montana accompanied by Sales Representative W. T. Withers. They intend this trip to be of several weeks' duration according to E. M. Gibson, assistant office manager here. Joe K. Soloman has just left for Idaho.

F. J. Paskert, traveling auditor for Associated First National, who is now visiting the local office, expects to be here for about two weeks.

Claude Hawkes and Pete Stewart, Associated First National sales representatives, are now in Idaho.

William McFarland, owner of the Manti Theatre at Manti, Utah, is visiting this city and attending to his bookings.

W. H. Rankin, manager of the Warner Brothers exchange here, is still in the Montana territory as is Salesman M. F. Keller.

An attempted robbery of the Victory Theatre safe was frustrated in the wee small hours Monday morning, May 17th, by the night watchman, Fred Whitacker. Upon hearing someone enter the window of the smoking room Whitacker notified the police who surrounded the theatre, and upon entering they discovered the would-be robber hid back on the stage. He was armed but surrendered and admitted having had the hope of securing a large amount from the safe due to the two big days which he had noticed the Victory Theatre had enjoyed. Manager Carl A. Porter was called from his bed about four o'clock and told of the prevented robbery.

F. C. Dahnken, one of the owners of the American Theatre of this city, is expected out from New York about the first of June to attend to the installation of furniture and fixtures and moving picture machines at the new theatre in Boise, Idaho. He will also be busy with the reseating of the American Theatre and the contemplated renovation of this house.

The Paramount Empress Theatre, managed by George E. Carpenter, has an added attraction this week in the form of east high school students.

Philadelphia

THE Douglas Theatre, which has been operated by Charles P. McLean, has been sold by Benny Borowsky to A. Margolis, for a price said to be $60,000. The house will undergo extensive improvements during the summer and will continue to operate under the same picture policy in the early fall.

The Lawndale Theatre, which was built a short time ago by the Lawndale Amusement Company, and has been operated by Elmer Prince, has been sold to Harry Freed for the reported sum of $140,000. Mr. Freed has already taken possession and will continue to operate under the same policy.

A delegation of Philadelphia motion picture men, including Oscar Neufeld, President of the Film Board of Trade, and Jerome Saffron, manager for F. B. O., went to Scranton in a body to attend the Welterweight Championship Boxing Match between Mickey Walker and Pete Latzo.

The motion picture industry in Philadelphia is taking a keen interest in the Sesqui preparations and many of the Vine Street exchanges have already elaborately decorated their buildings, among the first to don holiday regalia being Metro and F. B. O.

John Bethel, who has been connected with Associated Exhibitors in a sales capacity in Philadelphia, has been appointed manager of the Trio Exchange in Washington, D. C., which is operated jointly by the De Luxe, Twentieth Century and Masterpiece exchanges of Philadelphia.

The Lincoln Way, Gettysburg, Pa., which has been operated by M. J. McSherry, has been taken over by P. W. Smallsmith.

The Westmont Theatre, Westmont, N. J., which has been closed for some time, has been taken over by M. Gelliherter, who after making some improvements and renovations, will reopen the house on a daily policy.

The Northeastern Theatre, which was formerly operated by George Gravenstein under a lease, has been sold by Edward Costello to John Smith, who also operates the Liberty Theatre at Tacony, for a price said to be $150,000. Mr. Smith will make extensive alterations and improvements on the house and will reopen it about the middle of July. Mr. Smith is the father of Ulric Smith, booker in the Philadelphia office of Paramount.

The Stanley Company has closed the Allegheny Theatre, a picture and vaudeville house at Frankford & Allegheny Ave. and the Towers Theatre, Camden, N. J. Both houses will be entirely renovated during the summer and a new organ will be installed at the Allegheny.

The exhibitors' conference, which was scheduled to be held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on May 10th, has been indefinitely postponed, according to an announcement made by Robert Lynch, Philadelphia branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn, owing to the illness of Mr. Lewis Mayer, who was to be one of the speakers at the meeting.

Philadelphia interests are now making arrangements and having plans drawn for the erection of a $350,000 motion picture theatre and office building in Wynnewood, a suburb of Philadelphia. The theatre will be devoted entirely to motion pictures, with a probability of presentations being booked in after the house has been in operation.

The Stanley Company's new Earle Theatre, in Atlantic City, it is announced, will be formally opened on July 4tth and plans are now being completed for the opening of this, the second large theatre to be opened by the Stanley Company in Atlantic City within a year. The house will be devoted to a vaudeville and picture policy.

Plans are being made for the erection of a temporary theatre near the Sesqui-Centennial grounds. The formal opening of the Sesqui is scheduled for May 31st and it is expected that within a short period after that time a motion picture house will be in operation. Whether it will be operated by the Stanley Company or the owners of another large circuit in Philadelphia, could not be definitely learned.

Kansas City

ACTIVITY in the buying and building of theatres in the Kansas City territory continues at a rapid pace.

The Strand and Empire Theatres of Chillicothe, Mo., were taken over by Glen Dickinson of the Dickinson Enterprises, Lawrence, Kan., the houses being obtained from the Cuff-Kling Enterprises. Frank J. Ceckoud will have temporary charge of the theatres, which gives the Dickinson circuit control of twelve houses. Whittlesey Brothers, Topeka, Kan., contractors, are contemplating the erection of a large first run theatre in Topeka, although detailed plans are not completed. The Liberty Theatre, LaCynge, Kan., has been purchasd by P. F. Sterling of the Regent Theatre, Pleasanton, Kan., from E. L. Vance. The Highland Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, has been purchased by G. C. Blackmore from H. Fitzgerald. The Douglass Theatre, Lees Summit, Mo., has been obtained by J. H. Jankins from H. Buchannon. The razing of buildings at Thirteenth and Wyandotte Streets, Kansas City, is virtually completed, preparatory to the erection of the new 4,000-seat, $4,000,000 Midland Theatre, to be built by the Midland Theatre circuit.

Casually dropping into the office of the Kansas City Star this week and recalling when, as manager of the first film exchange in Kansas City, the best films sold for $5 and Kansas City had three motion picture theatres—20 years ago—M. Milder, manager of the home office of Fox was worth a liberal story.

The M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri is making an extended effort to locate a man traveling in the Kansas territory by the name of V. I. Link of Denver, Colo. Recently the M. P. T. O. K-M was instrumental in getting a state measure, calling for more rigid precaution in projection booths, passed. Since that time the Mr. Link, previously mentioned, has been endeavoring to sell exhibitors a Feaster re-wind aparatus under threat that the showman will be forced by the state fire board, sooner or later, to use it, according to information reaching the M. P. T. O. K-M office.

A new high record in shipments in the history of the Kansas City Pathe exchanges was established in the last two weeks.

"Bill" Warner, First National branch manager, returned from a trip through the territory and asserted business conditions were good.

A good sized check was received by Hugh Ausmas, of the shipping department of the Pathe exchange, in appreciation of a new reel shipping band suggested by him and which now is used in all Pathe exchanges.

Jack Auslet can argue. No one ever disputed that. Therefore there was only mild surprise when he won one of the national awards on sales arguments for his company—Pathe.

Charles Knickerbocker, film veteran of the Kansas City territory, has joined the P. D C. branch sales force, according to C. A. Schultz, branch manager.

E. C. Rhoden, Midwest Film Exchange manager, departed on a tour of the key towns, while A. H. Cole, ad sales manager at the Paramount branch, returned from a southern trip.

"Bob" Carnie and Roy Young, Paramount representatives who have been on the road—"a la flivver"—for the last two weeks, are searching the dictionary for new and forceful adjectives to express their sentiment concerning the roads.

The exhibiting end of the industry in Monett, Mo., having slowed up a bit, C H. Maggs, exhibitor, has decided to learn how the selling end works during summer months. He has accepted a position as representative of the P. D. C. exchange in Kansas City.

It was a great week of renewing friendships for Milton Feld, formerly managing director of the Newman and Royal Theatres, Kansas City, last week. Mr. Feld, who went to Los Angeles with Frank Newman when Paramount took over the Newman and Royal Theatres, now is with Publix theatres.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: M. J. Aley, Regent, Eureka, Kas.; E. C. Fisher, People's, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; J. M. Bailey, Bailey Theatre, Waverly, Kas.; Mrs. C. H. Barron, Kansas Theatre, Wichita, Kas.; F. Wilhoit, Orpheum, St. Joseph, Mo.; Herb Thatcher, Abilene, Kas.; Herb Welsh, Orpheum, Atchison, Kas.; W. E. JACK JOHNSON, prominent exhibitor in Oklahoma, and partner of the Griffith Brothers in the theatres of Enid, Oklahoma, is in St. Anthony's hospital at Oklahoma City, as the result of an automobile accident. Mr. Johnson's face, hands and breast are badly cut and his mouth injured so that it has been difficult to discover just how the accident occurred. He had started from his home at Enid to drive into Oklahoma City alone, and was found on the road north of his destination by a passing garage man. His car, a new Studebaker roadster was completely demolished. No bones were broken, and so far no complications have arisen and it is believed that he will recover completely.

H. N. Walker, accessory clerk for the local P. D. C. exchange, recently received the fruits of his reward for having been awarded first prize for the most efficient accessory department in the United States. The prizes were a fountain pen and pencil and a gold mounted wallet and were personal gifts of Cecil DeMille.

The Griffith Brothers have recently added two more theatres to their chain with the purchase of the Pollard and Highland Theatres at Guthrie. A. R. Powell, former owner of the Highland, will manage both the Highland and Pollard for the new owners.

Three more film exchanges moved into new quarters this week. First National and Fox moved into their new offices in the Film Building, and Universal into their own building at 519 West Main.

A. G. Carlyle is enlarging the Hinton Theatre at Hinton, Okla., to a seating capacity of 150 seats.

C. E. and A. B. Momand made another theatre acquisition recently in the Liberty Theatre at Hartshorne, Okla. D. Buffo is the former owner of the Liberty.

R. F. Wilbern is building a third theatre at Duncan, to be completed July 1st. The new theatre will seat 500 and will be one of the finest theatres of its size in the state.

G. A Peterson is closing his Folly Theatre at Hollis on June 1st for remodeling. The Folly, when it reopens in the fall, will be larger by two hundred seats and will boast a gallery.

J. L. Poole has purchased 325 new chairs for his theatre at Wewoka, Okla., The Wewoka, and a cooling system for his Olympic.

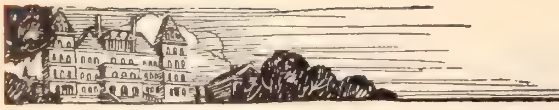
Julius Singer, sales director of the Universal Complete Service, Contract department, spent a busy two days at the local office here recently.

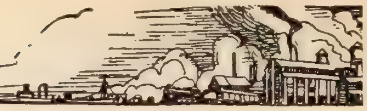
H. O. Stark, booker for Producers' Distributing Corp., is going to go on the road as salesman for that company. J. P. Hudgins, formerly cashier, will become booker, and Miss Kathryn Penmanton will succeed Mr. Hudgins as cashier. Miss Penmanton comes to P. D. C. from Fox, where she was cashier.

Fred Pickrel, president of the M. P. T. O. of Oklahoma, has sold his home in Oklahoma City and moved his family to an attractive new home in Ponca City.

The same producing unit that made "The Green Archer" the greatest serial of the age is working with GENE TUNNEY in a Pathéserial



Albany



MANY of the exchange managers and salesmen in this city attended the opening of W. H. Linton's theatre in Utica, last week. R. E. Bishop, manager of the Pro-Dis-Co exchange and Burt Gibbons, were on hand, as well as H. C. Bissell, local manager for Universal, and Harry Seed, manager for Warner Brothers. William Smalley, of Cooperstown, and a number of exhibitors from other places, were also present.

Visitors in town during the week included Earl Kelly, of Millbrook; Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Mallory, of Corinth; Moe Mark, of New York; Sam Eckman, of New York, and Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward.

H. Girsh, of the Circle Theatre in Monticello, announces that he will open his theatre on May 28. Jack Kaplan, owner of the Rivoli in South Fallsburgh, is now running seven days a week, and anticipates a big summer season in the Catskills.

State Troopers are unusually active at this time in checking up motion picture theatres in smaller places, and as a result two houses were closed by the Troopers last week to remain so until alterations can be made that will bring the theatres and their exits within the requirements of the law.

Jack Matthews, of Plattsburg, was in town on his way to New York City last week, and incidentally told the boys along Film Row something new in the way of toggery. He is one of the best dressed exhibitors in this part of the state and always refers to himself as the "wild cat" booker of the north. If Mr. Matthews was as good a fisherman as he is a dresser, there would probably be no occasion for Mrs. Matthews to remark that her husband has yet to bring home a good mess of fish.

Louis Schine, of Gloversville, paid a visit to Oswego last week, and announced that the Strand Theatre there would be closed for three months, during which time its seating capacity will be doubled and a stage will be added. The pictures booked for the Strand, will be shown at the Richardson, which is also owned by the Schines.

Ernest J. Wolfe suddenly resigned last week as manager of the Bijou Theatre in Lowville, which is a Schine house. The building where the theatre is located is owned by Mr. Wolfe, who rented it last summer to the company. No one has yet been named to succeed Mr. Wolfe.

William E. Benton, of Saratoga Springs, owner of a half dozen houses, was one of the incorporators last week, of a company in Saratoga Springs, that will have as its object the aiding of industrial development in that city.

Mrs. Walter Roberts, cashier at the Troy Theatre and wife of the manager, is still at a Troy hospital, but practically recovered from her long illness, and is now looking forward to spending a portion of the summer at a camp at a lake outside the city.

Grossman and Frieder, owners of the Playhouse and Rialto Theatres in Hudson and newcomers to this section, were in Albany a good part of last week, visiting various exchanges.

Sam Hochstim, owner of the Star in Hudson, is said to be planning an 1,800-seat house that will replace his present structure.

James Rose has decided not to build a new theatre in Rensselaer this summer. He already operates houses there as well as in Troy and Kinderhook.

Walter Suckno is to become manager of the Playhouse in Hudson, according to reports along Film Row. He is the son of the late owner of the Albany and Regent Theatres, and was manager of the Regent Theatre for a considerable period and up until the time the house was leased to the Strand interests. His sister, Noma, who was manager of the Albany Theatre, has just opened a lingerie shop in the new theatre being erected in this city by the Strand interests.

J. S. Burnham, of Ogdensburg, is said to have closed a deal with Michael Bloom, of Cortland, to the end that he will build a new theatre in Ogdensburg in the near future. Mr. Burnham's house was burned to the ground some months ago.

Ray Coyle, inspector-booker for Pathe, is here for a couple of weeks. A. J. Pincus, a Pathe salesman, also has a new car.

Leon Medem, now representing the Chase Film Company in Albany, may take over quarters now occupied by the Universal exchange, when the latter moves to the new Film Building.

Joe Kallet has work well under way on the new house being erected in Rome. He expects that it will be ready for occupancy in January. His brother, Mike, who runs the Madison Theatre in Oneida, is going in heavy for outdoor sports, indulging in horseback rides and spending much of his time on the links in the hopes of becoming the champion golfer of Oneida.

M. N. Silver has joined the First National forces here as salesman. He comes here from Chicago.

Young ladies employed in the Pathe office here are already planning for an office picnic in the near future.

The Rialto Theatre in Massena, was entered by burglars last week, and about $70 taken. The house is owned by Frank Kuras.

All the girls in the Pathe office but two, have followed in the footsteps of those in the adjoining Paramount office, and appeared in smocks last week.

Tony Veiller, manager of the Mark Strand, reports as many as 100 letters a day reaching him in connection with a suitable name for the theatre now under construction.

George Goldberg, a local Pathe salesman, has a lot of respect for the laws of Massachusetts. In making his rounds of theatres, Mr. Goldberg forgot to carry his registration card with him as he journeyed over the line into Massachusetts. As a result, he came to the attention of a bluecoat, and it's a safe bet that the registration card will never leave Mr. Goldberg again.

B. B. Kelly, of the Strand in Millbrook, was in town last week, booking up pictures for a good part of the summer. Mr. Kelly is quite a baseball tosser and will join the Pittsfield professional team for a try-out in the near future.

Manager Olivey, of the Strand in Carthage, accompanied a cameraman last week, to one of the big log drives on the Beaver River. The pictures will later on be shown at the Strand.

George Roberts, of this city, who is handling theatres in Hudson, has instituted a "country store" one night a week. The Rialto of Amsterdam has closed until September, to permit alterations.

Uly S. Hill has bought an apartment house in Albany, and is having it remodeled

Austin Interrante plans to return to Troy the latter part of August and reopen the Astor Theatre on August 28.

Louis Cappa took over the Delaware Theatre in Albany last week.

Frank L. Asher, of the Starr in Rhinebeck, is now running two days a week. He is also in the coal and realty business.

Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose in Troy, will be among those who will attend the Shrine convention in Philadelphia, the latter part of this month. Mr. Rosenthal is a life member of Oriental Temple, and a framed certificate in his office testifies to that effect. Mr. Rosenthal is planning to run his amateur nights each week throughout the entire summer as he did a year ago, and will be about the only exhibitor in this part of the state who will do so.

William Smalley cooperated with the merchants of Delhi a week ago, and ran a double cooperative page in the newspaper in that village. Mr. Smalley operates the theatre in Delhi, which was formerly owned by the proprietor of one of the newspapers there.

Butte

ON Wednesday, the 12th of May, members of the Montana Film Board of Trade met in the office of Harry Meyer in the Pennsylvania Block. Mr. Meyer is the Secretary-Treasurer and General Counsel for the Board. W. J. Heineman, President of the Board, called the meeting to order and presented such routine business as came before the meeting. Those here from Salt Lake City were M. McIllhenny of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange; M. Cohn of United Artists; L. J. McGinley, of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and W. H. Rankin, of Warner Brothers' exchange.

All of the Montana exchanges were well represented.

Canada

EXHIBITORS of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Western Ontario attended the convention of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, which was held in the Marlborough Hotel, Winnipeg, Manitoba, on May 18, an all-day session and banquet being conducted. The officials present included Maurice Milligan, formerly of Winnipeg, who is the Canadian general-manager with headquarters at Toronto; William Hansher of Vancouver, B. C., Western Division manager for Famous-Lasky, and A. Ritchie, Winnipeg branch manager, who had direct charge of arrangements. Portions of many forthcoming Paramount releases were screened for the exhibitors.

That an exhibitor can successfully step out of his character as a theatre manager has been demonstrated by W. P. McGeachie, manager of the Algoma Theatre, Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario. Mr. McGeachie has launched a "Buy-at-Home" campaign and in this he has received wonderful support from local merchants. He has been publishing timely editorials on the subject. One minor result is that many of the stores are now more than glad to make use of the Algoma Theatre window cards for current attractions.

Clarence Robson of Toronto, Eastern Canadian general manager of theatres for Famous Players Canadian Corp., has been lying seriously ill with an internal malady, the exact nature of which has not been ascertained.

Thomas Bragg, comptroller of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, has returned after a three weeks' rest in Kentucky where he went in order to recuperate from a siege of sickness. He is much improved.

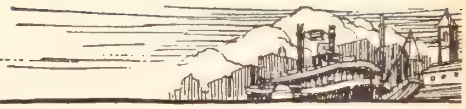
St. Louis



THE Missouri Supreme Court has sustained the right of the City of St. Louis to proceed with the widening of Olive Street, between Twelfth Boulevard and Channing Avenue, and as a result the owners of the various film exchange buildings on the south side of that thoroughfare will be notified to take over some 40 feet from the front of their buildings or else move the structures back that distance.

In anticipation of this widening, which will convert Olive Street from a 60-foot to a 100-foot thoroughfare, several of the exchange buildings were erected so as to provide for the change. The second floors were set back while the first floor arrangements are such that little inconvenience will be experienced in making the desired changes.

The widened street will line up with Lindell Boulevard west of Channing Avenue and as a result most of the East and West traffic of the city will be diverted that way.

The Lyric Skydome operated by Skouras Brothers which seats approximately 4,000 persons opened for the 1926 season on Saturday evening, May 22. Last season Skouras Brothers expended more than $100,000 to convert this into one of America's finest outdoor amusement places.

The Missouri Theatre baseball team opened its 1926 season on May 20 with a one-sided victory over the ball tossing squad from the St. Louis Theatre. The game was staged at Fairground Park and was featured by the free hitting of the Missourians and the pitching of Watson. The teams are due to clash again Thursday, May 27.

George Atkins of Barrington, Ill., is taking bids for the construction of a new motion picture theatre in that city. It will cost about $50,000 and cover a lot 49 by 143 feet on Main Street.

The new theatre at Carbondale, Ill., will open about August 15. It will be operated by I. W. Rodgers.

The motion picture theatre at West Union, Ill., was one of several structures destroyed by a fire which wiped out a large section of the main business district on Thursday, May 20. The city is without fire protection.

The theatre at Donnellson, Ill., was threatened by a fire which destroyed a lodge hall and mercantile building on the opposite side of the street on Thursday, May 20. Fortunately the wind was blowing away from the theatre building.

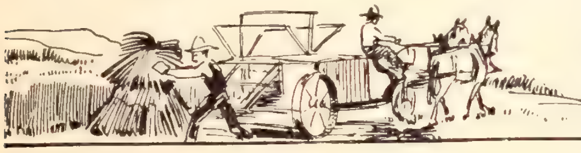
Sol Rose, salesman for the local Universal exchange who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis at the hospital in Hillsboro, Ill., has resumed his duties. He was taken suddenly ill while making his territory and for a time his condition was very critical.

The St. Louis Board of Public Service has authorized the Gohman-Levine Construction Company of Chicago to erect a steel canopy in front of the new St. Louis-Gravois Theatre at 4519 Gravois Avenue. This house will soon be ready for its grand opening.

Mrs. Frances Peart, owner of the Pert Theatre, Gillespie, Ill., has taken over three other houses. They are: Eagle, Livingston, Ill.; The White City Theatre and the house at Worden, Ill. This gives Mrs. Peart a string of four houses and undoubtedly will keep her very busy.

Phil Heyde will open his new Arcadia Theatre at Olney, Ill., on June 1. This house seats 850 and is among the finest in that section. Heyde also operates the Elks and Alco Theatres in Olney. His equipment for the Arcadia includes two Simplex projectors with Peerless lamps purchased through the St. Louis Exhibitors Supply Company.

Andy Gump, who formerly managed the Washington Theatre, Belleville, Ill., plans to convert the Union Labor Temple in East St. Louis into a motion picture house. The theatre would seat 800 persons. It is located on Collinsville Avenue but a short distance north of State Street. Merchants of the vicinity are cooperating with Gump in a movement to install a white way. The proposition is now before the City Council for approval.



Des Moines

RE-ELECTION of officers of the Des Moines Film Board of Trade was held on May 10, W. E. Banford, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch, being again voted in as president of the board. James Winn of Educational, was elected as vice president, succeeding Tilton, manager for First National. Frank Crawford, executive for Famous-Players, was elected executive secretary, succeeding S. S. Swarz of Premier. Mary Benjamin was again elected secretary and treasurer. At the next meeting of the Film Board new members will be selected for several committees on which various members will be unable to serve, including the fire committee, the credit committee and the arbitration board.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa have now officially opened up their offices at 214 Iowa Building, and a capable young lady by the name of Briggs is established as secretary for the association. Exhibitors of the state who are in need of service from this organization may address themselves to the association headquarters.

George C. Nolan is back in Des Moines territory. He was at the Sioux Falls office of Universal. Sioux Falls, Omaha and Des Moines are his territory. Mr. Nolan will be in Des Moines for an indefinite length of time doing special sales work.

F. B. Walters, who has had charge of special publicity for the Des Moines office of Universal, returned to Orange, New Jersey, with his wife. The illness of Mrs. Walters made necessary the return to New Jersey.

E. P. Smith, manager of the Strand at Newton and the official representative of the Iowa exhibitors' association of Motion Picture Theatre Owners for the national convention in Los Angeles, in Des Moines last week, stated that he is not going to tour to the convention. He will make the trip by train.

The Des Moines office of Universal won second in the present national sales contest.

D. C. Payne is now of the sales staff of Universal. He succeeds Peckinpaw in Zone D. Peckinpaw is no longer in Iowa territory.

G. A. D. Hoet, owner of the American Theatre at Prairie City, is contemplating closing his theatre for the summer season.

George Stephenson, of the advertising department of Famous Players, is vacation bound for two weeks in St. Louis.

Miss Morgan, formerly secretary at the office of Universal, treated all the girls of the exchange to a steak fry last week. They went up to the Ledges State Park for the party.

L. C. West of the Colonial Theatre at Grinnell was seen in Movie Row last week.

C. L. Niles of the Eastern Iowa Theatres Company, headquarters at Anamosa, on his recent trip to Des Moines, announced that the opening of the theatre at Decorah, recently acquired by his company, is set for June 15. The company takes possession on June 1, and will close the theatre for two weeks for redecoration.

THAT a large moving picture theatre will be built at Monument and Chester Streets, in East Baltimore, is the rumor that is current here. Frank Durkee, proprietor of the Palace, Belnord and Forest Theatres here, is said to be back of the project.

Henry Boehme, organist at the Rivoli Theatre, had his head injured in an automobile accident recently. He is recovering.

Odd Fellows Hall, Crisfield, Md., also known as the Opera House, is being extensively remodeled as a modern, up-to-date moving picture theatre by George W. Lawson and G. E. Maddrix, who have operated a moving picture theatre in that city for the past two years. The playhouse will seat 1,000 and will have a balcony, stores, an assembly room and offices will be included in the plans.

The Brandenburg Realty Company, Brandenburg, Ky., is planning to equip an auditorium as a moving picture theatre and are making inquiries about motion picture machinery. W. A. Baskett is president of the company.

Kenneth Thompson, Broadway actor, who this week signed a contract with Cecil B. De Mille

A benefit moving picture performance for the Boy Scouts of Westminster, Md., was given at the Armory of that town Wednesday and Thursday nights and Thursday afternoon, May 19 and 20.

The contract for remodeling and improving the City Opera House, Frederick, Md., has been given out by Mayor Lloyd C. Culler and the Board of Aldermen. About $30,000 will be spent on the work.

A motion picture theatre and store building to cost approximately $10,000 is being built at Burlington, Tenn., by J. R. Williams, Knoxville, Tenn.

About $10,000 is being spent by the Rialto Theatre Company, Chattanooga, Tenn., on repairs and improvements to that playhouse.

Plans are being made now by J. E. Webb, Kings Mountain, N. C., to remodel two stores for a motion picture theatre.

Mrs. Henry D. Matcher, wife of the assistant floor manager at the Rivoli Theatre, presented her husband with an 8½ pound baby girl on Saturday morning, May 15, at 1 a. m., at the Hebrew Hospital. Both are in the best of health and Matcher has a grin that won't come off.

Lilly Murphy, head usher of Warners' Metropolitan Theatre, Baltimore, intends to make a trip to England shortly. She will leave Baltimore Saturday, May 22 and expects to return here in September. She will visit relatives. A luncheon will be given her by Mrs. Frederick A. Schanze, wife of the former president of the Metropolitan Theatre Company, on Wednesday, May 12.

A benefit performance for the Civic League Fly Campaign of Westminster, Md., was given at the Star Theatre, that city, by George Osborne, manager of the playhouse, on Friday, May 14.

Clarence Eiseman, well known in Baltimore, is now branch manager for the Producers' Distributing Corporation, Washington, D. C.

Charles Rechetnik, formerly representing Warners in Baltimore, has been appointed assistant general salesmanager of that company in New York Norman L. Ayers is now handling the Baltimore territory for Warners.

Denver

WILLIAM FOX, president of the Fox Film Corporation, was one of Denver's prominent visitors last week. He was accompanied by his family, which included Mr. and Mrs. Milton Schwartz and A. C. Blumenthal, his manager. It was stated, however, that Mr. Fox would go through to Kansas City from Denver, where a deal is pending for the erection of a new million dollar Fox theatre.

Arthur Schmidt, F. B O. district manager, left Denver Thursday evening for San Francisco, after spending a week visiting Sid Weisbaum, manager of the Denver F. B. O. branch office.

Charles Klein, owner and operator of a circuit of theatres in South Dakota was one of the prominent exhibitor visitors of Denver, last week. While here, Mr. Klein served in behalf of the exhibitors on the Board of Arbitration, substituting for one of the regular members who was absent.

Gordon B. Ashworth, owner and manager of the Federal Theatre, Denver, and chairman of the Denver Joint Board of Arbitration, has everything in readiness to attend the National M. P. T. O. Convention in Los Angeles. Mr. Ashworth anticipates motoring from Denver to Los Angeles.

Joe Ashby, First National manager, is back at his desk, after spending several days in Albuquerque, N. M., on a business trip. While there, he met Ned Marin, First National sales manager.

A special luncheon, devoted entirely to the discussion of motion pictures, was held last Monday noon, by the legislative council of the American Federation of Women's Clubs. The meeting was held in one of the leading Denver hotels, and was largely attended. Those present included representatives from all nearby towns.

H. E. Ellison, former manager of the Paramount Theatre of Denver, and one of the pioneer exhibitors of the territory, was the principal speaker.

Eugene Gerbase, manager of the Associated Exhibitors, is back at his desk after spending three weeks visiting the leading exhibitors in New Mexico and other parts of the southern territory. He came through from Albuquerque to Denver on his return, full of information about the proposed new theatre of the Barnett Amusement Company of Albuquerque.

Exhibitors visiting Denver during the past week were: M. C. Correll, owner of the Rialto Theatre, Cheyenne Wells, Colorado; James Lynch, president of Wyoming Theatre Managers' Assn., who operates theatres in Laramie, Wyo.; Tom Love of Hanna, Wyoming, William Delahoyd of Whiting Theatre, Thermopolis, Wyoming, and Charles Klein of the Black Hils Amusement Co., Deadwood, S. D.

Cleveland

THE Cleveland Film Board of Trade has received notification of the closing of several houses for the summer months, and of the reduction of showing schedule in other houses. The Rex Theatre in Akron is closed for the summer. The Mayfield, Cleveland, is also closed. The Gem, Halloway, is closed on account of a smallpox scare in the town. The Roma, Columbus Grove, is closed every Monday night. The Chaise, Senecaville, is closed on Wednesday night. The Royal is open on Sunday only. And the Orpheum, Marion, closed May 15th and will reman closed until September 1st.

Bob Mochrie, manager of the Pittsburgh P. D. C. exchange, went out to the P. D. C. convention in California and was taken sick with scarlet fever. He is now in a Los Angeles hospital, doing nicely, but still unable to come home. Everyone around here sends greetings to Bob and hopes for his speedy recovery.

The Fischer Film Exchange has purchased the product of the American Cinema Association for next year and will handle its distribution throughout Ohio.

Work on the new Cleveland Fox exchange has been resumed, following the settlement of the building strike which tied up local building activities for eleven weeks.

The Euclid Beach Theatre opened for its summer season on Sunday, May 23rd. Joe Leavitt, manager of the King Theatre, runs the Euclid Beach.

M. B. Horwitz, is closing his Haltnorth Theatre for a month, in order to rebuild the interior of the house and to re-equip and decorate it. The Haltnorth is one of the old neighborhood houses of the city. It caters largely to a foreign element. And Horwitz says this his experience has taught him that he can double his business, even in a cheap house, if that house is clean, and fresh and attractive.

Percy M. Tracy is no longer the manager of the Standard Theatre at Cuyahoga Falls. R. H. Jones, owner of the building, will henceforth manage the house himself. Tracy is out of the picture business altogether—according to report.

The Rivoli Theatre in Defiance will open its doors to the public on May 29th under its new ownership. The house, which has been closed for some time, was recently purchased by the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland. John Nist will manage the theatre.

Let Local News Reels Sell Your Theatre

Cost of Operation Small in Comparison with Drawing Power of "Town Topical"

By J. VICTOR WILSON

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Dr. J. Victor Wilson, author of this article on the local news reel as a powerful box office factor, is now managing director of the Motion Picture Corporation of Florida operating the Strand at Miami Beach and planning a chain of houses in that section. Dr. Wilson is well known in the industry. He was for several years manager of the Mark Strand in New York City, where in 1915 he pioneered in making special news pictures for the theatre with his famous "camera car and the Strand's own camera man."

THE theatrical manager's eternal problem is how to attract patrons to the playhouse. We use every effort at our command and meet with more or less success as the case might be. The publicity departments of the various pictures corporations have been of vast benefit to the exhibitor. The press book with its advance, current, special and review copy, its advertising layouts, and its exploitation suggestions is a boon to the busy exhibitor, if he will take advantage of it.

But we cannot and must not rely entirely upon the press book. Every community has its individual interests and by being alert and in touch with what is going on, as well as future happenings, the exhibitor can make tie-ups at the psychological moment that will show results in the box office. It is always well to bear in mind that a new patron is an old patron in the making, so show him something that will bring him back again.

Study Community Conditions

Previous to the opening of the Strand Theatre, Miami Beach, I studied the community for about three weeks and laid out my publicity campaign, most, if not all, of which is "old stuff," so I will not dwell upon it here. One of the things we are doing here, however, is not, to the best of my knowledge, done elsewhere to any great extent—that is the photographing of events of interest to the local community.

It is a well-known fact that the news reels are among the subjects most enjoyed by theatre-goers. Local news events projected on the screen create a great deal of interest. Most people who know that they have been "shot" by the cameraman want to see how they look upon the screen and so do their friends. If a scene is photographed in the presence of a thousand onlookers, it is a safe bet that 90 per cent of these onlookers will want to see how it looks upon the screen and will come to the theatre where it is being shown. The idea is to convey to the onlookers the name of the theatre where the pictures will be projected.

Miami is a very fertile field for the photographing of events of local interest. Something happens almost every day and wherever something takes place, we endeavor to be on the job with our cameraman. To illustrate one day's work, I will enumerate the various events "covered" on a Sunday.

Selecting Screen Subjects

We commenced work at 1 P. M., when we went to Lummus Park, located directly opposite the Strand Theatre. Here we photographed hundreds of children at play on swings and other amusement contraptions. On the beach we photographed bathers and onlookers. Next we went to the Roman Pools, where a tournament of water sports of all descriptions was in progress. Over two thousand people surrounded the pools. We took pictures of the crowds as well as many of the events. We then went up on the piazza and "shot" groups of people at tables enoying refreshments as they watched the tournament. Next we went to the fashionable Deauville Casino, photographing the bathers and hundreds of guests. Here we also took pictures of Lieut. Francis W. Sutherland and his Seventh Regiment band, a very popular musical organization here.

I learned through the newspapers that the owners of Normandy Beach were to serve a barbecue and entertain prospective real estate buyers with a jazz orchestra, so we left the Deauville Casino and hastened to Normandy Beach. Here we found hundreds of people seated on benches in front of the administration building on the porch of which the jazz band was playing. We first took pictures of the building and the band after which we placed our camera on the porch and took a panoramic picture of the entire assemblage. We take good care that everyone who sees us "shooting" are made to know where the pictures are to be shown. On the side of our car we carry a big sign reading: "These pictures will be shown at the Strand Theatre, Miami Beach," and a banner with the same copy is placed on the tripod.

I have been much interested in the re-

Equipment

Our Best

By P. M. ABBOTT

WE have always striven to present to our readers articles and other editorial matter well worth while. Something different and of real value in operating and equiping motion picture theatres. This each week.

But issued as a special supplement to our next Saturday's edition dated June 12th, our efforts are climaxed in the spring edition of Theatre Building and Equipment BUYERS GUIDE. This book will be found the most interesting and useful publication that has ever been compiled for the motion picture industry.

Eight pages of full color reproductions of sketches for "atmospheric theatres." Eight pages of ideas for that different theatre which every progressive exhibitor plans to build. More—John Eberson, noted theatre architect, has written a lengthy article on "atmospheric theatres" that is full of valuable tips on present and future designs for theatres.

FURTHERMORE, BUYERS GUIDE will have a cord attached for hanging up in some convenient place. Every recipient will want to save this book for reference. For it will contain complete cross indexed listings of sources of purchase for all kinds of equipment and supplies.

These listings, which have been compiled with painestaking care, will be most opportune in as much as a majority of exhibitors are, at this season, planning to renovate or remodel their theatre. Besides having available references for purchasing the more important equipment it will be found a great convenience to know where to turn to buy small odds and ends.

Watch for your copy. You will agree with us that we have more than published a valuable book—we have set a high water mark for trade publications.

Starts Drive to Chase Theatre "Pests"

Annoyance from Loud Talking Being Cured by Program Campaign

AN attack on the theatre "pests" who, to the annoyance of their fellow spectators at picture shows, carry on a rapid-fire conversation, read titles aloud, kick seats, husk peanuts and otherwise occupy themselves with pursuits distracting to the general audience, has been started by Manager Walter Davis of the Metropolitan Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Davis is making appreciable progress in ridding the Metropolitan of the bad manners which characterize many picture theatre audiences by means of a simple campaign carried on in the house program in which he has inserted the following invitation:

"What Movie Patrons Call a Pest—Talkers, coughers, gum chewers, foot tappers, seat kickers, peanut huskers and those who read the moving picture titles out loud.

"The above happens in the best-regulated houses and any time you should be annoyed please call the usher's attention."

Rousing Welcome Home for Mellie in Portland

Never before have such vast crowds welcomed either famous visitor or returning son as turned out to welcome Mellie and "Gran" Dunham to their native state of Maine the past week. Mellie is completing a 22-weeks tour as a fiddler.

All Portland turned out to welcome Mellie at the depot. Business practically suspended. Leading stores held receptions, so their customers could greet him and pages of advertising were devoted to the exact time and place, daily, where Mellie would be on hand to greet folks. His home town of Norway ran two special trains to Portland to carry the crowds who wanted to be on hand. When his train pulled in, the governor, mayor, and city officials of Portland, headed by several bands, were on hand. He closed his tour Saturday night at Keith's Theatre, Portland.

Musical Stock Supplants Vaudeville at Forsyth

Musical stock will supplant Keith vaudeville in the Forsyth, Atlanta, for the Summer. The new policy goes into effect on June 7, when Don Lanning, with his company, will open a Summer engagement in musical comedy. Lanning himself is the star, Rita Thomasina is the prima donna, and Ruth Lester is the ingenue.

The initial offering of the Don Lanning Musical Comedy Company will be, "No Other Girl."

Orpheum in Duluth Will Become Stock House

The Orpheum Theatre at Duluth, operated by the Blackmore Brothers, will discontinue its photoplay policy, beginning June 1, and will be taken over by a stock company. The Blackmore brothers control the Capitol and Diamond theatres of Duluth and the New State of West Duluth.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

BOYD MARTIN, formerly dramatic editor of The Courier-Journal and instructor in dramatics at the University of Louisville, has been appointed manager of the Strand Theatre in Louisville. Martin also is to be the general press representative for the Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, which operates the Strand, Alamo, Walnut, Rex and several suburban theatres.

CARL MAHNE, formerly associated with various theatrical enterprises in Everett, Wash., last week assumed the management of Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre in Seattle and will also be associated with the management of Hamrick's Uptown Theatre, a new neighborhood house scheduled to open within the next few weeks.

J. N. KENNEDY, who has been Assistant Manager at the West Coast Company's the Granada in Wilmington, is now manager of the Capitol and the Art Theatres, West Coast houses at Rodondo, California.

HARRY K. WAREHAM is now managing the Rialto Theatre, Colorado Springs. He was formerly assistant manager of the Chicago Theatre, Chicago. He succeeded Gerald B. Argust as manager of the Rialto.

H. D. CHEERY has succeeded Joe La Rose as manager of the Embassy Theatre in Baltimore. Cheery was for some time connected with the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests in Philadelphia.

Charleston Contest Big Card at Rialto, Butte

All of the past week theatre fans have been crowding to the Rialto Theatre, Butte, to glimpse the high steppers who are top notchers in the "Charleston." A contest was on, with big money prizes to the winners. It began with a series of contests gradually eliminating the number by popular vote of the house until the winners of the various entrants became eligible to compete for the championship prize. Interest was at a tense pitch all of the time and finally it became a tie, with two girls being declared winners and both are to eventually try out for the big finale prize.

Playing Vaudeville Acts at Suburban Theatre

The Ashland Theatre, a Kansas City suburban house, has gone from one extreme to the other. Until recently the theatre did not advertise outside its own lobby and the program consisted of pictures only, at 5 and 10 cents. Then the management adopted small newspaper advertising and some vaudeville. This week the theatre is carrying extensive newspaper advertising, five acts of vaudeville—and a liberal story, gratis, in daily newspapers.

600-Seat House Shows Vaudeville

J. Spadaro, owner of the Shadowland, in Ellenville, N. Y., is now running vaudeville one day a week, and declares that the venture is proving a paying one. He has a 600-seat house.

Building Business With a Local News Reel

sults and am happy to state that they have been very gratifying indeed. I have further satisfied myself that the taking of local motion pictures has created much interest. Standing in the lobby of the theatre I hear patrons ask the ticket seller such questions as, "Do you show the pictures that were taken at Deauville last Sunday, tonight?" or "What time will they show the pictures that were taken at the Miami Beach Golf Club last Thursday?"

The cost of taking local events is trifling compared with the results it brings. Much has been said and written about "atmosphere" in the lobby and theatre and some managers spend enormous sums of money in dressing up the lobby and interior of the theatre as well as costuming ushers and other attaches. This, of course, is all very nice, but after all, the patrons have come to the theatre to see this, whereas you bring patrons to the theatre, who perhaps were never there before, by going after them with the motion picture camera. I believe in getting the crowd to the theatre and after getting them there giving them a good show on the screen and stage, if you have one.

And now, how expensive is this stunt? Can the average exhibitor afford to do it? Most emphatically, yes. Here we employ a cameraman. He has his own camera and outfit and charges according to the footage used. We use on an average of 400 feet at a weekly cost of $100. This is cheap, I admit, but even if the cost were 50 per cent. more, how can anyone get better advertising for this amount? While I consider what we are paying as very reasonable, I believe that the cost can be brought down still further by the theatre owning its own camera, buying its own raw film and paying for the laboratory work.

Special Matinee Rate Saturdays

Manager Tom Daley of the Tivoli, large downtown Toronto theatre, has adopted a special matinee rate to meet the increased competition of outdoor sports and touring on Saturdays. For the warm weather, any seat in the whole theatre, from noon until 5 P. M. on Saturday, now sells for 25 cents. The admission scale for all other times remains as before.

Daily Change Policy at Gayety

The Gayety Theatre, former burlesque house in Kansas City, which changed its policy recently to feature picture presentation, again has amended its policy. A daily change of pictures now is in force at the theatre, which is charging 10 and 15 cents admission.

Cut Prices at Baltimore Embassy

Prices at the Embassy Theatre have been reduced for the Summer months to equal those charged at other first run moving picture theatres in Baltimore. They are matinees, 35 cents; nights, 35 and 50 cents. Heretofore the top price for admission has been 75 cents.

Stillman Opens Season of Revivals

Special Engagement of Six Weeks Starts at Cleveland House

THE Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, this week started a proposed engagement of six weeks, devoted to revivals of outstanding screen successes of the near and distant past. The engagement is being sponsored by the Cleveland Plain Dealer through its photoplay editor, W. Ward Marsh, and is the third engagement of its kind.

The revival season was first tried at the Stillman four years ago during the Summer months and proved a success. The following year it was repeated, but not with the success that crowned the preceding engagement.

The season was opened Monday with a showing of ''The Unholy Three.'' Pictures announced for the first two weeks of the engagement are: ''The White Sister,'' ''The Woman of Paris,'' ''The Prisoner of Zenda,'' ''Smilin' Thru,'' ''Robin Hood,'' ''The Sea Hawk,'' ''Peter Ibbetson,'' ''Classified,'' ''Scaramouche,'' ''Three Musketeers,'' and ''Orphans of the Storm.''

There will be a change of pictures daily and the showings are continuous from noon until late in the evening. The orchestra of the Stillman has disbanded for the Summer, and music for the revivals is furnished by the organ.

Aaronson's Commanders and Publix Show at Shea's

Stage presentations at the Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, last week featured Irving Aaronson's Commanders, in a jazz program of bright and lively tone, and the Publix unit show ''Southern Memories,'' the latter produced by Paul Oscard.

Extra stage features are being offered weekly at the Buffalo, the previous program supplementing the Publix show, ''The Bridal Veil,'' with Harry Carroll's Revue. The feature picture was ''The Devil's Circus.''

Eddie Dowling Star of Show at Stanley Last Week

Eddie Dowling, offering a repertoire of his song hits, was the featured stage attraction on an elaborate bill presented last week at the Stanley in Philadelphia. His appearance was billed as the first appearance of the comedian in a motion picture theatre. Elizabeth Brown and Sedano, in a group of modern and classical dances, were the other stage attraction offered. The main feature of the bill was ''Beverly of Graustark,'' starring Marion Davies.

Yerke's Orchestra at Grand

Harry A. Yerke's Flotilla Orchestra, exponents of classical syncopation, was an added attraction offered at the Grand Theatre, Pittsburgh, last week, when ''The Wilderness Woman'' held the screen as the main feature of the program.

ATMOSPHERIC PRESENTATION

Prologue staged for "My Old Kentucky Home" (Associated Exhibitors), at the Trivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, is shown above. Novel lighting, using green highlights on trees and fence, amber in the window and moon transparencies in the drop and blue and green on the singer were notable features of the number.

"Fountain of Gold" with "Wet Paint" at Missouri

John Murray Anderson's Publix act, ''The Fountain of Gold,'' was the stage attraction at the Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., the week of May 15.

Charles Previn offered ''Die Fiedermaus'' as his overture. Mme. Pelta sang ''One Fine Day'' from Mme. Butterfly, and gave some of the finest moments of the entire bill.

The screen attraction was ''Wet Paint.'' It was the world's premier of the picture, the management announced.

Presentations at Rialto and Strand, Omaha

The two leading presentations houses in Omaha last week offered popular attractions. The Rialto had Sissle and Blake, authors and stars of ''Shuffle Along'' and other colored musical productions, in conjunction with ''The Rainmaker'' on the screen.

At the Strand, where ''Wet Paint'' was the screen attraction, the stage feature was the appearance of the South Omaha High School band of 55 pieces, which commanded considerable local interest.

Brox Sisters in Second Week at Grand Central

The Brox Sisters and Gene Rodemich's Orchestra divided honors at the Grand Central Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., the week of May 15.

''Castles in Spain'' was toned up by a duet, ''Then You'll Know Spring Is Here.'' It had some local color to make it more attractive. Four chaps, bedecked in flower wreaths and Pullman towels put on a burlesque of the Spring Dance.

The Brox Sisters continued to please with their harmony singing and their success added a week to their original run. The chief screen attraction was, ''Old Loves and New.''

Screen Tests Made on Stage of Metropolitan, Boston

In conjunction with the showing of ''Fascinating Youth'' on the screen and the John Murray Anderson revue, ''Fascinating Youth,'' as a stage attraction, the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, last week held a series of screen tests of aspirants to studio careers. The entire bill duplicated the program offered a few weeks ago at the Rivoli in New York.

"Venus" Shows on Bill with "The Bat" at Newman

''Venus in Greenwich Village,'' the Publix unit show featuring Fay Lanphier, was the presentation offered with ''The Bat'' at the Newman in Kansas City last week.

The glittering array of costumes, displayed on girls of sufficient beauty to compete with the ''American Venus'' herself, proved a popular offering and won the applause of the Newman patrons.

In Colorado Presentation

The presentation staged with ''The Volga Boatman'' at the Colorado Theatre, Denver, last week featured Stafford and Louise, ''international personalities from musical comedy,'' with Shea Vincent at the piano. Scheuerman's Colorado Orchestra appeared on the stage as usual.

Offer Bathing Suit Style Show

A bathing beach revue, featuring a bathing suit style show in which seven ''live beauties direct from Miami and Palm Beach and augmented by fifteen live Detroit beauties,'' participated, was the stage feature at the Broadway Strand, Detroit, last week. ''The Beautiful Cheat'' was the screen attraction.

Camera Tricks Cut Production Cost

Once a Stepchild, Trick Photography Now Strongly Recognized by Farsighted Producers; Dean Tells How It's Done

By Carl Louis Gregory, F. R. P. S., Dean, New York Institute of Photography

(Paper presented before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.)

THE movies, our perennially infant industry, is no longer so infantile. Many of its first pullings have already been engulfed in the oblivion of forgotten things.

Trick photography was much employed in the production of the first French films. These were extensively "duped" in this country to feed the maw of the first nickelodeons and store shows that have almost passed from memory. The first efforts of the various producers allied under the banner of the Patents Company made many similar films, some of which attained considerable popularity. "Dreams of a Welch Rarebit Fiend," "A Trip to Mars," "Alice in Wonderland," "Princess Nicotine," "The Yarn of the Nancy Bell," "The Absent Minded Professor," and "The Star of Bethlehem" are names of some of these old trick films made in America that may recall ancient history in the minds of some of my older listeners.

Referring to the Past

All of the productions named except the "Star of Bethlehem" were frankly trick pictures in which fantastic scenes contrary to the laws of nature were shown to obtain humorous and mystifying effects. "Dreams of a Welch Rarebit Fiend" was directed and photographed by Ed Porter; "Princess Nicotine" by Albert E. Smith, and the others were photographed by me for the Edison and Thanhouser companies, so that I feel qualified to refer to the dim but not so distant past.

Unlike the frankly fantastic subjects, "The Star of Bethlehem" was the "Ben Hur" of its day, when a thousand dollars spent on a production was more of an event than a million is at present. It was a conception of the birth of the Christ Child, and although its scenes were laid in Palestine and Egypt the story was produced entirely in New York City and New Rochelle with only a few interiors set up in an old skating rink. The Wise Men of the East tended their flocks of sheep on the mall in Central Park and a piece of black cardboard masked out the tall buildings on 59th Street in the background and the Star of Bethlehem was later double exposed into the masked out sky by means of a spotlight photographed through a copper wire screen to give the shimmering rays which are shown in the conventional paintings which have been made to represent this sacred history. The massive walls of Fort Schyuler furnished the walls of the City of Jerusalem and the Wise Men followed the Star on the backs of camels in the Bronx zoo. Photographs of the pyramids were double exposed above a location on a sandy beach for the sojourn in Egypt and the pillared portico of a rich patent medicine manufacturer's home served as the architecture of the Roman Court.

One incident in the filming of this picture clings in my mind and it is so good that I am sure you will pardon the slight digression. The director was very earnest in his work but often indulged in profanity. We were staging a very solemn and impressive scene and one of the leading actors seemed to have difficulty in registering the emotions required by the occasion. Finally the director lost patience and burst out at the actor, "Gee dash it to Aitch, Bill, can't you put more reverence into it?"

Nearly seven hundred prints from the original and two dupe negatives which had to be made to supply the demand were sold and some of the prints are still listed by educational exchanges. Orders were still coming in when the negatives were destroyed in a disastrous studio fire.

Waned, Then Waxed Strong

Since the days of these crude pictures trick photography has waned and then waxed strong again. For a long time it was the stepchild of the legitimate producers. The comedy producers, however, have always regarded it as one of their strongest allies. It is, in fact, mainly due to the patient research of serious workers on the slap-stick lots that the credit for the present perfection of trick effects is largely due.

Far sighted producers have awakened to the money savings that may be effected by the use of trick photography and now all the larger companies retain the services of high salaried experts who are specialists in the business of artistic photographic trickery.

A Trick Profession

Trick photography is a trick profession. It requires the arts of a trained magician with the added requirement that the spectator shall not even suspect that he is being deluded. Magicians must be familiar with psychology, with intricate mechanics, with physics, with art, with myriads of complicated details that must be made to dovetail to the fraction of a second. The craft of the ciné trick photographer is just as exacting and calls for an even wider application of special and practical knowledge.

It is not my intention to give in this paper any detailed explanation of trick photography. The subject is far too broad to be covered, even in a large volume. Every piece of trick photography is a separate problem and, just as the combination of the alphabet are practically infinite, so are the various combinations that may be arranged in doing work of this character.

Trick photography in cinematography is an analysis of motion in two or more directions. Simple ciné analysis of motion is the series of frames or pictures the successive units of which represent phases of action at intervals of one-sixteenth of a second. Most of ciné tricks require that two or more of these analyses be synchronized on one film and at the same time matched or blended with one another so that the line of demarcation between the two or more combinations be imperceptible to the eye even after the image is enlarged several thousand times on the theatre screen.

HEADLINERS

The Midnight Matinee

Watch your Theatre grow young again between Midnight and Morning —

How long will the house be closed for reseating? A natural question! Not a day if you want to keep it open. Reseating and performances are continuous. They follow each other without interference. When the curtain comes down and the house empties at night, installation mechanics "ring up" on the night's program of putting in new seats. From midnight till morning the work goes on—methodically—rapidly—efficiently. A section of the old chairs comes out. The electric drills begin to hum. A section of new seats goes in. The work is timed—perfectly—to allow for the house being put in perfect order for the next regular performance. Between midnight and morning the old theatre gradually takes on the appearance of a new playhouse. Comfort and beauty grow like a flower from within, spreading from pit to gallery with each night's work and in the end —new seating throughout—not a night lost or a single patron turned away.

National Theatres Corp. Announces Two New Topeka Houses

TWO new theatres will be opened in Topeka, Kansas, this Fall, according to word received from the National Theatres Corp., of Topeka. The Jayhawk is now nearing completion and plans are being made for its opening on August 1st. The Jayhawk will have the largest seating capacity of any theatre in Topeka, having 1,800 seats, or about 300 more than the new Grand Theatre, Topeka's present largest theatre. The balcony of the new theatre will seat about the same number as that of the Grand, but the lower floor will be larger. The seats are now being made for the Jayhawk and are of special design.

The building is all structural steel and the floors are reinforced concrete. The entire building is protected by a sprinkling system. A cooling system, said to have cost $50,000, is now being installed.

The structure was planned by Boller Bros., architects, of Kansas City. The stage is large enough for any attraction, so that the theatre may be used for vaudeville or legitimate attractions. Modern dressing rooms are provided beneath the stage.

De Luxe motion picture presentations are being planned for the Jayhawk. The new theatre will be operated by the Jayhawk Theatre Co., which includes Garfield L. Hooper and Maurice W. Jencks, who also own and operate the new Grand, Orpheum and Isis Theatres in Topeka. The Jayhawk, according to the plans will be one of the most up-to-date, modern and luxurious theatres in the Middle West.

Work on the rebuilding of the Novelty Theatre will begin June 1st. It will be re-opened in the Fall with a seating capacity of 1.600. The new building will be 130x130 feet and will have shop accommodations on the Eighth Street front. The theatre plans for the Novelty Theatre are in the hands of Boller Bros., of Kansas City and Los Angeles. Boller Bros. are the architects who also had charge of the remodelling of the Grand Theatre and the erection of the new Jayhawk. The present management of the theatre will be continued. L. M. Crawford, Roy Crawford, Garfield Hooper and Maurice Jencks are on the board of directors. The latter two also own and operate the new Grand, Orpheum and Isis Theatres and will operate the new Jayhawk.

The Novelty Theatre has been Topeka's vaudeville house for several years, and doubling the seating capacity will mean bigger and better vaudeville for Topeka.

The new Grand Theatre, which opened last year, seats 1,600 and is now being used for all road show attractions and road show pictures. The new Jayhawk, with a seating capacity of 1,800, will furnish Topeka with de luxe motion picture presentations. The new Novelty with 1,600 seats, will supply the vaudeville attractions. The Orpheum and Isis Theatres, with nearly 1,000 seats each, are motion picture houses. Both were remodeled and new seats installed last Summer.

The new Jayhawk and Novelty will be modern throughout, with the latest and modern cooling systems, rest rooms, decorations, etc.

Propose Theatre for Hillside, N. J.

Growth of the West End section in Hillside, N. J., is reflected in the proposed erection of a new motion picture theatre at Long and Liberty Avenues. Plans are now in the hands of an architect.

This project is the result of the banding together of a number of residents, in what is known as the West Hillside Improvement Association.

Gilmore Leases New Site at Salisbury, Kans.

SALISBURY, Mo., according to report, is to have a new modern motion picture theatre in the near future. A. Emmerich will erect a new building 35x90 on West Second Street, which will be leased by L. R. Gilmore of Kansas City. The building is to be ready for occupancy by September first.

The new building will have a frontage of 25 feet on Second Street, and the front part 25 feet deep will be used for the lobby. From this point the building will be 35 feet wide, with a depth of 90 feet.

The full plans and details have not been decided on, but as soon as they are completed, the contract will be let.

The work of wrecking the old buildings will start as soon as they are vacated.

Mr. Gilmore is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Horton. He has had experience in the motion picture business and expects to give Salisbury a first class movie.

Start Work on Loew's New Syracuse Theatre

A FORCE of 20 men is busy on the property recently purchased by Loew's, Inc., at South Salina and West Jefferson Streets, Syracuse, N. Y., for a large theatre and office building, taking soundings of the soil to determine how deep foundations must be to support the building.

According to report, work of razing the present buildings, chief of which are the Jefferson hotel and building at West Jefferson and South Clinton Streets, will be started July 1.

Interstate Amus. Co. Plan Little Rock House

Concluding successful negotiations which are now in progress, the Interstate Amusement Company of Dallas, Tex., plan to build a theatre in Little Rock, Ark., within the next year, according to a recent report.

Erection of this house would be a part of the general expansion program of the Interstate Company, it is said. This concern already operates motion picture and vaudeville theatres in eight Southern and Southwest cities, and at present is building a new house at Birmingham, Ala.

The Majestic Theatre, Little Rock, is also a part of the Interstate chain.

B. & K. Introduce Movable Stage in Chicago

ANOTHER magnificent theatre was added to the Balaban & Katz circuit this week with the opening of the Oriental on Randolph Street in the heart of the Chicago loop rialto. The architecture and decorations, as well as the name, are Oriental and the only word to describe it is "gorgeous." All the colors of the Orient, jewels, carving and handiwork of marvelous design, greet the eye at every turn, and statues gleaming in gold and silver leaf embossing strike the spectator with their magnificence. The movable stage, the first seen in Chicago, was of interest to first nighters.

The little more

The feature picture, the musical accompaniment, the supplementary attractions on the program—are of course of utmost box office importance.

But it's the little more that makes your theatre different—photographic quality on the screen, for example. When the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film the photography of the negative is saved for your patrons to enjoy. And that's of importance at the box office, too.

Prints on Eastman have the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in the transparent margin. Look for it.

Inquiries and Comments

A Problem in Economics

A KENTUCKY exhibitor sends us the following:

"Gentlemen: After reading your reply to Mr. Bolduc (about two months ago—Ed.) I have decided to come to you with my problems for your kind and helpful service. I am enclosing a self-addressed envelope with the request that you answer my inquiries direct or if you do not care to do this, I will ask you not to mention my name in your reply.

The big problem with me is fire insurance. The companies underwriting this class of risk absolutely will not consider the risk on a picture show unless it is in a brick or stone building because of the heavy losses they have sustained in this section of the country in this line of business.

I have never, personally, had a fire and can give good recommendations if you could find an agent who could handle my property.

Poor Equipment

I have very poor equipment which I have been slow in trying to improve for the reason mentioned above, however, I realize I am losing money every day to my opposition which is one mile to the West and two miles to the East of me.

This is a mining town of about 300 people with bigger camps on either side to draw from. If I were properly equipped my receipts would average about $12.50 per night. I am giving you this information so you will understand that I must operate on an economical basis.

I have a frame building, 22x56 feet, with a ceiling 8 feet on the sides and 12 feet in the center (note drawing on back)—(where is it?—Ed.) with home-made seats and benches. The machine room is only large enough for one machine and I am using a Power's type A, hand-driven machine, equipped with Mazda, prismatic condenser; objective lens, B. & L. front 5¼ in E. F. How can I improve the light on the screen? Which kind of light do you think would give me the best results, carbon or Mazda? I am using a Mazda regulator—is there a better one?

As to the projectors, which make do you think the best—Power's or Simplex? What would you suggest as to the best method of ventilating my building?

I now have two Simplex machines in view at ——, Ohio. They are carbon lamps and I have never used a carbon outfit. What do you think of buying second-hand equipment? Do you think the machines are worth $300 each for my use?

Can you furnish me with plans gratis for a theatre building, 25x70x20 ft., with balcony, projector room big enough for two units, ticket office, and stage for vaudeville? I now have a glass bead screen. Are they rated the best?

A friend of mine bought the following equipment practically new last year for $700: Two Simplex machines, complete with carbon lamps, 200 good seats, and a silver screen. I would locate a bargain like this.

I have been trying to buy an incandescent lamphouse, motor and speed control for my outfit, and the exchanges want over $300 to make the change. Do you think it worth the money?

I want to thank you in advance for any information you may give me along the above lines and hope to hear from you by return mail, so I am figuring on either building and buying better second-hand equipment or repairing the outfit I now have, but I am particularly interested in buying some good second-hand seats.

As to Insurance

Well, Friend Kentucky, there is not much you have overlooked in the line of information and to answer your questions fully would mean writing a general treatise on the operation and equipping of motion picture theatres in general, so we will have to be brief and to the point in our answers.

Concerning the matter of insurance, it is quite clear that you have applied for it and have been turned down, so if we were in your position we would be rather hesitant about forcing the matter by hunting for a company who would insure you since it is obvious that you are a poor risk and so that if a company did insure they would probably gamble utterly on your not having a fire and would undoubtedly insert a clause or two in the policy whereby they could crawl out in case of a serious fire.

As for giving good recommendations, the very best recommendation you could give any company would be up-to-date equipment and sound building construction—plus intelligent management.

Forty drops make up part of the complete stage equipment of Loew's State Theatre, New Orleans, La.

Economy Versus Equipment

You admit that you have very poor equipment and could undoubtedly increase your revenue if you improved upon it, but give as an excuse, the fact that your maximum gross receipts would be about $12.50 per night under the most favorable conditions.

That is not a very large gross income, to be sure, but you must have realized when you started in business that some kind of equipment, at least, would be absolutely necessary and the fact that you were willing to go ahead on that basis was proof enough that, in your own mind, you believed the proposition would pay.

I am very much afraid that your kind of economy is the worst possible kind of economy for, by your own admission, it is acting as a pair of pincers about your neck and actually hampering you from obtaining more patronage. Good equipment, more business—more business, better equipment, etc. That is the cycle in practically every line, without exception.

Improving the Screen Illumination

You ask—"How can I improve my screen illumination?" That is a very simple question to answer, in your case. The first thing to do is to throw away the incandescent lamp equipment you now have and which we are sure you are not using correctly. Replace it with a Power's Incandescent lamp-house which you spoke of buying.

Then equip that lamp-house with a Bausch & Lomb parabolic condenser; make sure you are using a No. 2-5¼ in. E. F. objective lens so as not to waste any light; throw away the glass-beaded screen you now have and which was never intended for your theatre, replacing it with a metallic surfaced screen which will confine most of your screen light within the narrow angle your theatre seats subtend.

And above all, become thoroughly acquainted with the instructions for using the Power's lamp-house so you will operate it in an efficient manner, thereby saving yourself money in the way of lower power bills and lamp renewals.

Large House for Rockford, Ill.

President of Piano Co. Announces Plans; Work To Start About June 1

NORTH MAIN STREET is to have the largest theatre in Rockford, Ill., with stores and apartments incorporated within the same building, to be located between Peach Street and Park Avenue on the west side of the street, at a cost of $700,000, according to Willard N. Van Matre, Jr., president of the Schumann Piano Company.

Work on the new structure will begin as soon after June 1 as three buildings now occupying the site in the 300 block on North Main Street are razed or moved. Options taken on the property by Mr. Van Matre's syndicate were taken up and all plans completed.

Specifications call for construction of a theatre seating 2,650 persons, which will make it the largest auditorium in Rockford, arranged with a main floor and large balcony with ample stage proportions capable of housing legitimate stage attractions. Vaudeville will probably be on the boards when the theatre is not being used for motion pictures.

On the main floor, five stores fronting on Main Street are planned, in the center of which will be the theatre entrance and foyer. The second and third floor space not used for the theatre proper will be given over to apartments, six of these being on the second floor and the remainder on the third floor.

The building will be of stone, brick and tile, three stories in height and covering a ground space of 148 feet on North Main Street and 156 in depth.

Whether the new enterprise will be leased by outside theatrical interests and operated as a combination vaudeville and picture house, with a road attraction playing at intervals, or whether Mr. Van Matre and his associates will operate it themselves as a movie-vaudeville theatre, are details not yet announced by the builders.

Mr. Van Matre, T. M. Ellis, Jr., of Beloit and James Hurt are major stockholders in a chain of theatres operating in Illinois and Wisconsin cities at the present time. The Orpheum of this city is one of their houses and it is possible that the new playhouse will be added to the chain. They recently sold a theatre in Beloit.

THE IMPROVED BUTTER-KIST

Makes $5,000 Yearly on Butter-Kist

Motion picture houses all over the country are looking to Butter-Kist to add to their profits. Not only does the machine coax additional money out of the crowds who come to the show, but its continual light, motion and aroma attract the attention of the passersby who probably had no thought of stopping.

As to the profits which Butter-Kist equipment can earn for you, the experience of Fred Salvione, of Amsterdam, N. Y., is a good example.

This is because, first of all, the Butter-Kist machine is built for the sole purpose of ATTRACTING TRADE. And, second, because the owner keeps 65 cents out of every dollar he takes in for Butter-Kist pop-corn.

Mr. Salvione only purchased his first Butter-Kist machine after considerable solicitation, but his business grew so rapidly that he bought a second one which he presented to his daughters, who divide the profits from it.

According to Mr. Salvione's signed statement, the Butter-Kist proposition is the "best paying proposition in the whole United States and makes more than $5,000 a year" for him.

The newest Butter-Kist equipment, illustrated above, is designed to make even greater earnings—first, because it is PORTABLE—it goes where the crowds are: second, because in addition to pop-corn it toasts, displays and sells peanuts, displays and sells candy mints and chewing gum, and third, because it is the most outstanding achievement of the largest factory of its kind in the world and is built for the purpose of making SALES. It not only manufactures pop-corn, but, in addition, it SELLS its own product.

Don't you feel it well worth your while to at least investigate how Butter-Kist can make profits for you? Just find out—that's all we ask.

Trick Photography Cuts Production Cost

In cases where the recording or taking interval of the combined components is the customary sixteen per second in each case, then the combination is not such a complicated problem as the written explanation makes it appear to be. It is very intricate, however, when the component members of the combination have to be taken at different rates of speed. In the "Lost World" there were many scenes where the taking of the action of the prehistoric monsters required weeks and months of exposures made at comparatively long and irregular intervals. These stop motion exposures had to be synchronized and combined with the action of human characters whose movements, photographed at regular speed, occurred in a few seconds so that the composite result appeared to be simultaneous action. Not only was it necessary to synchronize the action but it was also necessary to reverse the apparent size of the objects so that the monsters, which were in reality miniature figures, seemed to be gigantic in comparison to the human actors.

In the scenes showing the parting of the Red Sea in Cecil De Mille's "Ten Commandments" the action of the water was taken backward at a rate of several hundred exposures per second and synchronized with the action of the actors taken forward at the normal rate, while at the same time the relation in size was reversed and magnified.

Trick photography thus does two tremendously important things for the industry; it renders possible the use of scenes and effects hitherto impossible of presentation and reduces enormously the cost of building elaborate sets. It also seems safe to prophesy that in the near future it will also eliminate the necessity for many exterior locations; particularly those to distant points where time and transportation are a large factor in production expense.

Value of Second-Hand Equipment

No, you cannot obtain from us free plans of a theatre drawn especially to meet your requirements. That is a service which we are not equipped to provide. You can, however, obtain all the necessary general information on small theatres by consulting back numbers of the NEWS and more specific information on the construction of small theatres by obtaining a copy of the June, 1925, issue of Architectural Forum, which number was devoted entirely to small theatre construction and contained numerous plans and photographs of this class of structure. Address Mr. P. M. Hoober, Architectural Forum, No. 383 Madison Ave., New York City; price $2.00. If you are contemplating building it would be worth your while to have this book.

Concerning the respective merits of Powers and Simplex projectors, why, you could flip a nickel and whichever way it came you could rest assured of satisfactory operation.

As to whether or not we think $300 is a fair price for a second-hand projector, that is entirely beyond us—not seeing the outfit. Why not buy one brand new outfit complete and let that suffice until you are in a position to match it with another? That would be the best bet of all, and would involve no doubts as to value received. One good projector is certainly better than two poor ones and that would help obtain that additional revenue to more quickly buy the second. You would then lay a good foundation for future progress and at the same time provide your own fire insurance since after all good equipment, intelligently handled, is one of the best kind of fire insurance obtainable.

The thing all boils down to this: In order to obtain and hold patronage, you must have good equipment. In order to make a profit you must operate efficiently, and in order to operate efficiently, you must have—good equipment.

The most palatial theatre in the world will not produce a cent of revenue if it does not possess the necessary apparatus for projecting to the screen a first-class picture.

And that, after all, is the thing you are supposed to be selling—a first-class picture.

It costs money? Sure, you have to invest a certain amount of money in order to attract brothers and sisters to the dollars you already have. That's business.

Kansas Blue Law Thwarter Plans Third Theatre

JOHN W. TACKETT, who won wide recognition when he thwarted the blue laws of Kansas by building a theatre for Sunday shows just across the state line in Oklahoma, is planning a third theatre for Coffeyville, Kans. The new house will be known as the Tackett Grand and will seat 1,800 persons. A modern cooling system is to be installed in the theatre, which will be completed by September 1. The house will be of brick, steel and concrete. His Sunday policy of admitting one family for 25 cents—sometimes including the man, wife and ten children—has won him fame in the Kansas City territory.

THE Marine Barracks at Parris Island, just off the coast from Charleston, South Carolina, will soon have a large theatre for the entertainment of the marines. Heretofore, they have used only one machine and offered spasmodic performances, but with the new theatre in readiness and the increased amount of equipment including an additional Powers projector, G. E. high intensity lamps on both machines, one a 125-125 ampere Hertner Transverter, special projection lens and other booth equipment, there will be regular performances in the Barracks Theatre and the finest possible projection.

Coral Gables Theatre, Fla., Nearing Completion

From all reports, the Coral Gables Theatre, Coral Gables, Florida, is going to be one of the most pretentious buildings of its kind in a state where every architect and builder tries to outdo every other in creating a marvel of beauty.

C. M. Maxfield, builder, announces that work is being pushed as rapidly as practical and that the house will be ready for opening in the near future.

The full equipment of the Coral Gables Theatre was purchased through the Southern Theatre Equipment Company and M. V. Lomax, chief of the service department of that organization, left on Thursday night to look after installation of machines and other equipment.

Broadway Interested in Installation of Rialto's Cooling System

FOR the past two months or more one of the chief objects of public curiosity in the neighborhood of Broadway and Forty-second St., New York City, has been the scaffolding on the 42nd St. side of the Rialto Theatre, rising from the sidewalk level to the roof of the building. Illuminated signs showing Harold Lloyd hanging by his finger tips, just as he does from the roof of a Fifth Avenue bus, and of Gilda Gray dancing a South Sea Island hula-hula or siva-siva, have failed to entirely disguise the structure of two-by-fours or satisfy the curiosity of passersby as to what may be going on up on the Rialto roof. At last the Rialto press department has come to the rescue, and likewise to its own defense against daily questioning, with the announcement that a cooling system is being installed in the theatre and that the scaffolding is part of the temporary construction necessary to the installation by the Carrier Engineering Corporation.

Thus, the Rialto enters the Broadway battle royal of the artificially cooled motion picture theatres. The system now being installed by the Carrier Engineering Corp., which will be in operation about the first of June, is similar to that which proved successful during the hot days last Summer at the Rivoli Theatre at Broadway and 49th Street. This system reduces not only the temperature but the humidity as well. In the Rivoli Theatre the humidity is controlled automatically and the same conditions will prevail at the Rialto. The system operates not only in hot weather but the year around, maintaining an atmosphere of even temperature and condition. Incidentally, owing to its interior design and its present system of ventilation, the Rialto has presented a difficult cooling problem.

Birmingham's Ritz to Open During August

A date in August has been set by the Interstate Amusement Company for the opening of the Ritz Theatre being built in Birmingham. Full booth equipment and Minusa DeLuxe screen were purchased from the Southern Theatre Equipment Company through their Alabama salesman, W. C. Alexander.

Keith vaudeville and big features will be the policy.

San Pablo to Have New Theatre

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Volga Boatman"—Capitol, London, England

Brixton Free Press: "The big film attraction in London this week is 'The Volga Boatman,' the new personally directed De Mille special, which was inspired by the world-famous song. Judging from its reception bv a crowded house when it opened on Monday at the Capitol, the film is going to earn the same international fame as the song."

Glasgow Herald: "'The Volga Boatman' is an example of the high technical standard achieved by Cecil B. De Mille."

Morning Advertiser: "The reputation of Cecil B. De Mille will certainly be enhanced by this latest film 'The Volga Boatman,' which is being shown for a fortnight at the Capitol."

Norwood Weekly: "Cecil B. De Mille's eagerly awaited super production 'The Volga Boatman' exceeds all expectations as a dramatic entertainment."

Reynolds: "There is no denying the beauty and intensity of 'The Volga Boatman.'"

Slayds Weekly News: "'The Volga Boatman,' the new film at the Capitol, is packed with thrills."

"The Wilderness Woman"—First National, Mark Strand, New York City

Evening Journal: "Wild as a temper in a telephone booth, Aileen Pringle does excellent work, and the entire picture is good comedy, well acted and directed."

Daily Mirror: "'The Wilderness Woman' tops a lively Mark Strand bill this week, with Aileen Pringle, Chester Conklin and Lowell Sherman featured. It creates chuckles and laughs from beginning to end. The audience seemed particularly gleeful at witnessing the glorification of two hicks turn the tables to their own triumph."

Evening Graphic: "Howard Higgin handled the megaphone, and every one did his share to make 'The Wilderness Woman' one of the best light comedies of the season."

Times: "The picture is equipped with a splendid cast and so far as it is perceptible not a false move is made by any of the players. The inimitable Chester Conklin keeps the fun at a nice temperature throughout this comedy."

Evening World: "Watchng 'The Wilderness Woman' I laughed until the tears rolled down my cheeks. The Strand audience greeted it with howls of hilarity. Aileen Pringle, Chester Conklin and Lowell Sherman have the principal roles. Miss Pringle and Sherman are new to comedy, but they take to mirthmaking as though they too had spent long years on the slapstick trail.

Daily News: "It's a toss-up to decide who's entitled to most credit for making this picture the most delightful screen comedy of the season—Arthur Stringer, who wrote the story; Howard Higgin, who directed the picture, or Chester Conklin, who made an unreal character so real and gorgeously funny that my ribs ache yet from laughing at him. There are sequences in this film that would wreck a wax figure by cracking it up into smiles."

"The Little Irish Girl"—Warner Bros., Warners, New York City

American: "Certainly I'd have found more enjoyment in the first reels if I'd known Granny was a hard-boiled crook herself. So her secret, carefully concealed until the last reel, is hereby exposed without hesitation. Granny is a 'grifter,' if you know what that means, and a quick-witted one."

Journal: "Dolores is beautiful; Miss Claire supplies heart throbs when she uses the orphanage fund for her option money; Lee Moran is the comedy relief and gets drunk; a detective, pretending to be deaf, heightens the mystery, and everyone doublecrosses everyone else so consistently that one leaves the theatre almost suspecting oneself."

Evening World: "It has something of 'Turn to the Right' and something of 'Cheating Cheaters' and a host of other crook plays, but also a redeeming touch of novelty and surprise."

Mirror: "'The Little Irish Girl' entertains simply because Dolores Costello is its charming heroine."

News: "The cast is good. Dolores Costello is beautiful and does well with her role, and I never hope to see a more villainous villain than Mathew Betz. Lee Moran is the gag man of the piece and does his stuff, which includes getting on a jag in a hotel cellar, with some mirth-provoking ability."

Sun: "Dolores Costello, who, in less than a wink of an eye, has become a box office attraction in the world of the cinema, is present at the Warner this week in 'The Little Irish Girl,' a melodramatic crook farce.

"To recount its tale would be to rob it of its surprises. Possibly, its nearest kin is 'Cheating Cheaters.'"

Telegram: "This gifted daughter of the gods and Maurice Costello is endowed with such an abundance of talent and beauty that it seems inevitable within a year or so she must soar among the great on Movieland's Olympus."

Telegraph: "There are several interesting twists to the story and not until the last few minutes before the fade-out does one realize just what the finish will be. Several amusing situations arise from the fact that 'Granny' salts her Lithia Springs in the middle of the night and gives them a double dose when a prospective customer is going to have a scientific test the following day."

Times: "'The Little Irish Girl,' the present film feature at Warners', owing to the measure of suspense and unexpected twists, is quite a good entertainment."

Tribune: "Miss Costello, looking beautiful but ineffably sad, plays a lady crook, who reforms when she falls in love with an innocent youth named Johnnie. She determines to go straight, only to find that dear old granny, whom her gang had set out to rob, was really—but we suppose that would be divulging the mystery."

"The Prince of Pilsen"—Times Square Theatre, New York City

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: "If there have been funnier situations on the screen this reviewer has not had the pleasure of seeing them. George Sidney may be said, and honestly, to be more amusing in 'The Prince of Pilsen' than he has been in all the 'Potash and Perlmutter' and 'Cohen and Kelly' episodes combined."

Daily News: "George Sidney, who won my heart as Abe Potash, got a firmer grip by his playing of Hans Wagner, 'the great American lodger from Zincinnati,' who unwittingly became the prince for several crowded hours. Any description of this beautifully staged and costumed farce would be inadequate. It must be seen."

Herald Tribune: "We are bound to admit that it is one of the funniest comedies we have ever seen. George Sidney, in spite of his physique, is no more a slapstick comedian than is Charles Chaplin."

Bill Patton, star of "Flashing Steeds" a Chesterfield M. P. production.

ADVICE

on buying replacement parts for Simplex Projectors

WHEN you fit a replacement part into your Projector you either restore that portion of the machine's mechanism to its original state of perfection or you further cripple it by aggravating the forces of friction and wear and hasten the Projector's irreparable ruin. Your choice of parts is the deciding factor.

Your Simplex Projector is made up of finely proportioned and precisely aligned pieces of machinery. Some of them are as delicately balanced as the needle of a compass and as minutely correct in measurements as the movements in a good watch.

Moreover, the mechanism in a Simplex demands the highest grade of steel and other metals tempered to the exact fraction of a degree. There can be no leniency in any respect. And there is none. Every original part that goes into the Projector is tested and retested many times before the complete machine leaves the shop with the Simplex guarantee. And every part sold as a replacement unit is guaranteed to be as good as the original.

Guarantee the smooth running of your projector by only using genuine Simplex parts. Buy only replacement parts made and guaranteed by the builders of Simplex Projectors.

Simplex

We cannot assume responsibility for the proper functioning of any Simplex Projector unless fully equipped with genuine Simplex parts.

A MESSAGE to SHOWMEN from S. R. KENT

RECENTLY at Paramount's 40 get-together meetings throughout the country, we talked with three thousand or more of you gentlemen face to face.

We discussed frankly with you our mutual problems.

We presented to you in detail the facts about our 1926-27 product—

THE FIFTEENTH BIRTHDAY GROUP OF 75 PARAMOUNT PICTURES

We not only described these pictures by word of mouth—we showed you on the screen the proof of every statement we made about them.

A MESSAGE to SHOWMEN from S. R. KENT

YOUR spoken sentiments and your hundreds of telegrams prove you agree that our meetings together were the most progressive step in exhibitor-distributor relations taken in this business in many years.

And as one prominent Philadelphia exhibitor expressed it at the meeting there:

> "Every new move in this business, either in selling or producing, is always made by Paramount. The rest are always two jumps behind. That's why Paramount is the leader of this industry—> and always will be."

Paramount's Birthday Group, described at these meetings, is being booked faster than any product ever offered to you. The facts and figures are on our books.

Our 1926-27 pictures strike the showman instantly as richer in new ideas, bigger in scope, greater in box-office possibilities than anything else in the field.

Nowhere on the 1926-27 market are subjects that appeal to your showmanship like

HAROLD LLOYD
"OLD IRONSIDES"
"BEAU GESTE"
"SORROWS OF SATAN"
"THE ROUGH RIDERS"
ZIEGFELD'S
"GLORIFYING THE AMERICAN GIRL" AND "KID BOOTS"
"THE WEDDING MARCH"
"WE'RE IN THE NAVY NOW"

and a score of others from Paramount.

No other company can talk about fifteen years of constructive leadership and then point to additions of such new, fresh, vigorous blood as FLORENZ ZIEGFELD, LAURENCE STALLINGS, VON STROHEIM, NEILAN, BEAUDINE, FRANK LLOYD, EDDIE CANTOR, GILDA GRAY, LOIS MORAN, THEODORE DREISER, RICHARD DIX, ADOLPHE MENJOU, RAYMOND GRIFFITH, LYA DE PUTTI, RONALD COLMAN, (to play "BEAU GESTE") W. C. FIELDS, ST. CLAIR, SUTHERLAND, ANITA LOOS, BEERY and HATTON as a comedy team, ESTHER RALSTON, and FLORENCE VIDOR as new stars, CLARA BOW and many more.

No other company can approach the past, present or future record of Paramount, which is, in brief:

[1] The best pictures in the business.

[2] The most pictures in the business.

[3] Sold to you fairly and squarely on their merits.

[4] Sold to your public by a sustained national advertising campaign 10 years old and reaching 80,000,000 readers a month.

[5] Delivered exactly as promised, on release dates.

[6] Backed by perfect service in prints and the best exhibitor advertising aids in the business.

This Paramount record is the foundation rock upon which this industry stands. Good news travels fast. Already the word has swept from coast to coast:

IN 1926-27, MORE THAN EVER BEFORE, PARAMOUNT OUTCLASSES THE FIELD.

Theatres

THE supplement to MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week—"The Buyers Guide," devoted to new theatre construction and equipment—will stir the imagination of the general reader.

Architects are putting ideas into theatres today; making pictures of them; making them pictures in themselves, not merely places to house pictures; in other words, theatre pictures not merely picture theatres.

And so, a brand new and important situation is ushered in. Public patronage will be attracted by these novel and beautiful places, and in no small measure. Which gives us a new box-office asset to consider—and some other things.

Theatres are dominating the picture industry today. No doubt about that. And they are going to control and direct our industrial future; no doubt about that, either.

First, production was all powerful. Then distribution loomed up; but, mostly, production gobbled up distribution. Then production-distribution proceeded to swallow theatres.

In this entire scheme, distribution at first, and later on theatres were acquired in order to market pictures. The latter end has been the prime consideration. In other words production interests have dominated.

Today the reverse is true. The success of the theatre is the first consideration, even if the producer runs it.

And that is going to change things considerably.

We are going, hereon, to build the industrial machine on theatres and not on production—upward on theatres and not downward from pictures.

And this putting of the theatre first is going to have a vital effect on distribution in general and on such selling policies as block-booking, flat rentals, etc. That is obvious.

It is even possible, however, that an entirely new and radically different scheme of distribution will be evolved from the new order of things.

But there is going to be a lot of competition in theatres. New ideas will constantly prevail, just as they do in picture-making. Theatres will get quickly out of date just as pictures do. There will have to be a heavy amortization on theatre properties.

So the theatre map will be constantly changing. He who has the right theatres today may find them wrong tomorrow. So supremacy in ownership won't stay put.

Capital will come in in very large amounts. In a few recent weeks over fifty million dollars for theatre operations have been underwritten and immediately absorbed. This is but the beginning in this country; and Latin America and Europe, in which American enterprise is bound to play a part, has just started.

There will be overbuilding; but there's bound to be overbuilding—for a period of time, when the new is pushing out the old.

Product will play a most important part. But there's this to say about that: the right pictures have always found the right theatres and the right theatres in the future will get the right attractions.

Anyway, the future in the industry is wide open today. Never were the opportunities greater—for men, capital, ideas.

Speaking Editorially

THE KANSAS CITY STAR'S policy of publishing a list of approved films for "Family Nights" now has passed its second anniversary. The readers of that newspaper, one of the most friendly in the country to the film industry, have been induced to add to the patronage of both downtown and neighborhood theatres for two years.

Thousands of families have learned to rely upon these approvals and send their children without the least hesitancy. But, back of these approvals, which have the hearty approval of all exhibitors in the city, lies a big task which is performed by the Better Films Committee of the Kansas City Parent-Teacher Association.

THERE is no censorship phase to the approvals at all. It simply means free newspaper space to approved films and no space to those not approved. Those not approved are in no way criticized. The committee comprises forty-two women who work each day of the week except Sunday in their endeavor to select the best motion pictures that can be found for adults and children.

There is no "highbrow" or reform element connected with the organization. Winter and summer members of the committee may be found in private exhibition rooms of theatres or at previews at exchanges.

"IF we don't like a film, we just leave it," Mrs. E. M. Metcalf, chairman of the committee, said. "We don't go really to criticize, but to choose the cream of what the exchanges have to offer. Then we boost the pictures to all of our seventy-one Parent-Teacher Circles in Kansas City and everybody we see. It is free—and good—advertising. On each Tuesday some of the committee calls the exhibitors to find what they have booked for the following Friday night. We then refer to our files, wherein reports of each film ever viewed is kept. If it has been approved, then the theatre is marked as a family night theatre and the list given for publication to the press."

From September 1, 1925, to January 1, 1926, the Parent-Teacher viewed 147 pictures. Ninety-five of these were approved for family night showing. During the year 1925, 580 pictures were viewed. Two hundred and thirty-four of those made the approval list. Pictures, as a whole, are showing marked improvement, according to Mrs. Metcalf.

ARTHUR A. SCHMIDT, who died the other day at Los Angeles, had a wide circle of friends in the industry. He was one of the best known and best liked men in the distribution division of the business and had held several important executive positions. At the time of his death he was Western Division Manager for F. B. O. and had previously been General Manager of Distribution for Universal. His loss is deeply regretted by the film industry.

* * * *

THIS issue contains, so far as available at the time we went to press, the news of the seventh annual convention of the M. P. T. O. A. at Los Angeles. Further developments which occurred after presstime will be told fully in next week's issue.

The reports of President Woodhull and Business Manager Seider carried much that is interesting and informative, particularly as their discussion related to the future of the independent theatre owner.

Hugo Riesenfeld

AN EDITOR ON BROADWAY

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

HUGO RIESENFELD sailed for Europe on the Olympic last Saturday. He will make an important announcement upon his return here in a few months. Since leaving the management of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres, Dr. Riesenfeld has had many tempting offers. But he has contented himself with the formulation of his own future plans, together with the arrangement for the musical presentation of a number of prominent pictures in New York theatres. His announcement will be awaited with much interest.

BEFORE sailing, Dr. Riesenfeld made public plans for the Short Subject Gold Medal, which he has established as an annual award. The committee which will choose the winner of the second medal has been named; they will report in due time. The presentation of this medal annually by Dr. Riesenfeld is a very fine contribution to real picture progress. Details of the second competition will be found elsewhere in this issue.

WE ran an editorial some months ago to the effect that the idea was the preeminent thing in pictures. And it looks now as if production policy was shaping itself about this nucleus.

A production chief told me the other day that stars had lost their lustre and also books and plays as big assets to production.

And certainly all signs point this year to the predominance of the original story.

One big company will announce, in time, an advisory board of some of the most original and best writing minds in the country.

All of which is great progress—and logical.

OF course, I don't believe the star has or ever will, decline in the world of entertainment.

In handling film stars, however, we have always put the cart before the horse.

Stories make stars: but stars don't make stories, nor great pictures.

Consequently the basis of production is stories. And the basis of stories is ideas.

So an original story with a big idea is greater than a book or play with a lesser idea.

Ideas are the things.

"CATERING to All the People Some of the Time" is the apt title of an interview in this issue, by Thomas C. Kennedy with Irwin Wheeler, a well-known exhibitor in the East.

It ought to appeal strongly, it seems to me, to every exhibitor reader; since every exhibitor, assuredly, is anxious to interest that large class of people in his community who cannot by any means be called "regulars" in picture theatre attendance.

THIS whole business of picture entertainment is in too hard and fast a circle these days. We've got to do considerable breaking out if box-office receipts are to be adequately increased.

The exhibitor knows it well enough from his end. He wants, of course, this increased patronage—if he can find out how to get it.

But I can add some facts from this end of the line.

IDEAS for new kinds of pictures are being constantly placed before the large producing companies here in New York and on the Coast. They come from highly successful and experienced writers, artists, directors. Many are inspiring, alluring in concept and potentiality.

But, almost always, the producing head is forced to say: "I'm sorry, but your idea is too advanced. We lose money on these attempts to progress. They are outside the amusement order, etc."

WELL, what is the amusement order? Take your fingers and count: Society dramas, comedy dramas, melodramas, westerns, animal pictures, comedies, cartoons, scenics.

Here's the hard and fast order. The salesmen talk it; the exhibitors think it. It's the safe way—that is, safe for the hard and fast "regular" audience. Ready-made stuff for ready-made audiences. Just like vaudeville and its hard and fast lines; and, in the main, like the legitimate.

BUT the motion picture is not the stage. We don't want to limit it by these limitations. We cannot afford to. The rapidly increasing number of picture theatre seats cannot afford to, appealing as they do in every way to all the people of the land.

THE producing machinery wants to expand today. But it is held in check by the selling and exhibiting machinery.

If every exhibitor would bust loose, like Mr. Wheeler has so successfully done, and reach that "potential" audience all about him, reach them occasionally at least—pictures would get a new lease in life.

They would portray life; and that is just what they're supposed to do and must do.

AN interesting development is taking place in the independent field. No longer does the term "state rights" fully cover this group. Columbia, for instance, under the able leadership of Joe Brandt, is operating under a national (and even international) franchise plan which entitles it to inclusion in the list of national distributors.

With the gradual elimination of several companies in this field, and particularly the fly-by-night producer, making one picture on the proceeds of his previous venture (if any), and rarely able to fulfill his contractual obligation, the surviving firms are headed by men who are first of all business men. The companies are more soundly financed than in the old "state rights" days. Definite schedules of product are being announced, some of which might be favorably compared to those of the national distributors. And, for the most part, these companies are prepared to make good on these schedules and deliver the product promised.

The independent field has had difficult going the past few years, but we believe that there is a definite need and a definite niche for a reasonable number of competently managed concerns of this type, and the survival of the fittest is determining who those companies shall be.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

REX WINS!

TUESDAY evening, at the Hotel Roosevelt, witnessed the trade showing of "The Devil Horse," Hal Roach's latest Pathe feature starring Rex, King of the Wild Horses.

What was billed as an "Eurythmic Setting and Presentation" was arranged by S. Barret McCormick, and featured an Harmonic Tympani Battery, which is not, as you might suppose, a new type of field artillery, but a diverting musical novelty consisting of a battery of kettle-drums, played by six solo drummers, each tuned to a different note of the scale (the drums, not the drummers).

This battery of drums was also used with splendid effect in scoring the picture. The orchestral accompaniment was arranged by James C. Bradford, who conducted the orchestra in person, and did much to enhance the dramatic qualities of the picture. Inasmuch as the beat of horses' hoofs (or is it hooves?) plays an important part throughout the picture—wild horses, Indian horses, cavalry horses—this use of a special drum corps offers a first rate musical idea to any first run theatre. The Messrs. McCormick and Bradford would doubtless be glad to furnish all the details to any interested exhibitor.

The showing was followed by dancing in the grand ballroom. The affair was well attended by a representative aggregation from Film Row.

A STARLESS WEEK

NOT a single, solitary asterisk appeared on the report of the National Board of Review this week, despite the fact that seven features were reviewed by the cinema commission.

DAVID WARFIELD

Paramount studio, and intimated that he might yet enter pictures if an interesting enough opportunity came along.

Warfield visited all the sets at the studio and watched the work with great interest.

"Wouldn't you like to try pictures some time, Mr. Warfield?" he was asked.

"Well, if something marvelous came along, I might," he replied.

The actor was surprised to learn that one of the cameras had been grinding while he stood on the set.

"I'd like to see those movies of me," he said. "I've seen myself on the screen several times, and every time I've been shocked at what I saw. I always say, 'For goodness sake, is that what I look like?' I think I'm a little afraid of the movies; on the stage I can't see what I look like."

It is at least to be hoped that the "something marvelous" does come along to lure Warfield under the Klieglights and Cooper-Hewitts.

FROM STILLS TO LEADS

YOUNG Richard Walling, who has been cast for the important role of Tommy Atkins in the Fox Films version of "Pigs," has recorded a sensational rise suggesting that of another Fox player, George O'Brien. Walling, who is the son of William Walling, stage and screen actor, through his interest in amateur photography became a still photographer, though his ambitions lay in another direction.

Now and then, on distant locations, he had a chance to play atmosphere, and always acquitted himself creditably. He was sent to Arizona with Irving Cummings as still man on "Rustling for Cupid." The two became great friends and Cummings resolved to give the youth a chance as soon as possible.

Then the company returned to the studio and Cummings was assigned to direct "Pigs." Immediately he visualized young Walling as Tommy Atkins, the youthful hero of the piece. The result was a conference with studio officials, a camera test—and a contract.

POLACHEK-FABIAN ENGAGEMENT

THE engagement of Miss Melanie Faith Polachek to Abraham M. Fabian, of the Fabian theatre interests in New Jersey, is announced by Mr. and Mrs. John Polachek of 601 West End Avenue, New York City. Mr. Fabian is the son of Jacob Fabian of Paterson, N. J. In addition to his theatre interests he is a member of the executive committee and the Board of Directors of First National, as well as a member of the Board of Directors of Educational. No date for the wedding has been set. The couple met last March on the Steamship Calamares, en route to Cuba.

PARKER PRAISES 6XBR STUNT

WATT L. PARKER, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Bros., arrived in New York last week after six weeks at the Coast studios and a brief tour with 6XBR, the portable radio broadcasting station recently started on a transcontinental tour to broadcast local programs from picture theatres in the principal cities. Parker is a veteran advertising and exploitation man, but he declares that this stunt tops anything in his varied experience as a result producer.

He saw the 6XBR in operation in San Francisco, Oakland, Tacoma and Seattle, and says he has never seen anything draw as did these broadcasting programs.

Company of Fox Film players and crew aboard the S.S. Emma Alexander en route to San Francisco for the taking of scenes for "A-1 Society," latest of the "East Side, West Side" comedies. Director Ben Stoloff, Barbara Luddy and Georgie Harris may be seen near the center

"Radio is a mystery to most people," he points out. "They have sat in their homes and listened to it, marveling at its mysteries without having much idea how it was all accomplished. The 6XBR operates in full view of the audience. The newspapers realize the novelty of the thing and have given us splendid support."

THE BRITISH STRIKE

SOMETHING of the problems created for exhibitors by the late British general strike may be imagined from the communication just received from Robb Lawson, London representative of United Artists, in reference to the premiere there of "The Bat" on the eve of the strike.

Metropolitan's "The Last Frontier" desert location on Indian reservation; in the foreground Joe Lee's Indian Trading Post, with company and redskins awaiting orders from Director George G. Seitz; in the background the corral, covered wagons and Mess Hall. This is being produced for Producers Distributing Corp.

Director Clarence Brown (right) and George L. Fecke, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer radio director, just before the M-G-M megaphone wielder went on the air from Station WHN, New York City

The advance press campaign opened brilliantly. The picture opened on Monday and a luncheon was given for the press. The critics went back to their offices to write their reviews on the picture. At 12 p. m. the order was given for the strike. The only dailies which managed to appear were The Daily Express and the Daily Sketch. Robb tried to get extra copies of these but found the entrances to their premises barred by pickets. As a result, the entire press campaign was virtually lost.

"The evening shows offered the greatest difficulty," says Robb. "The New Gallery Kinema draws its patrons from the suburbs and as the necessary transport was not available, people would not risk going home after 7 p. m., as they would have to walk home. As an example of what Londoners without automobiles had to do, I myself walked seven miles on Tuesday to get to my post here."

And here we have one of the most widely famous scenes in all the history of the spoken drama, Eliza pursued by the bloodhounds, as it has been re-enacted for the screen by Margharita Fischer in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for Universal

HOPPER TO JOIN FUTTER

E. MASON HOPPER, the director, is en route from the Coast to join Walter Futter in New York prior to their embarking on a European tour. Futter, who is going in search of material for "Curiosities," "The Movie Sideshow," has cancelled his transportation on the President Harding, in order to sail with Hopper on the Muenchen June 8th.

Theatres Organizing for Movie Season

Campaign Celebrating 30th Birthday of Pictures Widely Supported; Hays Office Sends Out 10 Publicity Experts

THE organization of the theatres of the United States for the Greater Movie Season campaign of 1926, celebrating the thirtieth birthday of motion pictures, is definitely under way.

The press books are out, ten high-class publicity and exploitation men have been despatched from the Hays office to various parts of the country, and telegrams and letters are reaching Will H. Hays pledging regional and organization support.

A typical wire is the following from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas, of which H. A. Cole is President:

"This region is backing the movement to a man."

From H. N. McNeill, editor of the Motion Picture Journal, at Dallas, a regional paper which is supporting the Season, came the following to Mr. Hays: "Letters are pouring in and it looks like a big season in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma."

Word was received that intensive work will begin in Michigan as soon as Henderson M. Richey returns from the convention in Los Angeles. Every theatre in the Michigan organization, of which Richey is general manager, will take part in Greater Movie Season. Kansas and Missouri, under the leadership of President R. R. Biechele, have pledged co-operation and endorsed the Season.

Exhibitors everywhere in the United States will find available for them the expert services of the publicity and exploitation men sent out from the Hays office.

The New England territory will be covered by Bert Adler, who has exploited many pictures in that region and is well known in the motion picture industry.

Jack A. Pegler, who aided in the successful Season of last year in Atlantic City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Richmond, will work in those same cities this year.

Harry L. Royster, who in 1925 aided the exhibitors in Detroit, Buffalo and Cleveland, this year has the Chicago, Detroit, Toledo and Milwaukee territory.

Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Columbus will be covered this season by J. F. Gillespie, who last year was one of the leading workers in the very successful season at Atlantic City.

Paul Gray, who aided in last year's Greater Movie Season in various places in the Middle West, will assist this year at Indianapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Louisville.

Louis F. Guimond, who has done important publicity and advertising work for several large producing corporations, will be the representative in Minneapolis, Des Moines, Omaha and Kansas City.

Denver, Salt Lake City, Oklahoma City, Little Rock and Memphis will be the territory of George A. McDermitt, who was one of those in charge of the Oklahoma City season last year, which went over 100 per cent.

James F. Lundy, who has worked with exhibitors in a number of cities in the South, will have for his territory Atlanta, Charlotte, N. C., Jacksonville, New Orleans, Houston, San Antonio and Dallas.

On the West Coast the Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle territory will be covered by Charles Raymond, who was an important factor in the success of the Kansas City campaign last season.

Louis R. Brager, who aided exhibitors in the great Chicago campaign in 1925, has New York City as his assignment during the present Greater Movie Season.

The first duty of these exploitation men is to help organize the Campaign Committee of exhibitors which will be in charge in each city which participates in the Season. Then, under the direction of these committees, the representatives of the Hays office will operate in every possible way to help make the campaign successful.

Famous Plans Common Stock Increase

Yearly Dividend Basis of $10 Per Share Authorized at Meeting of Board of Directors; To Buy Balaban & Katz Control

PLACING the common stock on a yearly dividend basis of $10 per share, the Board of Directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation this week authorized a special meeting of stockholders to be held June 25 for the purpose of voting on a proposal to increase the authorized number of shares of common stock, without par value, from 450,000 to 1,000,000 shares. The dividends will be payable $2 quarterly in cash and the remaining $2 in cash or stock, at the option of the corporation.

At the same time the directors declared an extra dividend on the common stock to stockholders of record, June 30, of $2 per share, payable August 10, to be paid in common stock, or in the event of the failure of the stockholders to approve the increase in common stock, then the dividend is to be paid in cash.

Upon the approval of the increase of capitalization by the stockholders the corporation will offer 191,482 shares of its common stock for sale at $107.49 per share, (the forty-nine cents being an adjustment for the accrued dividend) to holders of common stock at the rate of one new share for each two shares now held including the above mentioned dividend stock).

The proceeds of the proposed issue of common stock, amounting to approximately $20,000,000, is to be used for the acquisition or erection of theatres, including the purchase of a majority of the outstanding stock of Balaban & Katz Corporation, and the purchase of other assets, all of which should add to the value, importance and fortify it in its position in the industry.

The corporation at present has outstanding 80,000 shares of preferred stock (20,000 additional shares of preferred stock previously outstanding having been purchased and retired through operation of the preferred stock sinking fund) and 375,456 shares of common stock.

The directors at this time also declared the regular dividend of $2 per share on the common stock, payable October 1 to stockholders of record, September 15.

An Editor on Broadway: By Wm. A. Johnston

THIS much needed element of novelty is again brought to the screen in "The Devil Horse," which Pathe pre-viewed on Tuesday night at the Hotel Roosevelt. This is, to be sure, the third of the pictures made by Hal Roach and Fred Jackman with Rex, king of wild horses, but the picture offers an abundance of novelty and freshness for all of that. Wisely, and no doubt partly from the difficulty of making these subjects, the wild horse pictures have been spaced well apart. Had the three been released in a year or less, the theme would begin to be a bit worn, but coming at intervals of a year or so they are perpetually fresh and interesting.

The amount of thought that has been put into this picture shows in every way. Ideas, as we have said, are the thing, and a host of ideas were developed for this subject. Story, photography, camera angles, locations, cast—all of these showed originality and the touch of creative imagination. We are inclined to agree with Heywood Broun that such pictures are true motion picture art. Drawing-room farce and society drama can be done on the stage as well or better than on the screen, but such pictures as this, when they are produced in the true language of the photoplay, represent the "motion picture" in its truest sense.

THE presentation given this picture also showed a great deal of thought, and was likewise built around a definite idea—in this instance, the use of the drum. At first blush, this does not sound like a highly promising idea, but in the actual working out it proved otherwise.

Famous Building in Central States

To Erect $5,000,000 Theatre in Toledo; Also Building House in Saginaw and Seattle; Universal Gets Another in Florida

INCLUDED in the reports of circuit expansion and theatre building throughout the states this week is the advices received concerning the building by Famous Players-Lasky of new houses in Ohio, Michigan and Washington. In Toledo, Famous has purchased a block of property in the business district here and plans to erect a theatre costing $5,000,000. Construction is to be financed by an offering of new stock just announced.

The Princess here was recently purchased by Famous.

It is understood that Paramount is going to build a new 2,500-seat theatre in Saginaw, Mich., and that Bill Watson of Bay City will manage it. Also that the deal is practically closed by which Paramount takes over the Mecca-Palace in Saginaw from Chas. Carlisle.

Deeds filed in the office of the County Auditor at Seattle, Wash., this week transferred the title to the site of the new proposed Famous Players-Lasky theatre from the United Building Corporation to the Paramount Building Corporation, a Seattle organization organized to construct the building and lease it to the Paramount organization.

It was also announced that B. Marcus Priteca, local architect, will be associated in the building of the Famous Players house with Rapp and Rapp, Chicago architects, in the preparation of the plans and the supervision of the construction.

Plans are now under way in Chicago, and will be received here within the next month, it is reported. As announced, the house will be built at Ninth Avenue and Pine Street, in the new business center, and will have a seating capacity of about 4,000. The cost of the theatre and equipment is estimated at between $1,500,000 and $1,750,000.

The Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises has just acquired a new theatre in Florida, it was announced this week at the Universal home office by Al Fair, general manager of the theatre chain corporation. The house is the Arcade Theatre in Kissimee, Fla., a city under 5,000 population, about twenty miles south of Orlando.

The Arcade seats about 500, and recently was remodeled and redecorated. It is the leading house in Kissimee. Universal bought a half-interest in the theatre, assuming control and forming a theatre operating corporation with the former owner, who will continue to manage the house, under Universal supervision.

This house forms an important addition to Universal's rapidly growing circuit of motion picture theatres in Florida. This southern chain is under the direction of Dan Michalove, assistant sales director for Universal.

Through a transaction recently completed between the Great States Theatres, Inc., and Julius Lamm and L. Sussman, the corporation will operate the Academy, Elite and Orpheum Theatres at Waukegan, with Lamm in charge as resident manager.

Lamm and Sussman, who were the owners of the Elite and Orpheum and the Great States, took over the Academy from George K. Spoor. It is understood that Lamm and Sussman, by the transaction, acquire a half interest in the Waukegan theatre combine, the Great States Theatres having an equal share.

The Orpheum, according to Lamm, will operate only on Saturday and Sunday, with vaudeville and pictures, the other houses continuing to operate as picture houses.

Finkelstein & Ruben have leased the theatres of the Eau Claire Theatre Co., at Eau Claire, Wis. The transaction includes the Grand theatre, the Wisconsin and the Unique. The Grand will be used for road shows as previously, with the other two devoted to pictures.

Finkelstein & Ruben have been operating the New State, a new house in Eau Claire, for several months. The theatres of the Eau Claire Theatre Co., at Chippewa Falls are not included in the deal, it is said.

The report that the deal for the acquisition by the Stanley Company of the Levy chain of theatres in Kentucky and Ohio has been finally closed seems to be without foundation, although officials of the Stanley Company refused to commit themselves to a definite statement on the subject.

John J. McGuirk, vice-president of the Stanley Company, who negotiates nearly all such transactions, stated that the deal is in practically the same status as it was a few weeks ago when the company acquired the Fabian, Mark Strand and Roland Clark theatres.

The Uptown Theatre Company has been incorporated in St. Louis. It has $50,000 capital fully paid up.

The incorporators listed in the papers and their holdings are: J. B. Castle, 252 shares; N. Koplar, and George P. Skouras, 122½ shares each; S. P. Skouras, L. Rassieur, Jr., and H. Koplar, one share each.

Mason Joins Production Staff of P. D. C.

FOLLOWING the transfer of Producers Distributing house organ "The Dotted Line," from Hollywood to New York City where it will be published hereafter, William Sistrom has added Lesley Mason to the production staff of the Metropolitan Studio.

Mason joined Producers Distributing Corporation about two years ago as the company's west coast representative and for the past several months has been editor of "The Dotted Line." Previously he was managing editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and editor of "Exhibitors Trade Review" and later took up free lance work as a film editor and title writer.

"Art" Schmidt, Western Division Manager for F. B. O., Dead of Appendicitis

ARTHUR A. (ART) SCHMIDT, Division Manager for Film Booking Offices with headquarters at Los Angeles, died at the Hollywood hospital on Sunday night from peritonitis after a brief illness. He returned to Hollywood from a business trip late in the week and on Wednesday was taken to the hospital suffering from an acute attack of appendicitis. An operation was necessary, which was followed by peritonitis. His remains, accompanied by his family, left Hollywood on Wednesday for Buffalo, his birthplace, where interment will be made.

Mr. Schmidt was born in Buffalo forty-one years ago, and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Madeline Murphy Schmidt, his daughter, Mary, and two sons, Arthur, Jr., and Robert.

"Art" Schmidt was one of the most popular executives in the motion picture business, combining a high degree of administrative ability with a keen understanding of the show business. His first work in the industry was his activity in the State rights field in the Buffalo territory. Later he joined Universal and became general manager of distribution, after serving for a time as head of the short subjects department. He left Universal to join Film Booking Offices and took over the Western division, maintaining headquarters at the F. B. O. Hollywood studios.

Gloria Gordon Seriously Injured on Location

Last Thursday afternoon while on location at Tarrytown, N. Y., Gloria Gordon received serious injuries.

Her role called for a leap from a slow moving automobile. Miss Gordon miscalculated the jump and fell, tearing ligaments of her left leg and lacerating her arm. She will not be able to walk for three weeks.

Alyce Mills was secured to replace Miss Gordon and production was resumed under the direction of Tom Terriss.

New Netherlands Censorship Bill Passed

The bill providing for censorship of moving picture films by a central commission which recently was passed by the Second Chamber of the Netherlands Parliament has now been passed by the First Chamber, according to a cable to the Department of Commerce from Acting Commercial Attache E. V. D. Wight, The Hague. The date of its promulgation and effectiveness is not yet known.

Contract Battle Features Early M. P. T. O. A. Sessions

Controversy Between Seider and Steffes Referred to Board of Directors—1600 Gather for Seventh Annual Convention

REPORTS of officials and the expected storm over the uniform contract featured the early sessions of the seventh annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

By Tuesday morning some 860 delegates had arrived and the total was swelled to about 1600 delegates and families when the convention got under way officially.

Reports were presented by President R. F. Woodhull; Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Board of Directors; A. Julian Brylawski, Chairman of the Administrative Committee; Joseph M. Seider, Business Manager; Harry Davis, for the Playdate Bureau; and E. Thornton Kelly, of the Contact Bureau.

Concluding the reading of his report Wednesday, Mr. Seider amplified it verbally. He told of the appointment of the Advisory Committee, stating that it was without power since it was named by W. H. Hays and had not the recognition or sanction of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Mr. Seider told the delegates that when he endeavored to have the name of the National organization spread upon the record at this meeting, Mr. Hays accused him of "playing politics."

Steffes Takes Exception

The first real fireworks of the convention occurred when W. A. Steffes, leader of the Allied group, arose and in a loud voice took exception to Mr. Seider's statement. He said he was desirous of clarifying any impression which he said might have been made by the previous speaker that he (Steffes) "was on the Hays payroll."

In referring to the formation of the Advisory Committee, Mr. Steffes stated that Mr. Hays had nothing to do with the appointment of the exhibitor members; that after a conference with the Northwest States he was designated by his own exhibitor colleagues and that the same procedure was used by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City in the appointment of Charles L. O'Reilly.

"What happened to the M. P. T. O. A. I don't know," exclaimed Mr. Steffes, who followed this up with a wide sweep of his arm.

Signed by President

Sessions of the convention will not be over until Saturday, June 5, with some of the most important matters to come up in the last two days. Among these are the question of whether or not an outside leader is to be engaged and funds raised for financing his employment; and a change in the constitution which would permit election of the President by the delegates instead of by the Board of Directors as had been the custom since the Boston Convention.

The report of E. Thornton Kelly, of the Contact Bureau, brought out one of the important points in the future working of the organization. This is the proposal to have six branch offices, with competent field men in charge at the following key points: Chicago, Louisville, Los Angeles, Charlotte, N. C.; Seattle and Kansas City.

"These offices will serve as a direct contact with our State organizations. The field men will organize States that are unorganized and help strengthen State units that are not now fully organized," said the report. "They will hold monthly meetings with the Presidents and Secretaries of State organizations within their jurisdiction, and co-relate the work between them and the National organization.

All States Needed

"It would be very advantageous to the National organization to organize competent State machines in every State in the Union. Your Chairman recommends that the State units affiliated with the National organization shall not set the dates of their State Conventions prior to consultation with National headquarters, thereby duplication of dates could be avoided and the attendance of National officers at these Conventions could be insured.

"It is also essential, upon holding elections, that State units immediately forward to National Headquarters the full list of newly elected officers and committee members."

R. F. Woodhull, President of the M. P. T. O. A.

"I would like to have any man in this room point out a clause which was not agreed upon. Your own national president, Mr. Woodhull, signed the statement. If the contractual formula is wrong it will be thrashed out on the convention floor."

In his reply to Steffes, Mr. Seider contended that the facts as represented in his report answered the entire situation. He referred to clauses which would increase the playing time of picture from 12 to 16 months and again touched upon another clause which, he declared would extend a contract automatically from year to year unless its author was given thirty days' notice.

Mr. Seider declared that he did not question the good intentions of the exhibitor members of the Advisory Committee, saying that they were pitted against the brilliant legal talent of the Hays organization.

Action on the contract was postponed until the third day of the convention, having been referred to the Board of Directors for action. This was done so that the board might render a clear perspective which could be acted upon immediately by the delegates.

Condemns Politics

Before this movement was successful Jack Miller of Chicago addressed the convention with a suggestion of some of the eloquence exerted by Mr. Steffes.

"It seems," said Mr. Miller, "that it is time things were taken out of committees and handled by exhibitors and not by politicians."

The convention got under way Monday night with the meeting of the Board of Directors. On Tuesday the delegates gathered in the convention hall, and the meeting was officially opened by Joseph W. Walsh, of Connecticut, who announced that the organization was starting with a clear slate and no debts for the first time in its history.

He announced that Glenn Harper was absent from the floor due to illness caused by overwork in preparing for the convention. Mayor Cryer turned over the keys to the city with the usual complimentary remarks. Eli Whitney Collins, of Arkansas, made the response to the Mayor's address of welcome.

President Woodhull was then escorted to the chair by Helen Ulman, Sydney Cohen and M. J. O'Toole, and delivered his report. Numerous telegrams wishing success to the organization were read by the chair. A number of stars were introduced to the delegates. These included Lewis Stone, Mary Astor, Anna Q. Nilsson, Patsy Ruth Miller, Irene Rich, Willard Louis and Monte Blue.

An address was made on Wednesday by Fred C. Beetson, of the Hays organization. He brought out that school teachers were regularly assigned to studios in which children are employed; that there is no such thing as cruelty to animals in picture work; and that the free casting bureau was working out splendidly with no complaints although they were handling on an average of 900 "extras" daily through the Producers Association casting office.

Mr. Seider read his report on pictures sold but not delivered and amplified it verbally as above.

Stars introduced to the convention Wednesday were: Clara Bow, Charles Paddock, Larry Grey, Percy Marmont, Raymond Hatton, Bebe Daniels and Hal Roach and Gang.

In his report as Chairman of the Administrative Committee, Mr. Brylawski said in part:

"So it was that after the many failures to secure an efficient man for the position of business manager it was with great relief that we were able to secure the reluctant consent of Mr. Joseph Seider to start on this difficult task. Accordingly, on October 8th, Mr. Seider was confirmed as business manager and he and the chairman were authorized to engage suitable quarters for the National Organization.

"In due course the present offices at 745 Seventh Avenue, New York City, were selected and engaged at a rental of $4,300 per year and a lease signed for the term of two years and five months from the 1st of December, 1925. The business manager was also authorized to spend a sum not to exceed $2,000 for furniture and equipment and to have certain partitions erected according to the approved layout of the offices and to engage such clerical and other assistants as required. The business manager served without salary. All these things were done and the next full meeting of the committee was held at National Headquarters on November 17th and 18th, at which time the details of the organization were perfected and approved and the affairs of the organization placed in the hands of the business manager who has so ably carried them on.

"Full details of the deliberations of the committee will be found in the minutes of the meetings of which there have been five officially called meetings and many informal ones. The committees have in every way endeavored to be helpful in assisting the business manager in all matters pertaining to the operation of the organization and its advice, deliberations and active co-operation have been always on hand. Close contact has been maintained with National Headquarters and many important decisions made by mail, telegraph and telephone. A resume of the results of the activities of the organization since the inception of the committee would be but a duplication of the report of the business manager and as his is the real credit of the many accomplishments, to him should be the honor of reporting the same.

Jos. M. Seider, Business Manager, M. P. T. O. A.

"The major expenditures authorized by the committee in all cases, unanimously approved were:

The expenses of opening and equipping offices	$1,900
To Sydney S. Cohen for money loaned	7,000
To J. J. Walker, Legal Counsel	6,200
To F. Gilbert, Legal Counsel	5,000
To Sam Bullock	1,500

"Return of the sum of $15,000 of the funds of the playdate bureau to the Independent Producers and Distributors. The sum of $1,000 for the employment of counsel in the music tax fight of which the sum of $500 has been paid to Fulton Brylawski. The sum of $5,000 for expenses of the Los Angeles Convention Committee for the purposes of reporting services, clerical help, expenses of the National officers and other expenses not covered by the usual routine of National Headquarters."

Reporting to the convention as Business Manager, Mr. Seider reviewed the activities of the organization for the past year; pointed to the settlement of many disputes between exhibitors and distributors, as told fully in a recent exclusive story in THE NEWS, and continued:

"Encroachment! The utterance of that word amongst us today is as though some one were announcing the approach of a destructive plague! For some of us it is a plague. For others it has already ravaged our life's investment. There are some over whom it now directly hovers. To all of us, collectively, it is an insidious menace—something to be immediately guarded against; something which must be exterminated or at least abated otherwise it will mean the destruction of all of us.

"Five years ago had we a properly supported organization, the mere gesture of strength would have prevented the situation we are confronted with today. Then Famous Players and Loew-Metro did not own or control as many theatres as they do today. Then their primary business was production. Production being the major part of their enterprise, they would not have endangered the outlet of their production into the box offices that you control, and would have quit the exhibition field. But all this is in the past.

"With these points in mind we should view with less pessimism the giant amalgamations which are taking place. The lead in this respect was taken a year ago when Famous merged with Balaban and Katz. Again we ask who made Famous Players-Lasky? There is only one conscientious reply: you!

"Like sheep other companies are amalgamating—producers with circuits and circuits with producers, outstanding among which are Producers Dist. Corp.-Keith Albee and the inroads being made by the Stanley Co.

"What is it all coming to? With such capital and such power where is there room for the lone independent? With producer possessing his own box office where is there a place for the man who religiously adheres to his end of the industry?

"Pause again before you express any disheartenment. Consider the strength of your own organization. Consider the independent producers. Millions of dollars represent the total of your holdings. Millions of dollars are invested in independent studios. Together they answer the country's needs for proper screen entertainment. This should be the plan for our first move in this campaign to safeguard our investments."

Other highlights in the Seider report follow:

"Our organization or any of our State units must not become affiliated with a producers' organization. Our interests and the producers' interests are basically different. We should collaborate and co-operate with them but we must not be absorbed by them. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Albany and Buffalo Zone, during the past year, applied for affiliation with the Hays organization. We immediately registered protest. Based on our best knowledge, information and belief, their application, due to our protests, has not been accepted.

"Our receipts from dues, as stated at the outset of our report are entirely inadequate to operate our business. Receipts from dues for the year, up to and including April 15th, were $20,919.50. The cost of operating your Headquarters for about six months was $11,880.37, divided as follows:

Salaries		$1,660.77
Postage		2,285.68
Telephone		303.20
Telegrams		184.82
Traveling expenses		547.60
Bulletin (including Mr. Waller),		5,487.00
Less reported advertising	$638.70	4,848.30
Petty Cash		2,050.00
Total		$11,880.37

"This comparatively small cost was due to your business manager serving without salary. In view of the fact that there were other expenses incurred by your officers which will be reported in the treasurer's report, were it not for the fact that we received $50,000 from Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Film Corporation, there would not have been sufficient finances to carry on for the past year.

"We must fight fire with fire. We must erect building against building. We also must build larger and better theatres. We must give our allies, the independent producers, an outlet for bigger and better pictures. The independent producer must organize himself so that he could help the independent theatre owner finance the building of these new, larger and better theatres without the risk of loss in operation."

Mr. Seider recommended changing the constitution of the M. P. T. O. A. so that the convention itself, and not the board of directors, would elect the president. These recommendations follow:

"1. That the constitution be amended to provide that the membership in our organization shall be direct through affiliated State units. State units shall collect dues from individual members and transmit same to the parent body. Where States are not organized or not affiliated we recommend that the dues shall be collected direct from the individual theatre owner. The State units shall collect dues for the national organization as agent for the parent body only, and shall not have the right to use the money so collected for their own purposes.

"2. That we amend our constitution to provide for the election of 10 directors for three years, 10 directors for two years and 10 directors for one year. Every year hereafter we shall elect 10 directors for three years to succeed the directors whose term of office shall expire. Thereby we shall at all times have a fully experienced board and your board of directors will be liberated from the realm of politics.

"3. That we amend our constitution to provide that your president be elected by the delegates from the convention floor.

"4. That you authorize the formation of a Statistical Bureau, not only for the compiling of statistics on pictures but statistics on the basic condition in the industry, trade disputes, insurance rates, power rates, public relations, industrial researches, governmental relations and building of motion picture theatres."

Sydney Cohen, chairman of the Board of Directors, M. P. T. O. A.

A. Julian Brylawski, Chairman, M. P. T. O. A. Administrative Committee.

In his report as president, Mr. Woodhull devoted a large part of his attention to theatre encroachments and overseating. In this connection he declared:

"Encroachments, overseating, promotion of theatre stock and screen bootlegging, should receive the undivided attention of this convention. In every section of the United States the theatre owner is justly alarmed and wondering how long he is to be permitted to conduct his business along lines that cement friendship for our industry in his community. He sees himself gradually being encircled by a chain of theatres welded by the very powers that control the product which he retails to the public. In addition to this he finds himself confronted with the 'screen bootlegger,' an individual whose sole ambition is to build up a small chain of theatres for the purpose of selling out to some national chain at a profit. His nefarious operations consist of threatening to build for the purpose of forcing the citizen of the community to sell at a sacrifice, or promoting stock in the town to mislead people who do not understand our business well enough to analyze whether the town is well served as to the quality of entertainment, or overseated.

"This latter personage is perhaps more dangerous to the independent theatre owner than the former, and needs plenty of watchfulness with no procrastination as to action. Both of these foes can be somewhat combated, however, according to your standing in the community. If you have been a solid, constructive citizen, taking part in your city affairs, contributing your just share towards the civic betterment of your town, becoming one of its executive officers and doing those things that take you out of the category of 'just the fellow running the picture theatre up the street,' all the force of power and money cannot construct an opposition theatre to you unless you so desire it. This has been my humble opinion for years, and we have records at headquarters to substantiate its validity. This is, and has been, a hobby of mine, and it is with unqualified delight and without mental reservation that I say to you today that in the past five years the personnel of the theatre owner throughout the country has arisen in leaps and bounds. Some might say that if the personnel of the theatre owner has improved, why has the over-building of theatres increased? My answer to that is that the substantial theatre owner, with a fine record of local achievement has not realized his true worth in his community, and has not exercised the personal pressure that lies within his power.

"Let us not for a moment forget that as we sow so shall we reap, and to therefore so conduct ourselves at all times that when confronted by an enemy we will be in a position to meet him with the greatest of all ammunition—Public Respect. In the larger cities, where first-runs are at stake, this formula will not always apply, and this problem will provide material for ample discussion at scheduled time during this convention.

"There is one thing, however, to bear in mind, that history always repeats itself, and in the pages of the world's history from time immemorial, we find the everlasting records that power always breaks of its own weight. In every instance where any man or group of men have ever attempted to control the destinies of any one commodity, the plan was completely destroyed by that great censor of us all—public opinion—and when that speaks, of-

German Export and Import Figures Published

The Berlin Correspondent of THE NEWS reports the latest official German figures covering the first quarter of this year.

According to these figures compiled by the German Government's statistical department, imports of unexposed film during the first three months of this year amounted to 2,266,500 ft. which is an enormous increase as compared with the corresponding figure of the preceding year, amounting to 279,000 ft. only.

Exports of unexposed film have also gone up considerably—from 38,460,300 ft. during the first three months of 1925 up to 54,855,900 ft. for the first quarter of this year.

On the other hand imports of exposed film have decreased a little, viz: from 4,533,000 ft. during the first three months of 1925 to 3,999,300 ft. during the first quarter of the current year. More than one-third of this amount, 1,176,000 ft. came from the U. S. A., according to these compilations.

Exports of exposed film have also gone back considerably, viz: from 15,713,700 ft. during the first three months of 1925 to 14,013,600 ft. during the first three months of the current year.

Milliken Will Give Address at Montreal Convention

Carl E. Milliken, former Governor of Maine and now Secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., is scheduled to give an address on the "Importance of Moving Pictures an an Ally to Peace," at the annual convention of International Kiwanis at Montreal, Quebec, on June 8. This address is listed as one of the important features of the convention and it is predicted, will attract 10,000 delegates and visitors from all parts of the United States and Canada.

M-G-M Report for 12 Weeks Shows Gain

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer report for the twelve weeks ending May 8th, 1926, indicated a profit of $1,465,667 after the deductions of all expenses except the Federal taxes.

The great profit amounted to $5,807,480 from which the operating expenses when subtracted leave a balance of $1,306,510. Other sources of income totaled $159,157.

New Stage Finished at Metropolitan Plant

A MAMMOTH new stage has just been completed at the Metropolitan Pictures Corporation plant in Hollywood. The building is a complete unit in that it is equipped with wardrobe, dressing rooms and shops sufficient to make it a finished producing unit.

It is situated on the back lot and is so arranged that another section can be added to it. This will be done within a few months and will give the entire structure a length of 380 feet by 150 feet wide.

A modern paint shop, constructed and stocked to meet the exacting demands of studio work, has been built as a permanent department of the new stage.

July 4th Release Date "Brown Derby"

WORD comes from First National Pictures that officials of that organization are so highly enthusiastic over the new Johnny Hines comedy, "The Brown Derby," that they have immediately scheduled the release date for the week of July 4th, rather than hold it over for Fall release.

Among those figuring prominently in the cast of "The Brown Derby" are Diana Kane, who plays opposite the star, Ruth Dwyer, Flora Finch, Edmund Breese, Bradley Barker, Herbert Standing, Harold Foshay, J. Barney Sherry and Bob Slater. The direction was in the hands of Charles Hines.

New Firms Incorporated in New York State

Newly incorporated motion picture companies, chartered by the Secretary of State at Albany, and entering the business in New York State during the past week, included the following: Civic Repertory Theatre, Inc., capitalization not stated, Charles Berg, Edward J. Clarke, New York City, Edgar Farier, Irvington; Jodel Theatres, Inc., $500, Julius and Rose Joelson, New York City; John Del Monte, New York; Gokin Amusement Corporation, $30,000, Celia Schechter, Brooklyn; Edith Nadler and Martha Heinrich, New York City; Mirror Enterprises, Inc., Lake Placid, J. Myer Schine, Gloversville; Noel Feldstein, George C. Owens, Lake Placid, capitalization not stated.

Movie House Opens in Rio de Janeiro

The "Nove Odeon," the newest movie house of the Companhia Brazil Cinematographica, was opened in Rio de Janeiro recently, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from R. C. Long, Assistant Trade Commissioner, Rio de Janeiro.

The new theatre is considered to be the finest in Brazil if not in South America. The interior may be favorably compared to some of the best in the United States. The seating capacity is around one thousand and the prices of seats range from approximately 75c to $2.85.

A new development in Brazilian theatres is the practice of presenting prologues with the pictures.

"Captain Salvation" Bought By Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased the Frederick W. Wallace novel, "Captain Salvation," for early production at the West Coast Studio. It will be directed by Reginald Barker as soon as he has finished "The Flaming Forest" as a Cosmopolitan production.

Loew's Regular Quarterly Dividend Declared

This week the board of directors of Loew's, Incorporated, declared the regular quarterly dividend of fifty cents. It is payable on June 30th to stockholders as of June 12th.

Sets 43 Days' Protection Limit in "Kiki" Case

Judge Jacob Stacel, seventh arbitrator appointed by the Board of Arbitration of Cleveland, to decide the case of the Ohio Amusement Co. against First National Pictures, Inc., which culminated in a tie when tried by the Board, ruled that "Kiki," although listed as a "Special," should be available to the subsequent run house operated by the plaintiff company 43 days after the close of its first-run engagement at the Stillman. The ruling was made in accordance with the zoning plan in effect when the contract in question was made, but which has since been abandoned.

Regarding this phase of the case, Judge Stacel said, "It is my opinion that the contracts and the zoning plan agreed upon at the joint meetings should be construed together in determining the intention of the parties and the usages of the trade."

According to the ruling the Jewel Theatre should have been permitted to exhibit "Kiki" on May 30th. However, Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres, blocked this when he obtained a temporary injunction against the local First National Exchange, restraining the Exchange from delivering a print of the picture to the Jewel Theatre. Desberg claims priority rights on the picture.

First National Begins Summer Billing Drive

The thirty-nine branches of First National started their summer billing drive Sunday, May 30th, and will end it the week ending August 28th. Liberal prizes have been offered branch managers and personnel of the exchanges in connection with the campaign to combat the summer slump.

The standing of the branches will be based on the gross billings for the thirteen weeks which have been designated "the luckythirteen."

M.P.T.O.A. in Deal for "Movie Chats"

A JULIAN BRYLAWSKI, chairman of the administrative committee, informed the M.P.T.O.A. convention that a tentative deal had been made with Louis Jacobson for the production and distribution of a new series of "Movie Chats."

In the event the plan is adopted it will mean considerable addition to the finances of the organization, said Mr. Brylawski. Discussing the terms of the deal, he added:

"If we were to have adequate space there for our own purposes such as messages, propaganda, etc., that the editing of the reel would be under our supervision and in addition thereto we were to receive from 40 to 60 per cent. based on a sliding scale of gross receipts of each issue. On our part we were to arrange for physical distribution of the reels to give it the official endorsement of the organization and to urge its use upon our membership, the thought being that by sharing the profits with the state and regional organization we would have the hearty cooperation of the entire membership."

Two Additions to Warner Sales Staff

Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution for Warner Bros., announced last week the addition of two new members of the Warner Bros. sales staff, namely, Abe E. Fischer as Midwest division manager to embrace the territory of Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis, and Louis J. Blumberg as manager of the Minneapolis branch.

Fischer has been, for the past eight years, Minneapolis manager for Metro and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and president of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade for five years. Blumberg, for the past several years, has been associated with Fischer as assistant manager of the Minneapolis branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Christie Bros. Acquire Additional Property

A two hundred and forty acre ranch located in the Ventura hills, north of Hollywood has been acquired by the Christies for the making of their comedies. This new property is in addition to the forty-acre ranch in Westwood.

Contrary to reports that it would be sold the studio property in Hollywood will be retained. This report was started because of the fact that the Famous Players-Lasky studio, which lies on an adjoining block, is being abandoned for business purposes following the purchase by that company of the United Studios.

Bloom Seeking Repeal of Admission Taxes

A LAST-MINUTE effort to secure repeal of the remaining tax on admissions is being made in Washington, D. C. by Representative Sol Bloom of New York, who, on May 27, introduced a bill in the House to repeal Section 500 of the present revenue law in its entirety.

It is pointed out by Bloom that the repeal of the tax can well be accomplished under the surplus of approximately $300,000,000 which it is anticipated the Treasury will have at the close of the present fiscal year, June 30.

The admission tax provided $19,000,000 of this surplus, he estimates, and declares that it should not be used to retire the public debt, as Secretary Mellon plans, but for relief for the people who now have to pay the tax. Congress has not had the question presented from the proper viewpoint, Bloom declared, in discussing his bill. He has been assured of support for the measure by members of the ways and means committee and by members of the House generally, he said.

The present tax is not ten per cent, he holds, but is a tax on the difference between the 75 cent exemption and the price paid for admission. In the case of a $1 ticket, carrying a tax of 10 cents, the purchaser is not paying a tax of 10 per cent on $1 but of 40 per cent on the 25 cents over the exemption. It is pointed out that of the $19,000,000 estimated as derived from the admission tax, 50 per cent is from tickets sold for $1.

Plans for Danny Memorial to be Discussed at Film Golf Tournament

ANNOUNCEMENT in MOTION PICTURE NEWS and Film Daily last week of plans for the creation of a permanent memorial in honor of the late Joseph Dannenberg brought a generous response, in the form of contributions, from the industry.

In the meantime, it has been decided to place the matter in the hands of a committee which will be appointed at the Film Golf Tournament to be held next Tuesday, June 8. Such great interest has been manifested in the memorial that its sponsors wish to give everybody a chance to participate and it was thought best to present the plan formally at the Golf Tournament Dinner, when selection of the Memorial Committee will be made.

This will give opportunity for the form of the memorial to be decided upon and the dedication exercises held at the time of the Golf Tournament next Fall. One of the suggestions is that a memorial tablet, in honor of Danny, be placed in a conspicuous location in the film district in New York.

Contributions of any size will be gladly received by MOTION PICTURE NEWS. These, together with subscriptions already made, will be turned over later to the Memorial Committee to be named next week.

Convention Pays Tribute

A resolution in honor of Danny, who was always one of the leading figures at national exhibitor conventions, was introduced at the M. P. T. O. A. meeting in Los Angeles this week by Sydney Cohen. It read as follows:

"I deem it a privilege, albeit a sad one, to offer the following resolution and move that it be spread on the minutes of this convention as a memorial to one who has gone from us in untimely departure:

"Whereas, it has pleased the Creator to take from us the person of our late colleague, Joseph Dannenberg and

"Whereas, his going leaves an aching void in our midst which will be difficult to fill, therefore

"Be it resolved that this convention here assembled go on record as expressing in this matter their deep and genuine sorrow at the passing of this brilliant member of the motion picture industry, this fearless fighter, to his long rest.

" 'Danny', we mourn our loss."

Pathe Previews "Devil Horse"

Special Showing of Wild Horse Picture Given at Hotel Roosevelt, New York City

AN elaborate invitational presentation of ''The Devil Horse'' was given by Pathe on Tuesday evening in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Roosevelt, New York City. The special ''eurythmic setting,'' featuring for the first time an Harmonic Tympani Battery of twelve tuned drums, provided music particularly in keeping with the primitive mood of the Hal Roach picture, directed by Fred Jackman and starring Rex, the king of wild horses. The story was written by Roach.

The presentation given ''The Devil Horse'' by Pathe was a decided innovation. The eurythmic setting and presentation devised by S. Barrett McCormick, featured something outstandingly new—a battery of twelve tympani to mood the audience to the picture. The film was shown upon a large screen effectively framed by drapes coming down to a circular terrace in front of which the symphony orchestra was seated.

Opening with an orchestral prelude, with James C. Bradford conducting, the musicians, from the first wave of the baton started to bring the audience into the mood of the picture. As the music reached a certain climax the tympani—apparently in the distance—carried the passage and under the glare of flame-colored spotlights the hidden sextette of tympanists was revealed by the dropping of a curtain. All during the screening of ''The Devil Horse'' the tympani were brought into play at the proper sequences with marvelous effect. The blending of the music and the action was so completely done that the music became a definite part of the picture.

Exhaustive investigation has shown that this is the first time a battery of twelve tympani have been played in such unison. Mr. McCormick conceived his idea after a careful study of the presentation possibilities of the picture. With the utmost difficulty he finally managed to assemble twelve tympani, matched in tone with an extreme range of an octave and a half. This extraordinary range permitted a most unusual arrangement of the score with striking effect.

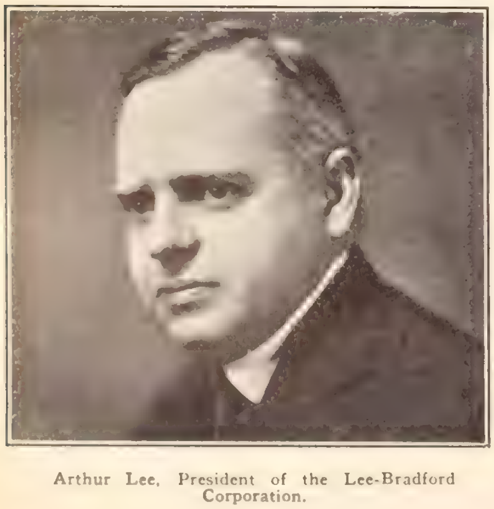
McCormick was assisted in presenting the tympani novelty by James C. Bradford, who also arranged the score of ''The Devil Horse.'' The six artists assembled by Bradford, who took part in the sensational musical experiment were, Karl Glassman, New York Symphony Orchestra; Harry Stittman, State Symphony Orchestra; Harry Edison, David Gusitkoff, Joseph Rich and Ruben Katz, all of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

The program booklet was another novelty in keeping with the character of the picture. The cover was of parchment, decorated in Indian designs and the binding lace was of genuine rawhide. The pages, in addition to presenting the cast and other details of the picture and presentation, contained a sketch of Rex's history and a brief resume of the theme of the picture.

Lee-Bradford Releases "Rat"

Production to be Released on the State Rights Market; First of Series

FROM Arthur Lee, President of the Lee Bradford Corp., it was learned that his organization would handle ''The Rat'' on the State rights market, which shows Lee's implicit faith in the system of State rights exchanges as being a factor in serving the industry with worthwhile productions.



Arthur Lee, President of the Lee-Bradford Corporation.

''The Rat'' is different in point of technique, story, acting and direction. The cast is headed by Mae Marsh, Ivor Novello and Isabel Jeans. The director is Graham Cutts, whose previous pictures were ''Woman to Woman'' and ''The Passionate Adventure.''

The story from the Broadway show by Dave L'Estrange, Constance Collier and Ivor Novello, is a tense dramatic subject. One thing worth noting is its sensational opening and packed in is a continuous riot of colorful drama, thrills, suspense, heart interest and romance against an ever-changing background from the richest elegance to the squalor of the underworld of Gay Paris.

''The Rat'' is the first of a series of specials and following close upon its release comes ''Dangerous Virtue,'' with Jane Novak, also a successful play; ''The Pleasure Garden,'' from a published book by Oliver Sandys and starring Virginia Valli and Carmelita Geraghty, and another is a sensational thriller starring Nita Naldi titled ''The Mountain Eagle.''

Warner Bros. Arrange Shipment Schedule

WARNER BROS. have arranged a production schedule that provides for the shipment of the first print of the 1926-27 product from the Coast studio on August 9th, according to Harry M. Warner, who arrived from the Coast last week to arrange for the New York premiere of John Barrymore in "Don Juan." Thereafter the twenty-six Warner productions will be shipped at the rate of one every two weeks, with the road show attractions also coming at regular intervals.

The first two are being shaped up now to go into production in the immediate future. They are "Across the Pacific," with Monte Blue, and "Private Izzy Murphy" with George Jessel. The former will be the first completed and the first to reach New York. It is due to be shipped from the studio August 9th. "Private Izzy Murphy" will follow on August 23rd.

Following "Across the Pacific" and "Private Izzy Murphy" on the production schedule will come "My Official Wife," due to be shipped to the Home Office September 6th; "The Heart of Maryland," on September 20th, and "What Happened to Father" on October 4th. "The Gay Old Bird" is due on October 18th.

"The 4th Commandment" Johnson's First for "U"

The first Universal Jewel production to be made by Emery Johnson under the contract he has just signed with Universal will be ''The Fourth Commandment,'' the story and continuity to be written by Mrs. Emily Johnson, the director's mother, whose stories and continuities have supplied the material for many of the past productions of the director. This picture will be the first of a series of nine he is expected to do for Universal.

Belle Bennett has been selected to play the leading feminine role. Other members of the cast are yet to be chosen.

Two Stage Plays Acquired by First National

First National has purchased two stage plays, ''The Butter and Egg Man,'' by George S. Kaufman, and ''The Sport of Kings,'' by Ian Hay. The former ran for a year on Broadway and the latter is now running in London.

No information has yet been disclosed about when the plays will be produced, the casts, or the directors.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Buys Peter B. Kyne Stories

Several Peter B. Kyne stories have been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for early production at the studio on the Coast. The stories are, ''Little Casino,'' ''Silver Threads Among the Gold,'' ''A Desert Odyssey'' and ''Big Tim Meagher.''

Release Date Is Set for "Lew Tyler's Wives"

June 15th has been selected by J. G. Bachmann as the release date for ''Lew Tyler's Wives.'' This will be the first release on the schedule of thirteen Preferred Pictures which will be issued about one a month thereafter.

Complete Filming of Dorothy Gish's "London"

This week saw the completion of camera work on "London," the first of a new series of pictures which British National Pictures, Ltd., is making with Dorothy Gish as the star.

Instead of using the studio Herbert Wilcox has done many of the scenes of the story at the actual locations. The story is an original by Thomas Burke, who wrote "Limehouse Nights."

Miss Gish's initial attraction for British National Pictures, Ltd., "Nell Gwyn," will be released by Paramount in the fall.

Fred Niblo Renews Contract With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Fred Niblo has renewed his contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to film five big feature productions, including his present production of "The Temptress" for Cosmopolitan.

Fred Lindsay, who tutored Douglas Fairbanks in the use of the Australian bull whip for a recent Fairbanks release, has been appointed technical director to assist Niblo in directing the pampas sequences of "The Temptress."

Owen Moore Added to Cast of "Diplomacy"

Now that Matt Moore has been signed the cast of Marshall Neilan's "Diplomacy" is complete. He will play the part of Robert Lowery, the only American in the entire cast. The cast is headed by Blanche Sweet and Neil Hamilton, Earle Williams, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Arlette Marchal, David Mir, Arthur Carewe and Julia Swayne Gordon are featured.

Ricardo Cortez Will Play "Captain Sazarac"

Ricardo Cortez has been selected to play the title role in "Captain Sazarac," the pirate story to be filmed for Paramount by Frank Lloyd. Cortez, who has just completed an important role in D. W. Griffith's "The Sorrows of Satan," left this week for Hollywood where production on the Lloyd special will commence shortly.

"Rolling Home" Goes to Colony June Sixth

"ROLLING HOME," a Universal Jewel production starring Reginald Denny, opens at the Colony Theatre in New York City on June 6th, for an indefinite run.

An elaborate presentation is being prepared by Paul Leni, European director and scenic artist, while Dr. Edward Kilenyi is arranging a colorful musical score.

The Denny vehicle replaces "Outside the Law," the five-year-old picture which Universal revived with considerable success. Besides Denny, the cast of the new picture is made up of Marian Nixon, Ben Hendricks, Jr., E. J. Ratcliffe, Margaret Seddon, Anton Vaverka and George Nichols. It is based on the stage play of John Hunter Booth and is the third Denny vehicle to be directed by William Seiter.

Columbia Pictures Growing

Company Now Has Own Studio; Enlarged Production Schedule

PERSISTENCE and exercise of genuine grey matter has placed Columbia Pictures Corporation, formerly C. B. C., in the front rank of Independent producers, and the story of its steady rise amid the chaos of change and monopoly, will be recorded in the annals of motion picture history.

The personnel of Columbia Pictures represents first and foremost the independent fighting blood of three veterans of the industry, Joe Brandt, Jack Cohn and Harry Cohn, respectively President, Treasurer, and Vice-President and Director General of Production, of the Company.

In 1923-24, the Company produced its first features. In 1924-25, they extended their operations in the feature field, also continuing Snapshots, and placed on the market several pictures.

In the earlier months of 1926 with enlarged finance and facilities, Columbia became still more productive with eighteen new features for the discriminating exhibitor.

And on the open road to success gained after surmounting the usual manufactorial difficulties, Columbia found itself at a point where the actual purchase of studios of their own became a necessity and a reality, eliminating the profit-cutting business of leasing some one else's, and providing greater facilities for rapid and efficient production. The Company is now the possessor of one of the finest equipped studios in Los Angeles, situated at Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street.

Three Warner Films for B'way

"Don Juan" Premiere About July 15; "Better 'Ole" Opening Early August

EXECUTIVES of the Warner Brothers Company are at present concentrating on the coming presentations of "Don Juan," the John Barrymore starring vehicle, and "The Better 'Ole," in which Syd Chaplin is starred. These two productions will be seen in legitimate houses on Broadway during the hot months with a third to follow. Harry M. Warner, who came on from the Coast to supervise the premiere of these pictures, also announced that a third would follow the two mentioned above.

These productions will be presented with the Vitaphone accompaniment, the newest musical synchronization device, which is controlled by Warner Bros.

In addition to the productions which will be seen in Broadway houses Warner Bros. also announce additional films for release during the summer. Among the pictures that will be ready from the middle of June on are, "The Hero of the Big Snows," with Rin-Tin-Tin, the dog star, featured; "The Passionate Quest," which J. Stuart Blackton directed; "Broken Hearts of Hollywood," in which practically all of the Warner stars appear; "Footloose Widows," with Louise Fazenda in the leading role; "So This Is Paris," an Ernst Lubitsch production and "The Honeymoon Express," with Irene Rich in the stellar role.

Cast Assembled for Colleen Moore's "Delicatessen"

Supporting Colleen Moore in her present First National starring vehicle, "Delicatessen" are Malcolm MacGregor, Jean Hersholt, Bodil Rosing, Dorothy Seastrom, Arthur Stone and Colleen's brother, Cleve. Alfred E. Green is doing the directing.

Will Present Medal in Paris

Riesenfeld to Make Formal Award of First Prize for Best Short Subject to Starevitch

HUGO RIESENFELD will personally present the first of his annual gold medals for the best short subject for the year to L. Starevitch, the Polish producer who made "The Voice of the Nightingale," adjudged the winning production for the past season. Riesenfeld is now en route to Europe on the Olympic, and will meet the producer, who is now in Paris, there.

The judges who will award the Riesenfeld prize for the best short subject for the current season have been selected. This committee is composed of the following: Joseph L. Plunkett, managing director of the Mark Strand Theatre, New York; Frank L. Newman, managing director of the Metropolitan and Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles; Willard C. Patterson, managing director, Metropolitan, Atlanta; Fred Meyer, Palace Theatre, Hamilton, O.; Harold B. Franklin, vice-president, Publix Theatres Corporation; headquarters in New York.

The competitive period of the current season extends from September 1, 1925, to September 1, 1926. The final decision and announcement of the winner will not be made for several weeks after the closing day, in order that it may be assumed with certainty that all eligible subjects have been exhibited nationally.

The types of pictures eligible for the Riesenfeld Gold Medal are as follows:

1. Scenics with the desired novel twist that lifts them out of the ordinary.
2. Short dramatic subjects.
3. Pictures with a definite news or historical interest. This does not refer to news reels, but it may include material compiled from them.
4. Scientific films of all sorts, provided that their technical nature does not interfere with their entertainment value.
5. Films which are hard to put in any particular class, but which combine some of the features of Classes 3 and 4.

These classifications are not to be observed literally as limitations. They are rather to suggest a general basis for producers' guidance.

Finish "Mismates" Production

First National East Coast Studios Busy with Pictures; Three in Work

AL and Ray Rockett and Earl Hudson, First National producers in the New York City studios, are hard at it these days turning out product. Al is at present producing "Subway Sadie" with Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall in the featured roles.

Following this Rockett will make "Even Stephen," a Gerald Beaumont story which will be filmed in and around Coney Island, a New York pleasure resort. Al Santell, who is directing "Subway Sadie" will also handle the megaphone on the new story, and Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill will again be featured. Al Rockett also has "Lady Be Good" which he will produce shortly.

"Paradise," a Ray Rockett production, is now in its third week of filming under Irvin Willat's direction, with Milton Sills in the starring role and Betty Bronson featured in the feminine lead. Ray Rockett will probably make "The Head of the House of Coombe" on completion of "Paradise."

Earl Hudson last week completed production work on "Mismates," a Doris Kenyon feature vehicle in which Warner Baxter plays the leading male role. Charles Brabin directed and Nick Barrows, comedy constructor, furnished the gags.

In the cutting rooms at the present time are "The Savage," a Ben Lyon-May McAvoy feature vehicle, "Puppets," which Al Rockett produced with Milton Sills starred, and "Men of Steel" another Milton Sills starring vehicle, which will be released in the fall.

Frank Lloyd Selects His First for Paramount

FRANK LLOYD'S first production for Paramount will be "Captain Sazarac," a story of pirates written by Charles Tinney Jackson, the O. Henry short story prize winner.

The chief feminine role in the production will be played by Florence Vidor, who recently finished her first Paramount starring picture, "Love's Magic." No other members of the cast have been selected as yet.

Camera work is scheduled for July 1st.

Warners Engage Bob Wagner to Title Lubitsch Film

Bob Wagner, former president of the Writers' Club in Hollywood, has been signed by Warner Bros. to title Ernst Lubitsch's production, "So This Is Paris." Photography has just been completed on the picture. The cast is headed by Monte Blue, Patsy Ruth Miller, and includes Lilyan Tashman, Andre De Beranger, Myrna Ley and Sydney D'Albrook.

Paramount Buys "Wheel of Life" for Florence Vidor

Paramount has purchased "The Wheel of Life," Elsie Ferguson's stage vehicle, as a screen starring play for Florence Vidor.

Margaret Widdemere's "The Gallant Lady" is now being adapted by Julian Josephson. Miss Vidor will have the starring role and the picture will be made prior to the production of "The Wheel of Life."

"Big Parade" Shown at Women's Clubs' Meet

LAST Monday night at the Stanley Theatre in Atlantic City 3,000 women delegates to the General Federation of Women's Clubs' Biennial Convention watched a special 11:30 o'clock showing of "The Big Parade."

The picture was shown under the auspices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., following an invitation from Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, former president of the Federation, the invitation being dispatched after the meeting of the executive committee.

Just prior to the showing of the picture a short prologue was presented in which the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., extended greetings to the Federation from the motion picture industry. Interest was expressed in the cooperation existing between the General Federation's Music Division, Child Welfare Division, and others with the industry. Further cooperation was invited.

Tom Mix Now at Work on "The Arizona Wildcat"

Tom Mix has just begun work on his latest starring vehicle, "The Arizona Wildcat," written for the Fox Films star by Adela Rogers St. Johns, and originally titled, "Western Society." Mix recently finished "No Man's Gold," his first of seven Westerns for the coming season.

Miss Dorothy Sebastian has been signed as the feminine lead. Ben Bard is cast as the bad man. Monte Collins, Jr., Cissy Fitzgerald and Doris Dawson have other character parts in the cast so far arranged. R. William Neil is doing the directing. John Stone did the scenario.

Charles Reed Jones Joins Chadwick Pictures

Charles Reed Jones, former editor of several fan publications, has joined Chadwick Pictures Corporation as director of publicity and advertising, which departments he will re-organize and enlarge.

Four of the new Chadwick productions have been completed and two others are now in production at the company's Los Angeles studio. Their titles will be made known shortly.

Strayer to Direct "Sweet Rosie O'Grady"

Because of his unusual ability evidenced in the direction of some of Columbia's most successful comedy-dramas, including "Steppin' Out," and "The Fate of a Flirt," Frank Strayer has been chosen to direct a film version of the famous old song, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady."

Charles Paddock Signed by Famous Players-Lasky

Charles Paddock, champion sprinter, last week affixed his signature to a Paramount contract. He will start work within two weeks as a featured player in "The College Flirt," a comedy drama of college life which stars Bebe Daniels.

"U" Signs Charles Gilpin to Play "Uncle Tom"

Charles Gilpin has been signed by Carl Laemmle to play the role of "Uncle Tom" in the Universal Jewel production, "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Gilpin recently appeared in two of Eugene O'Neill's plays, "The Emperor Jones" and "All God's Chillun Got Wings." He is scheduled to arrive at the studio within a week, when production will be resumed, under the direction of Harry Pollard, who was forced to halt production because of an infected jaw.

Asher Will Make Series of Four for First National

E. M. Asher, of Asher, Small and Rogers, producers of Corinne Griffith productions, will produce a series of four pictures for First National release. While in New York he purchased several stories to be used as vehicles for Corinne Griffith.

"The Sporting Lover," Asher's latest production in which Conway Tearle is starred, is now being edited and titled and will be released June 30th.

Wilde to Co-Direct Lloyd Comedy with Milestone

Ted Wilde has been named by Harold Lloyd to be co-director with Lewis Milestone on the star's second picture for Paramount release.

Wilde joined the Harold Lloyd Corporation scenario department about three years ago when the comedian was making "Why Worry?" Previous to that he had been an actor in vaudeville and on the musical comedy stage.

English Stars of Charlot's Revue Signed by De Mille

Beatrice Lillie and Jack Buchanan, stars of Charlot's Revue, have signed contracts with Cecil B. De Mille. They opened their engagement four weeks ago at the new El Capitan Theatre in Hollywood and while there made frequent visits to the De Mille studio. Screen tests were taken of them. That these tests have met with approval is evidenced by the contract just signed.

Lamb to Produce "The Bill of Sale"

About the middle of June Arthur Lamb will place in work "The Bill of Sale," a super-special based upon Lamb's own melodrama of the same name.

The picturization will contain a number of good parts and negotiations are now under way with several prominent picture stars so that in point of cast "The Bill of Sale" will not run second to any production.

A new studio is now being equipped to take care of the production of Lamb's picture and as soon as the installation of necessary production accessories is completed the company will start work.

This will be Lamb's first feature production and he will follow with "The House of Forbidden Wine" "Bells of the Sea" and "The Amber Fluid."

Sheehan Sees Need of Change

Fox Manager Says Screen Must Have New Faces, Themes, etc., to Hold Interest

Winfield R. Sheehan, Vice-President of Fox Film Corporation.

In the opinion of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Films, motion pictures are entering an era of new things. In order to hold the interest of present audiences, new faces, themes, styles of production are necessary.

"There was a time," Sheehan continues, "when audiences would sit through a picture with a mediocre plot, played by mediocre actors. Today they are more discerning. Motion pictures must meet this discernment. The oft-told story of the boy who loved a girl, only to fall from grace by being accused wrongfully of a crime and being exonerated in her eyes when the villain is brought to justice, won't suffice any longer.

"Motion picture themes today must be big and different. And with this change we must have new faces, for, good as they are, a little group of screen idols cannot go on forever. Youth cannot be denied. It must be heard—or seen. Another five years will see dozens of names in lights that today are unheard of. And with this metamorphosis of the picture industry must come new ways of telling stories, new treatments, new methods of production and presentation. Everything must be new! We cannot stand still."

Sheehan also pointed out that the Fox Film Company is alive to the needs of this new era, and is making the changes necessary in type of story and player. He points out "What Price Glory?" as possessing a "different" story and in addition the members of the cast whose faces are comparatively new.

Sheehan also mentioned the Belasco plays, "The Music Master," "The Return of Peter Grimm," "The Lily," "The Auctioneer" and "The Grand Army Man," which Fox recently acquired for the screen, as having the needed powerful themes and he added that they will be cast with new people.

One and Three Sheets Prepared With Space Open for Other Attractions

A radical departure in paper and window cards, decided upon following a national survey among exhibitors, has just been announced by Paramount.

The change, according to Paramount executives, will facilitate the work of theatre men in planning campaigns, both on pictures and on other units of their programs.

On forthcoming pictures special one and three sheets and window cards, in addition to the other paper, will be prepared. These special lithos will be designed so that on each style will be left sufficient blank space to permit the exhibitor to advertise adequately all features of his program—picture, vaudeville, presentation, etc.

This blank space will not be white, however. It will be tinted in keeping with the color scheme of the paper so that the sales value and appearance will not be impaired if imprinting is not desired.

Productions on which this new style of paper and window cards will first appear are: "Padlocked," "Fine Manners," "Good and Naughty," "Fascinating Youth" and "The Lady of the Harem."

"Theatres everywhere," said a Paramount official, "have been confronted with the problem of advertising added attractions on their programs. To do so they have faced the necessity of having their own paper prepared, a process which is costly and in many instances out of the question.

"Paramount has made a survey of the situation with the result that on future productions it will prepare special styles of paper and window cards on which a tinted blank space is left for local imprinting. This, we believe, answers the demand of those theatres having presentation acts, playing vaudeville or making two or three changes a week in their programs.

"On the one sheets the lower half will be in light background, while on the three sheets the design will fill the two top sheets with the lower sheet lithographed in a light color.

"In addition to giving ample space for local imprinting, this special paper permits the use of larger date strips. Its benefits are manifold. The exhibitor who has been confronted with a weekly problem in outdoor advertising will realize this."

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Hays is Co-operating, Woodhull States

ficialdom takes cognizance and destroys the monopoly. In other words, 'power always breaks of its own weight' and the ultimate outcome of the present schedule, if continued, will be one giant eating up the other giant, or the giants sitting around a table parcelling out the various sections of the country. And when that happens, then will the great public of America, and their duly appointed judges, step in and direct the scrapping of the proposed picture."

With reference to Mr. Hays, Mr. Woodhull said:

"It will perhaps interest you to know that we have been co-operating with Mr. Will H. Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in connection with the contract controversy, legislative affairs and other matters of common interest. We have found Mr. Hays ready and sincere in his attitude of co-operation, but, like us, unable at times to regulate the thinking of every individual in his organization. Where our industry has been attacked from without, his co-operation has been most helpful and perfect, and I sincerely commend him for the assistance he has rendered. Our differences, which I am never going to concede are not adjustable, have occurred upon problems from within, and in these I believe he has made a sincere effort. There are many opinions on both sides to please and my earnest prayer is that at some time, at some place, the thinking brains of the industry will gather about a table and proceed along give and take methods, because unless this prayer is answered, I can see nothing in the future except the destruction of an industry that has gradually earned the respect of the recreation-seeking people of the world."

Sydney S. Cohen, in his report to the convention as chairman of the board of directors, announced that he was retiring from all official posts in the organization and was stepping back into the ranks.

Mr. Cohen declared that the organization would "live longer and thrive more prosperously if it places its reliance for the coming days more on principles than on personalities."

Discussing the extension of producer-owned theatres, Mr. Cohen declared:

"The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in 1921 entered into a written agreement with one of the major producing and distributing companies in which the controlling interests in this organization and the officials directing it, agreed not to extend and increase their theatre expansion unless they were unjustly and arbitrarily locked out of any territory. This was the psychological moment for Theatre Owners to have strengthened and properly financed their organization; but they did not do so, deeming this agreement to be sufficient. And with the formation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., this agreement was abandoned by them. Other producing companies who felt the need of meeting this competitive situation in a similar fashion, had developed their organizations financially and otherwise to protect their business interests, until at this time there are several organizations able to build and acquire theatres where they desire an outlet for their business purposes. This may prove to be a help to the progress and advancement of the Motion Picture Industry in its entirety, as it has stimulated building of larger and better theatres by not only these interests but theatre owners not affiliated with production and distribution, so as to forestall or at any rate meet this competition. The public is the gainer thus in the quality of theatres, and the character of entertainment; and this is rightfully so as all values in this Industry are predicated on the public.

Seider's Contract Stand Is Officially O.K.'d

AT the meeting of the Board of Directors of the M. P. T. O. A., held at Los Angeles, May 31, a resolution was adopted endorsing the stand of Joseph M. Seider against additions of clauses to the Standard Exhibition Contract. The resolution said:

"Whereas, Joseph M. Seider, business manager, and chairman of the Contract and Arbitration Committee, has taken a definite public stand against additions by the distributors of clauses to the Standard Exhibition Contract recently promulgated;

"Whereas, clauses that have been added are detrimental to the theatre owners of America, and

"Whereas, Mr. Seider has been publicly attacked for his action;

"Be It Resolved by the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, through its Administrative Committee at a meeting in Los Angeles, State of California, this thirty-first day of May, 1926, that Joseph M. Seider be and is hereby commended for his campaign in behalf of the theatre owners and his action be and is hereby endorsed and that a vote of confidence be extended to him."

"Lurking back of this evolutionary and progressive movement, however, is a serious menace and danger which requires consideration of the highest order—the tendency of overbuilding, overseating adequately seated localities and cities, which will result in overshowing and perhaps reduction of admission prices. If this condition continues there will be very little profit for either exhibitor, distributor or producer. Too many theatres of necessity means fewer patrons for each, for a community can care for just so many seats under normal every-day conditions, and exceeding this quota as is being done in some sections can only result in such a general falling off in business as will mean lower rentals to be obtained for films, and in this way bring about a lessening of the incentive for the production of quality films. Theatre owners playing to a business consisting of a corporal's guard of patrons plus their ushers and other employees cannot buy expensive films."

Looking into the future, Mr. Cohen made this interesting forecast:

"The tendency during the next few years, apparently, will be for theatre owners not aligned or affiliated with producing companies financially to enter into some arrangement, either through contractual relationship or franchise agreement over a term of years by financial interest or consolidation, to group themselves with various producing and distributing companies. Almost all the large theatres in the central sections of the Key Cities of the country are owned (directly or indirectly) by these producing and distributing interests. A large number of new theatres have been built and are being built, and conditions will continue this way until the inevitable business depression comes, lessening that ease with which monies can now be secured —monies necessary to promote the biggest kind of projects which a few years ago would have been termed visionary, radical or impossible. Economic pressure alone will be able to bring about an end to this overbuilding, overseating, and, in time, overshowing.

"A vigorous offensive is required for defensive purposes. Theatre Owners not affiliated with producing or distributing interests must strengthen their organization —the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America—and must carry on so that real business protection can be afforded to those Independents who, unorganized and alone, without help would be easy prey for those interests determined on 'taking them over.' This is an angle which cannot be slighted if individual independence is to continue. Its importance cannot be overstressed.

"Many months ago I sounded a note of warning relative to The Battle of the Giants which was coming. Recent movements with which you are conversant, and those which are now in the making, are eloquent confirmation of the statements I advanced at that time. The 'skirmishing' until recently has been mostly done by flank attacks and now that most of the other forces, including the independent theatre owners, have been manoeuvered out of the line of 'battle' this skirmishing will be superseded by direct frontal attack in the open. One giant producer-distributor-exhibitor company will lock horns with another and after some slaughter and carnage have resulted, the banking interests in control of these companies will step in, negotiate a treaty of peace and effect if possible the proper terms and conditions for each of the warring factions.

"Capital when it fights only does so for better terms and conditions and understandings, not to destroy, and it is essential that the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America be vigorously and aggressively conducted along lines that will prevent the annihilation of all the dough-boys in the ranks when the generals meet.

"The balance of power lies with the Independent theatre owner, to sway the scales one way or the other. The force which gains his (the independent theatre owner's) support is the force that will prevail. The all important thing for him is to see that in this final 'treaty of peace' as well as during the battle his investment and he himself are not entirely annihilated and destroyed. Only such protection as is afforded by Organization can avert this catastrophe."

Complete Campaign for Movie Season

Plan Book Issued by M. P. P. D. A. Comprehensive Work Detailing Entire Scheme for Launching and Executing Drives

WITH a wealth of experience in previous campaigns to draw upon and many new and improved angles developed by those actively in charge of this department of the enterprise, the Second Annual National Greater Movie Season campaign book issued forth last week as one of the most exhaustive works of its kind the picture industry has yet seen.

The campaign book covers 24 pages of newspaper size, pages devoted to the explanation in detail of the principles underlying the Greater Movie Season movement, the methods of its exploitation by theatre men in large cities and small towns and includes data of material assistance to committees and individuals upon whom the work of carrying out a campaign will devolve.

The scheme of a practical movie season campaign is outlined from the beginning, with plans covering the organization of committees, financing and functioning of the various units connected with such a movement.

Outlines Day-by-Day Campaign

From these instructions, based on practical experience in the past, the campaign book continues on through a day-by-day program of operation and events, describes the national and local contests available for campaign committees, and supplies a wide range of advertising layouts, copy and publicity stories to be supplied local newspapers co-operating with the theatre owners on a Greater Movie Season drive.

The campaign, to be carried on nationally, will feature the thirtieth birthday of the motion picture, an event furnishing a rich source for publicity material. In preparing the book, Jerome Beatty, director of the Greater Movie Season Campaign, and his assistants have developed the resources of this feature of the campaign.

In conformity with the expressed purpose of Greater Movie Season—the celebration of an opening of a new year of finer pictures—the stressed angle of the campaign material, both advertising and publicity, is "these good NEW days," "It's a great old world, and getting greater as it grows older," and other lines, designed to sell the public something "new" and "better."

Illustrations show the window displays, billboards, posters, window cards, theatre decorations, novelties, street banners, sample endorsements by public officials, advertising layouts and prepared cuts are included in the plan book.

Plan for Organizing Drive

The plan for organizing a Greater Movie Season campaign, with outline of the committees and their work, as set forth in the plan book follows:

Call a meeting of all the theatre managers and their assistants in your city. If you are in an exchange city include all the managers of the local film exchanges. Don't limit the meeting to theatre owners. Have them bring their most important assistants, especially their publicity and advertising men. And have the branch managers bring their exploitation men.

The best way to put on this first meeting is to make it a dinner in a private room in a restaurant or hotel. Have the price of the dinner as low as possible and let each man pay for his own dinner.

At this meeting the entire campaign should be discussed and a committee of three should be named to report upon ways and means of conducting the campaign.

At the second meeting this committee should recommend a general plan of procedure and should nominate four or five candidates for the position of general manager of the local campaign. After the names are voted upon the final selection should be ratified by a unanimous vote.

Selecting Board of Directors

A board of directors then should be named. This should be made up of one man from each theatre. In an exchange city representatives of film exchanges should be included on the board. This board should set a definite date upon which the season is to open. This date is optional, but should be early in August. Monday, August 2nd, will be the date used nationally as the opening day of the season. The General Manager is directly responsible for the success of the campaign. He should be a leader, a man of ideas, a favorite among his townspeople and, above all, a man who is willing to work with all his might for the good of the cause.

As soon as possible he should make a definite recommendation to the Board of Directors. A budget should be laid out, and when approved the apportionment of the expense should be worked out among the participating theatres.

This money should be paid in before the campaign starts so that the General Manager will have a fund to work with.

The General Manager should appoint committees, who will work under his direction, as follows:

Finance Committee—To collect and disburse funds to take care of the physical ordering of all material.

Publicity and Advertising Committee—This should be headed by a high-class local publicity and advertising man who will devote almost his entire time to the job. The committee should handle newspaper advertising, its placing, preparation and O. K.'ing the copy; publicity; arranging for newspaper publicity and also furnishing copy for house organs published by theatres; cooperative advertising. The committee should call upon every local advertiser and persuade him to run in his local advertising during the celebration a cut or line of type tying in with the Greater Movie Season drive; window displays, the solicitation of merchants to accord window space to campaign material.

Outdoor Committee: This committee should make arrangements for posting a certain number of boards, to begin two weeks before the opening of the drive.

Decoration Committee's Work

Decoration Committee: To take charge of decoration of houses with pennants and other decorations to be paid for by the theatre that uses them; select and distribute all novelties such as buttons and badges for theatre employes, and seek the co-operation of city officials for the placing of street banners and stenciling of cross walks, especially in front of theatres.

General Committee: Members of this will have charge of the work of obtaining endorsements of the Season by high public officials and civic bodies; obtain speakers to address Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Ad Clubs, etc.; seek the active participation in the campaign of prominent club women to address women's clubs and organizations, and arrange for a parade to be participated in by Boy Scouts, American Legion members and other such organizations.

H. M. Richie Author of NEWS Article

THE article "Checking Reactions to Movie Season" which appeared on page 2664 in the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS dated June 5, was written by H. M. Richie, general manager of the Michigan Theatre Owners' organization, and though the copy was sent to the printer with a by-line carrying Mr. Richie's name, through an error in printing, the line was omitted. We wish to correct this error and offer apologies to Mr. Richie and our readers as well, because the omission robbed the article of an authority which contributed to its importance.

Drive Aims to Stimulate Picture-Going Habit

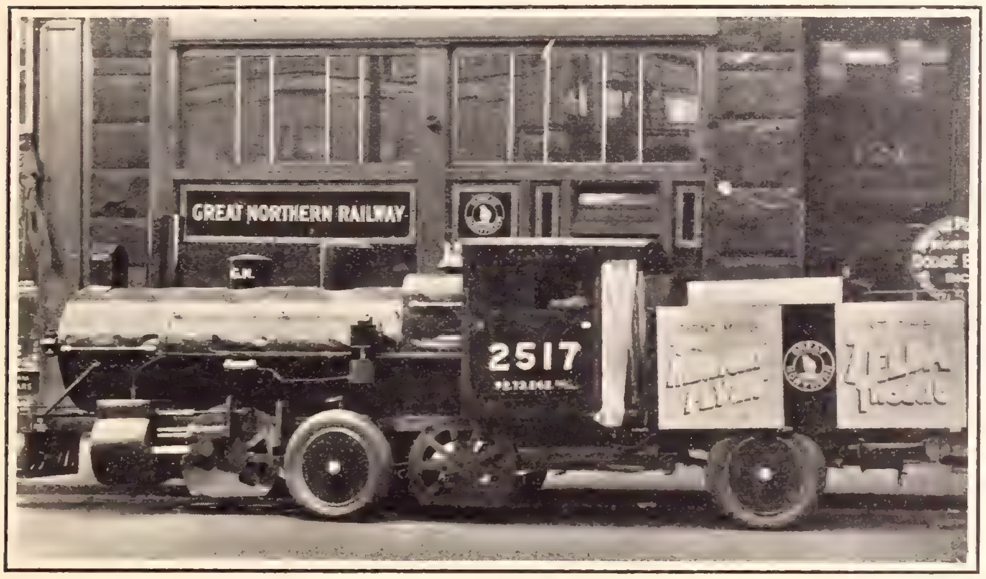
(Reprinted from Greater Movie Season Campaign Book)

GOING to theatres is a habit. People get out of that habit in the Summer time. GREATER MOVIE SEASON swings them back into the habit—whether they have stayed away from motion pictures for a month or for a year.

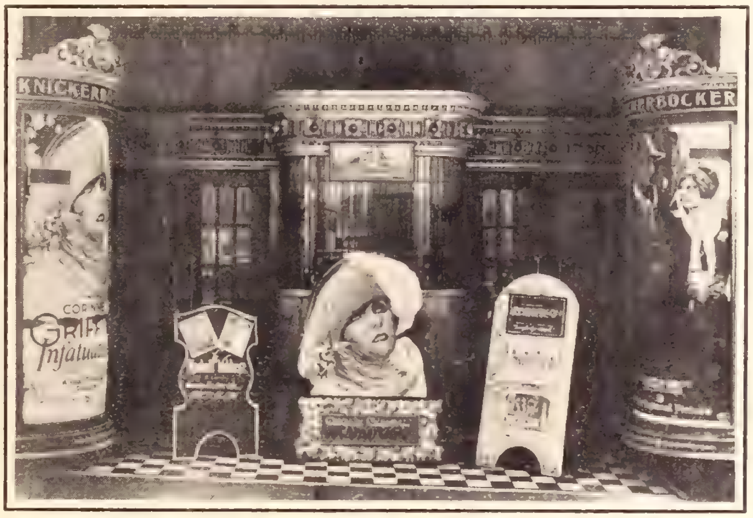
It attracts the attention of the public to the fact that a new season is opening and that the best pictures are being shown.

The celebration is to demonstrate the joys of going to motion picture theatres. The public comes, is pleased and keeps on coming, so that the celebration helps business throughout the year.

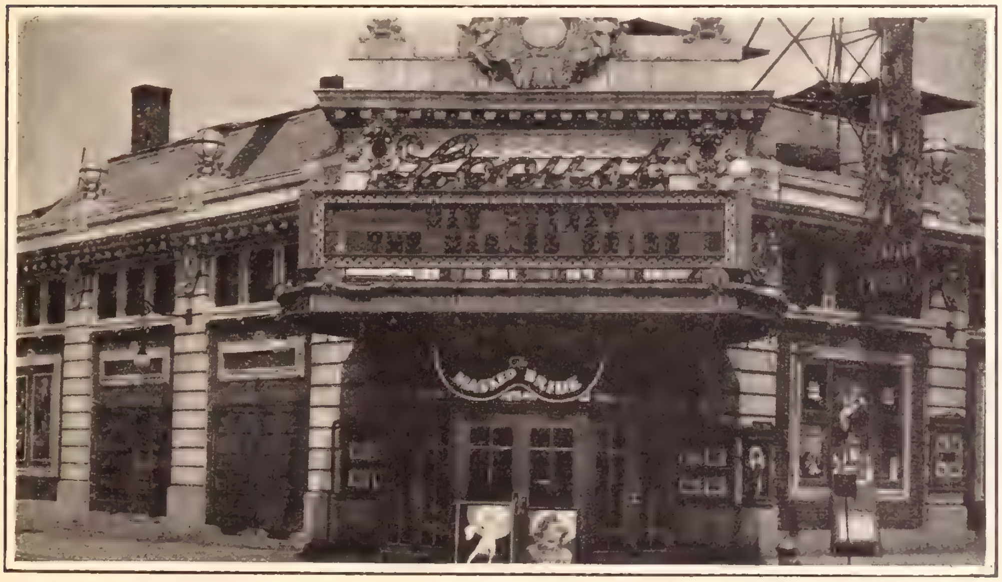
Novelties Feature "Mike" Campaigns



Prize-winning ballyhoo for F.B.O.'s "The Midnight Flyer," which exploited the showing of the picture at the Zelda Theatre, Duluth. Manager Carlson of the theatre obtained the use of the locomotive for his campaign from the Great Northern Railway, which had the locomotive constructed for a carnival held last winter in Duluth.



Six sheets and cutouts were effectively used to exploit the showing of "Infatuation" (First National) at the Knickerbocker Theatre in Nashville, Tenn. The display was arranged by Walter Harmon, assistant manager of the Knickerbocker



Display for "The Masked Bride" (M-G-M) at the Locust Theatre, Philadelphia, featured a cut-out piece in the form of a mask with heart-shaped apertures suspended under the marquee

Parade of Dogs Among Telling Stunts Used In Drives Recently

NOVELTIES and unusual exploitation mediums were the features of campaigns conducted for the showing of "Mike" in Bellaire, O., Syracuse, N. Y., and Newark, O.

In Bellaire, where the feature played the Capitol Theatre, a co-operative ad truck was drummed up for the local newspaper, built around the "Mike" crossword puzzle.

In Syracuse the comedy played at the Eckel Theatre, managed by Mr. F. Martin, who with M-G-M Exploiteer E. Robert Burns put over a well planned, inexpensive campaign. Music display windows were secured from the five leading musical supply dealers. Another good display was taken out on overalls with the Besse and Sprague Company.

In Newark, O., Manager Fenberg of the Auditorium, assisted by Exploiteer Wm. Robson, put over a wonderful stunt. Three thousand heralds were printed and distributed throughout the public schools; these explained that any child who got dressed in imitation of "Mike" and brought his or her dog to the theatre at an appointed time would receive a free ticket to see the show. An arrangement was made with the local troop of Boy Scouts to police the gathering, and form the children into lines for a parade. Each child was given dog blankets of cloth, printed with the one word, "Mike," on either side.

In addition to this the stage carpenter built an easel on which, in a furniture store window, a girl pasted up strips of paper to form the name, "Mike". This simple stunt held the crowds in front of the window until the name, and the slogan "'Mike' is a riot" was completed, then the girl would turn an announcement card toward the window. A boy outside, dressed as "Mike" passed out stock heralds on the feature.

Four Department Stores in Tie-Up With "Irene"

Four department stores in East Liverpool, Ohio, joined the American theatre there in a cooperative campaign for "Irene" which proved one of the biggest exploitation drives staged in the city. The assistance rendered the theatre counted heavily in centering the interest of the public in the showing of the production at the American.

Moyer's Department Store distributed 3,000 rotogravure inserts in all their packages for a week prior to the opening date. In addition they devoted a window to "Irene" fashions.

People's Department Store gave a window to an "Irene." Stein's Department Store advertised for the smallest foot in town—to fit the "Irene" shoe, in connection with a window display of "Irene" model shoes.

Newman's Department Store devoted a window to the display of "Irene" gowns. This gave the women of East Liverpool "Irene" fashions, "Irene" dresses and "Irene" gowns to choose from.

Cameo in Pittsburgh Exploits Show With Marquee Amplifiers

ONE of the most effective stunts in a campaign which resulted in a four weeks' engagement of ''Cohens and Kellys'' at the Cameo Theatre in Pittsburgh was obtained through a tie-up with the Wireless Electric Company, which furnished public address amplifying microphones and loud speakers through which the music accompanying the picture, the laughter of the spectators and announcements spoke from the box office.

One microphone was placed in the orchestra pit; another in the middle of the house, and another in the office. Laughter, music and announcements could be heard for several blocks.

''If ever a stunt paid for itself this one did,'' said J. Knox Strachan, manager of the Cameo, who arranged it. ''It served as a magnet, not cluttering up the front of the house with curious listeners, but literally drawing them in.''

Woman Manager Scores With "Cohens and Kellys"

Miss Zigiob, manager of the Dreamland Theatre, Lorain, Ohio, during the illness of her brother, George, put over a big and tremendously successful exploitation campaign recently for ''The Cohens and the Kellys,'' through co-operation of the Lorain ''Journal.'' First, she came out with a big advertisement saying that the Cohens and the Kellys had leased the Dreamland that George Zigiob was ill, the story gained credence among the newspaper readers. In fact, it gained so much credence that an opposition newspaper went to the trouble of interviewing Miss Zigiob on the matter and then printed a story saying that Miss Zigiob would make no statement for publication.

The second newspaper announcement stated that the Cohens and the Kellys had arrived in Lorain to take over the theatre, but that they had had a fight. In fact, Kelly had thrown a brick at Cohen. For this reason, they broke their lease. But—and then followed the real story, telling about the picture, etc.

"Buster Brown" Stories On Cleveland Radio Program

Andrew Sharrick, exploitation manager for Universal in the Cleveland territory, accomplished one of the biggest exploitation stunts ever staged in Cleveland for a short feature when he obtained a tie-up with the radio broadcasting station WADC, in which the showing of ''Buster Brown'' comedies at the Allen Theatre were advertised.

With the assistance of Manager Allen Simmons, of the theatre, Sharrick got a place on the ''Bedtime Stories Hour'' sent out by WADC for a series of ''Buster Brown'' tales which he wrote from the screen. This stunt was supplemented by a coloring contest used by the ''Sunday Times'' in the children's supplement.

"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"

Short Subjects and Serials

Comic incidents from "Don Key, a Son of Burro," a current Pathe comedy.

Bray Making Comedy Reels

To Produce Four Series of Twelve Subjects Each; Addition to Program

BRAY Studios will greet the 1926-1927 season with a new and important line of two-reel comedies, in addition to its standard line of animated cartoons, novelty screen magazines and special short subjects.

There will be four series of two-reel comedies of twelve features each, making forty-eight of these releases in all; twenty-six animated cartoons, twenty-six novelty screen magazines, and many unusual single reel specialties gathered from all corners of the world.

"McDougal Alley" is the title of one series, which portrays the exploits of a group of tenement children and the attempts to reform them of a fair society girl who lives just around the corner from the alley.

A second series, the "Sunkist Comedies," produced for Bray Studios by Al Nathan, supervised by Joe Rock, features a remarkable and highly trained monkey, an all-star cast and a bevy of "Bathing Beauties."

"Fistical Culture," the title of the third series, burlesques our modern fad for so-called physical improvement of every kind; the effort of the fat to become thin, the thin to get fat, of the weak to become strong, the tall to become short, etc.

Louis Sargent, who has been featured in Blue Ribbon Comedies produced by Joe Rock, will be featured in "Fistical Culture" under the direction of Al Hermann.

"Hazy Fogg," the hero of the fourth Bray comedy series, has a mania for improving his status in life through correspondence courses, which offer him an opportunity to become everything from a hypnotist to a world fight champion. These picture stories are adapted to the screen by William Henry Cook, from his own tales along this line which will appear in "Popular Magazine" simultaneously with the release of the comedies.

The twenty-six Bray cartoons will be a combination of cartoon and regular photography, in which the cartoon characters act with living people. The twenty-six novelty screen magazines will contain from four to six subjects in each release gathered from sources available to the Bray Company in all parts of the world.

Twelve Overseas Veterans Appear in Tunney Serial

As military details incident to the production of "The Fighting Marine," the new Patheserial starring Gene Tunney, must be exact, Tunney has in his support twelve overseas veterans who will help to insure the accuracy of the scenes.

Tunney was a member of the Marine Corps serving in France, and Spencer Bennet, director of the unit making the serial, was a member of the 82nd Division, serving in the Headquarters Company of the 164th Brigade. Joseph H. Roach, who helped Frank Leon Smith write the story, was in the medical service in France.

Walter Miller, who plays "Larry the Plumber," was a member of the tank corps. Sherman Ross, the leading "heavy," was an Army aviator. Other veterans include Roy Heinze, O. L. McPherson, Bud Kimball, Wally Oettel and Ted Pierce.

Cast Selected for Helene Chadwick Pathe Comedy

The cast of comedy players chosen to support Helene Chadwick in her initial Hal Roach comedy for Pathe, will be made up of Ted Heley, Jimmie Finlayson, Burr McIntosh and Charlotte Mineau. Stan Laurel is handling the direction under the supervision of F. Richard Jones. The title has not yet been announced.

"Our Gang" attempts "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in their latest episode which bears the title of "Uncle Tom's Uncle."

Lloyd Re-Issue on Pathe List

Schedule for June 13 Includes Chase Comedy and Usual One-Reel Subjects

A HAROLD LLOYD re-issue "Swat the Crook," a one-reel comedy produced by the Rolin Film Co., is on the Pathe list of subjects for release the week of June 13. Also included are a Charles Chase comedy, a Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Glory or Dollars," Chapter 8 of the Patheserial "The Bar-C Mystery," an Aesop's Fable, Pathe Review No. 24, Topics of the Day No. 24, and two issues of Pathe News.

Bebe Daniels and Harry Pollard support Lloyd in the one-reel re-issue which tells of bankruptcy and thievery. "Long Fliv the King" is the title of the two-reel Hal Roach comedy starring Charley Chase. The cast includes Martha Sleeper, Fred Malatesta, Oliver Hardy and Max Davidson. Leo McCarey directed. It is a crook version of a Graustark story.

"The Fight for a Fortune" is the title of the eighth chapter of "The Bar-C Mystery," produced by C. W. Patton and starring Dorothy Phillips.

"Glory or Dollars?" is the latest Grantland Rice Sportlight, produced by J. L. Hawkinson. In this subject Mr. Rice differentiates between the amateur and professional sport and shows some remarkable pictures of the famous Red Grange in action.

Pathe Review No. 24 presents three subjects: "Springboard Fever," some acrobatic aeronautics, produced with Alvin J. Knechtel's process camera; "The Harvest Bounty," Pathecolor views of bringing in the fruit crop in the Antilles and "The Sky Trail," scenes of perilous paths through the Alps.

"The Little Parade" is the new Paul Terry for the Aesop's Film Fables Series. Topics of the Day No. 24 presents the last wit and humor culled from the press of the world. Two issues of the Pathe News complete the June 13th schedule of features announced by Pathe.

Weiss Bros. Make Short Films

President Gives Reason for New Policy; Ennis Engaged as General Manager

LOUIS WEISS, the Vice-President of Artclass Pictures Corporation, for many years one of the important distributors of feature films on the Independent market, gives his reason for entrance of Artclass into the field of short subjects. Weiss says, in part:

"A survey of the feature possibilities of the Independent market made by our organization the early part of this year has convinced me that we can serve the Independent exchangeman and exhibitor best by concentrating on short subject series as for many reasons well known to the trade in general, it is becoming increasingly difficult to produce and distribute feature material which can hold its own with the offerings of the national organizations.

"We have, therefore, entered the short subject field on a very large scale and it is our intention to offer our customers short length product of a type which will enable them to secure that most desired of all things—first run bookings.

"With this important thought in mind, we have arranged a program which at the present writing includes nine series of one and two reel pictures, divided into three categories—comedy, novelty and topical."

Weiss has engaged Bert Ennis as general manager of this organization. In addition to his executive duties, Ennis will establish a promotion department in behalf of Artclass short subject material. This department will supply exchanges and exhibitors with a variety of exploitation material and sales helps for each series of comedies, novelties and topical films.

Christies Sign New Players

Comedy Producers Get Featured Artists for Next Season's Program

A NUMBER of new faces will be seen in the Christie Comedies released next season through Educational Film Exchanges, as, in addition to the stars who appeared in last season's product and have renewed their contracts, a number of new players have been signed to feature parts in this company's releases.

Bobby Vernon, Billy Dooley and Jimmie Adams are with the Christie organization on long term contracts and Neal Burns, whose contract expired with the last season's pictures, has again signed with the company for the new year.

Jack Duffy, who has been working in both two-reel and feature pictures during the past two years, has signed to be featured in several comedies for the Christies. Bill Irving, who played a part in the Christie feature comedy, "Up In Mabel's Room," will also appear in the short reels.

Frances Lee, who came to the Christie Company from the vaudeville stage and was Bobby Vernon's leading lady, will be seen in next season's product as will Anne Cornwall, who is featured.

The Christies will add other players to the roster of contracted artists and will also sign others for individual pictures.

The Christie two-reel comedy program for Educational includes eight Bobby Vernon Comedies, six Billy Dooley Comedies, six Jimmie Adams Comedies and ten Christie Comedies.

"Going Crazy" is the title of Lige Conley's latest Educational comedy release.

Julian Will Direct Two Specials for De Mille

Under his new contract with De Mille studio Rupert Julian will direct two specials this year. They are "The Yankee Clipper" and "Silk."

"The Yankee Clipper" is a story by Denison Clift as prepared for the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan. Production will start late in June with most of the scenes to be filmed aboard the clipper ships, "Indiana" and "Bohemia," both of which are owned by Cecil B. De Mille. Julian will be assisted in this production by Leigh Smith.

The second special "Silk" is an adaptation by Jennie MacPherson of the novel by Samuel Merwin.

Columbia Starts Enlarging Studio in Hollywood

Construction has been started on the new carpenter shop at the Columbia Pictures Studio in Hollywood. When completed it will represent an outlay of $50,000. According to Harry Cohn, vice-president, this is the first step in the plans of his company to increase the size and equipment of the recently purchased studio.

Eleven Farces on June List of Educational

THE June release schedule of Educational is made up of no less than eleven two-reel and one-reel comedies. Two Ham Hamilton offerings, "Nothing Matters" and "Here Comes Charlie," head the list. Jimmie Adams appears in a tramp comedy, "Chase Yourself."

"Till We Eat Again" is the title of the Bobby Vernon comedy in which the comedian is supported by Frances Lee, while "Hitchin' Up" is Walter Heirs' latest adventure as a bashful swain. Lige Conley in "Who's My Wife," completes the two-reel releases for the month.

The one-reelers include two Cameo Comedies, "Meet My Dog" and "Hold 'er Sheriff"; two Pat Sullivan animated cartoons, "Felix the Cat Rings the Ringer" and "Felix the Cat in School Daze"; a Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, "Peeking at the Planets," and the customary two Kinograms news-reel releases each week.

Standard Will Start Another Fat Men Comedy Series

With but two pictures to be produced for the series of Fat Men Comedies on the current releasing schedule of F. B. O., Standard Cinema Corporation, makers of the comedies, are already planning the new group of twelve two-reelers.

Joe Rock, producer of the current group, will continue as production head, supervising the filming of the entire series and exercising full charge of the studio work. Comedy directors will be engaged on an individual picture basis and a comedienne will be engaged to appear as leading lady with the three "Fatties."

The eleventh of the present series, "Three of a King," has been completed and the twelfth, as yet untitled, is now nearing the finishing stage.

Fred V. Greene Analyzes Short Subject Ads

Fred V. Greene, Jr., of Red Seal Pictures, in an analysis of short subject ad layouts, claims that most short subject producers do not pay proper attention to ad layouts and calls attention to Red Seals method of advertising its product as being distinctive in style and the best method of securing results.

"A producer spends much money, time and labor to make his product distinctive, but effort should not end there," says Greene, "that same distinctiveness should be carried right on to all advertising and publicity matter and the wise ones are doing so right now—those not so wise will trail along in the future."

Hank Mann Will Play Lead in Standard Comedy

Hank Mann, veteran comedian, has been signed by Standard Cinema Corporation to play the leading role in "Adorable Dora," the eleventh in the series of Blue Ribbon two-reel comedies being distributed by F. B. O. Mann will also participate in devising situations which he will enact in the comedy.

First Three Roxy Canadian Featurettes Announced

Cranfield and Clarke have announced the first three releases of the Roxy Canadian Featurettes, "Sportsman's Dream," "Rushing Waters," and "Shadowland."

The second F. Herrick Herrick release through Cranfield and Clarke will be "Movie Struck," a short comedy drama featuring Dorie Eaton.

New Directors Added to Fox Comedy Staff

GEORGE E. MARSHALL, supervisor of Fox comedy productions, has added four new directors to his staff to aid him in bringing to the screen the program which Fox Films has aligned for next season.

The new directors are Mark Sandrich, Leslie Selander, Albert Austin and Jess Robins. Sandrich and Leslie will devote themselves exclusively to the Animal Comedy series of which there will be eight two-reel releases.

"He Forgot to Remember"

(Pathe-Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

CLYDE COOK works like the proverbial mule in this one to put the gags over, but the nature of his fun is not the kind that will set the gallery a-roaring. Cooky is a swanky whitewash artist, with nothing to worry about except his art, when his path is crossed by Little John who is bemoaning the loss of his sweetheart Nell. Cook offers his sympathy at first, but does not feel so happy when the description of the villain who stole the girl fits him to perfection, so by the way of compromise he volunteers to take Little John's place in the army. While in service Cooky consistently violates every military regulation known, and even manages to find the lost Nell and turns her over to Little John, only to learn that she is the wrong girl. The army jokes are quite stale by now but there are few comedy incidents of the horseplay variety which are genuinely funny.

THE CAST

Clyde Cook, Noah Young, Yorke Sherwood and Blanche Mahaffey. Directed by Tom Buckingham.

Summary—Good titles in this wild action comedy, but Cook needs better gags to retain his reputation as a comedian.

"His Private Life"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

INTERSPERSED with clowning and slapstick and abounding with funny situations Lupino Lane's latest comedy, "His Private Life," will prove of mirth provoking qualities in any house. Lane, beyond any doubt, is an excellent comedian. He is seen, during the turbulent times of America's entrance into the war, as a rich and blase young business man who becomes inflated with patriotism and enters the rookie camp. Here his adventures are many and merry. He really is a horrible young rookie—he simply can't do anything correctly. His efforts to adapt himself to army life prove futile and ridiculous. Because of his carryings-on he is sentenced to K. P. duty and succeeds in messing things up in fine style. He eventually lands in the Guard House and when he gets out the war is over. They throw pies and everything in this picture and do it well, too. Should prove satisfactory to most everyone.

THE CAST

Lupino Lane, Virginia Vance, George Davis, Glen Cavender and Wallace Lupino.

Summary—A fairly good comedy with lots of laughs.

"Eight Cylinder Bull"

(Fox-Imperial—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THIS is a corking comedy, overdone in spots with ancient slapstick stunts, but irrepressibly funny throughout. The film plunges in action from the opening shot and keeps the lively pace until the finish, every foot of it bubbling with humor. Jean and Harold's elopement is spoiled by Slicker, who upsets the rowboat in which the lovers are making their escape. But Slicker, a man about town, is an optimist, accordingly he promptly volunteers to see Jean's father and patch the trouble up. He mitigates the irate parent who promises to consent to the marriage on condition that Slicker sell all of his old second-hand cars of which he was unable to dispose. The ingenious way in which Slicker sells the useless cars to customers provides enough comedy incidents to prove good entertainment for most audiences. Just as the bargain is concluded, Slicker makes a hasty exit just in time to escape the angry customers who are returning the worthless cars and want their money back.

THE CAST

Jean Arthur, Harold Austin, Ralph Sipperley, Fred Walton and Scott Seaton. Splendidly directed by Max Gold and Alfred Davis.

Summary—Butler mopping the floor incident, and Slicker selling the cars, will provide enough amusement for the majority of fans.

"Long Fliv The King"

(Pathe-Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

CHARLIE CHASE maintains the consistency of high-grade entertainment in his latest comedy with the help of excellent cast, deft titles and a feature-like photography. Charlie becomes the king of Graustark when he marries its princess. She had to marry within twenty-four hours or lose her throne, and as Charlie was doomed to hang, she married him. However, the pardon came and Charlie went to Graustark to taste the royal glory with his loyal sponsor, Max Davidson. The two are subjected to a good share of comedy incidents, not the least of which is the scene where Max as the official taster must try the royal food first to see if it's poisoned. This he does after a riotous facial byplay, but when the ham is served he quits the job. In the end Charlie escapes to America with his queen and Max grabs the crown. While the two are congratulating each other on their respective prizes, Charlie throws Max's old derby overboard and puts the crown on his head instead, whereupon Max instinctively leans over to look at the derby and the crown falls off. Charlie has to hold him fast from diving after it. Anyone able to resist this incident and the scene where Charlie in front of the prison gate tries to convince Max that he is king, and Max thinking him a lunatic at large, humors Charlie while looking for a brick with which to soak him, but smashing the flivver glass instead, ought to get the cup as a prize glum.

THE CAST

Charlie Chase, Max Davidson, Martha Sleeper, Fred Malatesa and Oliver Hardy. Directed by Lee McCarey.

Summary—A first-class comedy. Good booking for all houses, large and small.

"Hodge-Podge"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS number of Hodge-Podge presents the variety of the world's curiosities in an alphabetical order, each letter contributing a bit of novelty towards a very interesting and entertaining whole. The photographic shots are supplemented in some instances with cartoons cleverly animated, such as for example the lion chasing the Zulu up the tree into the latter's hut, but most of the letters are visualized in scenes from every corner of the globe. The issue is well up to the standard of those gone before, and should find a welcome place on any program.—M. T. ANDREWS.

"Papa's Pest"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

NEAL BURNS and Vera Steadman lend their talents to this comedy which contains an assortment of plausible situations and a good ration of hokum. The first part will challenge the humor more consistently because of the many droll incidents and smart, witty titles. Neal is a henpecked husband and must stay home to mind the baby while his gang holds a poker party. His only chance to join the gang lies in taking the baby along, but the latter proves a handicap by swallowing all his chips and almost causes Neal to lose the deal. In the meantime wifey returns and finding baby gone notifies the police, while hubby returns also but forgets the baby. The baby is sent home by a messenger boy who leaves it at the day nursery, and when Neal goes there to claim it, he takes a Farina instead and gets in trouble for kidnapping. A wild chasing issues but Neal finally succeeds in eluding his pursuers and finds the baby safe at home.

Summary—Nothing new here to recommend as the gags and incidents are of the threadbare calibre. A very fair number.

"Bear Cats"

(Educational-Juvenile—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

A CONGLOMERATE of comedy incidents which afford the juvenile gang and their leader Big Boy to romp through with a considerable assortment of laughs. The director devotes too much footage at the beginning to Mickey's family and gains nothing thereby, but once the gang gets together, action accelerates and humorous situations pop up thickly. The juveniles run a "Beezer Club" where the members are admitted only by the length of their nose. Of course Big Boy is rejected, as he conceives to provide himself with an artificial proboscis which makes him look like Cyrano, and gets in. While playing in the club the gang smashes a window for which they must pay two dollars or go to jail. They decide to raise money by selling Big Boy's dog to the hot dog man, but Big Boy conceals his four-footed friend. The comedy ends in a whirlwind of action as the gang is searching for the dog in vain.

THE CAST

Big Boy, Bennie, Ginger, Jackie, Leon and Bobbie. Directed by Charles LaMont.

Summary—Action of the scattered type variety, but has some genuine appeal and will delight the youngsters in particular.

"The Little Parade"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

THE current issue of Fable cartoon guns high for laughter, and will particularly tickle the juvenile palate. It's circus day in Fableville, and the circus parade lines the local streets with cats, dogs, pigs, hippos and other ingeniously animated animals. The "crash the gate" methods used by the penniless mutts, are almost irresistible in their appeal to humor. Once in the circus, Milton Mouse plays the sad clown in love with Lily Litzel, the trapeze girl. Lily comes near being killed when her partner hippo crashes through the net, but Milton's prayers are answered and she revives. The moral, which is as good as the cartoon, reads: "A kiss in the dark is worth two on a billiard table." One of the best Fables to date.—MAURICE ANDREWS.

"Belgium Today"

(Fox-Variety—One Reel

THIS current issue of the Variety possesses educational as well as entertainment value, by offering a very interesting camera record of the Belgium of today. The picturesque, quaint old cities, the modern industries, the rebuilding of the war-ruined Louvain, the making of wooden shoes, polishing diamonds and some intimate views of Brussels, the Belgian capital, are included in this subject. Excellent novelty for any house.—M. T. ANDREWS.

The Unknown Soldier

Impressive and Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A FIRST rate job has been done with a war theme—which, while not original by any means in conception and execution, is handled intelligently and with sufficient feeling as to impress and entertain in any community. Renaud Hoffman, the director, may be remembered as the creator of that tender little film of mother love, "Which Shall It Be," which provoked a deep sympathetic response a few seasons ago. He showed he could be trusted with an idea—and he proves it here.

Th spectator must forget the "Big Parades" when he looks it over. It is not built on any lavish scale—but merely tells a simple war story with as much economy as possible. To dress up the idea—that of a young American who goes to war and covers himself with glory while carrying on a romance with the daughter of his boss, Hoffman employs several twists. One of them shows the marriage of the young couple behind the lines by a chaplain, in reality a deserter, who has stolen a convenient uniform.

There are several effective scenes of warfare at the front—and the action is well blended with thrills and pathos. As for the acting it is in good hands, what with Charles Emmett Mack contributing the best work of his career.

The Cast: Charles Emmett Mack, Marguerite de la Motte, George Cooper, Henry B. Walthall, Gertrude Claire. Director, Renaud Hoffman.

THEME. Romantic drama of American youth who goes to France to fight and emerges a hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The front-line scenes. Pathos in the plight of the lovers. Scene when hero is crawling across No-Man's Land. The excellent acting. The human appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Surely should get them if exploited for its title and the war flavor of story. Enlist American Legion posts and put on special matinees. Play up Mack as ideal for leading role. Feature Hoffman who directed a little masterpiece a few years ago.

DRAWING POWER. The title and the war flavor will attract them. Suitable for all types of houses. Should succeed everywhere.

Produced by Renaud Hoffman. Distributed by Producers Distributing Corp.

Length, Six reels. Released, June, 1926.

Paris

Entertaining if Not Taken Too Seriously

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AN inept story is on view here—a story commonplace of theme and more suggestive of Hollywood than Paris. In other words, it is the type of plot which the tyros of the profession dash off when some producer announces a dearth of suitable material. Edmund Goulding, who wrote and directed the number, has done his best work with the megaphone. He has employed some good touches here and there which compensate for the shortcomings of the plot. And there is a good twist at the finish. The black-haired vixen—played with excellent spirit by Joan Crawford—from Montmartre, remains loyal to her Apache lover in spite of the fact that the American youth has compelled her to respond to his advances.

So Goulding gets around his weak story by touching it up with some capital "business"—much of which is quite refreshing. The idea is a favorite with scenarists—and they've written it so often that the Paris underworld has become a realm of romance. The settings reveal the necessary color and atmosphere—and the acting is competent enough with Charles Ray surprising us in a different characterization for him. He is the American youth and he doesn't get so much out of his role as Douglas Gilmore does out of the Apache.

The Cast: Charles Ray, Joan Crawford, Douglas Gilmore, Michael Vasaroff, Rose Dione, Jean Galeron. Director, Edmund Goulding.

THEME. Romantic drama of American youth who tries to win an Apache's sweetheart only to be repulsed in the end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The introduction of the American to the Apache cafe. The efforts of hero to win the girl. The romantic tid-bits between youth and girl. The settings. The acting by Joan Crawford and Douglas Gilmore. The climax when Apache wins back girl.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title is magnetic. Stage Apache number against an appropriate background. Play up Charles Ray who is cast in difficult type of role for him.

DRAWING POWER. Should attract the steady film-goers. Suitable for average trade—and shown with good supporting numbers is likely to please them in big houses.

Produced and Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Length, Six reels. Released, May, 1926.

Black Paradise

Vivid Melodrama Fails to Ring True

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

THEY have packed into this picture every known variety of mass appeal but the tension of interest is not extremely high, except for the opening reel and the last sequence showing the eruption of the volcano. The elements of romance, revenge, comedy and thrills have been injected at random with the total result that the picture makes an obvious bid for box office success, heeding little the intrinsic dramatic construction of the story. The story attains keen interest at the beginning when the supposedly reformed crook is tracked by the police to his sweetheart's home on his wedding day. Then the action shifts to the rum runner and sags thereon until closing scenes on the South Sea island. Madge Bellamy is both appealing and convincing as the youthful and winsome heroine for whose love the crook, the gruffy captain, and the relentless "dick," were fighting. Edmund Lowe gives good account of himself as the detective, while Edward Piel gives impressive characterization of the nefarious sea captain. Remaining cast good.

The Cast: Madge Bellamy, Leslie Fenton, Edmund Lowe, Edward Piel, Harvey Clark, Paul Panzer, Marcella Day, Samuel Blum, Doris Lloyd. Author and Director, R. William Neill.

THEME. Melodrama. A detective pursuing a crook to the open sea is shanghaied by a smuggler and taken to an abandoned South Sea island. There he falls in love with the crook's sweetheart, rescues her from the hands of the brutish captain, and after surviving volcanic eruption in which the others perish, they are picked up by a U. S. steamer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The vivid South Sea atmosphere, fine work of the principals, surprise turns in the story and the drollery of Harvey Clark. The scenes aboard the outlaw ship, the sequence on the island, the volcanic eruption and the fine photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as thrilling melo packed with unswerving action, and stress the South Sea romance stuff. The catchy title, the South Sea atmosphere, and the names of the principals.

DRAWING POWER. Too obvious melo appeal prohibits its recommendation for all houses, but should do good business where melodrama and thrills are liked.

Produced and Distributed by Fox.

Length, 4,962 feet. Released, May, 1926.

Scenes from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Production "Paris."

Up in Mabel's Room

Farce-Comedy Is Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE bedroom farce with all of its attendant complications is on view here—and it shapes up as a likely number. It runs true to form in that the characters must keep on the jump so that the plot will not get the best of them. Like all farcical contraptions it builds up compromising situations for its central figures—and to keep the pot a-boiling it involves the lesser lights in the triangle. Naturally, one word of explanation would suffice to puncture it. But the characters never get down to any frank discussion. They dodge the issue in building up the complications—the only procedure possible with farce.

"Up In Mabel's Room" is cut from a conventional pattern, but it provokes its share of suspense in the tight situations which confront Mabel and her supposedly divorced hubsand. The piece de resistance is some feminine "doo-dad" which the wife believes is intended for her better half's girl friend. The business of getting hold of the piece of lingerie spells the sum and substance of the picture.

The players act with a good mock-seriousness—especially Harrison Ford, Marie Prevost and Harry Myers.

The Cast: Marie Prevost, Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Harry Myers, Sylvia Breamer, Paul Nicholson, Carl Gerard, Maud Truax, William Orlamond, Arthur Hoyt. Director, E. Mason Hopper.

THEME. Farce-comedy of young couple who think themselves divorced. The heroine believes her husband a flirt and with her jealousy aroused she proceeds to win him back.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes in the bedroom. The mock seriousness of the principals. The climax when players attempt to steal the lingerie. The speed and spice. The settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as clever adaptation of stage hit. Play up title and tie up with modiste shops on sale of lingerie, etc. Mention the good work of cast and feature their names.

DRAWING POWER. Title and cast should pull them in. Well advertised, it should do business. Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced by Al Christie. Released by Producers Distributing Corp.

Length, six reels. Released June, 1926.

Silence

Well Produced and Gripping Melodrama

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

IT is refreshing and inspiring to see, for a change, a picture which reminds us that there can be great acting on the screen. "Silence" gives H. B. Warner a truly "fat" part and he makes the most of it. Given a story which might easily have dropped to the level of absurd melodrama, he makes it no longer melodrama, but deep, human, convincing drama, powerful yet not overdrawn. His characterization of the suave, aloof crook who all but sacrifices his life for his child, stands as an unforgettable contribution to screen drama. And not alone Warner, but the other members of the cast, as well. Vera Reynolds gives a sympathetic and finely shaded portrayal of mother and daughter, and Virginia Pearson is perfection itself as the female ward boss and saloon keeper. Raymond Hatton is as good as always, and Rockcliffe Fellowes and Jack Mulhall round out the cast splendidly. The general screen treatment and direction are refreshingly novel and productive values as a whole are one hundred per cent.

The Cast: Vera Reynolds, H. B. Warner, Raymond Hatton, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Jack Mulhall, Virginia Pearson. Director, Rupert Julian. Author, Max Marcin.

THEME. Heart interest dramà of gentleman crook who is tricked into losing wife and daughter. Wife marries again and crook watches unseen over child. On eve of her marriage, the past rises and threatens to destroy her happiness. She shoots man who defames her mother. Crook takes blame and is willing to hang to spare her from disgrace, but is saved. Her happiness secure, crook returns to old life.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. H. B. Warner's remarkable performance, and brilliant work of cast as a whole. General treatment and direction. The building up of situations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up cast at your discretion, at least featuring Vera Reynolds, H. B. Warner and Hatton. Plug the story heavily, featuring the surefire melodrama and heart stuff angles. Title suggests teasers and various special stunts.

DRAWING POWER. Quality okeh for any house.

Produced by C. B. De Mille. Distributed by Producers Dist. Corp.
Length, 7,518 feet. Released, April 25, 1926.

The Dice Woman

Colorful Though Not Really Effective

(Reviewed by Maurice T. Andrews)

THIS picture although quite a pleasing diversion is not of the kind that will hit the people between the eyes. On the other hand it would be rather problematic to label it as just ordinary. The picture is the combined result of the same trio who lent their talents to make "The Danger Girl," Priscilla Dean, John Bowers and Edward Dillon. The versatile Miss Dean who is known for her vivid portrayals of daring and vivacious heroines, labors unflaggingly only to have her efforts partly offset by a story punctuated with irrelevant situations and at times the director succeeds in achieving keen interest, when the sequence ends abruptly and the scene shifts to another location with entirely different atmosphere.

However the film has its interesting moments which offer a variety of mass appeal.

The Cast: Priscilla Dean, John Bowers, Gustave von Seyffertitz, Lionel Belmore, Phillips Smalley, Malcolm Denny, William Humphrey, George Kuwa. Author, Percy Heath. Director, Edward Dillon.

THEME: Comedy-drama. An American girl, a flippant daughter of a millionaire gets involved in car and jewel robbery. Disowned by her father, she escapes to the Orient, is forced to earn living as dice woman in a Chinese gambling place from where she is abducted by a native potentate for his harem. She is rescued by her father's agent whom she rewards with her love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Capable direction and the star's sparkling interpretation of the flapper role. The stolen car sequence, the scenes in the Chinese gambling joint and in the harem. The considerable tit-bits of comedy, the impressive Oriental settings and fine photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up to the "modern girl" idea, who thru her wild escapades becomes the inmate of a harem. The excellent title and the game of dice offer unlimited possibility for exploitation. Boost Priscilla Dean, John Bowers and Gustave von Seyffertitz.

DRAWING POWER. Not as good as "The Danger Girl." Star's name will pull them in, if bolstered up with a good short subject will prove satisfactory for average houses everywhere.

Produced and distributed by Producers' Distributing Corporation. Length, 5,614 feet. Released June, 1926.

Shipwrecked

Weak and Unconvincing Story of Regeneration

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

STORIES dealing with the regeneration of drifters and unfortunate women require no little originality in treatment and splendid acting to shape them into entertaining screen fare—and the general absence of these makes "Shipwrecked" rather disappointing. The story moves leisurely along stereotyped lines, with no element of freshness or novelty, and the players are apparently swamped by its inconsistencies and weaknesses. Joseph Schildkraut is hopelessly miscast as the Irish cook's assistand on the good ship "Star of Hope," and while he attempts to be rollicking and nautical the result is anything but laudable. Seena Owen is handicapped by an impossible role. The bright spot of the picture is the work of Laska Winter as the "amber devil," a native girl, and Matthew Betz is splendid as the captain, "a white man gone yellow." Clarence Burton, Lionel Belmore and Erwin Connelly are good in their respective roles.

The general production values, settings, photography, and the like, are satisfactory, but the picture fails in entertainment value and suspense because the worn familiarity of the story leaves one in doubt at no time regarding the next action of the principals.

The Cast: Seena Owen, Joseph Schildkraut, Matthew Betz, Clarence Burton, Laska Winter, Lionel Belmore, Irwin Connellly. Director, Joseph Henabery. Author, Langdon McCormick.

THEME. Girl, believing she has murdered man in self defense, becomes stowaway on ship and is befriended by cook's assistant. He fights to protect her and is put in hold. Crew abandons ship in storm and she remains with him. Ship drifts to island. Only her crime stands between them. Ship's captain shows up and forces attentions on her. Hero beats him up.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The storm and general nautical atmosphere at sea. Work of some of the minor members of the cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title lends itself to attractive lobby displays or marquee pieces. Feature the cast. Don't promise them too much on this one.

DRAWING POWER. Give this a strong supporting bill.

Produced by Metropolitan. Released by Producers Dist. Corp.
Length, 5,865 feet. Released, May 9, 1926.

Volcano

Conventional All the Way

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE isn't so much to this one despite the fact that it created something of a mild sensation on the stage with its racial problems. Yes, indeed, the familiar racial barrier is the "prop" behind the plot—with the drama building around the daughter of a Frenchman who has led something of a hectic life on the island of Martinique. In other words whispered gossip has it that she has colored blood and so when she comes to the island she is properly ostracized and forced to live over the line in the colored quarter.

The plot is built in an old-fashioned way and most of the emphasis is placed on the romance, manifested by an aristocratic youth for the unhappy girl—and the latter's pathos in being marked as beyond the pale. One can "spot" the ending far in advance, though the picture contains a vivid climax when Mount Pelee gives up its molten lava and destroys St. Pierre.

The thrill is there—represented in loss of life and property as the volcano starts on its mission of death. The villain is exterminated—and the romancers are united for the happy ending, when the racial barrier is eliminated through the vital evidence which registers the girl as genuinely Caucasian.

The Cast: Bebe Daniels, Ricardo Cortez, Wallace Beery, Eulalie Jensen, Arthur Edmund Carew. Director, William K. Howard.

THEME. Drama of racial barrier with girl being ostracized when community believe her colored. She is vindicated.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Moment when girl reaches island. Scene when she is informed of her color. The thrill in the eruption of Mount Pelee. The atmosphere and detail.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title carries advertising angles. Bring emphasis upon the eruption of Mount Pelee. Play up as adaptation of the play, "Martinique." Put on atmospheric prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Title has magnetic qualities and should attract them if properly exploited. Also cast should attract them. Suitable for first runs, if supported by strong bill. Good enough for average houses.

Produced and distributed by Paramount.
Length, six reels. Released June, 1926.

Studio Briefs

Lionel Barrymore has been added to the cast of ''The Temptress,'' the Cosmopolitan production now being filmed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. The cast is headed by Greta Garbo, Antonio Moreno, H. B. Warner, Roy D'Arcy, Armand Kaliz and Kathleen Kay, Virginia Brown Faire, Francis McDonald and Theodore Von Eltz.

Robert T. Haines, who has appeared in many Broadway stage plays, has been added to the cast of ''Lew Tyler's Wives,'' the first Preferred Picture to be produced by J. G. Bachmann for release by Famous Attractions Corporation. The line-up includes Frank Mayo, Ruth Clifford, Hedda Hopper, Helen Lee Worthing, Lew Brice and Theda Jason, a ten-months-old screen star. The production is under the direction of Harley Knoles.

Work has begun on "Men of the Night," the first of twelve Sterling Pictures to be released by Ginsberg-Kann Distributing Corporation. Florence Wagner wrote the story and Al Rogoll has been chosen to direct before starting in on his Ken Maynard series for First National. The casts consists of Gareth Hughes in the juvenile lead, Wanda Hawley playing opposite, Lucy Beaumont, Herbert Rawlinson and Jay Hunt.

Work is going ahead at a great rate on "Gold," the new comedy-drama produced by Bruce Mitchell in association with J. Charles Davis, 2nd. The continuity was written by L. V. Jefferson from an original idea of Davis'. The picture will be directed by Mitchell. The cast includes Carmelita Geraghty, Rex Lease, Al Ferguson, Garry O'Neil, Maude George, Maurice Costello, Alec Francis, Jim Welch, Frank Clarke and little Viola, a baby discovery.

Archie Mayo has started photography on "Christine of the Big Tops," the first of Banner Production's new series of six pictures for release by Ginsberg-Kann for the season of 1926-27. Some of the players appearing in the picture are Pauline Garon, Cullen Landis, Otto Matieson, Robert Graves, Betty Noon, John Elliott and Martha Mattox.

May 17th has been set as the date when Director Irvin Willat will start directing Ray Rockett's first production for First National, Cosmo Hamilton's "Paradise" with Milton Sills and Betty Bronson playing the chief characters. Kate Price and Lloyd Whitlock will also be seen. Clark Robinson has been engaged as art director and Charles Burner will be Willat's assistant. Paul Schofield is writing the continuity.

Production started May 25th on ''Forever After'' at the West Coast studio of First National after several postponements. Lloyd Hughes and Mary Astor are featured.

Several additions have been made to the cast of ''Manon Lescaut,'' the second John Barrymore-Warner Bros. Classic for the season of 1926-27. The newcomers are Dick Sutherland, Tom Williams, Tom Santschi and Stuart Holmes. The leading feminine role is played by Dolores Costello, while the supporting cast is made up of Holmes Herbert, Sam De Grasse, Warner Oland, Marcelle Corday, Charles Clary, Rose Dione, Bertram Grassby, Noble Johnson, Temple Saxe, Eugenie Besserer and Charles. Alan Crosland is directing.

Paul L. Stein, recently signed by Harry Warner in Berlin, has arrived at the Warner Bros. West Coast studio where he will direct the Richard Henry Savage story, ''My Official Wife,'' which will star Irene Rich.

The scenario department of Warner Bros. is busy with a number of scripts for the 1926-27 program. Bess Meredyth is preparing ''The Heart of Maryland'' for Dolores Costello, Darryl Francis Zanuck is at work on ''Across the Pacific,'' a starring vehicle for Monte Blue, while the script for ''Private Izzy Murphy,'' George Jessel's picture, is in the hands of Edward Clark and Graham Baker.

Claire Windsor will have the feminine lead in ''Tin Hats,'' an original story by Edward Sedgewick, who will begin direction at the M.G.M. studio within the next fortnight. Donald Lee did the adapting. No other members of the cast have been announced as yet.

Al Macquarrie and George Anderson have been added to the cast of ''The Temptress,'' Cosmopolitan's production for M.G.M.

Joe Farnum will write the sub-titles for Lon Chaney's M.G.M. film, ''The Road to Mandalay,'' being directed by Tod Browning after a script by Eliet Clausen. George Marion, Jr., is to title Lovey Mary,'' a feature directed by King Baggott after a adaptation by Charles Maigne of the Alice Hegan Rice novel. Bessie Love and William Haines are the featured players.

King Baggott has been engaged to pilot Jackie Coogan in ''Johnny Get Your Hair Cut,'' a racing story written by Gerald Beaumont. This film will show Jackie emerging from babyhood into full-fledged boyhood.

A special motion picture edition of ''The Unknown Soldier'' is being prepared by the music firm of Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. as a tie-up with the Producers Distributing Corporation picture of the same title. The music publishers will also broadcast the song through their various broadcasting units.

Lathar Mendes, the German director whom Robert Kane signed to a contract some months ago in Berlin where he was working for UFA, began work on his first American photoplay this week. The picture is ''The Duke of Ladies'' from the E. Phillips Oppenheim novel, ''The Ex-Duke.'' Ian Keith, Ben Lyon, Sam Hardy and Henry Vibart are prominent among the men players and Lois Moran and Mary Brian have been engaged for the leading feminine roles.

Walter Long has been added to the cast of ''West of Broadway.'' He will play the character of ''Bad Willie.'' Priscilla Dean is starred with Arnold Gray playing opposite. Robert Thornby is directing this Harold Shumate adaptation of Wallace Smith's story, ''New York West.''

Fox Films has signed Ralph Sipperly to a long term contract. He is at present at work in ''Womanpower,'' adapted from Harold McGrath's ''You Never Can Tell,'' playing the part of ''Gimp Conway.'' He recently apepared in the stage play, ''The Fall Guy.''

The Columbia production, ''The False Alarm,'' is now in the making at the West Coast studio of the company. The script was written by Leah Baird and Frank O'Connor is directing. The cast is made up of Mary Carr, Ralph Lewis, Priscilla Bonner, John Harron, George O'Hara, Dorothy Revier, Maurice Costello, Lillian Leighton, Arthur Hoyt and William Franey.

Contracts have been extended with several players under the De Mille and Metropolitan banners. The contract of Edmund Burns has been extended for an indefinite period and he will be featured in many of the new season's pictures. The option held by De Mille on the services of Louis Natheaux has been exercised. Sally Rand will continue to have important roles and Josephine Norman's contract has also been extended for an additional year.

Waldemar Young, who produced the scripts for ''The Unholy Three'' and ''The Blackbird,'' has extended his contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Metropolitan Pictures Corporation has signed Arnold Gray to a long term contract. He recently completed his first role in pictures in ''The Flame of the Yukon,'' playing opposite Seena Owen. He is slated to appear with Priscilla Dean in ''West of Broadway'' which is scheduled to start within a week.

''The Scarlet Letter,'' Lillian Gish's starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be titled by H. H. Caldwell and Katherine Hilliker. The star personally selected Nathaniel Hawthorne's novel to fulfill a desire to translate an American novel to the screen. Frances Marion is responsible for the adaptation and the picture was directed by Victor Seastrom.

Arrangements have been completed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio to film the annual battle practice of the United States Navy's Pacific Fleet as part of the action of ''Tell It to the Marines.'' The picture is to be made in conjunction with the United States Marine Corps and the naval maneuvers will take place within a few days.

Louise Fazenda and J. Russell Powell have been added to the cast of ''The Red Mill,'' Marion Davies' new Cosmopolitan starring vehicle now being filmed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio. Others in the cast are Karl Dane, Snitz Edwards, Fred Gambold and George Siegmann. William Goodrich is directing.

Cleveland

DR. B. I. BRODY has announced that he will build a $60,000 motion picture theatre on the corner of Kinsman Road and East 143rd Street, which he recently leased for ninety-nine years. Dr. Brody, who owns a chain of leading first-run neighborhood houses throughout the city, has been the most active builder of theatres in Cleveland during the past few years. Within two years he has erected the Detroit, Broadway, Kinsman and Cedar-Lee Theatres.

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., which has been operating the Liberty Theatre under lease from the Liberty Building Company, last week acquired the entire property in a transaction closed by Joseph Laronge, 600 Union Trust Bldg.

The Liberty Building is two stories high, of steel and concrete at the northeast corner of Superior Avenue and East 103rd Street. In addition to the 1,500 seat theatre, it contains six store units and twelve suites of offices. It stands on land 130 by 156 feet which is leased from the Union Trust Company for ninety-nine years.

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc. bought the building and is taking a new long term land leasehold. It is said the deal was made on a basis of approximately $500,000.

This is the second large property acquired here recently by the Loew Ohio corporation. Several weeks ago it purchased the Cameo Theatre building on lower Euclid Avenue, having previously held the theatre under a twenty-year lease.

Leo Devany, Universal assistant sales director, who is making extended visits in all the key cities of the territory, is in the midst of a two weeks' visit in Cleveland.

Robert Cotton, central division manager for Producers Dist. Corp., is making his first rounds of the territory since he was inoculated with the convention germ of enthusiasm. His stopping off places included Cincinnati and Indianapolis.

The Cleveland Fox exchange expects to be in its own new office building no later than July first. The new building will be the latest thing in fireproof constructon. All the partitions, the poster racks, and all the furniture will be metal. Manager Ward Scott is planning a party for the opening celebration.

D. Cowhig has been appointed booker of the Cleveland Pathe exchange. He was formerly associated with the Pathe exchange in Minneapolis, and succeeds Gertrude Willard, who has booked for herself a life job of matrimony.

R. S. Shrader, assistant central sales manager for Pathe, paid Cleveland a visit last week.

Canada

GETTING away to a splendid start for its sixth year of activities, the Montreal Theatre Managers Association re-elected a number of its veteran officers at the annual meeting of the association on May 28.

George Nicholas, the president for the past two years, was re-elected executive head of the association for a third term.

B. M. Garfield, secretary of the body since its start, was the unanimous choice again for the post of secretary-treasurer and was given credit for last year's successful work toward theatre betterment. George Rotsky was elected vice-president of the association for a third term.

Mr. Nicholas is general manager of the United Amusements Corporation, operating ten theatres in Montreal. B. M. Garfield is the manager of the Rialto Theatre and George Rotsky has been manager of the Palace Theatre for over five years.

Directors were elected as follows: Abbie Wright, manager of the Princess; Howard Conover, manager of the Imperial, and Harry Dahm, manager of the Capitol.

Two of the outdoor amusement parks of Hull, Quebec, are making a big specialty of free moving pictures as an attraction. The Royal Park, Hull, announced no less than twelve reels of pictures for the week of May 24. Luna Park made a similar announcement, pointing out that all its pictures were comedies. M. S. Phillips is the manager of Luna Park, where the screen has been set up in a grove of trees. J. Bassio is the manager of Royal Park.

J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, broke into the news on May 29 when announcement was made at Halifax, N. S., that he had presented two fine tympani drums to the Philharmonic Society of Halifax. Mr. Franklin was proprietor of the Strand and Community Theatres, Halifax, for years and he still takes an active interest in musical development in Nova Scotia. He has been prominent in Ottawa theaatre circles for two years past.

The Casino Theatre, Ottawa, is once more in good standing with organized labor in the Canadian Capital. The expired agreement between the owner, Fred Leduc, and union representatives was renewed May 28, three unions being involved, the musicians, moving picture operators and stage hands.

Mr. Leduc signed for the Casino while the union representatives who signed were L. Goold, Romeo Marcil and William York.

Albany

SAM BURNS, manager of the Bond Exchange in this city, called on all other exchanges last week as chairman of the fire committee of the exchanges. Work on the new exchange building is progressing satisfactorily.

Meyer Paul, owner of the Woodlawn Theatre in Schenectady, is operating but three days a week at the present time.

Tom Thornton, owner of the Orpheum in Saugerties, was on Film Row during the week, dating pictures.

L. L. Connors, of Cambridge, a former exhibitor, is now selling film for the F. B. O. Exchange here, and Thomas Hughes has been transferred to the Buffalo office. Harry Weinberg, manager of the exchange, spent nearly all last week on a trip through northern New York.

William Curry, of the Victory Theatre in Cambridge, has recovered from a recent illness, and is once more back on the job. He has, however, reduced his running nights to three instead of six per week. Mrs. A. E. Milligan, of Schuylerville, has also cut down to three nights a week.

Sidney Sampson, general manager for Bond, was in town last week from Buffalo, and spent a portion of the day in a discussion of matters with Samuel Burns, the local representative.

The Fairyland Theatre in Warrensburg devoted its entire proceeds one night this week for the benefit of the American Legion of that village, who will turn over the money to the memorial at Tupper Lake, for Christy Mathewson, one time king of the diamond.

Frank Wurme, of the Star in Salem, has decided to run double features throughout the summer, as a means of attracting greater patronage. E. J. Rothstein, of Utica, will open a theatre at Inlet on July 1. Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, and William Smalley, of Cooperstown, were included among exhibitors on Film Row during the week.

Film Row was shocked last week in receiving word that Mrs. Robert Bertschey had been killed in an automobile accident on Long Island. Mr. Bertschey is very well known in this city, and also among exhibitors in northern New York, by reason of the fact that he had served as manager of a number of exchanges, prior to the time he left for New Haven. Of late he has been managing a theatre at Riverhead.

The Star in Schenectady will probably not be enlarged this summer, according to a statement made this week by the owners, John Meyers & Son.

J. Myer Schine, of Gloversville, was one of the incorporators last week, of a company known as "Mirror Enterprises" in Lake Placid, which will operate a theatre in that village.

At the State Theatre in Schenectady, James Roach is using cut flowers to adorn the large mahogany table in the lobby.

The theatre in Lake George, owned and operated by Mrs. M. A. Carpenter, has opened for the season. During the past months, the house has been considerably improved by installing a sloping floor, new seats, as well as new ventilators.

Frank Breymaier, manager of the Barcli Theatre in Schenectady, hasn't taken a vacation in twenty-four years, and doesn't intend to indulge in one this summer. And that's that.

Claude Wade, of North Creek, and daughter, were on Film Row during the week, dating up pictures.

Mrs. Dennis Regan, of the Star in Greenwich, has recovered from a recent illness due, it is thought, to her teeth. Mrs. Regan plans to run only two nights a week throughout July and August.

William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, owner of a number of houses, was in Plattsburg for three days during the week, going over matters in connection with his theatre there. Mr. Benton, who owns the Pastime in Granville, has decided to use vaudeville on Saturday nights during the summer.

M. Conory, with houses in Clarksville, Ghent, Westerlo and East Schodack, paid a visit to Film Row during the week, booking pictures that will be used during the weeks to come.

Myer Schine, of Gloversville, was in Malone, Ogdensburg and other northern New York cities and villages during the past week.

Harry Bond and Ted Brackett, of the Bond Stock Company in Schenectady, were killed last week in an automobile accident on the Albany-Schenectady highway, when their car was struck by an interurban trolley. The men were known to practically all exhibitors in Schenectady. Frank Learnan, manager of the Strand in Schenectady, was a passenger on the car which struck and killed the men.

"Al" Herman, manager of First National Exchange here, recently received a five pound package of dates, C. O. D. from an exhibitor in northern New York, to whom he had sent a wire, asking for "dates, dates, dates," in connection with a drive for additional business.

The smock craze has invaded the theatres of Schenectady, even to the extent of claiming some of the managers. Miss Betty Feuer, who handles the Crescent Theatre there, appeared in a smock a few days ago.

The Strand Theatre in Schenectady now has a parking space for cars in the rear of the house, that will accommodate about 200 automobiles.

Butte

WEDDING bells have been ringing for some of our theatre people and this month we have to chronicle the wedding of M. J. Sheehan, one of the popular owners of the Peoples Theatre, in Butte, and Miss Ethel Harris, former cashier at the Peoples Theatre.

Another wedding of interest to Montana film folks is that of Frank Boedecker, president of the Montana Exhibitor Organization. At Deer Lodge, Montana, Miss Ernestine Heilman, of Bozeman, and Mr. Boedecker took their nuptial vows at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, with Rev. Father T. F. Landy reading the marriage service. E. P. White, of the Strand Theatre at Livingston, was best man and Miss Helen Wilson, of Bozeman, attended the bride. Following the ceremony an elaborate wedding breakfast was served to the relatives and close friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boedecker.

"Boe," as he is known to his numerous friends, is well known in the state and especially in Deer Lodge, his former home. He was connected with the old Orpheum Theatre, which was one of the first theatres to show the photoplays. After selling his interests in the Deer Lodge house he bought the Ellen Theatre at Bozeman, Montana, where he and his bride will live on their return from a honeymoon motor trip to Hollywood, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. Boedecker will remain in southern California until after the Motion Picture Theatre Owners have their convention at Los Angeles.

W. J. Sullivan, manager of the Silver Bow Amusement Company, has just returned from Rochester, Minn., where he took his father, who is suffering from a serious throat condition, to Mayo's sanitarium.

Johnnie Gavan, manager of the Liberty Theatre in Butte, who has been associated with the Liberty in Helena for the past several months, has turned over his interests in Helena to Dr. Bethel and in the future will devote all of his time to the Butte playhouse. Dr. Bethel has one of his old theatre employees, Mr. Keenan, managing his house.

E. Powell White, of the Strand Theatre in Livingston, is sojourning in sunny California just now to attend the Motion Picture Theatre Owners convention at Los Angeles.

Frank Boedecker, owner of the Ellen Theatre at Bozeman, president of the State organization of Motion Picture Theatre Owners, is in Los Angeles to attend the convention being held there the first week in June.

The Strand Theatre at Laurel, due to the death of Miss Blanche Betchel's father, has changed hands. The new owner, Murray S. Dolliver, is not a newcomer in this territory, having formerly operated the Hollywood Theatre at Stanford.

Clarence Severson, former exhibitor at Wolf Point, is now associated with the Universal Exchange here, as a salesman.

W. J. Heineman, manager of the Universal Exchange, departed from Butte this week for a swing around the key centers.

The entire Pathe local exchange here is a veritable hive of industry these days since the return of Manager W. M. Hughart from the Pathe Convention at New York City.

The Vaughan - Lynn - Vaughan Circuit's new theatre at Thirty-ninth and Bell Streets, Kansas City, will be ready for opening by August 1, it was said this week. The theatre, which is to be a 1,200-seat house, is being specially constructed so as to allow for compartments at the side for the installation of an Arctic-Nu-Air system.

"Not such a good life, not so good," panted Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas City, as he mopped the May perspiration from his brow.

He had returned home for his "one day off," after having been in Omaha, working on a special service plan of his which recently won approval in New York. Business was good, he said, but the weather and a sea of strange faces were nothing to laugh about.

Preparations virtually are completed for the special car which will take exhibitors of the Kansas City territory to the M. P. T. O. A. convention in Los Angeles. From present indications about twenty theatres from the Kansas City district will attend the Los Angeles confab.

C. C. Robertson, Fayetteville, Ark., exhibitor, who is an inventor "on the side," decided to break away from his theatre long enough for a trip to Kansas City this week. He proceeded to sell one of his automatic curtain controls to the Colinoal Theatre, Pittsburg, Kas.

It was hot aplenty, but business showed no ill effects from a blazing sun along Kansas City's movie row this week.

W. A. Burke, First National office manager at the Kansas City branch, has been assigned to the Northwest Missouri section as salesman, while Tom Byerle, branch manager, who has been ill, returned to work Monday.

O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, as a result of a last minute meeting of the Board of Managers, has been sent as a delegate to the convention at Los Angeles with all expenses paid by the local organization. Mr. Aarons has been recording secretary of the M. P. T. O. for the past three years.

Green & Altman, owners and operators of a chain of theatres in Philadelphia, have started the construction of a 2,500-seat house in Wynnefield, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia. The new building will cost approximately $400,000 and will house in addition to the theatre several stores. Green & Altman have just completed plans for an 1,800-seat house to be built at Thirty-first and Diamond Streets.

Ralph Wilkins, the well-known Jersey exhibitor, has opened the new Broadway at Pitman, N. J., which is looked upon as one of the finest in the smaller Jersey towns. It has a seating capacity of 1,500 and represents a total investment of approximately $350,000.

Approximaely $600 worth of motion picture film was stolen from the shelves of the De Luxe Exchange, owned and operated by Oscar Neufeld and Sam Stiefel. On two successive Sundays thieves, under the pretense of being after baseballs, climbed on the roof and jimmied open the second-story windows. The loss of the films interferred considerably with shipments to theatres in various parts of the country.

The majority of Philadelphia exhibitors, who have closed their houses during past summers, will this year change their policy and will keep them open as long as patronage warrants. Owing to the Sesqui-Centennial all Philadelphia motion picture theatres are looking forward to an especially active summer and houses in South Philadelphia, near the Sesqui grounds in particular, expect heavy patronage. The Stanley Company, which has been in the habit of closing some of its Market Street houses, now plans to keep them open as long as it can do so profitably.

It is reported that Herbert Effenger, who operates the Leader, Sixty-ninth Street, Strand, Embassy at Jenkintown, and the Glenside Theatres, will take an interest in the Lawndale Theatre, which was recently purchased by Harry Freed from the Lawndale Amusement Co. Mr. Effenger also holds a lease on the theatre which is being constructed at Bryn Mawr and which will be ready for formal opening early in the fall.

L. R. Campion, proprietor of the Campion Theatre at Chatfield, Minn., was a recent Minneapolis visitor, as was A. J. Cooper, of La Crosse, Wis.

The management of the Colonial Theatre at Winona, Minn., has closed it for remodelling. When it is opened again, the State will be closed for a similar reason.

Four hundred theatregoers hustled to the street recently when the projection room of the New State Theatre in St. Paul caught fire. The flames were quickly extinguished and damages amounted to only $50.

The Opera House at Kewaunee, Wis., is installing new seats.

William Weisman, new owner of the Crystal Theatre in Minneapolis, is making many improvements in the theatre. These include a new canopy, front and sign. Anton Jensen will continue as manager.

The Opera House at Rhodes, Ia., has been leased by Leo E. Perry and Leo Baie.

The Odeon Theatre at Belview, Minn., has been assumed by L. F. Hoppenrath. R. H. Lehman was formerly proprietor.

G. S. Harding has sold his interest in the Grand and Elko Theatres at Bemidji, Minn., to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brinkham.

New York and New Jersey

HENRY SIEGEL, formerly connected with the Apollo Exchange, New York City, is certainly stepping out in the way of acquiring local theatre properties.

Only a few weeks ago Mr. Siegel's "string" consisted of the Janice and Ritz Theatres, Flushing; today, according to report, Siegel's holdings have grown into a circuit of fourteen houses, and a fifteenth which will be taken over on expiration of its present lease.

Names of theatres given out as listed under the Siegel banner are as follows: Janice and Ritz Theatres, Flushing, L. I.; Franklin Theatre, Astoria, L. I.; Palace Theatre, Ridgefield Park, N. J.; ——— Theatre, Parkside, L. I. (a new 2,000 seat house under construction and scheduled to open about August 1); Ritz Theatre, 54th and 8th Avenue, Brooklyn; Berkshire Theatre, Bay Ridge, Brooklyn; The Ogden Theatre, Ogden Avenue, N. Y. City; The Chaloner, 54th St. and 9th Avenue, N. Y. City; The Royal Theatre, Ninth Ave., N. Y. City; The Amphion, 10th Avenue and 48th St., N. Y. City; The 34th Street Theatre, 34th St. near 3d Avenue, N. Y. City; The Regent, 27th and 3d Avenue, N. Y. City; and the Superior Theatre, 30th St. and 3d Avenue, N. Y. City. It is also understood that the Chelsea Theatre, 26th and 8th Avenue, N. Y. City, at the present time playing burlesque and under lease, will also be added to this circuit.

Lawrence Bologino, owner and operator of the Consolidated Amusement Company, a theatre circuit of considerable size operating on the West Side of New York City, has recently taken over the Ritz Theatre, 180th Street and Boston Road, New York City. The Tri-Boro Amusement Company, of which Harmon Yaffa is the head, formerly owned the Ritz. This will bring the Consolidated holdings up to 18 theatres.

It is reported that the Washington Theatre, 147th and Amsterdam Avenue, N. Y. City, said to have been taken over by Harry Harris in a recent deal involving several houses in the Heights section, is still under control of the Tri-Boro Amusement Company.

A new theatre company known as the Ozone Amusement Corp. has recently placed an order with Howell's Cine Equipment Co. for the equipment of three houses in different sections of Brooklyn. One is a 2,000 seat house under construction at Ditmas and Newkirk Avenues, another, a 1,500 seat theatre at Liberty Avenue and 135th Street, and the third a house with a seating capacity of 1,800 on Fulton Street, near Richmond Street. All are expected to be completed by early fall.

The Terrace Theatre, Yonkers, which was to have held its opening night last week, has postponed same until the 15th of June.

Two more openings for July are those of the Sanford Theatre at Irvington, N. J., and Bratter & Pollack's East Orange Theatre. Both are reported to be 2,000 seat houses. The Irvington house will open early in the month and the East Orange house during the latter part.

According to reports received concerning the progress of the Plaza Theatre, Englewood, N. J., that house will be ready for its opening during the last week in June.

It is reported that the Garden Theatre, Princeton, N. J., will soon close for the summer months in order to undergo its usual housecleaning.

The Iris Theatre, of Salisbury, N. C., formerly owned by J. M. Davis, has been purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Phelps Sassen, who formerly owned the Amuzu Theatre, Belton, S. C. We understand that Mr. Sassen will run this house as a second-run house exclusively.

Asst. Gen. Sales Manager Ralph Morrow, of Producers Distributing Corporation, held a special sales meeting in Charlotte Sunday afternoon. After the meeting he left for Atlanta.

Charles Picquet, of Pinehurst, N. C., who is president of the M. P. T. O. of North Carolina, was in Charlotte the past week arranging the final details for the exhibitors' convention to be held at Wrightsville Beach June 13. 14 and 15. Mr. Picquet said there would be several speakers of note and that the indications are that this will be the largest gathering of exhibitors ever held in North Carolina.

On Saturday, May the 29th, the Charlotte Better Film Committee met at the Chamber of Commerce to discuss the continuing of the Saturday Children's Matinee at the Imperial Theatre. Mrs. Gordon Finger was program chairman. Mrs. Finger made a very excellent talk on the importance of motion pictures as a social, as well as intellectual and scientific agency. Mrs. Finger also spoke of the effective program which the committee might put on in an effort to realize the purpose for which it was organized, and she called on various members to discuss different phases of the program. Mrs. J. A. Parham, Chairman of the Committee, conducted two business sessions, during which reports were read from a number of committees.

STATE Forest Commissioner Neil L. Violette of Augusta, Me., will use the 260 motion picture houses of Maine for a showing of a film used as a warning against forest fires. The film will be shown between June 15 and Sept. 15.

Robert A. Hurley, superintendent of the Connecticut State Police, has approved the permit issued by the New Haven building department for a $150,000 theatre to be erected on Whalley Avenue, New Haven, by the Associated Theatres, Inc., over which there has been much discussion. Actual construction work is expected to start within two weeks. Morris Nunes is treasurer of the company.

The tragic death of Mrs. R. A. Bertschy, wife of Robert Bertschy, in an auto accident at Riverhead, N. Y., where their auto overturned, resulted in many messages of sympathy being sent from New England, where Robert Bertschy was for some years a salesman with the Pathe forces. Several close friends from the exchanges in Boston attended the funeral services at Paterson, N. J.

The new theatre of the Ramsdell Brothers and Green-Eilenberg interests in Malden will be completed about Sept. 1st, and will be known as the Grenada Theatre. It will be finished in Spanish style and will be the largest playhouse in the city.

The New Greenwith Theatre at East Greenwich, R. I., was formally opened Wednesday evening at seven o'clock with an outpouring of town officials and the public which packed the house. Martin Kaufer, general manager, and B. G. Salvini, manager, were warmly congratulated upon the beauty and completeness of this newest of Rhode Island motion pictures theatres. The orchestra was in charge of Walter Schulze. Vaudeville completed the program.

The new theatre, fireproof in construction, with newest lighting effects and organ, seats about 1,000.

A new theatre is to be built on Broad Street, Bridgewater, Mass., for A. A. Glick, 53 Broad Street, from plans by George Nelson Jacobs of Boston. It will be of brick and stone. Construction work is expected to start within the next two weeks.

Bids have been refigured for the new theatre to be built in Attleboro, Mass., by the Eagles' Building Association.

Nate Yeamans, president of the New England exhibitors, accompanied by Mrs. Yeamans, is attending the national convention in Los Angeles. He stopped over in New York for a few days en route to the Coast. Mr. Yeamans operates the Bijou, Rialto, Strand, Park, Palace and Capitol Theatres in Fall River, Mass.

H. M. "Chubby" Davis, who has covered the New Hampshire and Vermont territory for Warner Brothers, has resigned to join the Rothe interests.

The Taunton Biltmore Corp., of Taunton, Mass., has been incorporated with capital of $500,000 with William H. Sherry, Nathan Goodman and Edward M. Corbett as the officers. As previously announced, they plan to build a large motion picture theatre and hotel on the site of the old Taunton Inn, destroyed by fire last winter.

As a result of an assault on Manager Jack Shields, also a ticket taker and a special officer of the Sterling Theatre in Derby, Conn., three Derby youths were each sentenced to five days in jail. They are alleged to have made a disturbance in the theatre and when ejected, are alleged to have assaulted the manager and two employees.

Frank Leyden of the Olympia Theatre, South Boston, with Mrs. Leyden, are expected back from the South next week. Mr. Leyden operates the Imperial and Hamilton Theatres also.

Thomas Spry, manager of First National's Boston exchange, has sufficiently recovered from his recent operation for appendicitis at the Riverbank Hospital, Cambridge, Mass., to be removed to his home. It is expected he will be back at his desk in another week.

Pathe Exchange is gaily decorated this week for its Play Date Roundup campaign.

It is understood that Alfred Gottesman, who operates the Capitol Theatre in Middletown, Conn., has taken over the Grand and Middletown Theatres, each with about 1,000 seats.

M. N. Wolf, branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been in New York for a few days on business with the New York office.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new University Theatre in Harvard Square, Cambridge, adjoining the Harvard University Buildings. Stanley Sumner, managing director of the house, expects to announce the opening date within a short time.

Denver

E. M. SAUNDERS, western sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was another honored Denver visitor last week. Mr. Saunders arrived in Denver from Salt Lake City, where he stopped over on his return from the recent San Francisco sales convention. He spent two days visiting R. J. Garland, manager of the Denver branch.

Jim Lynch, of Laramie, Wyo., owner and manager of all the theatres of that city, was a Denver visitor last week.

Chas. Klein, of the Black Hills Amusement Company, is also visiting exchanges, buying a lot of product for his circuit.

Mrs. Frank Kelley, of Salida, Colo., was also seen around exchanges arranging dates for the coming months.

Construction on the new Aladdin Theatre is making rapid progress. The steel framework is all in place and the building is rapidly taking form. The building is being watched with unusual interest, for its plans call for something rather unique in the theatre line as far as Denver is concerned. Its owner and builder, H. E. Huffman, is putting up an amusement house patterned after the Taj Mahal Temple of India. He promises not only a first-class amusement house in the way of entertainment, but also a structure which can be pointed to with pride by the citizens of Denver. Mr Huffman states that the theatre will be completed by September 1, 1926.

H. G. Goodridge, manager of the Ogden Theatre, is putting in a balcony extension which will accommodate one hundred and twenty more patrons, indicating that business is pretty good in the Colfax & Ogden district of Denver.

L. J. Schlaifer, assistant to L. B. Metzger, general sales manager of Universal, was a visitor in Denver for several days last week. While here he conferred with G. E. Rosenwald, manager of the local Universal Exchange, and Ray P. Allison, manager of the America Theatre, Universal's first-run house in Denver.

Chicago

DAVID E. RICE, manager of the Jackson Park Theatre, Sixty-seventh and Stony Island, is receiving congratulations on the award of the grand prize in the beauty and personality contest held at Los Angeles, Cal., to his seventeen-year-old daughter, Marion Rice. Miss Rice won her five-year screen contract with Universal, through the Randolph Theatre prize contest last month, in which three hundred and twenty-five Chicago girls participated. She has also been a winner in many other beauty contests.

Morris Safair, district manager for United Artists, is making his headquarters in Chicago for the next week or ten days.

Ruben's Rialto Theatre at Joliet, Ill., the Great States Theatres, Inc., new house, was opened with ceremony on the evening of May 24, many Chicago film men and exhibitors enjoying the show and the entertainment which followed at the Elks' Club. Ruben's Rialto is one of the handsomest and best equipped theatres in the state and offers a splendid amusement palace to the theatregoers of Joliet and surrounding territory.

Manager Wallace, of United Artists, has added Herb Heyman to his sales staff. Mr. Heyman has recently been special representative for Metro-Goldwyn, with headquarters in New York City, but is well known in this territory, where he has many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Choynski, the former being owner of the Newberry, Vision and Biltmore Theatres, and who recently celebrated his twentieth anniversary as a motion picture theatre operator, are planning to leave for Europe, immediately following their return from the M. P. T. O. of A. convention in California.

Manager W. W. Brumberg, of Universal's Chicago Exchange, has been confined to his home for the last ten days with a serious illness, and his many friends are hoping for his early improvement.

Buffalo

BUSINESS mingled with pleasure at the Get-Together Dinner held by the Service Department of Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Saturday evening, May 29, at 11:30 p. m. The dinner was held in the offices of the house. At the speaker's table were Vincent R. McFaul, managing director; William Brett, house manager; Johnny Carr, manager Shea's Hippodrome; Robert T. Murphy, manager Shea's North Park; Theodore Hersey, Shea's Buffalo; Rindcen Walker, treasurer Shea's Buffalo. All the members of the Service Department were in attendance and brief talks were given by the various managers. Refreshments were served. The get-together dinners are held every month or so and are proving of real profit. Michael Shea, president of the Shea Operating Company, was the guest of honor.

Matt Valleley, prominent Lackawanna, N. Y., exhibitor, died suddenly at his Buffalo home last week. His death was a great shock to many exhibitor friends in western New York.

Harry Bailey, manager of the Fox Exchange, was painfully injured in an auto accident near Syracuse the other day. He has gone to Saranac Lake to recover from his injuries.

Gerald K. Rudolph, publicity manager of the Fix Film Corporation, was in Buffalo last week-end, en route from the west coast to New York. While in town he visited his old friends along Film Row, where he formerly managed the Fox Exchange.

Harold B. Franklin, vice-president of Publix Theatres Corporation, was a visitor in Buffalo last week. While in town he conferred with Michael Shea, president of the Shea Operating Company, and Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Buffalo.

Ernie Williams, ads sales manger at the Paramount Exchange, is back on the job, following a serious illness. A little thinner, but just as snappy as ever. Glad to see you back, Ernie.

Plans have been completed for the erection of a new theatre on Main Street, between Shea's Buffalo and the new house being erected by Coplon Brothers, by Michael Shea and Publix Theatres. The theatre will be Spanish in design.

Mrs. Pliny B. McNaughton, widow of the late Pliny B. McNaughton, president of the old Shea Amusement Company of Buffalo, was held up and fired upon by several highwaymen, Tuesday morning, May 25, while on her way by automobile to her summer home in Big Tree. Mrs. McNaughton's chauffeur, upon leaving the driveway, outspeeded the bandit's car and escaped. Five shots were fired after the McNaughton car by the trio standing in the road, but none hit Mrs. McNaughton or her machine.

Detroit

WILLIAM FOX, of the Fox Film Corp. and the Fox circuit of theatres, was in Detroit last week. While here he looked over the new theatre site which he owns on Woodward Avenue and announced that work would start within a very short time.

W. J. Clark has succeeded Frank Drew as manager of the Detroit Fox Exchange. Clark was formerly special representative in this territory for Fox.

Jake Mortenson, inspector booker for Pathe, is spending three weeks at the Detroit office of Pathe.

Bill Sturgis, who for the past several months has been covering Michigan territory for Associated Exhibitors, has been transferred and promoted to manage the Omaha office of Associated.

George Porter, well-known citizen of Romulus, Mich., will open the first theatre in this town some time this year.

Construction has already started on the Grand Riviera Annex which the Munz Theatrical Enterprises of Detroit are building.

H. M. Face & Sons, of Maple Rapids, Mich., have taken over the Elmac Theatre in Nashville, Mich., which they will close immediately for repairs.

Les. Sturm, Metro branch manager in Detroit, made a flying trip to New York last week.

A number of local exhibitors walked over the burning sands last week completing their Shrine Degree.

Sam Caplan, of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Co., is away for several weeks taking a much needed rest.

Jake Sullivan, general manager of the Fred De Lodder circuit, was among those motoring to Indianapolis over Decoration Day for the speedway races.

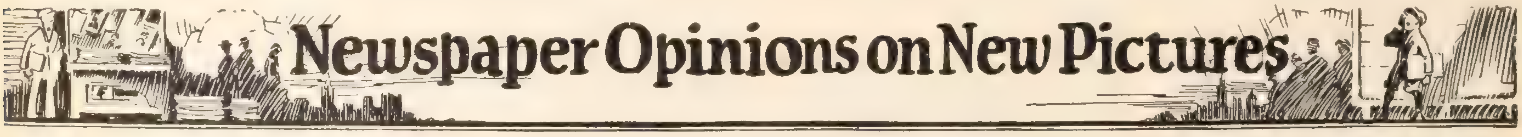
Doc Gallup, premier showman in Marquette, Mich., is back home after having motored through many of the western states.

A. M. Van Dyke, former assistant manager of the Detroit Fox office, has gone to Minneapolis, where he will be on the sales staff of the Fox Exchange.

Abe Chapman, formerly booker for P. D. C. in Indianapolis, has been transferred to the Detroit office of this company.

Frank Joslin, who operates the Empress Theatre in Belding, Mich., has plans under way for immediate construction of a new theatre in this town. The theatre will seat 600, the program will be a combination of pictures and vaudeville, and it is expected to open about the first of September this year.

The Palace Theatre in Grand Ledge, Mich., which is at present under the management of H. Drew, is for sale.



Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Silken Shackles" — Warner Bros., Warner's, New York City

Telegram: "'Silken Shackles' is one of the liveliest and most lightly yielding of the pictures that Broadway's northern boundary has put forth in many a moon. Walter Morosco, the director, has set this simple dish before the public with a nice sense of that which constitutes good screen humor. He has made his characters normal human beings, and poked just enough gentle fun at them to keep his comedy neatly within the realms of credibility."

American: "It was a joy to see her flirt. Years and years of neglected wife roles must have spurred her on. She flirts just twice as hard and four times as delightfully as I believed possible. Her performance is a belated revenge upon the dozens of screen husbands who used to forget her until the last reel. Could they see her now, I dare them to forget her for one sprightly scene. She has a capable support and an amusing story. 'Silken Shackles' is one of those little comedies which Warners are turning out so gaily nowadays. And I liked Walter Morosco's direction, too."

Times: "Romance, ancestry, charm and music have their respective places in a diverting comedy entitled 'Silken Shackles,' the current presentation at Warners. Here is another instance of a photoplay being far better than the title would lead one to expect. It was directed by Walter Morosco, who has performed the task with originality and keen imagination, thus bringing to the screen a blithe effect. Mr. Morosco can be said to have obtained a pleasing naturalness in the performances of the players. They seem to think about what they are doing; they submerge their own personalities, and there are pleasing human touches."

Daily News: "But I think the customers will like the film. They will not be moved to tears and there are several spots that will bring appreciative smiles and one or two laughs. Irene Rich does not strain too hard at the shackles, which, one takes it, are matrimonial bonds in which Huntly Gordon also is tangled. But she gives a performance as pleasing as the one she gave in 'Lady Windermere's Fan.'"

Telegraph: "The picture is well played. Victor Varconi, as the musician, was good at all times. Huntly Gordon completed a trio of good performers in the leading roles. Evelyn Selbie's characterization of the small part of the musician's peasant mother, stood out."

Morning World: "'Silken Shackles,' just a little home play, is on view this week at Warner's, picturing the gifted and beautiful Irene Rich in a role which has served us long, well and profitably. Numerous views of principal characters facing the camera while on the go are nicely done, and there is about the story a smoothness and an economy of action rather out of the ordinary."

The Sun: "There are little touches of sympathy for all three principals, and there is rather a pleasant sophistication—that is, sophistication, as we know it in the films—stretched like a pretty veil over the cinema's plot. The air of sophistication is helped along considerably by the no longer weepy Miss Rich, who seems to revel in breaking away from the handkerchiefs and griefs of her deserted wife roles. Irene Rich, one of the most likable and enduring stars on the screen, does well by her role."

Post: "The screen entertainment at Warners' Theatre this week is pleasant for the most part. Mr. Morosco has tried, apparently, to do things a little differently, and he has succeeded in making a most entertaining bit of fluff in 'Silken Shackles.'"

"The Black Pirate"—United Artists, Grauman's Egyptian, Los Angeles

Record: "Douglas Fairbanks has surpassed anything he has ever done with his 'The Black Pirate.'"

Times: "You will like the animation, the swiftness of his plot, the greedy flashing abandon of his pirate throng."

Examiner: "There doesn't exist a boy who won't adore Doug."

Daily News: "Some of these days they'll be kicking the Arabian Nights entertainment volumes out of the public libraries and substituting photographs of Douglas Fairbanks with clipping books of his adventures in the Land of Fantasy."

Express: "Incomparably the best of the sea films ever brought to the screen."

A Community Theatre Increases Profits By Getting Out Latent "Buyers"

An Interview With

IRWIN WHEELER, PRESIDENT OF THE PLAYHOUSE OPERATING COMPANY, INC.

By Thomas C. Kennedy

THE originator of the line "there are pictures for people and similarly there are people for pictures" did not coin the phrase as a play on words, but as an accurate statement of a very real condition.

Just how fully the fact is appreciated, it is difficult to say at a time when there is discouragingly frequent mention of cases where artistic success and box office failure have marched hand in hand.

The outstanding impression of this interviewer's talk with Irwin Wheeler, President of the Playhouse Operating Company, which operates theatres in New Canaan, Conn., Rye and Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Riverhead, L. I., is that here is one of the successful and progressive figures in the picture theatre field who is keenly alive to the necessity of extending the scope of appreciation for the photoplay by developing the latent "buyers" of cinema entertainment.

In illustration of the point we are discussing, permit us to reduce the matter to a very concrete basis by telling you that the box office record at the Playhouse in New Canaan was made with "Nanook of the North," that "Beggar on Horseback" scored as a box office hit with returns approaching the high-water mark for the house and that recently "Lady Windermere's Fan" played there to capacity audiences.

That last paragraph may help you to "get" what we mean when we say there are "people for pictures." It also makes plain the fact that profit can be made by developing the latent picturegoers who form an important part of the potential market for photoplay entertainment in every town. The "active buyers" of pictures are catered to with great energy and no little genius. They are the "fans," the "regulars" at the theatre, and their continued patronage is the result of a steady, and in too many cases, an exclusive policy of booking pictures for the audiences—the ready-made audiences.

But new blood is just as vitally needed in the ranks of the ticket buyers as it is in the personalities appearing in the plays on the screen. Developing this "new blood," getting out the latent audiences, is not a mere hobby or a "laboratory experiment" in theatre operation so far as Irwin Wheeler is concerned. He operates a theatre in a small town. It was built at the request of people of the town who were tired and weary of the "shooting gallery" which they had suffered until patience gave way to resentment toward the inaneity and stupidity of the movie fare served them week in and week out.

WHEELER'S method of getting the right audience for the right picture is very simple. Boiled down to its basic elements, it is simply this: "Tell the truth about your entertainment, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

Telling the whole truth in the matter of advertising, however, does not mean simply telling the truth as one man sees it, but the truth as it is. It necessitates an ability to judge accurately the elements which go to make up the entertainment you have booked, of analyzing your market and intelligently bringing the message about the picture before the people most likely to be interested in it, and in making the appeal in such a fashion as to get response from those particular people.

Rigid adherence to the policy of playing fair with the public has built up an abiding confidence in the New Canaan Playhouse and its directors. How important this factor is to the success of a community theatre is illustrated by the ease with which the Playhouse directors succeeded in having New Canaan citizens ratify their appeal to permit Sunday night picture presentations. This agitation on the part of the theatre was not accompanied by any elaborate propaganda or advertising, merely a leaflet was printed, a leaflet explaining the issue—telling the people how the regulation against Sunday pictures operated only against those who are unable to drive to nearby towns to attend cinema shows on Sundays. Not even screen readers were used, yet the vote of the people was heavily in favor of allowing Sunday showings at the Playhouse. This accomplishment is the more remarkable when it is understood that the former picture theatre in New Canaan tried mightily on several occasions to have the Sunday ban lifted and failed dismally in each instance.

With such real accomplishments as this to the credit of this theatre man, it cannot be said that his business principles are idealistic, unique and successful only under the peculiar conditions under which they operate.

THE town of New Canaan is strictly residential and numbers among its population many prominent artists and wealthy men of high social degree. It is not a "Main Street town" in any sense that that term could be used to indicate a place where puritanism and narrow-minded views flourish. Yet one of the first tests which Wheeler applies to the selection of pictures for the Playhouse is that there must be an unqualified affirmative answer to the question "is this play absolutely free from suggestiveness and exploitation of sex problems?"

"Our patrons," he says, "find the sex play repugnant and offensive more because of the blatant stupidity with which such obvious plots and situations are treated on the screen than from shock to over-sensitive ideas and narrow viewpoints.

"They do not want 'highbrow' pictures any more than any other class of theatregoers, unless of course there is real merit to such a play. Merit is all they want—merit in acting, in story construction and treatment, in direction, in pictorial development.

"We hear a great deal about highbrow pictures being commercial failures. But in my opinion, pictures do not fail because they are 'highbrow' so much as from some other weak element in their makeup. The truth of the matter is that several pictures which have been loosely called 'highbrow,' in reality are decadent, and that is a thing which the theatregoers in this country will not countenance. There is little choice between the offensive overtones of the obvious sex melodrama and the noxious undertones of that class of pictures which by some screen commentators are erroneously pronounced 'delightfully sophisticated,' 'Grown up screen entertainment,' etc. and so forth.

"Not so long ago we received a picture, a rather popular success in certain types of picture houses, which we had booked without seeing it on the screen. When we did preview it, after it had been announced for a date at the Playhouse, we found it quite too ‘sexy’ for our general patronage. It had action and some effective photographic values, but the theme was of a very low moral tone. We had advertised the picture and were forced to play it, but we took great care to advertise that the directors of the theatre, while forced by circumstances to play it, were not satisfied that it came up to the standards of the theatre, and we stressed the fact that it was a picture for adults and not suitable entertainment for children.

How a Community House Caters to All the People Some of the Time

‘‘Our people have learned that they can trust us and there is no criticism when we make such an announcement. It is well known that the announcement can be taken at its face value and is not covering a sly appeal for patronage on the basis of offering something ‘spicy.’ They accept with equal confidence the statements we make when we tell them that a certain picture is suitable for children. I do not personally endorse more than five or six pictures in a year, yet when I do, there is a heavy response, and in that way I am able to get large and appreciative audiences for some of the exceptional pictures which sometimes fail miserably elsewhere.

‘‘I AM now trying to arrange for a showing of ‘Moana’ at the New Canaan Playhouse. Robert J. Flaherty, producer of the picture, is a resident of the town, which gives me an especial advantage in this particular case. However ‘Moana’ will not be advertised as a ‘love romance,’ as to the detriment of this fine work it has been in several cases. It will be offered as an especially meritorious pictorial record of the country, the people and their customs, of Samoa—interesting, entertaining and informative as such, and a great work of its kind.

‘‘We intend to advance the showing of ‘Moana’ with a presentation in which Mrs. Flaherty, wife of the producer, will relate some of her experiences in Samoa during the making of the film. This lecture will be held on a Saturday morning a week prior to the opening of the picture at the Playhouse. The showing of ‘Moana’ will be supplemented by the appearance of the three Flaherty children, girls ranging in years from four to eight, in native Samoan dances. The girls were with their father and mother during the making of the picture. They learned the native dances and even acquired a knowledge of the strange tongue of the people. These features will heighten the interest in ‘Moana’ as an entertainment, as well as stressing the significance of this screen work from a cultural standpoint.

‘‘In advertising his programs at the Playhouse, Wheeler uses direct-by-mail methods to a large extent. Heralds, prepared with exceptional care to bring out the merits of a forthcoming attraction and which classify the production, are sent out. Newspaper displays also are used and these show the same care as to preparation and points of appeal to the specific class of patrons most likely to be interested in the pictures.

‘‘Thursday and Friday nights are usually given over to action plays and a serial episode included for the particular entertainment of the youngsters.

‘‘A point we were curious to be informed about was this: ‘Did the Playhouse in New Canaan lose all the steady patronage built up by the ‘‘shooting gallery’’ which it displaced? What about the old fans?’ we asked. ‘Did they die off, or are they going elsewhere for their entertainment, or has the picture theatre lost them altogether?’ ’’

‘‘We are getting them,’’ said Wheeler. ‘‘If tonight we have a picture they don’t like, tomorrow night we have, and they come out in force. I think I am accurate when I say that they attend the picture theatre as frequently today as they ever did. Indeed, there are good grounds for believing that they attend more frequently.’’

Practically the identical policies of operation obtain at the other houses of the Playhouse Operating Company, save for minor differences due to peculiar local conditions. The New Canaan Playhouse has been cited here because it offers a typical example of the methods of a theatre man who, in several instances, has made money out of pictures which in many quarters are pronounced ‘‘artistic successes but box office flops.’’

All of these theatres are community playhouses in the true sense of the word. Each theatre is operated by a corporation which owns the building and land and receives all profits derived from its individual operation. Each of these four playhouse corporations has from 100 to 150 stockholders in the town in which it is located. And each corporation is guided by a board of directors selected from prominent business men of the community. This unit in each community of some 150 representative persons is of prime importance in any exploitation of a worth-while picture.

The MANAGER’S OFFICE

BERT DE VORE, formerly traveling representative for the Gus Sun-Ackerman-Harris vaudeville circuit, has taken over the lease and management of the Rainbow Theatre in Great Falls, Mont.

J. P. JUNGERS, for the past five years assistant manager of the Oak Park Theatre in Oak Park, Ill., has been promoted to the position of manager to succeed Harry Harmon, who has been transferred to the Lubliner & Trinz Michigan Theatre.

EDWARD WALSH, manager of the Albany Theatre in Schenectady, was this week transferred to the Strand of the same city until such time as the Albany theatre has been renovated and improved.

J. D. O’DONNELL is to be the new manager at the Wakefield and Princess Theatres in Wakefield, Mass., owned by C. W. Hodgdon. He succeeds I. M. Berg.

JACK ROTHSCHILD has been appointed manager of the Princess Theatre at Dubuque, Ia. Rothschild formerly was a film salesman in the Minneapolis territory.

Savannah Theatre Now Is First-Run Picture House

The Savannah Theatre in Savannah, Georgia, managed by Fred G. Weiss, is another legitimate house to be turned into a motion picture theatre.

Adaptation of the Savannah to motion picture purposes has been thoroughly accomplished, a finished orchestra has been engaged, and only first-run pictures are being shown.

The pictures that have so far been played are ‘‘Lady Windermere’s Fan,’’ ‘‘The Freshman,’’ ‘‘The Sea Beast,’’ and ‘‘For Heaven’s Sake,’’ and the size and character of the audiences indicate that the Savannah will take its place as one of the most popular picture theatres in the city.

New Program Draws Capacity at Palace, Cleveland

Keith’s Palace Theatre in Cleveland last week played to big business with the first program of the new policy instituted for the summer months. The Palace offered six acts of vaudeville, a news reel and ‘‘The Volga Boatman’’ as the initial bill. Admissions for matinees are 35 cents and 50 and 75 cents for evenings. Asked whether it is the intention to maintain a combination picture and vaudeville policy at the Palace all year round, Manager John Royal said that in all probability it was a summer policy only.

Three Changes Weekly for Summer at Randolph

A change in policy has been inaugurated at the Randolph Theatre in Chicago. The admission price has been cut to twenty-five cents and the program will be changed three times weekly, instead of every seven days as heretofore. Both first-run pictures and reissues will be shown, the features for the inaugural week of the new policy including ‘‘The Mark of Zorro,’’ ‘‘Dream Street,’’ and ‘‘A Woman of Paris.’’

Court Street Will Re-open with Keith Vaudeville

Michael Shea, President of the Shea Operating Company, was in Buffalo last week and denied rumors that he will turn the Shea Court Street house over to the Shuberts in the fall. He said that the theatre will open again in August with the regular Keith big time vaudeville. Plans now are being drawn for the new Shea Theatre on Main Street, work on which will start in the fall.

Schatt Managing Director of Gowanda Hollywood

John W. Schatt, well known in picture theatre circles, is the managing director of the Hollywood Theatre, recently opened in Gowanda, N. Y. Schatt was the owner of the Gowanda Opera House, which was destroyed by fire in 1924, and for several years has been a prominent figure among the exhibitors of New York State.

Changes Policy for Summer

Bert Botzum, one of Akron’s leading exhibitors, has installed summer policies at both of his houses. The Orpheum will play split-week engagements for three months, and there will be a daily change of program at the Dreamland.

Blank Houses Get Publix Acts in Fall

Unit Shows for New Farnham, Omaha, and Others in Circuit

DES MOINES theatres and others scheduled to be added to the Publix Theatres presentations circuit as a result of the purchase by Publix some months ago of a half interest in the A. H. Blank chain of houses, will come under the new regime in the fall, according to present plans as discussed by Sam Katz during his recent visit in Des Moines.

"Beginning with the opening of the new Farnham Theatre, now under construction in Omaha," Mr. Katz is quoted as stating, "acts under the direction of Publix Theatres will be billed over a definite circuit in all the larger houses under our direction. The Farnham will open about Thanksgiving. From that time on, these de luxe acts will be available to Des Moines and the larger towns on the circuit."

It is said that A. H. Blank and Mr. Katz discussed the expansion of the Publix Theatres chain of houses in Iowa and Nebraska during the conferences which took place while the president of the Publix organization was in Des Moines.

Victor Herbert Music Is Featured at Stanley

Victor Herbert's music was featured at the Stanley in Philadelphia last week as a supplement to the leading photoplay offering, "Mlle. Modiste." The orchestra in addition to playing music from "Modiste," offered as the overture a medley of the most popular of the Herbert compositions. Marie Dermont, lyric soprano, sang the famous "Kiss Me Again."

The stage program offered Vera Fokina in two ballet numbers, "Phoenix," to music by Rimski-Korsakoff, and "The Mountain Queens," with music by Ipolitoff-Ivanoff. Fourteen dancers appeared in these ballets with Madame Fokina.

"Dance Reflections" Stage Feature at Mosque

The Mosque Theatre, Newark, N. J., offered "Dance Reflections," an Albertina Rach ballet as the stage feature on last week's program there. "That's My Baby" was the leading attraction for the week. An added feature which scored successfully was the playing of a Marion Talley record on the Victor Orthophonic Electrola.

The Branford had Al Moore and his U. S. Jazz Band as the stage offering on a program headed by the Raymond Griffith comedy, "Wet Paint."

Ruth Glanville at F. & R. State

Ruth Glanville made her appearance as "America's Premier Saxophonist" at the State Theatre, Minneapolis, last week as the leading stage offering on a bill headed by "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," the Harry Langdon comedy.

Varied Program Presented at Eastman Theatre

"The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," last week's feature at the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, was supplemented with a varied bill of stage and musical offerings. The program opened with the "Romeo and Juliet" overture of Tschaikowsky. A series of Morris dances arranged by Melville Smith was presented next by a group of dancers including Donald Riger, Frank Clement, Alexander Gilfillan, Herbert Inch, Robert Kienast and Norman Peterson.

Another elaborate feature was the Songologue, "A May Night Romance," which introduced a number of popular melodies arranged as a sort of lover's repartee. The songs included "No Foolin'," "Creep Into My Arms," "D'ye Love Me?" "A Cup of Coffee" and "At Peace with the World." This was followed by a presentation of Schumann's "The Two Grenadiers," with John Moncrieff and Mark Daniels as the singers and Allan Burt as the reader.

Lingerie Fashion Pageant Presented at Liberty

A Lingerie Fashion Pageant displayed on 16 living models was the stage attraction last week at the Liberty Theatre in Kansas City. The presentation featured Florence Kinney, "America's Parisian Cyclone." The Liberty made further inducements for patronage at the matinees by serving ice cream and cake free to ladies every afternoon. The leading photoplay offering was "My Old Dutch."

Notable Music and Dance Features at Capitol

A notable program of musical features has been assembled by Major Edward Bowes to supplement "Paris," the screen offering at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, this week.

The Capitol Grand Orchestra is to be heard in "Caucasian Sketches," by Ippolitow Iwanov. The group consists of three numbers, "In the Mountains," "In the Village," and "Procession of the Sardar."

The ballet number is "Chopiniana," with choreography by Chester Hale, to several compositions by Chopin. The spirit of the composer's music has likewise been carried out in the costuming and lighting effects. Albertina Vitak is the solo dancer, assisted by the members of the entire Capitol Ballet Corps.

"College Capers" Staged at Saxe's Wisconsin

"Brown of Harvard" was supplemented with a collegiate presentation at Saxe's Wisconsin last week. The act was titled "College Capers" and presented a cast of 10 in a rollicking revue livened with collegiate pep as exemplified in snappy songs and dances.

The Varsity Spirit carried on in the overture, "College Live," arranged by Rudolph G. Kopp, director of the orchestra, while Arthur Richter and Edmund Fitch at the twin organs featured "College Knowledge." Dorothy Johnson, 5-year-old saxophone soloist, was starred in a special stage presentation.

Lopez Begins Picture House Tour This Week

Vincent Lopez and his orchestra opened his tour of several months as a star attraction at picture theatres this week at Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo. Lopez will play four weeks at the Hippodrome and then go to Detroit to appear at Loew's State there. The tour as presently mapped out will take him to the Pacific Coast.

Turelly in America Presentation

Art Turelly, harmonica virtuoso, was featured in the presentation staged last week at the America Theatre, Denver. He appeared as an added stage attraction with the America's featured musical organization, Henry Trustman and his orchestra.

The Carthay Circle's premiere recently attracted attention of theatre-goers in a district between Los Angeles and Beverly Hills, Cal. In a fashionable neighborhood, Fred Miller's new house opened with Producers Dist. Corp.'s "The Volga Boatman" to a $5. top. Note the unusual type of architecture. (Spanish treatment prevails throughout) A notable gathering of film folks and an elaborate prologue added to the opening night's attractions.

Carthay Opens at Hollywood

Fred Miller Invades Coast's First Run Field with Unique Theatre

ONE of the most brilliant affairs in West Coast theatre circles took place May 18, when Fred Miller invaded the first-run field of Hollywood with the premiere of his Carthay Circle Theatre.

Adhering to his usual policy of doing things on a big scale, Mr. Miller, with the assistance of Jack Laughlin, arranged a special and elaborate prologue, ‘‘Volga,’’ to precede the showing of Cecil De Mille's ‘‘Volga Boatman’’; and although the policy of the new house will be two-a-day with $1.50 top, the Carthay was packed on its opening night with the elite of the district at a $5.00 top.

The Carthay Circle is probably one of the most handsomely appointed theatres on the Pacific Coast; and a brief description of a few of the fixtures are mentioned as an example of the care taken to insure the comfort of its fashionable patronage.

‘‘Each seat,’’ said Mr. Miller, ‘‘cost $20, and they are of surprising richness and comfort, with a covering of soft velour.

‘‘In the Carthay Circle, our architect, with the assistance of my manager, Spencer Levy, has been in charge from pit to dome. They are experts and there is nothing that does not belong, either from a period or artistic standpoint.

‘‘One of the davenports in the lounge-room was made especially after a quaint design of one our architect saw in a chateau in France. It cost $1,000. Two others will reach $750.

‘‘Three long windows on the mezzanine floor are hung with gold brocade, for which we paid $28 a yard.’’

Frank Tenney Johnson, whose wondrous pictures of animals of the West have made him famous, was brought here especially to paint the huge panel canvases representing California scenes of '49.

A mammoth Wurlitzer organ has been installed and one of the best known organists in the country has been chosen to operate the instrument.

A corps of experts handle the more than 3,000 color combinations that are another feature of this theatre.

Under lease to Fred Miller for a number of years, the Carthay Circle is the outcome of a dream of one, J. Harvey McCarthy, who built the house with the idea of paying a lasting tribute to the pioneers of California.

Mr. Miller, head of Far West Theatres Corp., needs no introduction in exhibition circles of the motion picture business, being one of the best known exhibitors on the Coast.

A brilliant gathering of the social and screen world attended the premiere. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Cecil De Mille, Jack Pickford, Robert Vignola, Jeanie McPherson, Robert Edeson, Julia Faye, Anna Q. Nillson, May McAvoy, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Goldwyn, Richard Barthelmess, Lew Cody and Theodore Kosloff. Mr. Cody acted as master of ceremonies.

The Carthay Circle has a seating capacity of 1,800 and Mr. Miller is to be congratulated on having what is said to be one of the most unique theatres in the entire country.

Southern Amusement Leases Danville, Va., House

A. C. Conway, one of the property owners within the fire gutted section of Main Street, Danville, Va., has announced that he will rebuild the burned Bijou Theatre. It will be twice the size of the former and will have a seating capacity for 900 persons. An architect is now drawing sketches and the contract will be let at the first opportunity. J. C. Hester has announced that the Southern Amusement Company will take a ten-year lease on the playhouse.

Plan Theatre at Champaign, Ill.

Talk is current in Champaign, Ill., of the erection of a new theatre for moving pictures, to be built near the campus of the University of Illinois. Local theatres draw upon the students continually, and it is believed that a metropolitan playhouse near the student centers would be a profitable venture. Prominent business men, it is said, have been considering the project for some time.

The little more

The feature picture, the musical accompaniment, the supplementary attractions on the program—are of course of utmost box office importance.

But it's the little more that makes your theatre different—photographic quality on the screen, for example. When the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film the photography of the negative is saved for your patrons to enjoy. And that's of importance at the box office, too.

Prints on Eastman have the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in the transparent margin. Look for it.

Inquiries and Comments

"It May Be So,—"

JOHN E. WOODLAND, who, according to his letterhead, is a licensed electrician in Richmond Hill, Long Island, comes forward flat-footedly and takes exception to some statements we made in the March 20th issue wherein a recent invention in the form of a camera attachment for taking stereoscopic pictures plus a few other startling things was discussed, commentary fashion.

It seems to us that we doubted the possibility of any sample camera attachment to give stereoscopic pictures in a theatre without the use of auxiliary devices in the theatre itself.

Friend Woodland who, by the way, is evidently engaged as a projectionist just now, says, however, that we are mistaken. Furthermore, he claims he can prove it if we will take the trouble to step over to the Willard Theatre, Jamaica Avenue and 96th Street, Woodhaven, L. I., any evening except Thursday—that evening being reserved solely for the purpose of selling his pleasing personality to some fair young maid.

This is merely a surmise on our part since we have nothing except purely circumstantial evidence to support it.

Something New?

However that may be—or may not be—the subject up for discussion is stereoscopic pictures in motion picture theatres via the camera attachment route.

Friend Woodland argues in this fashion:

Dear Sir:—I read the article in the March 20th issue on stereoscopic pictures and I would like to say that I am very interested in this subject. Do you believe that it can be done? You may say no, but I say yes (Friend Woodland was very emphatic in his affirmation—Ed.) because for the past 15 years I have dug into it and can show wonderful results. Am still plugging away at it.

I also claim an attachment for cameras, at least, any kind of a camera, can even produce stereoscopic effects right in the booth where I am now working. Furthermore, this attachment works to a "T".

Anxious to Meet

I would like to meet you, or if you are at any time near the Willard Theatre, one of our Loew's houses, at Jamaica Avenue and 96th Street, Woodhaven, Long Island, come up to see me. Any night except Thursday, as I am off that day. (Aha! the girl! —Ed.)

If you can come over, you will see something you never saw before, and will tell you just a little about my stereoscopic stuff. I don't merely think I have it, but I really have it, and that's saying a whole lot.

Here is another one of mine: Would film burn on 120 amperes? That is, stop the film when it is in the projector and let the light rays from the condenser of a 120 ampere arc outfit strike it full. Would it burn?

Come over and see me. Let me know what night you are coming and I'll try to be ready to show you the works. In the meantime, I'll see my patent attorney in order to find out whether I am safe enough in demonstrating it. If not, we'll have a good talk anyhow and it will be worthwhile. I thank you.

An Apology

First off, Friend Woodland, let me offer an humble apology for not responding more quickly to your kind invitation to look over your outfit and avail myself of the opportunity for a friendly pow-wow concerning projection in general. The fact of the matter is that it was just physically impossible for me to see you. I believe you will agree with me when you receive the letter I am sending you now. Friend Woodland's letter is dated April 21st, but we have been unable to do anything about it until now. However, that matter will be soon adjusted.

An Old Subject

This matter of stereoscopic motion pictures is indeed an old one. So you think you have something really worth while? Well, if that is the case and you are certain that you are not misleading yourself, our advice is to hug it pretty tightly because a true stereoscopic effect, easily obtainable, or, what is more important, one which does not involve any effort on the part of the patrons, is indeed a valuable find.

A number of stereoscopic schemes have been brought to light but so far all have failed in a commercial sense because every one involved work on the part of the theatre's patrons and that was too tiresome and awkward a method.

Any scheme, to be practical, must avoid this and must do its work primarily by means of equipment in the projection room.

As for a camera attachment which will give true stereoscopic pictures without being further supplemented by auxiliary equipment, that is a will-o'-the-wisp which has been chased about fruitlessly for many years. So far without success.

Partly Possible

A certain measure of depth can be imparted to the flat picture on a screen providing certain fundamental laws of photography be observed but the effect so obtained is purely an illusion and is not nearly so pronounced as is desirable.

For that matter, though, stereoscopic pictures are themselves an illusion since no depth actually exists in the case of the screen picture. However, in true form, the illusion is so perfect as to cause one to think it possible to reach out and touch each individual object pictured on the screen.

Light Without Heat

As for letting the concentrated beam from a 120 ampere arc lamp strike squarely on a piece of stationary film without setting it afire, Friend Woodland, that too is an old problem, which, so far at least, has never been satisfactorily solved.

If you are doing it, it is a pretty safe bet that some kind of heat absorbing element is being used. The idea of light without undue heat has, in the case of motion pictures, been attacked in a number of ways.

Heat Absorbs

The water cell, so far, has been the most commonly used method but is generally considered unsatisfactory because of its cumbersomeness. Then, too, it is not so very effective since it absorbs a great deal of light. Along with these efforts attempts have also been made to find a form of heat-absorbing glass, a notable case being the invention of a special gold plated glass by a Johns Hopkins University professor. For some reason this never found a wide affiliation due, no doubt, to the fact that the gold-plating was not durable.

Now recently, the Spencer Lens Company of Buffalo, N. Y., brought out a neutral colored heat absorbing glass for which it was claimed that approximately 75 per cent of the heat with only 25 per cent light was absorbed.

These represent only the more notable examples. We do not know whether the Spencer Lens Company's product has been perfected and if so, what commercial success it has enjoyed. A year or two ago it attracted considerable interest. We have lost track of it since then.

Get Busy

With this brief resume at hand, Friend Woodland, you should be able to judge better of the merits of your own schemes and our best advice to you is, that is if you really think you have something worthwhile along either of these lines, not to let the grass grow under your feet, but get busy and attempt to ascertain the value of the devices you have.

It is barely possible that the writer will be able to call on you in person to look over your devices, but if not and you desire further advice we will do what we can to assist you.

A little more information, however, would be appreciated since crystal gazing involves too much of a strain.

If you have not yet applied for a patent it is a simple enough matter to protect yourself. Your patent attorney will give you the necessary instructions for so doing.

Camera Tricks Cut Production Cost

Ingenious Methods Used by Photographer to Gain Novel Effects Described by Cinema Expert

By Carl Louis Gregory, F. R. P. S., Dean, New York Institute of Photography

(Paper presented before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.)

(Concluded in this issue)

LET me outline roughly into a sort of general classification the various methods by which the trick photographer builds up his effects:

First we have the basic standard of straight cinematography, which consists of a series of frames or pictures taken at the approximate speed of sixteen exposures per second.

Second, high-speed or slow-motion photography, in which the taking rate is considerably increased. For the laws governing the taking of miniatures by high-speed photography to simulate action in the tempo of natural sized objects I refer you to the very excellent paper by J. A. Ball, entitled "Theory of Mechanical Miniatures in Cinematography," presented before the Society at Roscoe, New York, May, 1924, and published in the Transactions of the Society.

Decrease of Speed

Third, time condensation or decreasing the taking speed to such an extent that movements which take place slowly and over so long a period of time as to be imperceptible to the human eye are made to appear to occur in a few seconds. This method is commonly used for showing the growth of plants, the germination of seeds, the erection or demolition of structures, etc. Slow cranking at slightly diminished speed is used to increase the speed of actors' movements for comedy effects and to speed up action in fights, races, and dramatic climaxes.

Fourth, trick crank or one-picture turn. This is closely related to time condensation. The trick crank shaft is the one usually used for making time condensation exposures. The name "trick crank" comes down from the early days of cinematography because the single exposure shaft was often employed in making many of the trick effects mentioned in the first paragraphs of this paper.

Animated Cartoons

Animated cartoons and diagrams are made by means of the trick crank and are, of course, trick photography. Nevertheless, in ciné nomenclature animated diagrams and cartoons are a classification separate from that of trick photography and, while most of the devices used by the animated cartoonist are also used in trick photography, the subject is too large to be treated in this paper. To those interested in the subject I refer them to the very able volume by E. G. Lutz, entitled "Animated Cartoons," published by Scribners.

The difference in time condensation and trick-crank work is in the interval of the timing. In time condensation the interval is predetermined by the length of time in which it is expedient to show the resulting film. In trick-crank work the successive phases of movement are artificially produced between exposure intervals so that inanimate objects may appear to be endowed with auto-motive powers. The time of exposure interval is therefore dependent on the time necessary to arrange the subjects into the successive phases of the simulated action.

The prehistoric monsters in the "Lost World" were simply jointed models. Every move of every joint and limb had to be thought out beforehand and a calculation of the amount of movement which would occur in each succeeding phase of one-sixteenth of a second if the model were an actual animal with the bulk and ponderosity of several elephants.

Fifth, reverse camera, or the showing of the series pictures of a motion analysis in reverse order. The effects produced by this method are too well known to describe them.

Sixth, simple devices or attachments used mainly to alter the size and shape of the screen opening. These consist of masks or mattes of opaque or translucent material which either vignette the edges of the picture or produce silhouetted openings to enhance the illusion of scenes which are supposed to be observed through an archway, a keyhole, a telescope, binoculars or other familiar orifice. Previous papers presented before the Society describe these devices in detail.

Seventh, stop camera and substitute which is one of the oldest and most familiar of trick devices. It was and is used mainly for magic appearances and disappearances. It consists in stopping the action and camera simultaneously and placing or removing the objects which are to appear or disappear. This was effectively used by Douglas Fairbanks in the production of the magic army in the "Thief of Bagdad."

The Fade and Dissolve

Eighth, the fade and dissolve. This is similar to stop camera, but is a gradual instead of an abrupt change. It is produced by diminishing the exposure to zero and then running the film back to the commencement of the reduced exposure and fading in or increasing the second exposure at the same rate as the previous one was reduced, thus giving full exposure to objects which remained in the scene during the fade in and out, but gradually introducing or extinguishing the image undergoing the magical change.

Announce $250,000 Project At Union, N. J.

Community growth in New Jersey is again reflected in the recent announcement by the Falls Realty Company of Newark, in their proposal to erect a $250,000 theatre and store building at Stuyvesant and Morris Avenues, Union, N. J.

The theatre will occupy a plot with frontages of 511 feet on Stuyvesant Avenue and 210 feet on Morris Avenue. Plans were drawn in the office of William E. Lehman, architect, who has entire supervision of the project.

The facade will be a combination of face brick and terra cotta. There will be seven stores and twelve suites of offices. The theater lobby will be located on Stuyvesant Avenue, within 100 feet of the corner. This lobby will be spacious and will lead to an auditorium seating 1,250. The theatre will be equipped with a stage and dressing rooms so that any kind of production can be given.

Interior decoration will be in Adam style, and an oval dome, 50 feet long and 30 feet wide, will form the ceiling. An up-to-date ventilating system will provide a complete change of air throughout the house every five minutes.

Rialto, Chattanooga, To Be Entirely Remodeled

Approximately $75,000 will be spent to remodel the Rialto Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., according to H. C. Perutz, manager. Mr. Perutz stated recently that the entire theatre will be rebuilt, including a new seating arrangement, which will make seats more comfortable. With the new seating, orders have been placed for new carpets, rugs and tapestries, new electrical equipment, new screen and new projection booth. The balcony will be rebuilt altogether with better seat arrangement.

Another improvement promised by Perutz is an entirely new ladies' rest room. New doors will be swung at every entrance.

It is the plan, after the completion of the new stage, to put on prologue musical numbers from time to time. This will be an innovation to Rialto patrons, who have seen nothing but pictures in the theatre since the days when it was the old Majestic with vaudeville offerings.

Freihofer Buys Site at Haddonfield, N. J.

William Freihofer, President of Freihofer Baking Company, has purchased a site on Kings Highway, Haddonfield, N. J., for the erection of a motion picture theatre which will have a seating capacity of 1,600.

The ground secured has an irregular width of 34 feet frontage, 80 feet width at the rear, with a total depth of 240 feet. The plot adjoins the Community House.

William Freihofer, in addition to his gigantic baking interest, has been a builder of motion picture theatres for some time past and now operates eleven other theatres, his largest one being the Frankford Theatre in Philadelphia. His Haddonfield venture marks his first appearance as a movie magnate in Jersey.

The opening of the Ritz Theatre, Houston, Tex., marks a new era for that city. It will cater to family trade at popular prices. Fittings and accoutrements are of the finest Permit Issued at San Jose, Cal.

A permit was issued recently by the Building Inspector for the new $250,000 West Coast Theatres, Incorporated, building on South First Street, San Jose, Cal., and the driving of piles will soon begin according to those in charge of the construction work.

The excavation work has been completed and the pile driving machinery has been set up, ready to begin.

The building, which will be one of the finest of the West Coast chain, will be three stories in height. Construction work will be rushed as rapidly as possible, it was announced.

West Coast Inc. to Build Another

West Coast Theatres, Inc., announce that construction will be under way soon on a brick theatre and store building at 2300 Central Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal. Plans for the structure include an auditorium to seat 1,700 persons, a lobby and two shops. The lot is 100 by 15 feet. Cost of the building is estimated at $60,000.

Rebuild Theatre at Parsons, Kans.

Announcement was made yesterday that William Courtright, owner of the Palace Theatre at Parsons, Pa., expects to rebuild the Motion Picture Theatre at a cost of $45,000. The theatre was built eighteen years ago by Thomas Lewis, who operated it as a playhouse for twelve years. About six years ago it was taken over by Mr. Courtright.

Lease Theatre in Bronx, N. Y. City

The Bronx National Realty Corporation, composed of A. Selkin, J. Tully and D. Mintz, have leased the theatre in the course of construction on the block front on Allerton Avenue, between Holland and Cruger Avenues, New York City. The plot measures 200x108 feet.

Plans call for a 1,500 seat theatre with a structural condition arranged for 3,000 seats.

Trick Photography's Clever Methods

Multiple Exposure

Ninth, double or multiple exposure. By this device dual roles can be played by a single actor. It consists of masking off a portion of the picture frame and making one exposure, then winding the film back to the beginning and masking the first exposure while the second one is made on the remaining unexposed portion of the frame. The frame may be divided in this manner as many times as is necessary to product the effects desired. I have made multiple exposures where the film was run through the camera twenty-six times. Dual roles, visions and ghostly apparitions are produced by this method. Masks are not usually used for ghost effects. The first exposure without the ghost is made in the normal manner and the ghost, dressed in light-colored clothing, is exposed over the first record by posing the ghost actor against a black drop or shadow box. The details of the first exposure register through the shadows of the ghost outline and give it the shadowy or spiritual quality which ghosts are supposed to possess. The chief difficulties in double exposure work are in the synchronization of action and the matching or blending of the edges of the masked sections so that the line of demarkation is indistinguishable.

Glass Work

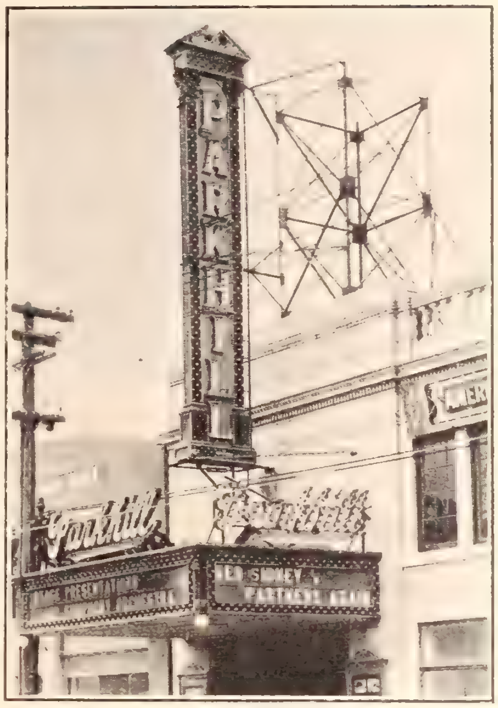
Tenth, glass work, which is a variety of simultaneous double exposure. The term "glass work" originated because the first examples of this work were accomplished by painting portions of scenes on large sheets of plate glass. A piece of plate glass a little larger than the field of view of the lens at 10 or 12 feet from the camera is placed in a rigid frame parallel to the front of the camera. The field of action as viewed by the camera lens is left clear and no painting is done on this portion of the glass. Any section of the remaining portion of the picture composition, however, can be masked out and replaced by a painting, in accordance with the laws of perspective, of any kind of background or foreground that the production may require. With the use of this device it is necessary to build only such portions of a set as is required to form a background for the action while the remaining portion is supplied by the painting on the glass.

"Cheaters"

These pieces of glass work are called "cheaters" in the movie studios. Hardly any better term could be devised for these pieces of glass on which the "enormous" sets are painted, for they are cheaters in every sense of the word and their cheating is tremendously effective.

When gazing at a vast and beautiful castle with serrated battlements or a lofty cathedral interior as shown on the screen, don't imagine that it has been built from top to bottom of wood and plaster. The actual set is often only ten or twelve feet high and everything above that is painted on glass or beaver board.

The ordinary two-inch ciné objective lens at distances beyond ten feet is almost universal in focus; this brings the entire picture in focus and does not blur the painting even though it is close to the lens and the set is far away.



The attractive sign that shows the way to the newest playhouse in Yonkers, N. Y., was installed by Murphy & Brode. Chrystmos & Eldridge operate the Parkhill

A painted cheater can be used from only one viewpoint, and by one camera. By use of miniature models built to scale almost any number of different set-ups may be made, but extreme care must be used in lining up the model with the actual set which it completes. In the "Hunchback of Notre Dame" the picture shows a full-size reproduction of the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris, and yet the actual construction of the set was only to the top of the entrance doors, the upper portion being supplied with glass work and miniature models.

Simultaneous Exposure

Eleventh, simultaneous double exposure by means of mirrors and prisms. This is a reversal of the means by which two identical images are made with one lens in the color cameras. By this reversal two images may be superimposed and photographed on the same frame simultaneously, and as the two images may be independently focused, much smaller models and paintings may be utilized than in the glass work process. It is even possible to use a motion picture, previously taken, for the background of the new composite, so that actors in the studio may be shown amid the waving palms of a background photographed in the Sahara desert. This method has lately been heralded as a wonderful German invention under the name of the Schuefftan process but is antedated by several American users, among whom are David Horsely, J. Searle Dawley and myself.

Twelfth, double printing, which consists of making a composite negative by duping from two or more specially prepared positives and masking devices or in making a special positive from two or more negatives and then duping the result. This corresponds in principle to multiple exposure in the camera. It is usually used to superimpose dark images on high lighted areas, a thing which is difficult to do in the camera.

Traveling Matte

Thirteenth, the traveling matte. By this process figures in action may be superimposed against any background without being necessary to build any sets at all. It requires very accurate mechanism to work it and is patented. It is sometimes called the Williams process from the name of the patentee, Frank Williams. It consists in photographing the action against a white background. By over exposure and intensification a silhouette of the action forms a mask or traveling matte which is interposed between the printing light and the background negative while a print is made from it. This positive film is then run through the printing machine a second time in register with the action negative, thus printing in the details of the acting figures. From this double print a dupe negative is made for further printing. The silhouette print masks the places occupied by the action figures and the original action negative has a dense black ground which masks the background negative image when making the master positive.

Separate Controls

Fourteenth, projection printing with separate positive and negative control. In this process the printing is not done by contact as in the ordinary printing machine but by projecting the image from the negative onto the positive. The movement of the negative and positive films is controlled by separate mechanisms so that by manipulation of the controls any combination of the negative action series can be recorded in consecutive order on the positive film. The action on the original negative can thus be stopped, accelerated, retarded or reversed on the positive and by multiple masking and printing several successive phases of action of the same moving figure may be shown on the screen simultaneously. Max Fleischer and Alvin Knechtal are exponents of this process.

Fifteenth, mechanical devices operated independently and not connected mechanically with the operation of photography or printing have not been considered as coming within the province of this paper. They are too numerous to even attempt their listing. It should be said in this connection, however, that the trick photographer leaves no stone unturned in seeking to produce the desired effect and any device which lends itself to his use is considered his legitimate ally.

Plan New Theatre at Orange, N. J.

The Baldwin Construction Company has purchased the southwest corner of Central Avenue and Centre Street, Orange, N. J., where the erection of a modern motion picture theatre is contemplated. The plan provides for a theatre and store building of the highest type of construction. The plot fronts 250 feet on Central Avenue and 167 feet on Centre Street.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Silence"—Times Square Theatre, New York City

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: "'Silence' is by all odds the best screen melodrama of the year."

Daily News: "No movie-goer will treat himself to an evening of finer entertainment than by seeing 'Silence,' a drama of power and intensity. H. B. Warner, in the role of Jim Warner, gentleman crook, does the most realistic acting of the kind that I have seen upon the screen."

Evening Graphic: "Mr. Warner created the role in the theatre and his picture performance is second only to the account of himself he gave on the stage, which indeed was flawless. His portrayal of the crook who is capable of sacrifice is vivid, gripping and convincing. . . . 'Silence' is a gripping crook melodrama with some tense mystery moments. Director Rupert Julian evidently had a good script and followed it. Put 'Silence' on your list of 'pictures to see.'"

Evening World: "H. B. Warner's performance in 'Silence' at the Times Square Theatre is too fine to miss. It is one of the finished achievements of motion pictures."

Herald Tribune: "Mr. Warner is even more effective than he was on the stage. Nobody should miss this picture. 'Silence' is golden."

Sun: "The play's transference to the cinema is accomplished by extraordinarily clever telescoping of its various scenes and acts. Must be set down as one of the most effective productions of the year. It held its audience throughout and as its last scene faded from view it was greeted with a spontaneous round of applause."

Times: "A decidedly effective melodrama which is exceedingly well directed."

World: "H. B. Warner, its original star, gives one of the strongest, most beautiful and most moving performances which I have seen on the screen in a year. Aside from the work of Renee Adoree and John Gilbert in 'The Big Parade,' there is nothing in New York in the way of individual portrayals to be compared with the masterful contribution by this fine actor. Let us say that this is one of the things not to be missed in anybody's program of entertainment in this town."

"Why Girls Go Back Home"—Warners Theatre, New York City

American: "Before seeing it I wondered why Warners' Theatre billed this picture as a comedy. The title sounded like one of those familiar melodramas in which Our Nell wanders home weeping to her cement-hearted father. Then the Warners proved themselves right. 'Why Girls Go Back Home' doesn't take either itself or any of its characters any too seriously."

Journal: "Brook, billed as the personal answer to a maiden's prayer, gives a good characterization, and Patsy acts sufficiently naive. Myrna Loy is attractive in a small role and the idea of the plot is amusing."

Telegraph: "Both the screen and the stage have been a source of enlightenment as to 'Why Men Leave Home' and 'Why Girls Leave Home' but it took Warner Bros. to remove the shadow of doubt regarding the return of girls to their parental domiciles. All in all, the picture is interesting and entertaining."

Evening World: "The result is a bright, sparkling and semi-sophisticated picture that pokes fun at the very kind of picture it started out to be. There is not a particle of the preachiness of the original, and it offers real acting opportunities to Patsy Ruth Miller and Clive Brook, who are about 90 per cent of the show. Jane Winton and Myrna Loy figure in the chorus girl parts that permit the introduction of some bright and appropriate wise-cracking titles."

Post: "'Why Girls Go Back Home,' is really a rather clever little tale, with Clive Brook at his best as the idol, and Patsy Ruth Miller good enough as a small-towner in New York. A convincing performance is also contributed by Myrna Loy, a young lady who enjoys the distinction of not looking like everybody else as a chorus girl."

Times: "As this current picture has been produced with a keen sense of humor, it is deserving of a loftier, or at least a more conservative title. Miss Miller gives a really clever characterization of Marie. She blossoms from an unsophisticated lass into a dazzling actress with agreeable sincerity in the respective chapters. Mr. Brook is natural and convincing in the role of Dudley."

Telegram: "There is plenty of good movie material in the story. Patsy Ruth Miller flutters through the leading role in a fairly pleasing way, and Clive Brook, who plays opposite, shows flashes of real intelligence. That attractive young person, Myrna Loy, does some of the best work in the picture in the minor role of a chorus girl."

"The Volga Boatmen"—Carthy Circle, Los Angeles, California

Examiner: "A drama of sterling character and undeniable substance. I have seldom seen anything more impressive than the weary boatmen pulling their load up the Volga. William Boyd's delineation of the cynical, bitter young boatman is one of the finest studies in character I have ever seen on the screen. Where has Julia Faye been all my life? As the thieving gypsy she emerges in a new character, a comedienne with a surprising ability. De Mille has made a picture that should keep them standing in line."

Evening Express: "The most sincere, artistic and significant thing that De Mille has ever done. It is a fine, able, beautiful and suspensive tale. There are photographic shots that are among the most memorable for beauty ever put on the screen. Boyd's performance lifts him to front rank among actors of silent drama. Julia Faye scores heavily and Kosloff stands out strongly. Varconi is not behind them and the whole relation of the story boarders on brilliance."

Evening Herald: "A story that pulses with dramatic interest and suspense, such as only De Mille can obtain. A mighty drama of the Russian revolution."

Times: "In colorful story values 'The Volga Boatman' greatly exceeds any of De Mille's recent pictures. It is a very compelling achievement and will doubtless enjoy a wide vogue of success. Boyd will prove the outstanding favorite. He gives a pretentious vigor and virility to the role which commands attention. Faye is very lovely heroine."

"The Black Pirate" — United Artists, Tremont, Boston

Daily Advertiser: "The story is rollicking romance and so exciting that the spectators rise to cheer its most thrilling moments. The film might be a series of vivid paintings, ever changing and ever colorful. Add to this the fact that no screen play has ever shown faster action and less padding, and 'The Black Pirate' becomes one of the events of the season."

MIRABILE AUDITU

NOW! Within the Price-reach of Smaller Theatres Also

If all of the theatres in which Kilgens are being played were assembled on one highway, it would make the greatest amusement center in the world.

$3800

You can now get a Kilgen two-manual theatre organ for this amazing price. This size instrument is now being installed in a number of theatres where pipe organ music had heretofore been out of price-reach of the owners.

$4600

Many owners are getting the next sized Kilgen theatre organ....the Kilgen Cinema-Tone for a small additional outlay. Write for particulars about both organs.

THE same pipe organ music quality and publicity value that heretofore have been enjoyed only by great motion picture theatres is now available to theatres of smaller communities. At last, the "Voice of the Silent Drama," as developed only by The Kilgen, is within the price-range of moderate sized pocket-books.

During almost three centuries of organ building—75 years in this country—Kilgen has hewed to the principle that pipe organ size should never influence tone quality, the inclusion of the latest musical developments and length of service. A Kilgen is always a Kilgen, regardless of size.

Kilgen is now building pipe organs that bring "The Voice of the Silent Drama" to those smaller theatres where the value pipe organ music is appreciated and where the finest of it is demanded.

"I use HOCKADAY in all my theatres"

—JOHN EBERSON

Wherever polychrome, gold leaf, and other costly decorative treatment enters lavishly into the plans of the better class showhouse, Hockaday is usually specified as the undercoat. Between plaster and final embellishment Hockaday acts as a "coast defense." It stops limeburn, air-checking and suction, saving the delicate decorations. In this field, especially, Hockaday has established a reputation as the paint that brings down up-keep.

The following Theatres, representing the accommodations for over half of Chicago's Theatre goers, are Hockadayed:

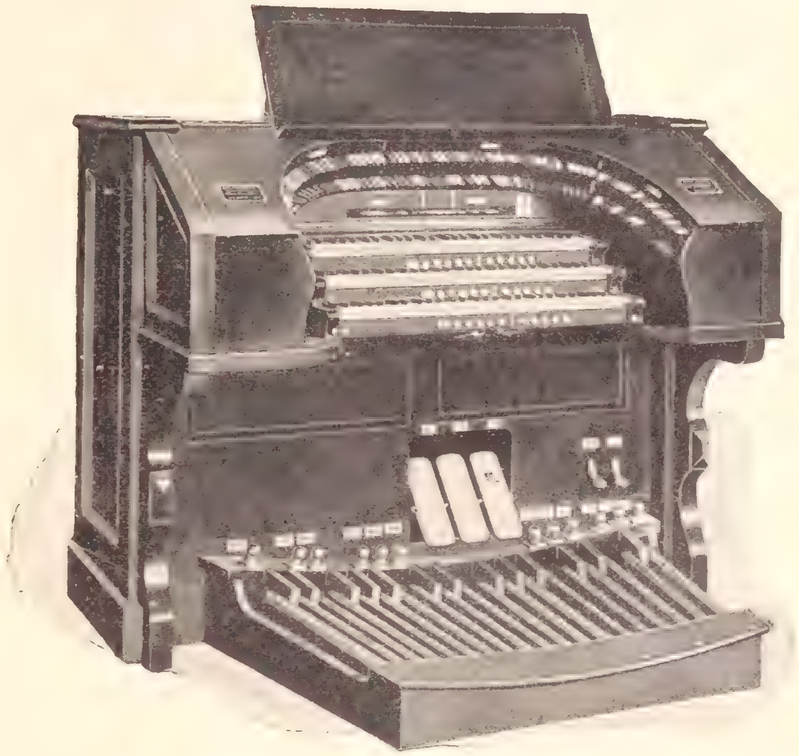
Link—C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organs have proved themselves the most satisfactory instruments yet built for motion picture theatres.

They incorporate many new and exclusive features that make them definitely superior for theatre usage.

This view shows the console of the most complete three-manual organ ever built for motion picture theatres. Ask for specification.



Performance that Counts

THE Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organ is unusual—it is designed by an artist and constructed especially to fulfill the needs of theatres by a manufacturer who has been building musical instruments for three generations. This better theatre organ is to-day helping more and more exhibitors build a steady clientele—a patronage that prefers a theatre because of the quality of its music.

Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organs incorporate all the latest developments of organ design. And many new features that are exclusive with Link-C. Sharpe Minor instruments. Tonal quality, responsiveness and flexibility of expression super-imposed upon a basic rugged construction—these are the inherent characteristics that make Link organs definitely superior for theatre use.

It is performance that counts—and Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organs are leading the way. Here is an instrument that every progressive exhibitor should know about. To those who appreciate the requirements of a real theatre organ, Link-C. Sharpe Minor Unit Organs will be a revelation.

Just send the attached coupon and we will gladly tell you many more details about these organs.

LIGHTING S&A FIXTURES

SILVERSHEET

KNOBEL-BUILT

When buying a new screen, ask these three questions—

Reflecting Arc light is wonderfully bright, and the screen, to conform, requires a special color tone.

Mazda Light being comparatively weak requires a screen having an exceptionally brilliant finish.

Regular Arc is somewhat stronger than Mazda, and the screen color tone is a blend between the Mazda and Reflecting Arc finishes.

High Intensity projection is exceptionally brilliant, and to eliminate glare, a special conforming surface is required.

Is it built to specifications?

This is of prime importance to insure good projection results under any particular condition. Each SILVERSHEET is individually constructed to meet specified requirements.

Who makes it?

Screen building is not a mechanical process, but is an art, and the success or failure depends upon the ability of the finisher. Every SILVERSHEET is personally finished by J. Otto Knobel, the world's foremost screen finisher, and each of his screens has the benefit of his knowledge and experience.

Am I assured of satisfaction?

After all is said and done—this question is the vital one, for the success of the screen depends upon the satisfaction it gives. Every Knobel built to specification SILVERSHEET is absolutely guaranteed to give satisfactory results. Write for further details . . . Now!

Remember . . . to get a genuine KNOBEL BUILT Screen you must get a

Kilgen Wonder Organ

Three Centuries Acclaim It!

Must your new pipe organ be one that is well-made,—soundly built to serve faithfully. Kilgen Organs have been living up to their promises since 1640 A.D. Three centuries of exclusive organ building is the age heritage of this world-known instrument. Is this not an eloquent testimony to Kilgen quality?

Hundreds of Artists Acclaim It!

Organ artists both here and abroad, including the world's virtuosi, not only recommend the Kilgen; but many of them insist upon it to properly express their talents. Among these are eminent exponents of the Unit Double-Touch instruments in the largest theatres and auditoriums. . . . Here you have the artists' testimony to Kilgen tone beauty.

Millions of Listeners Acclaim It!

Of course you want the pipe organ you install to be well received by your townspeople. The name, Kilgen, is known wherever pipe organ music is known. Kilgen music is daily broadcasted over the air to millions. In more than a thousand edifices the Kilgen has won friends. A Kilgen in your theatre will win new friends and strengthen old ones.

Better Projection

At Less Cost

Incandescent lamp projection is adaptable to any theatre having a seating capacity up to 1000 and a throw not exceeding 120 feet. It gives better results than an alternating current arc and under average working conditions is the equal of a direct current 50 ampere arc.

The incandescent lamp operates on half as much current and this 50% saving soon pays for all necessary equipment.

There are no fumes, dust or excessive heat from an incandescent lamp and when once adjusted it requires no further attention. Operating conditions are greatly improved.

The new 900 watt Edison MAZDA Lamp for motion picture projection has a longer average life and gives a higher intensity of light. It is stronger and of much improved construction. See this new lamp at your supply dealers or write for full description to Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Harrison, N. J.

EDISON MAZDA LAMPS

A GENERAL ELECTRIC PRODUCT

For Every Lighting Need

With the new inside frost Edison MAZDA Lamps you can have better lighting in every department of your theatre at no additional cost. These new lamps have all the advantages of both clear and outside frosted lamps; are better looking than any other type of lamp made, and they sell at clear lamp prices.

For the Lobby

Where color lighting is desired the new inside frost colored lamps are highly recommended. The frosting on the inside diffuses the light and gives an evenness of color that cannot be obtained from the old style lamps. If you do your own dipping of lamps you will get much better results from the new lamps than you will from clear lamps.

For the Stage

The new lamps are better for stage lighting. They so diffuse light that all undesirable shadows are eliminated from the background of the stage. They banish the glare that has always been an objectionable feature of stage lighting with clear lamps. And these advantages are obtained without any sacrifice of light.

For the Auditorium

To appreciate the advantages of the new lamps over old types you have only to make this test. Equip two identical fixtures, one with an inside frost lamp and another with a clear lamp. Notice the tonal quality of the light from each, the appearance of the fixture itself and the amount of light emitted. Try the new lamps also in fixtures having transparent shades. You will agree that the new lamps are superior to all other types for any lighting purpose.

For the lighting of any department of the theatre the new lamps are unequalled by any other type of lamp made. They are obtainable in sizes ranging from 25 to 100 watt, from your supply dealer or from any Edison MAZDA Lamp Agent.

MAJOR EQUIPMENT is practical theatre equipment, because it is designed by one of America's foremost theatre lighting engineers. Every need, every demand was carefully tabulated and considered before a design was originated. Major Equipment is built of standardized ever-wearing parts. Made to last. Made to withstand more than ordinary abuse. An investment in Major Equipment is a step toward better theatre lighting. The Major line is complete.

SIGNS

JOHN EBERSON, "the grand old man" of renderings that are different and finer in theatre technique, relies entirely upon the designing abilities of the special Theatre Department of LU-MI-NUS to co-ordinate the Electric Signs with the theatre facia.

How grotesque an intricate terra-cotta front and an elegant, carefully planned interior can be made, by an electric sign and canopy that have no architectural relation.

LU-MI-NUS being pioneers in the theatre sign field and the originators of "rigid hung" installations, are consulted by practically every architect when the "sign problem" arises.

LU-MI-NUS Gold Bevel Letters, such as are used so extensively by the better theatres for interchangeable attraction boards and canopy announcers, have practically solved the letter breakage problem.

ATMOSPHERE–COLOR–TEXTURE

I have used tons and tons of Craftex in most of my atmospheric theatres with great success. The photo of the New Olympia Theatre, Miami, Florida, shows the excellent results obtained from its use

JOHN EBERSON, Architect

THROUGH its use by Eberson & Eberson and other great theatre architects Craftex has proved itself both artistically and economically to be the ideal material for the interior decoration of theatres.

With it limitless textures of character and color are possible. Applied by painters, stone and plasterlike effects can be obtained that heretofore have been too costly for theatre use.

Craftex is sanitary and permanent. It will adhere to any surface to which paint can be applied. Applied over rough coat plaster the cost of the white coat and the time waiting for it to dry can be saved.

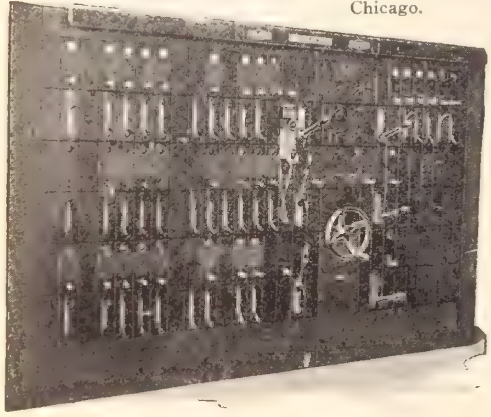
Equipped



One of the most beautiful of recent built theaters is the new Grand Riviera Theater, Detroit, Michigan, designed by Mr. John Eberson, Architect. It is equipped with an FA Major System.

Wherever better theaters are built FA Major Systems are installed. For who would visualize a theater of splendorous architecture without equally appointed lighting effects. And such effects can only be secured through the most flexible of controls — the FA Major System, of course.

To the engineer and architect who build better theaters, a most highly personalized service is offered. It is the FA Major Service, a consulting help that results in the very highest type of correct theater lighting. Many have availed themselves of this service. It is also at your command.

Complete data and full estimates may be had entirely free of cost or obligations.

Unusual and charming interiors are to be found in all of Mr. Eberson's houses. No photograph can do full justice to the beautiful Grand Riviera.

The New Paramount Theatre Will Have Two Cooling Towers

As pa rt of a modern air refrigerating system the new Paramount Theare will be equipped with two of our ornamental type cooling towers.

With theatres all over the country installing air refrigerating sysems the question of upkeep costs naturally deserves consideration.
n recooling the circulating water used for the condensers of a rerigerating system, a cooling tower saves enough in water bills to eturn its original cost several times over a period of years.

In choosing the cooling equipment for your theatre make sure it inludes a cooling tower built by The Cooling Tower Company, Inc. It
; your guarantee that plenty of cool water will always be available or your refrigeration system, that there will be no repairs or shut-owns later on, that the system you have selected is correctly lesigned. Architects and owners should send for the facts.

Carrier Engineering Corporation,

NEWARK, N. J.

Dear Sirs:-

At the request of your Erecting Engineer, Mr. Queen, I have examined the Refrigeration Apparatus and find same in very good shape.

I understand you need Mr. Queen at St. Petersburg, and this will be your authority to take him from this job, with the understanding, that in the event of trouble, we can recall him on short notice.

Your contract calls for sixty days. The theatre was opened on February 18th, but we are relieving your man at this date, due to the excellent running condition this machine is in and the thorough instructions he has given the permanent Operating Engineer.

The entire system has given very good satisfaction and especially to-day, with high humidity and temperature the inside of the theatre is very comfortable.

It is my understanding that, if we have any adjustments to be made, you will have Mr. Queen come over from St. Petersburg or Tampa. There are a few adjustments on control apparatus and thermometer still to be set, and I understand Mr. Gee will be back to do this very shortly.

Very truly yours,
JOHN EBERSON, Architect.

Plumbing worthy of the finest theatre

Many architects now make a specialty of theatre building, lavishing all their skill on exteriors of distinction and interiors in which restful beauty supports the efforts of manager, performers and musicians to lift patrons for a brief hour or two out of their humdrum, workaday lives.

In their endeavor no means are neglected. In smoking rooms and ladies' rest rooms, as well as in foyers and auditoriums, an atmosphere of relaxing grace and comfort is untiringly sought.

To this purpose Crane plumbing fixtures have been found to be exceptionally well adapted. Their graceful lines, the harmony with which they fit into a decorative scheme of charming color and line, make possible retiring rooms of unusual attraction.

Displays in the nearest Crane Exhibit Rooms will aid your choice of sanitary appointments worthy of your theatre. And Crane valves and fittings between the walls mean the trouble-free service, the perfect sanitation and the long life which you demand.

Theatre Pictures

THE colorful pages of this book tell better than any words of mine, of the picture theatres of today and tomorrow.

Theatres will be different; they will be idea theatres; expressive and charming. They will be shows in themselves. There will be many of them, replacing the less attractive theatres of a by-gone era.

Our architects today are as active as our producers of pictures; and as important to the box-office. They are making pictures of picture theatres. So we shall have theatre pictures as well as picture theatres. And pictures draw the crowd.

I believe that the work of an architect like John Eberson to-day is second to no other in importance to the motion picture industry.

* * * * *

We are in the beginning of a new theatre era.

The first era was that of store shows, scattered indiscriminately over the country.

Then came the big modern downtown theatre of the large cities, and the better theatre of the smaller centres of population. They concentrated theatre attendance.

Today we are building the new, finer neighborhood theatres, especially in the large cities. This is the theatre of today and I predict it will be the theatre of tomorrow, eclipsing in trade and public import the downtown city theatre.

* * * * *

But these points are essential to its success:—

This new super theatre of the neighborhoods—both city and country—must be a theatre picture, without and within; it must be an attraction. It must draw in itself.

And again, it must offer the last word in equipment, comfort and efficiency.

Otherwise, the people of the neighborhood won't be held by the neighborhood theatre. People travel readily, these days, for their amusement and pleasure.

* * * * *

Theatre building and equipment will, in my firm opinion, exceed all records in the next few years.

For these reasons, over and above the obvious trend of greatly increased theatre activities:—

First, it is almost certain that picture distribution and production will change materially in the future; and new types of pictures and policies mean, inevitably, new types of theatres.

Secondly, there's Europe to consider. In Continental Europe theatres in general are about where this country's theatres were ten years ago; and it is only logical that American plans, construction and equipment facilities, with all the advances they have made, will be taken advantage of.

* * * * *

It is important, I believe, to add that MOTION PICTURE NEWS has perfected an exhaustive analysis of the theatres of this country and our information on these conditions is at the service of the trade.

The Atmospheric Theatre

An interview with JOHN EBERSON, Architect

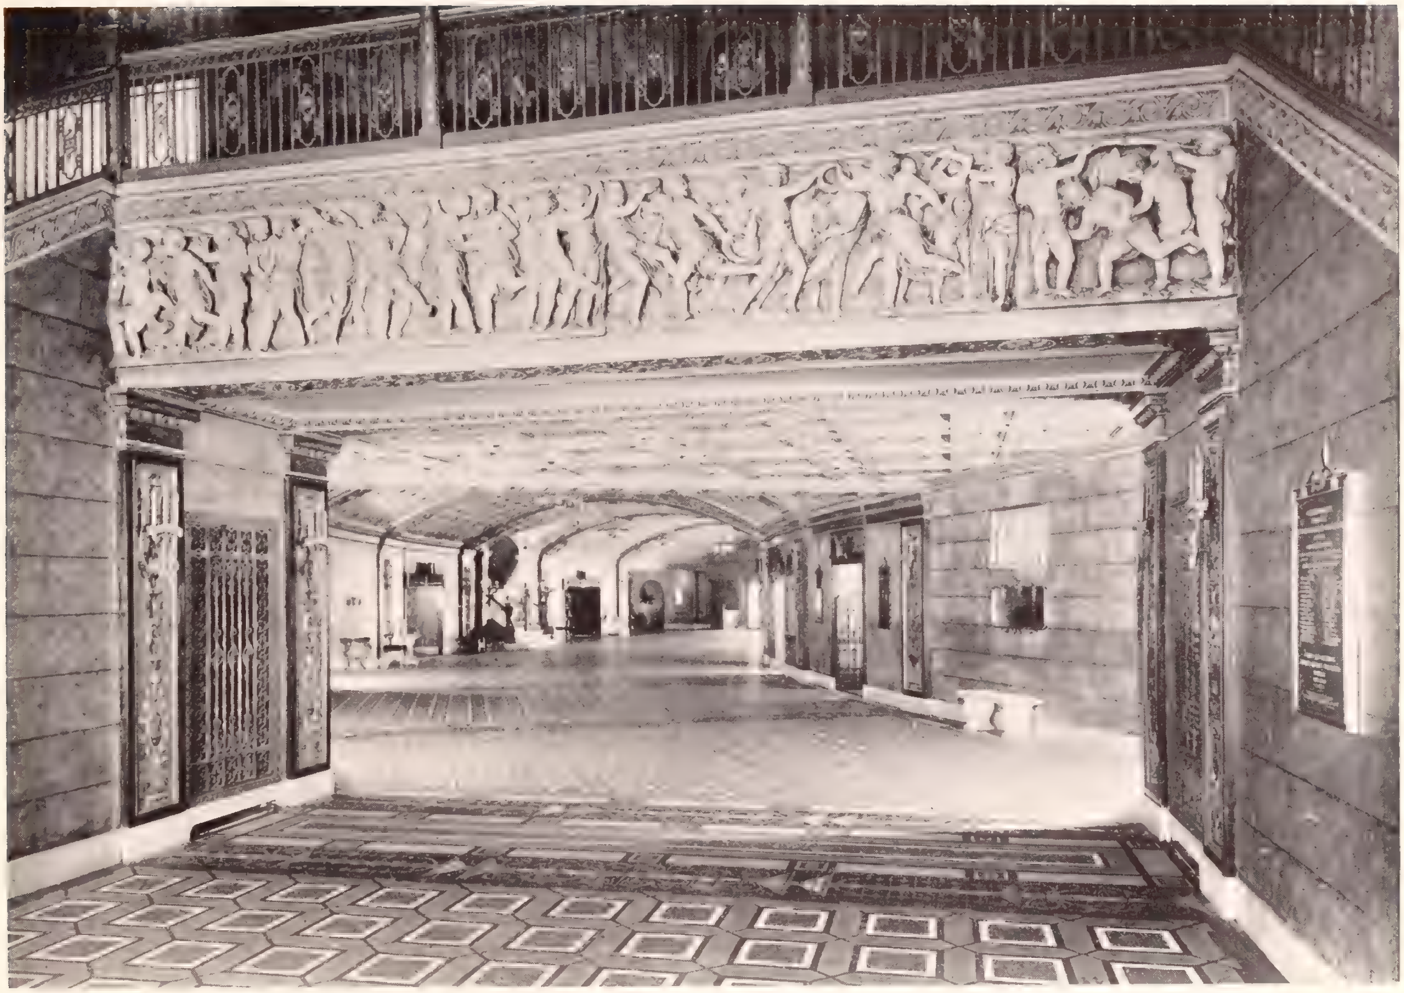
THE atmospheric theatre—the idea back of this beautiful and colorful style of motion picture house—the psychology of its public popularity—the combination of novelty, charm and practical utility as expressed in motion picture houses designed by John Eberson, Architect, are printed in the following pages in an exclusive interview granted to L. H. Mason of Motion Picture News, by Mr. Eberson at his offices in Chicago:—

I have served a long apprenticeship in theatre design, during which time I have met men and conditions of all kinds, and to have played a part in the development of the amusement business, with its kaleidoscopic changes, has been an education in itself.

When relaxing and reflecting I cannot help but marvel at the progress that has been made in the development of the amusement business and in the creation of modern edifices for the presentation of entertainment for the public's benefit. My career has been full of wonderful experiences, growing up as I did with a man who engaged me in a professional way when building his first theatre. It has been most interesting to see the development of potent chains of theatres under the guidance of my old friends and clients.

Appreciating the paramount importance of a thorough knowledge of the show business, while posing as a theatre architect, I am grateful to have had this intimate contact with so many of my old friends and clients, now successful and well known in the amusement field.

I consider these men along with the teamwork of young architects and artists whose services I have been obliged to engage, responsible, in a large degree, for the successful theatre designs executed by my organization.



ENTRANCE TO THE FOYER OF THE CAPITOL THEATRE, CHICAGO. NOTE SPECIALLY TREATED RELIEF OVER ARCH
John Eberson, Architect

It would have been utterly impossible to assume the architectural trust for the many theatres which I have had the pleasure to design, were it nor for some of my associates. But I have always considered my biggest battle the battle with my best friend, my client!

Believes in Color

The average client's desire is to imitate and excel places of public amusement which have been built along lines of pronounced similarity. This shackles independent thought, and makes a virtue of what is really weak imitation and an utter lack of artistic invention, often driving us to despair. We believe in ornament and are prepared to be lavish with it, but we are diligently cautious not to infringe upon the canons of good taste by avoiding over-design and over-elaborateness, which only achieve vulgarity.

We must believe in color. Nature gave us color—man gave us ornament and it is most deplorable that in the present, in renaissance, and in medieval times alike architects have been prompted to place upon their buildings as much ornament as their clients could afford. Color and the harmony of nature have furnished us with more inspiration and more successful thought, thus opportuning us to develop architectural treatments which have inspired effect and affection in the minds of beholders.

Capitol Breaks Traditions

We designed the Capitol Theatre in Chicago—a theatre entirely different from the traditional. It represented a new thought and a new idea in theatre design. Why should it come to pass that only accepted lines, style and treatment be followed in theatre design?

We have the French baroque, the Colonial, designs expressed in the Adam style, and a few scattering examples of Greek and Pompeian architecture serving as the standards and basic ground for the creation of hundreds of playhouses of unavoidable similarity.

All too often stock pattern lines must groan under the yoke of the necessity of establishing individuality for the particular theatre through no other means except efficient and splendorous expenditure of money. Thus, yesterday's theatre is old-fashioned today and today's average theatre is virtually a replica of yesterday's, except that it is more elaborately dressed up with more marble, more intricate enrichments, more draperies, more cut-glass chandeliers in foyers and lobbies, all burying correct architectural general composition and character of design.

Public Demands Variety

Since variety is the primary demand of an amusement loving public, and we mean decisive variety, it is only reasonable to assume that such variety will be appreciated in the place of entertainment as well as in the entertainment itself.

The opening performance in one of our gorgeous picture palaces of gold, glitter, rich ornament and elaborate decorations is truly an inspiring sight, but it must be observed that the rapture of an audience and the awing effect on the masses often fails to be particularly lasting. Surroundings soon become something akin to oppressive and embarrassing to the average steady patron who is not accustomed to live in such gorgeous surroundings.

We observe, with the multitude of new palatial theatres opening week in, week out different from their predecessors only in point of decorative splendor and rich garnishment, that the public has noticed and feels languidly this very apparent similarity.

With an appreciation of these facts in mind, the atmospheric type of theatre suggests itself. We visualize and dream a magnificent amphitheatre up under a glorious moonlit sky in an Italian garden, in a Persian court, in a Spanish patio, or in a mystic Egyptian temple-yard, all canopied by soft moonlit sky.

Masses Feel Art

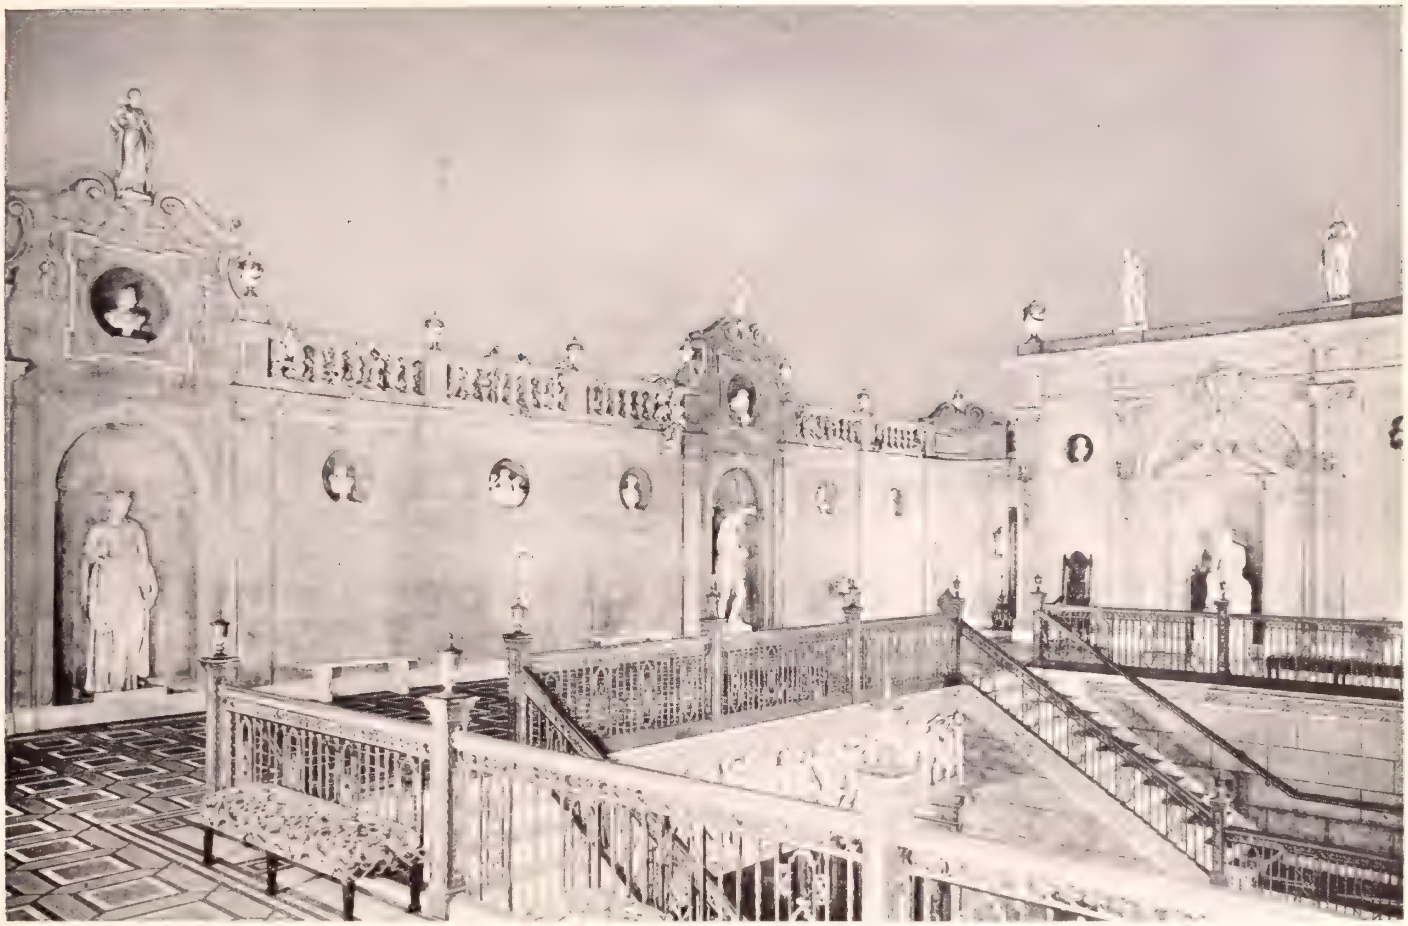
The masses might not know art, but they feel it and, therefore, from the ancient classic and definitely established architecture is borrowed the shape, form and order of house, garden, loggia, fountain, or garden wall, with which to convert the theatre auditorium into a meeting place surrounded by nature's setting.

Color is the most important instrument to create effects and influence the appreciative mind and sensitive soul of the public. We credit the deep azure blue of the Mediterranean sky with a therapeutic value, soothing the nerves and calming perturbing thoughts.

The punch of light and brilliant color of exteriors and lobbies might charm and attract the amusement-loving public, but it is in the softly lighted foyers and in the blue-domed auditoriums that our mesmerism is performed. Calming excited feelings and sputtering nerves, the aim is to frame the minds of patrons and prepare them to receive the entertainment, without the influence of an over elaborate interior, designed after repeated ornament always in view and persistently claiming attention.

Atmospheric Theatres Alive

The atmospheric theatre seems to create a very desirable feeling of intimacy and illusion, making an atmosphere which is always new, fresh and alive. In an outdoor atmosphere, in addition to the warm, foreign picturesqueness of some of our conceptions, the spectator enjoys the natural beauties of skies and flowers that it is his nature to love. He does not feel himself called upon to absorb grandeur and majestic palatial architecture. Thus the atmospheric theatre offers the theatre operator additional material and wares to sell to the public besides his show.



UPPER LOUNGE, CAPITOL THEATRE, CHICAGO, WHERE CLASSIC STATUARY IS DISPLAYED AGAINST BLUE SKY BACKGROUND
JOHN EBERSON, Architect

Careful attention to detail and perfect consistency in style is absolutely necessary to make an atmospheric theatre successful.

The drastic deviation from what is common in the average American theatre design and the compulsory necessity of creating reproductions and illusions necessitates the creation of an architectural organization which will accept responsibilities lying somewhat on the outside of the strictly architectural sphere of activities. In our case we have found it necessary to befriend sculptors, painters, color artists, students of history and foreign people's customs.

This association has been found most efficient in the creation of our special theatres.

Must Present Feasible Plans

Serving owners as a group and working shoulder to shoulder with the deep-felt understanding of the great problem which we must solve, we have developed a following of excellent talent.

My own early training in the schools of Vienna, Austria, and in the art schools of Dresden, Saxony, and my travels in the Old Country, makes this work enjoyable to me.

The charm of an antiqued interior opportunes a design of finish, furnishings and equipment, offering economy in upkeep and a protection against the destroying influences of wear and tear.

I want to come back to one of the most important of an architect's problems, serving theatre owners as a specialist. A theatre architect must have the ability to present a feasible plan, showing maximum capacity, dependable sight lines and acoustics, proper facilities for quickly seating and dismissing audiences. He must be thoroughly familiar with the engineering problems of a dependable atmospheric conditioning apparatus which must provide the proper air conditioning of an auditorium.

All this with a thorough knowledge of the building market so as to achieve these accomplishments well within the financial appropriation which must be commensurate with the possibilities of proper financial returns to the investor—the theatre owner.

A Practical Creed

I want to state what I might call a practical creed for theatre architects. "Prepare Practical Plans for Pretty Playhouses—Please Patrons—Pay Profits," nine little Ps.

"Practical Plans." How very important it is to be familiar with the general run of the show business, with particular reference to moving picture theatres when developing floor plans, can only be realized when coming in contact with the many intricate situations facing the exhibitor.

The question of a fair and advantageous seating capacity, designed to accommodate in comfortable and intimate grouping the average week-day business, is important. Then comes the question of giving the exhibitor sufficient capacity for the heavy Saturday and Sunday business. How to balance these extreme demands and conditions which one will find in the small town as well as in the super-theatre located in the Rialto of a big city, is one of the most important questions for owner and architect to determine.

"Practical Plans" also means thought given to the creating of constellations of aisles, corridors, stairs, foyers and lanes, which must be designed to avoid cross traffic and enable the floor manager to load the house quickly, and arrange for an efficient turnover of crowds. All these arrangements must function in a smooth and undisturbing fashion with a minimum number of guides, ushers and doormen.

Sees 4,200 Seat Limit

The proper proportioning of the seating capacity of the main floor to mezzanine and balcony and the arrangement of gradients and stairs must be intelligently worked out and designed, or untold damage to the enterprise will result.

We condemn and discourage the overseating of auditoriums, being fully convinced that it is almost impossible to put more than 4,200 people in any kind of an auditorium within proper distance for hearing or seeing.

Many of our new super-theatres now in existence and now planned and under construction, pride themselves on enormous seating capacity, reaching as high as 5,000 or 5,500 people—it is false pride—it is a strained effort. A majority of these people will be too far away from the stage to hear distinctly and a good many will be forced to view the pictures or the general performance from an angle offering distortion and an unsatisfactory view of the scene.

Many designs clearly show that in order to provide seats for 500 or more people, the comfort and the real value for a large portion of the remaining 4,000 in the house is sacrificed. I have heard that some of the owners of such mammoth theatres contemplate putting in an order for point-heated spears and tridents for their ushers and lobby floor managers to use, thinking that this would be an effective way to chase unwilling patrons up into the higher seating tiers of their theatre.

The Atmospheric Theatre

"Pretty Playhouses." Herein lies perhaps the greatest opportunity for service to the industry that is open to the architect, and it appears to be a service that can be best rendered by courageously and intelligently deviating from the stereotyped style of the American Theatre De Luxe.

With the success of our first atmospheric theatre assured, by virtue of its favorable reception and its now proven lasting interest, we are fully convinced that what the public wants is something "different." This something "different" must be artistic and colorful, it must have texture and punch.

The present attitude of the public towards these atmospheric theatres is most encouraging. We are now dwelling in the art of conceiving and executing designs representing the restoration of classic, well defined characteristic buildings which are designed to form the interior of a theatre. These buildings are circumposed by nature's grand outdoor setting, reproduced in near perfect illusion. The restoration of old buildings and gardens is specialized work.

In most of these instances the standard knowledge and experience of an architectural organization must be augmented by a group of artists and students whose efforts with reference to the art of decorating, furnishing and lighting must be absorbed by the architect assuming the responsibility for such a design.

Must Appeal to Masses

"Pleasing Patrons." This means removing the red ink from the profit and loss report.

America, the land of the masses. We must please the broad masses, and in most cases they do not know art, but rather feel it. An atmospheric theatre based on nature's school of color harmony is art which is felt by everybody. This new form of theatre caters to those who do not possess educated tastes. It capitalizes the well-known fact that buildings are living things, possessing individual character and expression. Their personality is as varied as that of humans. They utter a voiceless message that is clear to us who would listen and endeavor to understand. Color—lots of color, and lots of certain color gives interest and spells life.

The dissimilarity so often used by us in a design of theatre auditoriums, and the lack of symmetry between side walls, adds in our estimation to the intimacy of the engaging qualities of our atmospheric theatre interiors. The many interesting details introduced to imitate, in an artful way, Flora and Fauna of the tropical outdoor used as a background for our ancient structures, add the elements of interest and life.

Costs and Upkeep Low

"Paying Profits." This slogan should be the watermark of the stationery of every theatre architect.

In constructing an atmospheric theatre the expenditures and appropriations ordinarily made for imported marble, cut glass chandeliers, French damask, etc., in other types of theatres, will build and create approximately four times the amount of effective and attractive interior decorations when applied to an atmospheric classic building restoration scheme.

The cost of upkeep of an antique treated auditorium with its textured surfaces, antiqued ironwork and modeled decorations, is ignorably small when compared with the necessity of keeping a palatial interior in good condition in the face of the hard usage of the multitude of patrons.

The advertising feature of an unusual and outstanding theatre interior adds to the profits of the owner. We feel that in an atmospheric theatre there is given the owners something else to sell besides the show—a lasting interest in an architectural treatment.

I am extremely pleased to note the reaction after the completion of several atmospheric theatres dedicated to a wholesome amusement presented to the entertainment-loving public in several important sections of the United States.

To have achieved an architectural success and to have gained recognition as an architect is one of my pleasures, but by far the greatest pleasure given the theatre architect is for him to see the men who have entrusted him with the architectural duties in connection with their building operations prosper.

design is the occasion for a most delightful time in our Studio, and I am very happy, indeed, to have an opportunity to mention the deep-felt friendship between myself and my associate of many years, A. C. Liska, my Chief Designer and aide. It is now a matter of almost eighteen years that we have worked together and have put into form and into reality theatre buildings, getting our inspiration in many cases, from a most trivial source.

Traveling through New Orleans with my friend, Liska, some years ago and attracted by the old world charm of Royal Street, we rummaged through the antique dealers' shops and spied an ancient pierced brass jewel-studded Persian incense burner. Then and there was born the idea and scheme for a Persian theatre. Persia, the land of the turquoise and the rose, the land of the sacred shrine, blue and gold, the predominating colors—a theatre design developing the auditorium side walls in an interesting but non-symmetrical fashion. The richly grilled and torridly embellished palace on the left, the tall walls of a Persian rose garden on the right, the sacred pilgrim's fountain and shrine in the left side stage niche, the heavily barred and shuttered entrance to the sacred city courtyard on the right side of the main stage. Mystic pierced brass lanterns, rich tent hangings, colorful mosaic panels, richly carved and polychromed wooden ceiling beams, intricate marble Moorish pattern floors, jeweled door heads, mirrored curtains, fragrant bowers of roses, all under the starlit sky of the near east, a softly mysterious but interesting scheme for a modern theatre auditorium.

The idea developed after frequent visits and conferences and hours spent in reading rare works on Persian art and Persian history in company with my friend, Wm. A. Hartman, associated with me in our work and in charge of our Art Department. He is a young artist who has traveled and studied in Europe, and is a graduate of Art Academies, and has worked under Arthur Dow and Hugo Froehlich. To him is due credit for some of the splendid results obtained in our color work. I must confess that a good deal of my deep appreciation of and inspiration from the beauty of the Italian renaissance expressed in color, came to me through Mr. Hartman.

Associates Give Inspiration

It is in the company of my associates that I find happiness and strength. The deep understanding of art and the sincere devotion to true art, such as my friend and associate, Wellington J. Schaefer, expresses in his work, gives me the inspiration so very necessary in my profession and in my capacity as the head of this organization.

Frankly speaking, there is only one criticism that I have to make and just this one, and that is, that in our effort to serve the theatre world, beauty, gentleness, love—the spiritual in life—is subordinated to the crass materialism of a commercial world.

And I plead for your tolerance in talking about the intimacy between my co-workers, our work itself, and those who make it possible for us to indulge in architectural dreaming—our clients.

I am working with Mr. Schaefer on a French interpretation of an atmospheric theatre. We are designing a theatre—the Garden of the Tuileries. We picture a Louis sending a message through the Land calling for painters, sculptors, gardeners, artisans of all kinds, and he gives them command to transform the spacious lawns lying in front of his palace into a festive ground, as he is going to entertain his grandees and dames at a glorious, magic night feast.

Months and months of artful effort and vast energy is devoted to the transformation and for the festive decoration of these lawns—an evening feast, gigantic arches, enchanting colonnades, illuminated lattice garden houses, mystic pyrotechnic effects all silhouetted against the entrancing moonlit sky of a beautiful summer night, surprises, illuminated fountains, music niches, lovers' lanes—a marvelous setting for a fantastic artful dance, the frills of the satin and silk-gowned nobles of the Court, the coquettish silk and ruffle-covered damsels, the air laden with the smell perfume of jasmine.

Beautiful but Practical

To work out the artistic details of such an auditorium and to synchronize them with the very necessary practical demands for a modern theatre auditorium, occupy time—my time—and this time is spent with great satisfaction as I have such congenial and efficient help.

I pride myself on a most efficient field organization and want you to know about Raymond Mork, a young engineer in charge of one of my branch offices. The interpretation and the transfiguration of our highly specialized architectural problems of design and planning into craftsmanship of steel, concrete and brick, and the guidance of workmen in the proper and prompt execution of our work, require intimate knowledge of Home Office atmosphere. We are very grateful to have found in Raymond Mork a young engineer, not only possessed of the fullest knowledge of the many details of the construction and engineering business, but also a man who feels with us the artistic purpose of our plans and specifications.

Our efforts in the Eastern field are in charge of my friend, A. O. Budina, a young architect, who has intelligently and diligently applied his time and early training to a full understanding of our efforts. I feel that my associate, Mr. Budina, by reason of his thorough knowledge and his own personality, has helped me to make new friends and hold my old friends.

Harry E. Weaver associated with me for many years, is in charge of Southern field operations and has supervised the erection of many of our finest buildings.

His keen sense of justice and fairness has been a great help to my organization in encouraging contractors to pursue the difficult task of constructing buildings for our clients with the spirit of co-operation.

It is the ambition of my life to find myself an efficient servant to the motion picture industry and a factor in the art of bringing pleasure and happiness into the life of the amusement-loving public of America.

Need "Sensational" Theatres

My own efforts and the co-operation of my associates are centered on the hope that the good work of our organization may be continued and carried on, and I am most grateful to have in Drew Eberson, my son, a young architectural student. He is now employed in my organization. If I have to say it myself, he is backed by a marked degree of talent, strengthened by his earnest studies and application to duties.

"A man is only worth as much as he can do for others." I cannot but help repeat that today a motion picture theatre, more than any other building, requires sensational features—it must have modern features—it must be something "Never Before," and it is for that reason that our thoughts were directed towards an artistic effort to create something new by adopting the atmospheric reproduction style of theatre auditoriums, fully appreciating that the taste of our public is always looking for something "new," and in order to play safe we chose Nature for the mirror of our activities in our efforts to "impress."

This super motion picture theatre must be decorated so that decorations will be seen in the dark and felt in the dark. Color and the combination of color; the play of light and shadows; textures; shapes and silhouettes must be blended into a plan, which will not only give effect, but also must have an atmosphere of impressiveness in keeping with modern taste and development. To impress the public with mass and grandeur of proportion is the art and skill of the office building and railway depot designer. The modern theatre architect is called upon to design large buildings, enormous auditoriums giving the feeling of restful intimacy, and the atmospheric theatre will do this.

PRESENTED on the following pages are reproductions in full color of sketches for "atmospheric theatres." These sketches show the lavishness with which color is used in the decoration schemes of this ultra-modern type of motion picture palace.

Only by reproducing these theatres in color is it possible to gain a conception of the almost perfect illusion of the open air effect so convincingly secured through the color treatment of the ceilings and the subtle use of light.

Also worthy of special note is the dissimilarity in design of the two opposite garden walls of each theatre. No attempt is made to hold to symmetry, complete freedom being afforded for securing the strongest individuality.

No one can predict, with any degree of certainty, the theatre of tomorrow. Yet it is an interesting speculation to consider the possibilities that are held by this present conception and probable ultimate development of the "atmospheric theatre."

Fibre Toys
Boost Business

Inexpensive and Popular with Children

Here's how one important theatre circuit used our toys:

"We gave away fifteen gross of your assorted fibre toys on the opening of a serial in two of our theatres, with splendid results. In our opinion this method of attracting children to the first installment of a serial represents a considerable saving in money over other methods formerly used. We can recommend it to other theatre owners."

Morgan W. Jopling, Pres.
DELFT THEATRES, INC.
MARQUETTE, MICHIGAN

Fibre toys will attract patronage at small cost on children's days, special matinees, first installments of serials and innumerable other occasions.

Good assortment from which to choose.

"Beauty lies in the eye of the beholder"

THE true beauty of many a film is lost and the eye of the beholder wearied when projection current is unreliable.

No matter how good the picture, how comfortable the seats, how pleasant the music; if lights flicker, grow vague, too bright or vary from a pleasing intensity, audiences leave consciously or subconsciously irritated—many will go elsewhere next time.

Those who know from experience will tell you truly that Westinghouse motor-generator sets furnish faultless projection current.

"Mr. Eberson faced a real problem here!"

So, Autovent Fan Equipment Was Used

NIGHT after night, sweet, fresh air is poured into every nook and corner of this great auditorium. The people come out refreshed and happy. They do not feel the "smothering" sensation often experienced in ill-ventilated theatres.

The many thousands who have already admired the new Capitol Theatre, Chicago, scarcely realize that the Autovent Fan Equipment plays such an important part in its success.

REGISTERED AUTOVENT TRADE MARK

CAPITOL THEATRE
Chicago
John Eberson, Architect

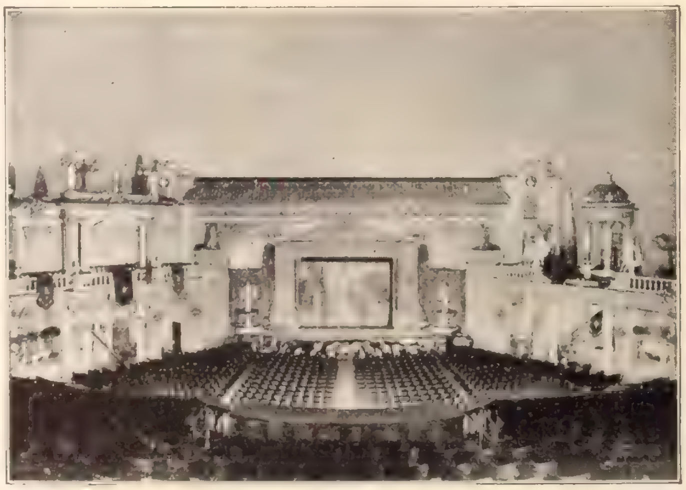
ONLY because of the unfailing performance of these fans is this beautiful interior a lasting success. The Italian Garden is complete in every detail.

Large or small, every theatre needs dependable fan equipment to provide regular air changes. It has been found that each occupant requires 25 cubic feet of air per minute to breathe. Are you offering your patrons such modern ventilation?

Have you a Ventilating Problem?

NOW that hot weather is here, this matter of ventilation becomes especially urgent. Something must be done to keep the people coming.

If you have a problem that needs immediate action write to us at once. Let us show you how you can make people more comfortable, so that they will enjoy your show to the limit.



Let us Help YOU Overcome It!

THE services of our Engineering Department are given gladly and our long, successful record in theatre ventilation backs up every statement we make.

Give us a rough drawing, seating capacity and dimensions of your theatre. Let us show you how to have good scientific ventilation at a reasonable cost! Write today!

When it's 90° in the shade, you need HELP.

You need something to keep your house cool and comfortable—something to hold business up to the mark.

Only one thing will do it—fresh AIR. And lots of it—cool, refreshing breezes that will bring them back night after night. That's the only way you can be sure of good profits the whole summer through. Typhoons prove it in 2,000 other theatres.

Let's show you how easily it's done.

Peerless

"The Super Reflector Arc Lamp"

SHARES ITS QUALITY, VALUE AND RESULTS WITH NONE !!

THE largest users of Reflector Arc Lamps insist on Peerless. This is an undeniable fact and reality. The Greatest and Largest Theatres in the country use Peerless. This is another undeniable fact.

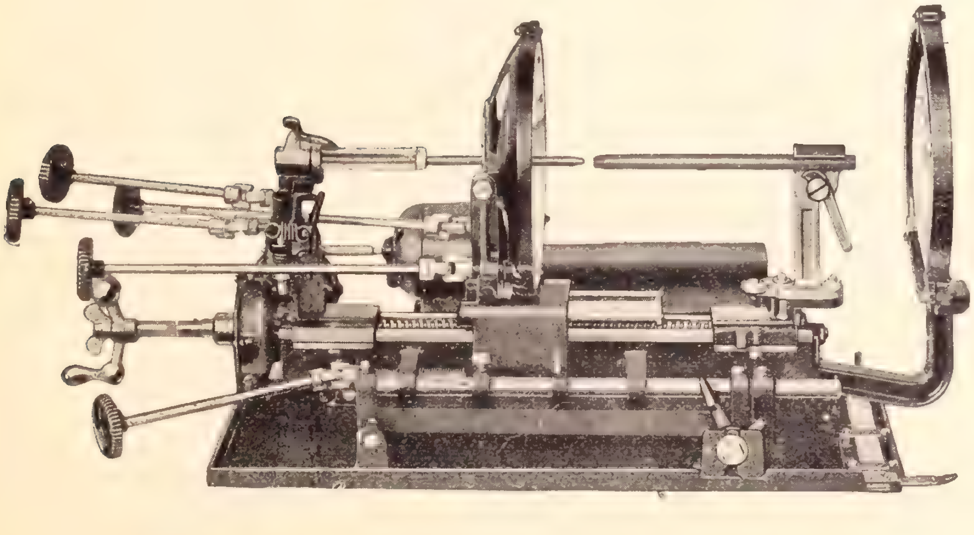
You can convince yourself of Peerless superiority in design, mechanical proportions and durability by a direct investigation or comparison. We should convince you by the above facts, for—if Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps were not the most highly developed, most widely used (two to one) and most satisfactory investment of this nature, Peerless Popularity and its vast majority of actual installation would not be a fact.

Compare its Massive Design, Precision Workmanship, Quality of Material, Stereopticon attachment, Full Floating Reflector Holder, Ash Tray and Open Lamp Bed, Full Vision Carbon Holders, Reflector and Condenser Optical Principles, Arc Control or in fact any of the real points that are important and you'll always decide on Peerless.

Our new catalogue explains Peerless advantages in detail.

To obtain Peerless Results, Peerless must be used so—

WHY EXPERIMENT ?



THERE ARE MORE PEERLESS LAMPS
IN ACTUAL USE THAN THE COMBINED TOTAL OF ALL OTHER MAKES

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

There is this difference

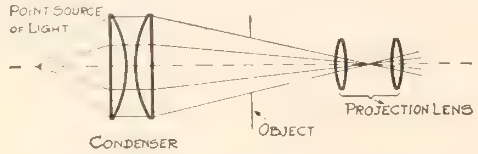
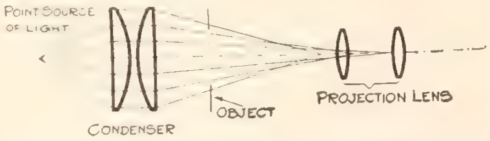
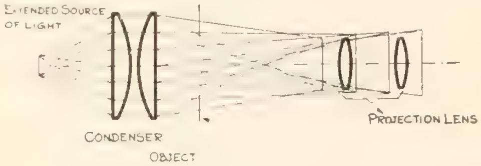
The diagrams below indicate why CINEPHOR Projection Lenses are superior, why CINEPHORS furnish a better quality of light and why a 25% increase of illumination on the same current consumption is guaranteed.



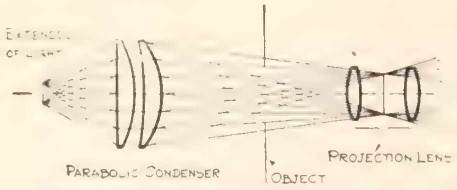
The first diagram represents the ideal condition that would result if there were available a "point source of light" and if the condensing lenses were perfectly corrected for spherical aberration.



The next diagram shows what the result would be with a theoretical point source of light and ordinary condensers.



The third figure indicates the condition found with the usual type of condensing system under actual operating conditions. (Rays of light from different zones of condenser imaged in widely separated planes).



The last figure represents the condition found with a Bausch & Lomb CINEPHOR Condensing System. (Rays of light from all zones of condenser imaged approximately in one plane).

Progressive Theatre Men Everywhere Recommend HUB-O-LITE Products

THE rugged, lasting construction of the Hub Electric Company's stage control board appeals to every theatre builder and engineer. All Hub lighting products, like the stage control board, are built to last forever, and are designed to operate efficiently. The Hub-O-Lite compartment borders in the new Oriental Theatre have an actual light output that is in excess of a third more than that delivered by any other border light using the same size lamps. Hub-O-Lite glass color screens combine the advantages of gelatine and natural colored bulbs with none of the disadvantages, and the new construction eliminates the damages of breakage. The words "Hub-O-Lite" on theatre lighting equipment stands for the best.

This shows the installation of units. Floor is level, chairs can be placed anywhere.

The NEW GALLAGHER Orchestral Base

Better Than Ever!

Recent developments in the Gallagher floor unit have vastly improved the remarkable characteristics of this resonant base. A larger volume of tone is possible and the installation is so simplified that a complete equipment was put in a large theater in Chicago in less than 20 hours between performances.

Showing single unit of base, with chair and stand in place.

Write for new literature covering these Gallagher Orchestral Base Units.

Music Stands, Too

The New Gallagher Leader Stand.

Gallagher Music Stands are rapidly becoming nationally recognized equipment for the finer theaters. They have kept pace with theater development and a suitable beautiful stand is provided for every use. The New Leader Stand is a genuine control station for the complete show and unifies the program as no other equipment could.

Send for New Folder on this.

De Luxe Special

Good Projection is Worth any Price You Pay

There is no excuse for shoddy and deficient pictures. If you have faulty reproduction, your screen is poor in quality or wrong in type.

Every theatre owner should realize the necessity of proper screen distribution, without it good pictures are impossible.

Minusa installations are ample evidence of this screen's superiority in the scope and quality of reproduction.

Equivalent to more light

Pictures that on the average screen are dull, shadowy and tiresome, snap out clear, lively and bright on a Super-Lite Screen.

That is because practically all the light that falls on the silvery surface of a Super-Lite Screen is reflected.

Super-Lite Screens give the equivalent of higher intensity light sources at a fraction of their cost. They are made from fine, sturdy material and last for years.

The NEW PERFECT REWINDER

Precision Throughout

It is as mechanically perfect as experience and money can make it.

Never before has it been possible to assemble so many outstanding features in a rewinder.

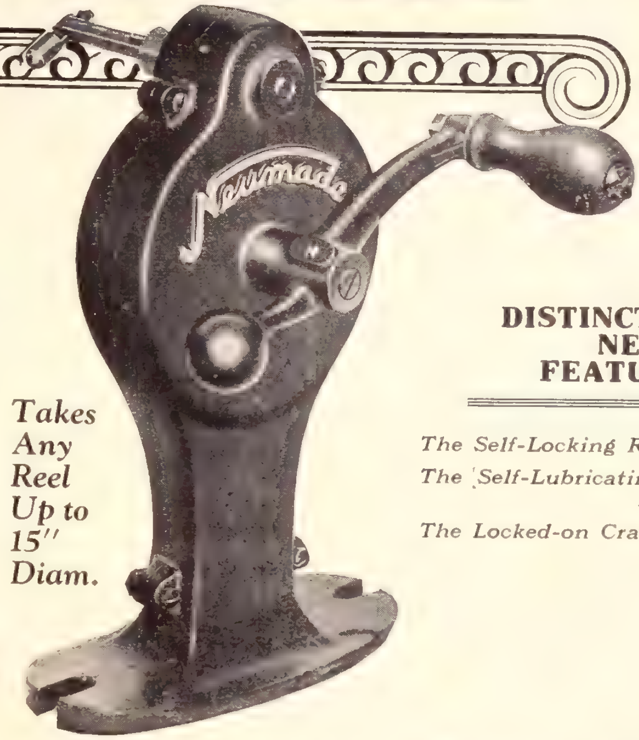
The danger of reels flying off while being wound, so common with ordinary rewinders, is eliminated entirely by the self-locking reel jack.

The self-lubricating, noiseless laminated gears mark an epoch in rewinder construction. These gears are punched from sheets of carbon steel and then assembled to the required thickness. The gears are held to their shafts by integral steel keys that cannot work loose or shear off.

The dustproof housing is finished with a wear resisting compound that is baked on.

The base is surface ground and cannot wobble when fastened to the table.

The Neumade will outlast three ordinary rewinders because of its quality construction and exclusive features.



Takes Any Reel Up to 15" Diam.

DISTINCTIVELY NEU FEATURES

The Self-Locking Reel Jack

The Self-Lubricating Laminated Gears

The Locked-on Crank Handle

The ACME
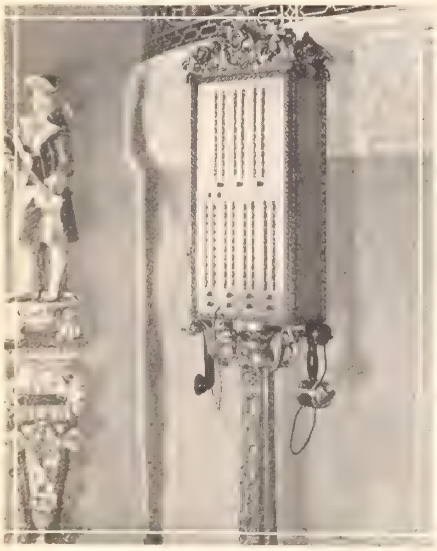
USHER SIGNAL SYSTEM
Is For You!

Acme Usher Signal System is indispensable in a large theatre, yet is a very valuable equipment for the average size house. Do not say you do not need the Acme until you have learned the facts. It will keep your crowds moving in, adding to your box-office receipts. It answers the insistent demand "Seat the Standing Line."



Acme systems are designed for each house and are elaborate or simple as the needs require. The picture shows one station in the Uptown Theatre, C. W. and Geo. L. Rapp, Architects.

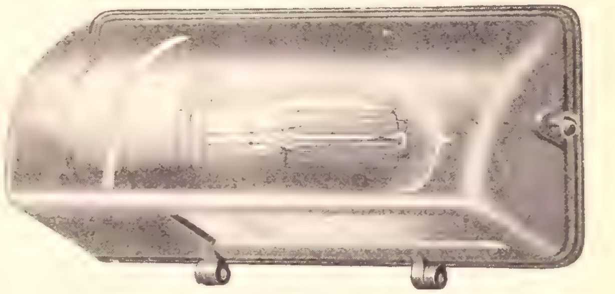
LIGHT THE WAY WITH



ESCO
"AISLELITES"

INSURES AGAINST ACCIDENT. If your aisles are properly lighted by "Aislelites" you eliminate almost entirely the possibility of any of your patrons stumbling and injuring themselves.

PLEASES PATRONS. Patrons of your theatre are pleased when they are able to see where they are stepping, and where there is an empty seat, without groping around in the dark as in a theatre where no "Aislelites" are being used.

NO FLASHLIGHTS NEEDED. "Aislelites" make it unnecessary for ushers to carry flashlights to light the way. This tends to make the operation of your theatre more economical. No batteries or bulbs to buy.

QUICK EXITS GUARANTEED. Whenever it is necessary for a theatre to be emptied rapidly, there is very little confusion, and very little danger of confusion, due to the fact that every person can see the way out.

AMERICAN TERRA COTTA
"You've got to get the people in to make it pay"

Mr. John Eberson realizes this. His theatres are a success. His exteriors are inviting and create the desire for people to enter. He uses Terra Cotta mostly in colors on all his exteriors. We are glad to say we have been able to meet his requirements as evidence by "AMERICAN TERRA COTTA" on the following theatres.

AVALON THEATRE, CHICAGO, ILL.
CAPITOL THEATRE, CHICAGO, ILL.
PALACE THEATRE, CANTON, OHIO
FARNAM THEATRE, OMAHA, NEB.
STRAND THEATRE, LANSING, MICH.
NEW MAJESTIC THEATRE, DALLAS, TEXAS
NEW MAJESTIC THEATRE, HOUSTON, TEXAS
INDIANA THEATRE, TERRE HAUTE, IND.
ORPHEUM THEATRE, TULSA, OKLA.
ORPHEUM THEATRE, WICHITA, KANS.

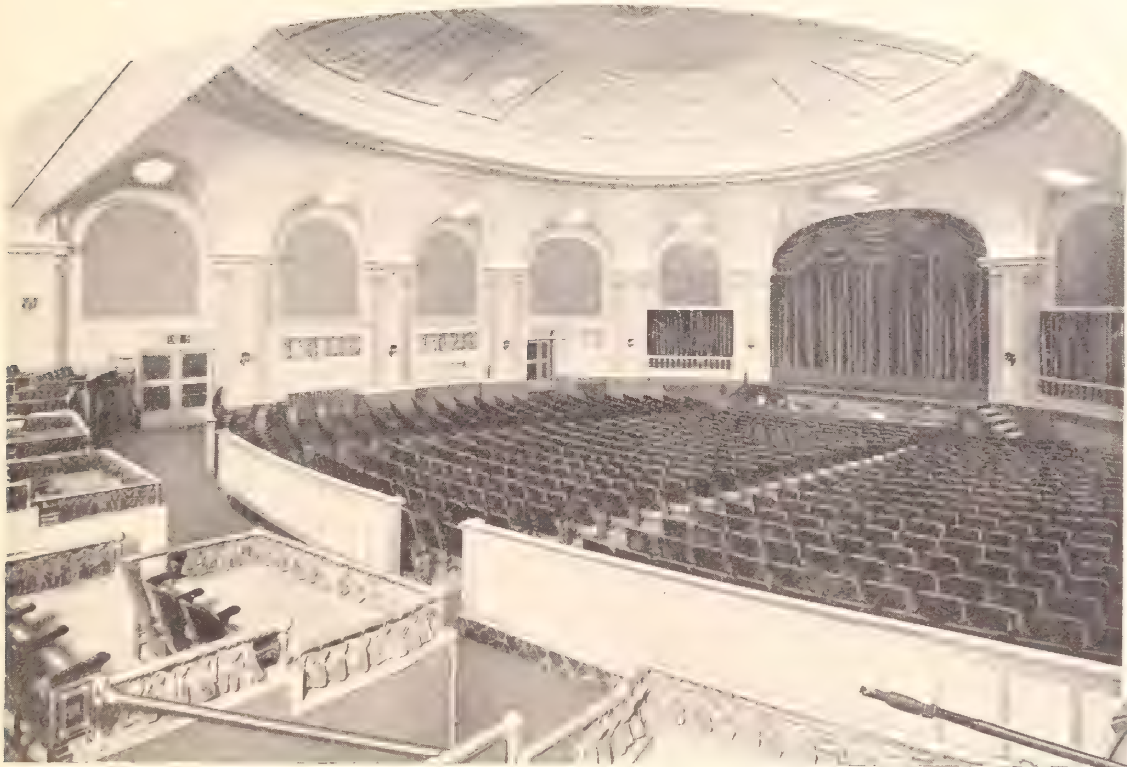
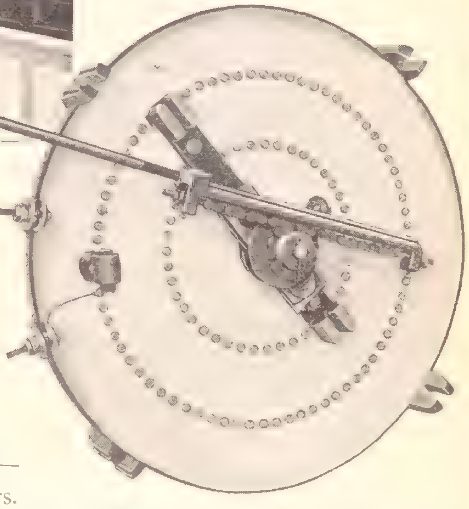
To illuminate theatres in new splendor



National Theatre, Brooklyn, equipped with Ward Leonard Dimmers



Contact arm and contact arm plate assembled on Vitrohm Dimmer Plate

WARD LEONARD VITROHM DIMMERS

Beautiful decorations have a greater box office value when the lighting is effectively controlled. Color and volume of light will play upon the emotions of an audience like the tones of an organ—and Ward Leonard Dimmers put theatre lighting under as subtle control as an organ.

Lights may be dimmed down to a point where there is no reflected light from the concealed lamps. Over 100 steps of resistance provide flickerless dimming. All desirable combinations of color can be controlled by master levers, and varied in intensity slowly or rapidly as desired.

Ward Leonard Vitrohm Dimmers are made with a substantial but light iron plate. On one side of this plate the resistor is imbedded in a non-porous enamel which is impervious to moisture. Heat is dissipated efficiently. They can be kept in continuous use for hours without overheating the dimmer plate, and without any fire risk.

Belasco—master of stage lighting effects—has always used Ward Leonard Dimmers. The largest dimmer installations in the world—Grauman's Metropolitan Theatre; Al Malaikah Temple, Los Angeles; the Cleveland Auditorium and Keith's Albee Theatre, Brooklyn, are equipped with Ward Leonard Vitrohms.

Send us your specifications for estimate.
No installation too small—none too large.

TICKETS

¶ Everyone recognizes that tickets are a necessity in the operation of a theatre. Not only do they serve to give you a proper accounting of the receipts of your theatre, but they also provide an invaluable record of attendance.

¶ Guaranteed accuracy assures you that your tickets provide the check and records which you expect. All INTERNATIONAL tickets are accurately printed and carefully checked before shipment. Modern equipment and thirty years of service enable us to guarantee accuracy.

¶ Whether your needs are for a single theatre or a circuit; for roll, folded or reserved seat tickets; in any quantities, we are prepared to make immediate deliveries. Our plant and personnel are at your command at all times. Service is the keynote of our organization.

Write to-day for samples and prices. If quotation is wanted on reserved seat tickets, send seating diagram.

VITROLITE
in the Theatre

Capitol Theatre
Chicago
(Mr. John Eberson, Architect)
(Lind Construction Co., Builders)

Chose Vitrolite for Walls and Partitions

In planning the washrooms and toilets, Vitrolite was chosen for its changeless beauty and because it is ever clean, ever sanitary. Neither time nor abuse can dull or destroy the original charm of its fire-polished surface. Pencils cannot mark it. Knives cannot scratch it.

Visitors are impressed with these snow-white walls which are and always will be immune from discoloration, bacteria, dirt or any substance. The occasional sweep of a damp cloth keeps it spotless, fresh and inviting.

Prominent architects and builders, with the co-operation of our designing department, are finding new ways to plan and construct beautiful interiors of incomparable Vitrolite—the structural material of limitless decorative possibilities.

May we supply complete information with sample of Vitrolite?

Europe Starts Big Theatre Building Program

Constructs Hundreds of Theatres on Par with America's Latest Picture Palaces

And Europe is turning to American manufacturers for modern equipment, opening a new market that demands cultivation.

"Theatre Building and Equipment BUYERS GUIDE" reaches the executives who are building these new European theatres.

Advertisers in BUYERS GUIDE not only place their products before builders and buyers for the thousand new theatres being constructed in this country annually, but, in addition, are known in Europe as America's leading theatre equipment manufacturers.

The European circulation of BUYERS GUIDE is just one more feature that makes this book the best advertising medium in a field that spends, in America and Europe, over $300,000,000 yearly on construction and equipment.

You need this Film-Safe

Now installed or specified for all Fox Theatres, all new Famous Players' Theatres, many other large and small theatres, Eastman Kodak Studios, Academy of Music, New York, and in many exchanges and laboratories

BECAUSE it protects your films and surrounding property against film storage fire hazards.

BECAUSE it provides a convenient filing cabinet for your films and keeps each film instantly available for use.

BECAUSE it is the only film-safe available that has been listed as standard and labelled by the Underwriters' Laboratories.

BECAUSE it pays for itself. Insurance rating companies make substantial reductions in rates for theatres, studios, exchanges, etc., equipped with American Film-Safes.

There are two sizes of American Film - Safes. Style 1100 has five compartments for five 1,000 foot reels, designed principally for exchanges, studios, laboratories, etc., and style 1200 for five 2,000 foot reels, designed principally for theatre projection booths

The American Film-Safe

The American Film-Safe is a neat, compact, fireproof filing cabinet for films.

It is made of full cold rolled sheet steel with all joints tenoned and pinned together and is practically indestructible.

The safe is of unit construction and may be added to or rearranged at will.

Each film is housed in a separate fireproof compartment and is suspended on a film carriage which automatically moves forward when the door to the compartment is opened. Reels are always readily accessible for handling. Doors to compartments close and fasten automatically.

Each compartment has a bronze label holder on the door into which a card can be inserted so that films can be catalogued or indexed.

American Film-Safes absorb abnormal heat from films and maintain them at normal humidity, thereby increasing the life of the films.

Exterior surfaces are beautifully finished in baked enamel. Interior surfaces are thoroughly protected against rust. Standard colors are olive green with bronze hardware, but they may be had in several other finishes.

No matter what size theatre you have it will pay you to install an American Film-Safe. You may purchase one on the deferred payment plan.

EDNA FERBER

EDNA FERBER'S novels are a faithful transcript of life as it is lived today—city life, town life, country life as the great mass of American people experience it.

Possessing a strong, vibrant personality, with a varied and interesting career as a background, her work reflects that personality in picturesque and vivid imagery. Her interest is with the people who work and struggle and dream toward the fundamentally beautiful things in life, and this innate "trueness" is the secret of the tremendous popularity of her stories.

No woman writer of today excells her in terse, trenchant, and vital delineation of American people in every strata. The society woman, the man on the street, the factory worker, the small town inhabitant—all are equally attracted by the genuinely human, interest-compelling quality of her fiction.

That her work lends itself admirably to screen dramatization, is proved by the success of "Classified," starring Corinne Griffith, and "So Big," a First National production with Colleen Moore in the leading role.

One of this gifted woman's greatest stories is "Gigolo," which will serve as a starring vehicle for Rod La Rocque the coming season.

PETER B. KYNE

NO author of the present day has created more vital characters than has Peter B. Kyne, nor has any writer succeeded in weaving around his characters those whimsical and human events that are essential to the true story-teller's art.

Kyne is the apostle of the "great outdoors". For years he has been an inveterate roamer, and all the seven seas and the islands therein have contributed color for the vivid stories of action that have come from his teeming fancy.

All the world reads Peter B. Kyne. His stories are eagerly sought after by magazine editors and he has been a steady contributor to Cosmopolitan, Red Book and The Saturday Evening Post.

One of Kyne's most loved characterizations is that of the old sea-captain, "Cappy Ricks", made into a great screen production for Thomas Meighan. Another is "The Valley of Silent Men", Wally Reid's most successful screen vehicle Other stories that have served as inspiring motion picture material are: "The Pride of Palomar," "Never the Twain Shall Meet", and "The Go-Getter" His "The Enchanted Hill," is being filmed by Famous Players.

One of his latest and best stories is "Pals of Paradise", which will be made into a screen production by Metropolitan Pictures.

JEANIE MACPHERSON

BERTRAM MILLHAUSER

C. GARDNER SULLIVAN

JEANIE MACPHERSON, BERTRAM MILLHAUSER and C. GARDNER SULLIVAN form a powerful corps of creative talent in the production forces of the Cecil B. De Mille Studios. Their careers are studded with brilliant achievements in the writing and production of outstanding box office successes. They will personally supervise many productions presented by De Mille Pictures Corporation.

A VERITABLE BLUEBOOK

ZELDA SEARS

Noted actress, playwright, author. Wrote Mitzi's three greatest successes, "Pom Pom," "Lady Billy" and "The Magic Ring." Also wrote "Lollypop," the tremendously successful musical comedy. In 1924 she did "The Clinging Vine" in which Peggy Wood scored a triumph.

ROSITA FORBES

Explorer, journalist, novelist, wild animal hunter, Rosita Forbes has packed more experience into a dozen years than most men into a lifetime. Her life is a romance in itself, and her work reflects the highlights of her thrilling adventures. "A Fighting Love" is her latest success.

OWEN DAVIS

Broadway's most successful playwright, the author of more than 100 plays that scored 'hits.' At present he has three outstanding successes on Broadway; "The Great Gatsby," "Easy Come, Easy Go" and "Beware of Widows."

C. GARDNER SULLIVAN

A screen writer whose record of successes is unsurpassed. His work bears the box office stamp, appealing through originality, craftsmanship and entertainment value. His successes include: "The Goldfish," "The Marriage Cheat." "Cheap Kisses," "Playing With Souls," "Human Wreckage," "Hail the Woman," "Dulcy," etc.

JEANIE MACPHERSON

Without a peer as the writer of great screen plays, Miss Macpherson has for years been Cecil B. De Mille's adviser and co-worker. Her great work includes: "The Ten Commandments," "Male and Female," "The Road to Yesterday," "The Whispering Chorus," "Manslaughter," and other outstanding successes.

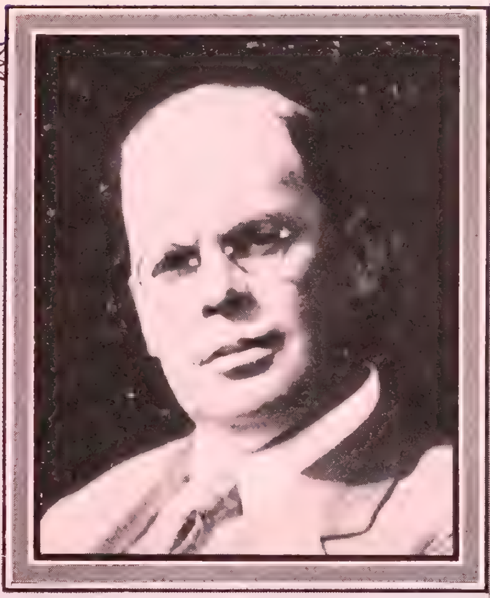
ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

World-famous for his out-of doors stories. His dog stories are the greatest ever written. Among his novels are: "Amateur Inn," "Lad: A Dog," "The Pest," "Treve," "The Man In The Dark," "Tiger's Claw" and "Wolf."

OF WRITING GENIUS

DON MARQUIS

Internationally famous playwright, columnist, humorist. His first play, "The Old Soak," scored heavily. His new play, "Mr. Pie-Eye," will be produced on Broadway in the Fall. "The Cruise of the Jasper B." will be produced as a stage play in New York the coming season.



SAMUEL MERWIN

One of the most distinguished and popular novelists and playwrights of the day. Author of twenty novels and hundreds of short stories contributed to foremost publications. "Silk," "The Passionate Pilgrim," and "Anthony the Absolute," are among his best known novels.

FRANK R. ADAMS

Inimitable writer of light comedies of American life, which have appeared in Cosmopolitan and other leading magazines. Wrote "Peter and Mrs. Pan," "Against All Comers," "This Charming Thief," "Misspent Youth," "Main Highway," "Mr. Man," "Two For Tea," etc.

BERTRAM MILLHAUSER

A brilliant and prolific writer whose work places him at the very top rank. He has written more successful serials than any other author. His feature hits include: "Fools in the Dark," "Feet of Clay," "The Code of the Sea," and "Forty Winks."

The roster of famous authors, dramatists and scenarists who are responsible for the stories for P. D. C. productions, contains the names of the most brilliant writers of the present time. Their works are known to every reader of fiction, every playgoer and every motion picture lover in the country. Their reputations are a guarantee of the excellence of the dramatic material and the superlative entertainment value of our product.

In the list of novelists and short story writers are those whose works have passed the test of the public tribunal and lead the list of best sellers of the day. Dramatists whose plays have made sensational hits on the stage in New York and other metropolitan centers, are well represented. Writers for the screen whose original stories and adaptations have scored heavily at the box office; scenarists whose ability to translate the spirit of the author's work to the screen in convincing and entertaining form has placed them among the very elite of the craft, complete an array of creative talent of distinctive caliber.

At no time in the history of the industry has the demand for good, entertaining, interest-compelling stories been stronger than it is today. "Better Stories!"--is the cry of the public. They are an absolute necessity for the producer and for the exhibitor who must meet that demand.

Producers Distributing Corporation answers that demand with a magnificent array of creative talent, whose works are an absolute surety of story quality.

YOU know how many headaches, grouches, arguments and squabbles are usually found in any batch of a hundred contracts. Well, we just got a SHOCK!

We added up the number of Complete Service Contracts in force as the new season nears. Found there are exactly 5143. Then we started a search for the complaints, adjustments, arbitration actions, etc.

AND FOUND NOT A SINGLE ONE!

Think of it! Five thousand, one hundred and forty three exhibitors getting fifty-four weeks of service under a single contract—gosh, how many reels of film that must mount up to—and not a single solitary slightest shadow of a complaint!

Not only that—but over a thousand unsolicited letters stating plainly that the Complete Service Contract has been a LIFE-SAVER.

Think of that—you boys who haven't grabbed a Complete Service Contract yet!

OF course there is no surprise in this news to the man who already has HIS Complete Service Contract.

He knows he got a GREAT BUY last year. He was grinning when he signed and right now he's laughing out loud.

But we're laughing with him!

Because—and we want to put this tribute to the fairmindedness of exhibitors on the record—

In every case where a Complete Service Contract is being renewed it is done at a SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE IN PRICE! And the theater owner is doing it cheerfully, with a grin—with a mile-wide grin.

That's the acid test. That shows what Complete Service meant to 5143 last year—and will mean to many thousands more this year.

Universal's

Complete Service Contract-The

Contracts
Without a complaint!

CARL LAEMMLE inaugurated the Complete Service Contract as a means of giving the small exhibitor definite, concrete HELP— at a time when he surely did need it. And out of all the contracts we probably undersold our pictures in exactly 5143 cases. Because Carl Laemmle's idea of SERVICE was kept uppermost. Then we turned away hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue by steadfastly limiting it to the smallest men—towns of three thousand population and less.

In the year the Complete Service Contract stood every test! And we are ready for the big news–

THE BARS ARE DOWN!

No matter where your theater or what the size of your town or city—you can walk up to a Universal exchange now and get together on a Complete Service Contract that suits your situation That will start a stampede!

BUT HERE IS EVEN BIGGER NEWS: The bars are down on product too! All of Universal's mighty array of product—the first run record-smashing hits you've read about in recent weeks, the brilliant Greater Movie List that you have feasted your eyes upon—all are now available under a Complete Service Contract.

With just a few exceptions—the Reginald Denny Productions, the Richard Talmadge Productions, and International Newsreel.

It took our breath away when Carl Laemmle gave us the word; then we CHEERED!

Now it's your turn–

Get in out of the rain with a Universal Complete Service Contract and join in the cheering!

Volume XXXIII NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 19, 1926 No. 25

Some Figures

WE are used to speaking of picture theatres in thousands, with more thought about their bulk than their individualities.

A recent compilation here in our office indicates that there are but 763 theatres in the country with 1,500 or more seats.

Of these 763 large houses, fifty percent are confined to five states (New York, California, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Illinois). Seventy-five percent are confined to eleven states; over ninety percent to twenty-two states.

Over one-third of these houses exist in but seven cities—New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, San Francisco and Boston.

In thirty-two cities there are 416 of the total number.

All of which indicates a pretty close concentration of large theatres.

The important point, however, is this: in most of the large cities there are still a great many smaller theatres. For instance, Kansas City with but 4 large houses has in all 75; in Philadelphia the ratio is 28 to 193; in New York City 72 to 254; Brooklyn, 52 to 219; Chicago, 49 to 344; Los Angeles, 14 to 111; Detroit, 21 to 152; Cleveland, 11 to 120; etc.

These smaller houses in the large centres are going to decline heavily in number and the larger theatres—with still larger capacities, will increase.

In fact, the heavy building now going on is largely confined to these cities; and it has but started. This is where theatre changes will be centered in the next few years; and they will be of a character such as to affect the entire industrial structure just as the downtown key city houses have so far defined production and distribution.

It is pretty difficult to define just what is going to happen all along the line. One man's guess is as good as another's.

Big neighborhood houses will be built. They will overshadow the prestige of the former downtown houses. That much is certain.

Some more figures are of interest. The Department of Labor has just issued some tables bearing upon the increase in wages, cost of living, and purchasing power.

Where a man got a dollar in 1918 he now receives nearly $2.38. The cost of living has advanced about 73%. But the wage-earner's purchasing power has increased about 37%.

To apply this to picture theatres:

If a theatre charged fifteen cents admission in 1913, or thereabouts, it is strictly in line with the increase in wages now to charge thirty-five cents. Not only that but the wage earner can now buy more admission—37% more—at 35 cents than he bought twelve years ago at 15 cents.

So the picture theatre situation looks hopeful—in the large cities and the industrial centres where wage increases are most in evidence. It isn't so good in the agricultural sections and those small towns which the cities are constantly draining.

Accordingly, further, to the tables, from 1913 to 1921 the cost of living advanced faster than wages; so much so that in 1918 a man's buying power was reduced so much as 24%. This was a year, too, of high admissions and taxes. Evidently the public will have its amusement.

Speaking Editorially

W. C. QUIMBY, Fort Wayne, Ind., one of the most successful and progressive exhibitors in the business, gave us this week some interesting first-hand views of the theatre situation. He was on a short visit to New York, and displayed, as he always does, a thorough grasp of the whole exhibition problem the country over.

* * *

MR. QUIMBY is a first-rate example of the exhibitor who is just as much an institution in his city as the department store, the bank and the church. He is associated actively with civic movements, and is in every way a substantial citizen. Such a man has the community with him; his theatres have individuality, of course. He gives the people of Fort Wayne the sort of entertainment they want, because he knows how.

* * *

ONE of Mr. Quimby's observations concerned the disappearance of the very small theatre through these three factors: the automobile, good roads, and superior entertainment in the nearby city. This is going on all over the country, as we have pointed out before; a fact substantiated by our own statistical survey. In Indiana, as elsewhere, the movement is in full swing. We are glad to have Mr. Quimby's expert testimony because, curiously enough, the industry as a whole does not seem to be aware of this obvious fact.

* * *

MR. QUIMBY is building a 3,300-seat theatre in the heart of the Fort Wayne business district. It will be one of the finest houses in America. And we are much interested to learn that the consulting architect is John Eberson, of Chicago, whose atmospheric color sketches, reproduced in our Buyers' Guide last week, have created a sensation in the industry.

* * *

PLANS for Greater Movie Season this year are very complete; the field men are being sent out; producers are promising first-rate pictures for the opening of the new theatrical season; and the movement is already well launched.

We have looked over the G. M. S. Press-Book and find it in every way serviceable and helpful. The suggestions are practical. Followed intelligently, we do not see how they can fail to build business and be a vital factor in starting the new season with a rush.

Greater Movie Season deserves the support of every theatre in the country; and all the indications are that the very fine record of last year will be surpassed.

* * * *

THE British film industry, far from being shot to pieces by the recent general strike, actually finds itself in better position than it was previously. At least, we gather as much from The Film Renter, which says:

"We have been hearing much of late about the desirability of every section of the trade co-operating for a common end. This last fortnight we have seen real co-operation in action. True, the occasion was nothing less than that of a national crisis, in which all our industries were threatened. But it is safe to say that, so united were all the branches of the film industry in the endeavor to carry on during that troublous time, that the cinema has emerged from the crisis stronger than ever before. . . . But mere machinery, however admirably assembled, would not have availed to carry the trade through the general strike if it had not been supplemented by the personal good-will, untiring effort and self-sacrificing initiative of all those who applied themselves to the task of circumventing the obstacles which arose."

AN EDITOR ON BROADWAY

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

James R. Grainger

TIME was when a sales manager for a film corporation sat in his office in New York pretty much the year around, and attempted to cope with the highly varied problems in all parts of the country from a desk in New York, with all the limitation in viewpoint which that implied. These days, however, the real top-notch sales executives take the less comfortable but far more efficient course of keeping in constant, personal touch with their lieutenants in the field and visit all of their exchanges not once a year, but frequently.

Time was, too, when the sales department and the production department went ahead utterly without regard for each other's needs and policies. The production department made pictures without thought of how they were going to be sold, and the sales department had little sympathy with the studios. That, too, has changed.

Which observations are inspired by the fact that "Jimmy" Grainger, general sales manager for Fox Films, is off on another of his cross-country trips. Home but a few weeks from the recent Los Angeles sales convention, he has started off on another six weeks' trip to the Coast and back. Among other things, he will spend a week in conference with Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, who has taken personal charge of all production. The closest possible co-operation has been developed between the production department and the sales department, a fact which was reflected in the recent announcement of the Fox schedule for the coming year.

CECIL DE MILLE, Jesse L. Lasky, W. R. Sheehan and those other production chiefs who are laboring earnestly and intelligently to add new personalities to the screen, will be interested in a letter received from J. P. Gruwell, an exhibitor of Wisconsin Rapids.

The letter is in reply to our recent editorial on production costs: Mr. Gruwell takes exception to our concluding paragraphs, in which we said it was up to the exhibitor to use showmanship and exploit these new names in his community, thereby serving himself, his people and the producer.

* * *

MR. GRUWELL says that he picks known values in the names of stars and authors, just as any other merchant does with all nationally advertised products.

Why, he asks, should he accept unknown qualities?

Let these new personalities have nation-wide publicity from the producer, especially if they are to be booked at ruling prices.

Otherwise, let them come to the exhibitor, first, in pictures at a price he can afford to pay and at the same time increase his advertising so as to introduce them to his public.

Anyway, Mr. Gruwell concludes: How is he to judge of the merit of the newcomer when (1) he cannot buy picture merit and (2) he cannot see the pictures in advance.

* * *

MR. GRUWELL'S latter contention is so sound that he and the rest of us can forget his other reasons.

When pictures are booked in block, and signed unseen, only an exhibitor with a seventh sense could pick out for exploitation a new and unknown (to the public) asset.

The producer, of course, could inform him; could send along the advertising, all ready to shoot. But he won't take the producer's word. He cannot take it on pictures. Why take it on new personalities? He doesn't want to be bunked, nor have his public bunked.

MR. GRUWELL doesn't argue against the value of new faces on the screen, nor against our own contention that they reduce production cost.

He simply says that under the circumstances he can only play safe. And we don't blame him a bit. We are going to see, however, that the new and worthwhile players get all the notice they deserve in our columns. It is an important service to the exhibitor.

* * *

IT is timely to report here upon some of the bad economics of the business. It is bad that the exhibitor hasn't more faith in the producer's word about pictures.

It is bad that block booking prevents the exhibitor from advertising merit.

It is bad that the burden of advertising lies so heavily upon the exhibitor.

All this is bad because advertising is so essential to the business; when you stifle advertising you cramp the expansion of motion pictures all the way from the studio to the box-office.

ECONOMICS are bad because the business is young. Just the same, it won't pay to be too patient about its improvement.

We need, and need badly, a new distribution scheme—one that doesn't cost 40 per cent., one that doesn't treat all pictures alike, one that, and this is the most essential, permits advertising to be used as it is with other commodities sold to the public.

IN his letter, Mr. Gruwell brings up a most pertinent question and answers it sensibly, in regard to the limitations of the small town exhibitor—a fact sometimes overlooked in a business accustomed to think in terms of metropolitan first runs. He says:

"Just what would you call 'showmanship' in a small town? Every exploiteer who has come to assist me in putting over a big picture, gave prompt evidence of sublime ignorance of small town psychology. I'll tell you what I, as an exhibitor with nearly fifteen years' experience, think small town showmanship is:

"Keeping your equipment in first-class condition; studying all the trade paper reviews and exhibitor comments you can find, and trying to buy just as many star and author names known to your particular public as you think they will stand; and then keeping in touch with them through your little newspaper, your postoffice mailing list, your telephone and by word of mouth. What else can you do? Street ballyhoos, expensive luxuries, are very liable to backfire. Stunts often give rise to ridicule and sometimes to anger which keeps the public away.

"With our margin of profit so near the vanishing point and getting nearer every day, do you think we should help the producer exploit his new darling? Not by a darn sight! If she—or occasionally he—is good, let him (the producer) try it on the dog, by selling the first pictures so reasonably that we can afford to run them, and then the dear public will begin yelling for them pronto. How about Richard Dix, Raymond Griffith, Reginald Denny, Dolores Costello, Vera Reynolds, Betty Bronson?—'roll your own.' "

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

SIMPLER STORIES

MORE story and less drama will be the recipe for success in the future, in the judgment of Al Rockett, producer for First National at the Eastern studios, and who first gained film fame when he and his brother, Ray, produced "Abraham Lincoln." His views in this respect are so unusual, and yet so sanely rational, that they deserve quotation at length. He believes that the motion picture public today wants sweet, simple stories of everyday life; stories which are "of the people," and which fit the lives of thousands of those who go to picture theatres. "Drama," as usually thought of, he declares is fast being relegated to the scrap heap, and "stories" are taking its place.

"Take the case of 'Subway Sadie,' which my unit has just completed here at this studio," says Rockett. "What is it? Just one of the sweetest and most human little stories imaginable. It is the story of the love affair of a New York working girl and a guard on the New York subway. Thousands of girls the world over will watch this picture and see themselves in the place of Dorothy Mackaill, who has the leading feminine part. She does the human things every working girl does; she lives as they do; she loves as they do. In other words, she is a natural girl in a natural story of a natural love affair. And, like other girls, she has an ambition. It is to go to Paris. But when the chance comes and she finds her sweetheart has been injured in an accident, does she go? She does not. She stays with her sweetheart—just as thousands of other working girls would do. There is none of the old-time drama in this. Instead there is a beautiful story told in a beautiful way and I predict that 'Subway Sadie' will be a winner with them all, as a result.

Dorothy Mackaill gets a flock of high priced attention between scenes of "Subway Sadie" (First National). Director Al Santell puts the finishing touches on her coiffure under the eye of Al Rockett, producer

"Just look around at the pictures that are making the biggest hits today. You will find they are the ones that tell a simple narrative which can be applied to nearly any one of us. Look at 'The Big Parade.' What is it? A story that might apply to hundreds of thousands of our boys who went across during the big war. It is beautifully told, and is natural and human and has its great appeal.

"Glance at our own picture of 'Lincoln.' Why does it have the appeal it has? Why will it be running for years to come? Not alone because it is about our former president. But because it is the human story of this man's life. A story that rings true to all of us.

"In the theatre this so-called 'drama' has long been on the wane. Today we would hoot off the stage some of the actors of some years ago if they appeared before us with the pomposity and bombastic speaking tones and lines of those days. We want naturalness and simple story. It is the same on the screen. It is growing daily and the next few years will see a tremendous change in the type of story being screened. The change is in full swing now."

P. D. C. "CRACKS" BROADWAY

ALTHOUGH the Broadway first-run situation is generally supposed to be as tightly closed as a modern bank vault with the time lock on, Producers Distributing Corporation will have no less than five pictures in Broadway houses during the month of June. The current attraction at the Capitol is "The Volga Boatman." B. S. Moss' Broadway is presenting "Shipwrecked." The attraction this week at the Rivoli is "The Unknown Soldier." On June 26th, the Rivoli will present "Silence" and the Mark-Strand will have "Up in Mabel's Room."

MR. DENNY SEES MANHATTAN

REGINALD DENNY arrived in New York last week on one of those whirlwind tours indulged in now and again by our most celebrated screen stars vacationing briefly—and vigorously—from the studios. His stay in Manhattan was enlivened by visits with the mayor of the town, officials of the Universal Home Office, a theatre or so and a night club or two, to say nothing of various restaurants celebrated for the excellence of the dishes served their guests. Among other occupations, he was the guest of honor at a luncheon for the representatives of the press held last Wednesday. Naturally enough the luncheon attracted a "capacity" turnout—and so there was a large audience to register appreciation of the absence of "after dinner speeches."

The star's trip East from the studios at Universal City was almost immediately followed by a trip from the East back again to the aforesaid studios. Even now he is engaged in jumping from one "key city" to another, in each of which an impressive welcome, which included the formal greetings by the town fathers, awaited the young man who has made so remarkable an ascent to the top flight of screen personalities within a comparatively short time.

BOARD PICKS F. B. O. FILM

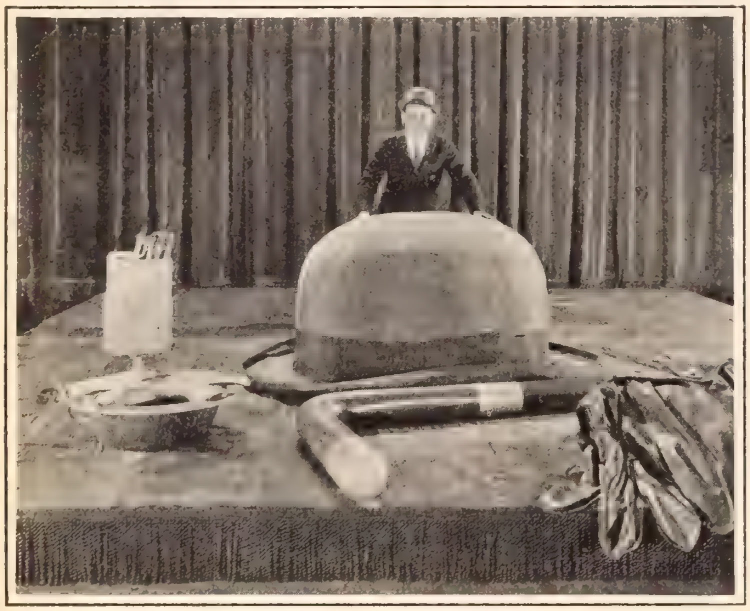
THE only feature to receive the merit asterisk from the National Board of Review was "Bigger Than Barnum's," an F. B. O. release. This is an original screen story by Arthur Guy Empey, and the cast includes George O'Harra, Viola Dana and Ralph Ince.

Asterisks were also pinned on two Pathe Reviews, Nos. 25 and 26, respectively.

"COLUMBIA CHATS" APPEARS

THE latest addition to the house organ field is "Columbia Chats," a snappy, four-page publication edited by Julian M. Solomon, Columbia's director of publicity, the first issue of which is being sent out to the Columbia exchanges. It is largely devoted to production news concerning Columbia activities, and chats interestingly of the Columbia line-up of stories, directors and stars.

Bessie Love contributes a remarkable character portrayal to the screen in her latest picture, "Lovey Mary," at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer



When you see "The Brown Derby," Johnny Hines' latest comedy feature for First National, you will wonder how this was done.

MITCHILL-MORRIS FORMED

GEORGE H. MORRIS, former director of publicity for the Piccadilly and Warner theatres, and a familiar figure in the Night Life of New York, together with Leonard Mitchill, former director of publicity and photography for the United States Lines, has embarked on a promising career as a short subject producer. The firm name is Mitchill-Morris Productions.

The plans of the new concern are highly novel—too novel to be divulged prematurely here. Ten subjects will be produced for national release this year, each, it is hoped, to combine the elements of novelty, entertainment, education and photographic beauty. They will represent, in a degree, a new type of short subject. The first, "Safe Haven," has been completed.

RAMSAYE AT A. M. P. A.

HIMSELF a former publicity man, Terry Ramsaye, film historian and author of "A Million and One Nights," was the honor guest last week at the A. M. P. A. luncheon at Janssen's Hofbrau Haus, New York City. Ramsaye reviewed the early days of pictures interestingly, and told of his own first ventures in the field. He also brought up the subject of his own pet project of creating a Motion Picture Museum.

The guest of honor at this week's meeting was to be Richard A. Rowland of First National, one of the Twelve Immortals.

VIENNESE DIRECTOR COMING

MICHAEL COURTICE, or, as the Germans spell it, Michael Kertesz, a Viennese director, will arrive in New York this month to take up his new duties with Warner Bros. His first assignment will be the direction of "Noah's Ark," Warner's first big spectacle, for which he is particularly well fitted because of his direction in Europe of "Moon of Israel," now on the Paramount releasing schedule.

JOHN KENT ABOUT AGAIN

JOHN A. KENT, the well known laboratory man, is about again in the film district after a four months' illness, and states that it feels mighty good to be back in the midst of things. He announces the termination of his association with W. K. Hedwig, and will divulge his future plans shortly.

BUSY DAVE

FROM Los Angeles comes a postcard from Dave Weshner, for some time associated with C. C. Burr and Johnny Hines, and now assistant director and production manager of the Lester F. Scott Western unit producing for Associated Exhibitors release. Dave writes that he is enjoying the work immensely.

No lengths have been spared to obtain convincing realism in "Subway Sadie" (First National), by Producer Al Rockett and Director Al Santell. The story called for a Silver Slipper Revue. The girls shown here are from the Silver Slipper, a New York night club. Behind them is the largest Silver Slipper ever built. What more could one ask?

A PROMISING DIRECTOR

GREAT interest attaches to the current Robert Kane production for First National, "The Duke of Ladies," for the reason that it is the first American production to be directed by Lothar Mendes, whom Kane has been grooming for ambitious things for the past two and a half months. Now, looking at the rushes, day by day, Kane is convinced that Mendes is a real "find."

Mendes has an interesting background. Of splendid family, and one prominently identified with the social life of Germany and Spain for generations, he had the benefit of a thorough education before he turned to things theatrical. After serious training, he became an actor in leading Berlin theatres. Later, his work as a director for small film companies brought him to the attention of Ufa, and he was engaged as a director for that company.

Don Hancock, editor of the Pathe Topics of the Day, and A. L. Green, investigator for the Graybar Electric Company, measuring the volume of laughter as Topics of the Day is projected at the Riverside Theatre, New York City.

The situation created when an outsider, and particularly a European, steps into an American studio organization is one that calls for careful handling, but it may be said that already Mendes has convinced the studio personnel of the two things which it always wants to know—first, that he "knows his onions," and secondly, that he is a "regular guy." So watch Mendes.

HINES AND BURR BACK

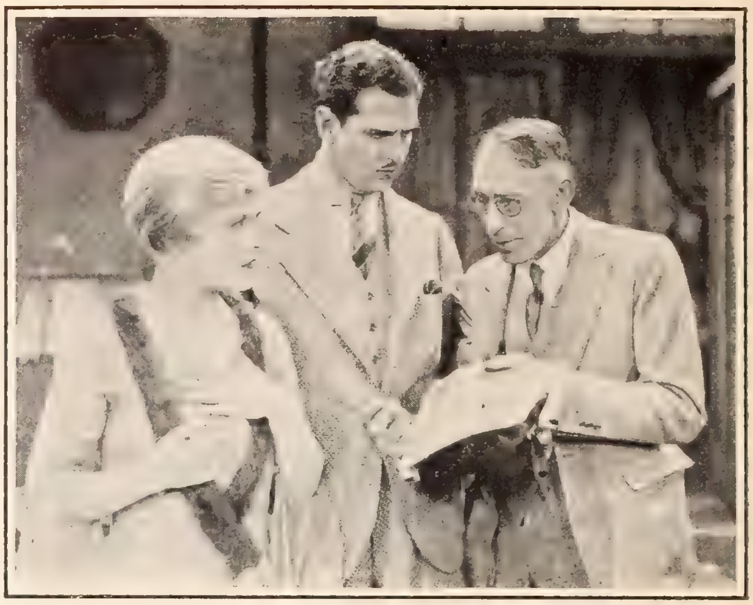
JOHNNY HINES, the First National comedian, and C. C. Burr, his producer, returned to New York on Tuesday from Indianapolis, where they were guests of Robert Lieber, President of First National, at the 500-mile Auto Classic. Hines was much interested in the race, as a personal friend of his, Harry Hartz, was an entrant. During the filming of "The Brown Derby" in Florida, the Miami winter races took place and Hartz lent Johnny his No. 3 speedster for a racing sequence in which scenes of the actual race were included.

In the "Brown Derby" race, Hines came in first. At Indianapolis, driving the same car, Hartz only managed to come in second. Draw your own moral.

THE FILM FRONTIER

AFTER a bad start, due to inclement weather, the Metropolitan Studio unit of nearly two thousand players filming "The Last Frontier," under the direction of George B. Seitz on the desert near Gap Trading Post, Arizona, now has things speeding along in fine shape.

Seitz has the real thing in the way of frontiersmen and Indian braves helping him on the production. Joe Lee, the trader who operates the Indian trading post in Gap, has been isolated on the Indian reservation for nearly fifty years and speaks the Navajo, Hopi and Piute languages as fluently as the redmen themselves. Another invaluable assistant is George Bancroft, or Iron Tooth, son of old Hostes Tees Nez, the Navajo scout who worked under Kit Carson.



Tully Marshall only wants Laura LaPlante and John Roche to autograph their photos, but having seen his screen villainy they mistrust him. All three are in the cast of "Her Big Night," a Universal-Jewel.

M-G-M AND PEP CLUB OUTING

ON Saturday, June 19th, the members of the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Club, and the Paramount Pep Club, organized among the employes of the two organizations, will go on an all-day outing together up the Hudson river to Indian Point. A picnic, with a baseball game and a field meet, will be held.

ROMEO TO COAST

RAMON ROMEO, special writer for Moving Picture Stories and Paris and Hollywood, and personal representative, left on Tuesday of this week for Los Angeles, where he will continue to represent these publications.

Thomas Burke, noted British author, Dorothy Gish and Herbert Wilcox, British producer-director, on one of the sets of "London," Miss Gish's next picture for British National Pictures, based on a story by Burke. Her previous picture, "Nell Gwyn," will be released here by Paramount.

Seating Capacity of U. S. Theatres Shown by Detailed NEWS Survey

FURTHER statistics gathered by MOTION PICTURE NEWS in its two-year survey of the entire exhibition field are presented this week. They cover, in this instance, the number of houses in the United States which are of 1,500 seats or over, and the number under 1,500, thus showing clearly and conclusively where the "big houses" are. The following table is self-explanatory:

STATE	OVER 1,500	UNDER 1,500
Alabama	5	172
Arizona	0	59
Arkansas	1	191
California	52	503
Colorado	5	195
Connecticut	20	156
Delaware	5	35
Florida	6	169
Georgia	5	176
Idaho	0	97
Illinois	63	955
Indiana	20	511
Iowa	9	523
Kansas	7	421
Kentucky	7	235
Louisiana	7	186
Maine	3	180
Maryland	11	170
Massachusetts	48	392
Michigan	33	546
Minnesota	15	365
Mississippi	2	104
Missouri	15	398
Montana	2	106
Nebraska	5	407
Nevada	0	23
New Hampshire	1	120
New Jersey	41	310
New Mexico	0	46
New York	166	1,042
North Carolina	2	255
North Dakota	0	256
Ohio	38	778
Oklahoma	3	356
Oregon	4	145
Pennsylvania	80	852
Rhode Island	8	53
South Carolina	3	118
South Dakota	0	182
Tennessee	9	164
Texas	15	664
Utah	7	100
Vermont	0	72
Virginia	5	186
Washington	10	244
West Virginia	3	171
Wisconsin	16	417
Wyoming	0	52
Dist. of Columbia	6	52
TOTALS	763	13,910

Thus we see that out of 14,632 motion picture theatres in the United States, 763, or 5.2 per cent, are of 1,500 seats or over. The following table shows the distribution of these large houses somewhat more clearly. This table shows what percentage of the total number of large houses in the United States is located in each state. New York, for instance, leads with 21.7 per cent of all the 1,500 seat and over houses in the country, or more than one-fifth. Grouped by percentages, the order of states is as follows:

PERCENTAGE OF TOTAL U. S. HOUSES OF 1,500 AND OVER IN EACH STATE

New York	21.7
Pennsylvania	10.5
Illinois	8.2
California	6.8
Massachusetts	6.3
New Jersey	5.4
Ohio	5.0
Michigan	4.3
Connecticut	2.6
Indiana	2.6
Wisconsin	2.1
Minnesota	2.0
Missouri	2.0
Texas	2.0
Maryland	1.4

Louisiana	0.9
Utah	0.9
Florida	0.8
Dist. of Columbia	0.8
Alabama	0.6
Colorado	0.6
Delaware	0.6
Georgia	0.6
Nebraska	0.6
Virginia	0.6
Oregon	0.5
Maine	0.4
Oklahoma	0.4
South Carolina	0.4
West Virginia	0.4
Mississippi	0.3
Montana	0.3
North Carolina	0.3

New Hampshire	0.1
Idaho	0.0
Nevada	0.0
New Mexico	0.0
North Dakota	0.0

It will be seen that five states, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, California and Massachusetts, contain 53.5 per cent., or more than half, of all the large houses in the United States. These states, with six others, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, Connecticut, Indiana and Wisconsin, contain 75.5 per cent., or more than three-fourths, of all the large houses. This group of eleven states, plus eleven more, Minnesota, Missouri, Texas, Maryland, Washington, Iowa, Tennessee, Rhode Island, Kansas, Kentucky and Louisiana, contains 90.3 per cent. of the total of large houses, or twenty-two states contain nine-tenths of the houses of 1,500 seats and over.

Another interesting tabulation is the percentage of the theatres in each state which are over the 1,500 mark, which also varies widely. This should not be confused with the previous table, which shows the percentage of the total number of large theatres in the country in each state, while the table below deals with each state individually, without regard to the country as a whole. For instance, in the previous table, it is shown that Rhode Island has but 1.0 per cent. of all the large theatres in the country. In the following table, we see that, considering Rhode Island individually, 13.1 per cent. of all the theatres in that state are of 1,500 seats or over. The tabulation by states is as follows:

Survey Shows Number of Large Houses in U.S.

PERCENTAGE OF TOTAL HOUSES IN EACH STATE WHICH ARE OVER 1,500 SEATS

New York	13.7
Rhode Island	13.1
Delaware	12.5
Connecticut	11.4
New Jersey	11.4
Massachusetts	10.9
Dist. Columbia	10.4
California	9.4
Pennsylvania	8.6
Utah	6.5
Illinois	6.2
Maryland	6.1
Michigan	5.7

Since it is obvious that practically all of these 1,500 and over houses are in the larger cities, it is also interesting to consider the various important cities of the country individually. The following table indicates the wide variation in conditions throughout the country, as regards the ratio between large and small houses in each city. The figures are as follows:

PRINCIPAL CITIES, SHOWING NUMBER OF THEATRES OVER AND UNDER 1,500.

	Over 1,500	Under 1,500	Pop.

Seven cities, New York City, Brooklyn, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, San Francisco and Boston, contain 252, or approximately one-third of all the houses of 1,500 or over in the country. Twenty-one cities, including the seven foregoing centres and Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Cleveland, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Newark, Minneapolis, Buffalo, Oakland, Atlanta, Dallas and Dayton, contain 383, or more than one-half of all the 1,500 seat and over theatres in the country.

An important fact, not brought out here but which will be shown in later tables, is the gradual supplanting of the small house by the large theatre, and the rapid expansion in the building of large neighborhood theatres.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has found, in making this survey, that the number of small theatres in small towns is declining rapidly, while the number of small theatres in the large cities remains practically constant, indicating that the only small theatres which are surviving are those located in certain districts of the big cities.

In the smaller communities the gradual erection of large theatres is reducing the number of houses. One large theatre replaces two and often three small houses, either in the same town or in nearby towns.

Much the same thing is going on in the neighborhood locations in the larger cities. Houses of large seating capacity, with all the attractions of the downtown house, plus the convenience of a neighborhood location, appear to be the next great development. Many cities are already overseated as regards downtown, first-run houses, and circuits, as well as individual exhibitors, are now turning to the erection of large, modern neighborhood houses. That, if the statistics are a fair index of the situation, will be the next major development in the exhibition field.

Loew Buys Three Brooklyn Theatres

Frank A. Keeney Houses Valued at Nearly $2,000,000, Add 6,000 Seats to Circuit; Another Deal Rumored Pending

ACQUISITION of the three Keeney Theatres in Brooklyn N. Y., by Loew, Inc., marks one of the most important deals recently made in the New York zone; and adds a matter of 6,000 seats to one of the largest and fastest growing theatre circuits in the world. In addition to this transaction, announcement of which has been made public, comes a report that there is a possibility of Loew also acquiring the Rachmil and Rinsler houses in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn; one of that circuit, the Premier Theatre, already being under lease to Loew, Inc.

The three houses involved in this recent deal of Loew, Inc., are the Keeney Theatres; namely, the Bedford at Bedford Avenue and Bergen St.; the Bay Ridge, Third Avenue and 72nd St., and the Livingston, in Brooklyn's downtown section. Two houses, the Bay Ridge and Bedford, have closed within the past week for the summer season, but will reopen under the Loew banner about Sept. 1. The Livingston draws from a neighborhood which will support a theatre the year 'round.

To those familiar with the theatre map of Brooklyn, it is altogether obvious that with the exception of a few independent holdings in scattered sections of the city, the Loew Circuit has practical control of the better neighborhoods; and, with the rumor of a deal for the acquisition of Rachmil and Rinsler's several houses in the Brownsville district, together with Loew affiliations in Flatbush, the circuit's formidable position can easily be seen. Briefly, it means that Loew, Inc., has under its wing several of the most thickly populated sections of the city, and one which begins in Borough Hall, takes in the Bedford and Flatbush territories, and will, in all probability, extend itself to the outskirts of East New York and Coney Island.

While the policy of the recently acquired Keeney Theatres has not definitely been determined, announcement will be made on Marcus Loew's return from Europe, about July 1. In the past, the Keeneys have adhered to pictures and vaudeville.

Mr. Keeney purchased the Bedford Theatre in April, 1924, from Levy Brothers, builders, for about $1,000,000. He purchased the Bay Ridge Theatre in September, 1921, from the Bay Ridge Theatre Corporation for about $300,000 and built the Keeney Theatre in Livingston Street in 1915.

M.P.T.O.A. Convention Ends in Complete Harmony

Eli Whitney Collins, of Arkansas, Elected President---Allied Organization Disbands and Pledges Support

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

Los Angeles, June 4

ANOTHER convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has, with a harmonious flourish, passed into history. With this brief statement of the fact can the results be summed up of the M. P. T. O. A. meeting from June 1 to 4—the first to be held in the production center of the film industry.

Turmoil and factional disputes eventually gave way to a spirit of good will and optimism. The outlining of a definite program and policy was left somewhat in abeyance at the actual meeting, but the sentiment of the gathering in California was in its final outcome regarded as exceedingly favorable, and the results more than relatively successful.

In point of attendance, the convention was more representative by nearly double as compared with the Milwaukee meeting. It witnessed also the burying of the axe of discord. The disbanding of the Allied States group, of which W. A. Steffes was president, was announced at the closing business session; Steffes having gone on record the preceding day with the statement that he would stand by the national assemblage, and giving evidence throughout the remainder of the time of a thoroughly sportsmanlike attitude of co-operation.

Beyond this the meeting achieved the election of a very promising and well supported directorate with Eli Whitney Collins of Jonesboro, Ark., as president; Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of the Administrative Committee and Business Manager; Harry Davis of Pittsburgh, as chairman of the Board of Directors; George P. Aarons of Pennsylvania, as National Secretary, and L. M. Sagal of Connecticut, as National Treasurer.

Uniform Contract Repudiated

The report of Credentials Committee—which marked the climax of conflict—basing representations in the votes on the amount of dues paid was accepted. The question of the uniform contract was made a practically new issue again with the adoption of a resolution repudiating the results obtained between the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association and the Hays Advisory Committee. Appreciation was simultaneously expressed of the efforts of this committee. The uniform contract issue itself was hotly debated on the floor of the convention.

Other matters, like the music taxation issue, censorship, co-operative insurance and others, were disposed of in a variety of ways. The sentiment was strongly against political censorship and considerable feeling was manifest whenever this subject was brought up for consideration.

There were threats of a complete break during the convention, and one of the demands most frequently made by leaders of the Allied group were for the securing of an official popular representative for the organization, holding a place similar to that of Will H. Hays with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors.

Pettijohn Makes Speech

The most immediate problem is that of contracts, and there is no definite prospect of its amicable settlement, because of the fact that no changes will be permitted for the present by the Will H. Hays office, according to C. C. Pettijohn, representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors at the meeting. "I may state emphatically," he said on the convention floor, "that we cannot and will not change the contract every ten days to suit your wishes," and further indicated that there would not be any contract conferences during 1926.

Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh, advised the striking out of all so-called red-ink provisions in this contract, since these had not met with the approval of the members. He suggested this as a matter of individual duty, rather than of concerted effort on the part of the organization, and indicated that even in its present form the contract could be made acceptable. The red-ink provisions embodying clauses not in the uniform contract approved at Milwaukee need not necessarily be agreed to, he declared, simply because they are printed in the document.

Davis also laid stress on the importance of "mobilization of product," and a clearly-defined policy as regards what the exhibitors intend to do if they do not find themselves working in harmony with individual producers. "The only way to meet this difficulty is to show our power to obtain a product, and we have progressed so far along this line in our own theatres in "Pennsylvania," he continued, "that we know the plan can be worked out satisfactorily."

Plea for Co-operation

Davis also made a plea for support and constructive co-operation, saying that viewing the operations of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners over a period of years it must be conceded that they had gone ahead consistently.

"Give a greater share of confidence to your leaders," he declared, "and you will see even more active progress. It is my belief that they have done extraordinarily well, and that your executives, whoever they may be, can be depended on to do even better, if they have more wholehearted support, of all the members of this body."

It was Davis's speech that practically turned the tide of sentiment, and caused Steffes, H. M. Richey and others of the Allied States group to throw in their fortunes with the M. P. T. O. A. once again, without apparent reservations. The disbanding of the Allied organization was brought about during the ensuing twenty-four hours, with the unanimous consent of the Allied members present, and also one or two who were absent, whose consent was procured by telegraph. Steffes's announcement that they were all in agreement was greeted with cheers on the convention floor.

Allied Disbands

A big feature of the convention, of course, was the first-hand view of production activities by delegates. Visits were made to the studios daily in motor convoys, with plenty of opportunities being provided for the theatre men to visit the sets of the various companies, and observe pictures in the making.

Social functions also comprised such varied entertainments as a county fair, a moonlight bathing parade, a formal ball, and a banquet for the retiring officers, with special tribute to Sydney Cohen as chairman of the Board of Directors.

At all the sessions stars were introduced and speeches were made by Irving Thalberg, Cecil B. De Mille, Lew Cody, Lewis Stone, Alexander Carr, Monte Blue, Robert Edeson, Bert Lytell, Fred Niblo and others, while the list of players introduced included dozens of the very prominent celebrities from Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Universal, Producers Distributing Corporation, First National, Warner Brothers and others. Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford of United Artists were absent in Europe, of course, while Joseph M. Schenck only returned from New York about the last day or so of the meeting.

Practically all the business sessions were delayed owing to the general tendency to make the most of the chance to get better acquainted with production. For this reason also the business meeting on the final day was suspended and the members instead gave their time wholly and entirely to pictures and to becoming acquainted with various personages in the industry.

A Successful Convention

It is to be clearly stated in this connection that the results were more than beneficial. The attractions afforded by the studios themselves were an incentive to get toward objectives more swiftly in the business meetings, and though, comparatively speaking, there may have been as much time devoted to politics as usual, the atmosphere clarified itself as a result of the convention, with the result now hoped for that this may be a year of truly notable accomplishment.

Pearl Merrill of Culver City, is the first woman to be elected a regional vice-president, and Collins the first president to be drawn from a Western State.

Seider Business Manager

Following the close of the day's session the Board of Directors officially met and appointed Joseph M. Seider as business manager. In continuing in this office the organization offered him a yearly salary of $25,000 which he refused, expressing his wish to continue along without pay. A wedding gift of $1,000 was presented to Mrs. Seider.

Several other bits of business were taken up at this meeting. A Music Tax Committee was appointed, composed of members of the Administrative with A. Julian Brylawski as contact point. Dues, the weekly screen magazine released by Cinema Service Corp., and the publication of the Official Bulletin will provide money. The choosing of the next convention city was deferred to another meeting.

Resolutions Passed

The following resolutions were introduced by M. J. O'Toole and passed by the convention: That M. P. T. O. A. not recognize credit committees of the Film Board of Trades; not to fill out their questionnaires, not to answer their summons, but to file all such matters with the National body, who will engage attorneys; advised they don't have to assume film contracts of previous owners; that the official bulletin, edited by Tom Waller be continued, and that the business manager be authorized to organize a statistical bureau; that the contract signed by R. F. Woodhull with the Cinema Service Corp., for the release on a percentage basis of a weekly screen magazine be accepted; that the body approve and cooperate with the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial Exposition; that official censorship in all forms be condemned and that a ways and means movement undertaken to oppose it; the affiliation with other exhibitor bodies with M. P. T. O. A. was likewise considered.

Resolution was introduced praising R. F. Woodhull and Joseph M. Seider for their splendid and faithful work during the past year in their respective offices.

By a vote from the platform all reports of the officers of the M. P. T. O. A. previously delivered were accepted as read.

In reporting on the constitutional amendments, Nathan Yamins stated that all the amendments presented at the seventh annual convention could not be acted upon, as they had not been filed during the time limit of three months before the convention. The by-laws of the M. P. T. O. A. carry this provision.

Constitutional amendments will come under the committee of ten who will be appointed to receive and discuss them and to file them within the proper time before the next convention.

Movie Season National Contest Details

Great Number of Valuable Prizes Offered for Winners; Contestants Required to Identify Stars from Picture Scenes

THE Grand National Contest which is to be conducted in connection with Greater Movie Season this Summer promises to attract hundreds of thousands of aspirants for the prizes, for probably no such array of awards has ever before been offered to the general public for a test of mental alertness and good memory.

The contest, which will be sponsored by a large number of newspapers—42 participated last year and twice as many are expected in for the 1926 Season—simply requires the contestant to identify twenty motion picture stars from photographic episodes selected from their well-known photoplays. Then, after the identifications have been made, the contestant writes a brief letter on "Why I Like the Movies."

There will be local prizes in every city where a newspaper takes part in the contest, and the local winners will all be eligible for the national prizes.

The first Grand National Prize is the same as it was last year—a trip for two around the world on the Red Star Liner "Belgenland." This is a 132-day trip, starting from New York Harbor, visiting Cuba, passing through the Panama Canal and touching the West Coast cities, then to Hawaii, Japan and China, the Philippines, India, the Mediterranean and back to New York. All expenses are paid.

The second award is a trip for two from any part of the United States to Philadelphia, and a two weeks' visit to the Sesquicentennial with which that city is celebrating the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of American freedom. All expenses are paid for the winner of this and the chosen companion.

A unique national award will be gold passes for two, good in more than 500 motion pictures houses in the United States, the theatres being those of Universal, Publix and Warners.

Then there are twenty-five Cine Kodaks—small motion picture cameras made by Eastman, which are just as practical and easy to operate as the famous Kodaks for taking still photographs, by means of which Eastman made nearly everyone an amateur photographer. The prize Cine Kodaks will come loaded with 100 feet of standard-size film, all ready to "shoot."

The local prizes are of value and attractiveness, also. For example, there will be sixty-four Freshman Masterpiece radio sets offered as local prizes.

Fifty sets of Grosset & Dunlap books—50 books in each set—will be local prizes in as many different cities, and besides these there will be 25 sets containing 14 books each.

For example, in some Eastern city the chief local prize will be a Mediterranean cruise on the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's Liner "Orca." This will be a 70-day tour, touching Madeira, Tunis, Venice, Naples and other fascinating points.

A 25-day cruise on the "Orca" will be another local prize—this voyage being to the West Indies and including visits to Panama and Havana. As usual, the trip will be for two persons, with all expenses paid.

In each of four cities, the chief local prize will be a trip for two on the Royal Mail Liner "Araguaya" to Bermuda and return, with accommodations for eight days at the Belmont Manor and Golf Club in Bermuda.

Each day for twenty days the contestants will be asked to identify a movie star—man or woman—from a photograph showing that star in action in a noted production. There is no trick to it in any way. The stars are all well known. The productions are all well known.

Everyone who patronizes and likes movies certainly has some ideas on "Why I Like the Movies," and the writing of a brief letter on that subject should be easy. It is suggested that the letters be kept in fewer than 300 words, and the shorter they are the better.

The twenty-nine best letters—that is to say, the local prize-winners — from each city participating, will be forwarded by the newspaper of that city to Greater Movies Season headquarters, the Will H. Hays offices in New York, and there a committee of distinguished judges will select from them those which are deemed worthy of the national prizes. Each national prize-winner, therefore, will also have won a prize in his or her home town.

F. P.-L. Takes Over Balaban & Katz

Famous Will Purchase Two-thirds of Common Stock at $80 Per Share; May Buy Remaining Shares Later

FULL details of the arrangement under which Famous Players-Lasky will purchase a controlling interest in Balaban & Katz, as announced last week in connection with the proposed $20,000,000 common stock increase, were made available in Chicago on Monday of this week in published newspaper reports. Although no direct statement was forthcoming from either party the B. & K. offices in Chicago indicated that the newspaper reports were substantially correct.

The "Chicago Tribune" version of the story was as follows:

Consolidation of two large factors in the motion picture industry, the Famous Players-Lasky and the Balaban & Katz corporations, was announced last night. The deal, as eventually worked out, will represent well over $100,000,000 and will bring under one management more than 500 theatres throughout the country, as well as several film producing enterprises.

Under the terms finally agreed on the Famous Players-Lasky corporation will acquire a majority stock interest in the Balban & Katz corporation. Stockholders of the latter corporation of record Sept. 1 may sell two-thirds of their common stock at $80 a share to the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, providing such stock is deposited by Sept. 15 with a designated depository.

Balaban & Katz stockholders may elect to receive full payment in cash on Oct. 15, or $40 in cash and the balance in three equal yearly installments bearing 7 per cent. interest; or $40 in cash and the balance in stockholders' option on 10 days' notice, bearing 6 per cent. interest; or the full amount in interest bearing certificates.

While stockholders are not required to sell any of their holdings, if they exercise their rights, Famous Players-Lasky will own two-thirds of the stock. While not a part of the present deal, it was reported in New York and Chicago financial districts that Famous Players-Lasky later will make an offer for the remaining one-third of Balaban & Katz common stock on the basis of the equivalent of $80 a share in exchange for Famous Players-Lasky stock.

"The directors believe the affiliation resulting from this agreement between Famous Players-Lasky and Balaban & Katz corporations is constructive in character and should be of great benefit and advantage to both organizations and their stockholders," says a letter sent out to the stockholders. "No change is contemplated in the management of the Balaban & Katz corporation. The present voting trust agreement will continue in force.

"No stockholder is required to sell any of his holdings, but the undersigned intend to avail themselves of the right. Stockholders will receive any dividends declared payable Oct. 1."

The letter is signed by Sam Katz, Barney Balaban, John Hertz, Herbert L. Stern, Lawrence F. Stern, and Hugo Sonnenschein.

The Famous Players-Lasky corporation at the end of 1925 had total assets of about $76,000,000. Last week the directors announced a proposal to sell about $20,000,000 additional stock to stockholders for financing expansion.

The Balaban & Katz corporation has total assets of about $17,000,000. But based on a price of $80 a share, its outstanding 264,206 shares of $25 par common stock alone is worth more than $21,000,000, although carried on its books at only $6,605,150. Both corporations, separately or together, hold interests in a number of theatre chains and film producing companies, including West Coast Theatres, Great States Theatres, First National Pictures, Educational Films, Lubliner & Trinz, A. H. Blank Circuit, John H. Kunsky, Inc., and Orpheum Circuit.

Accessories Available for Movie Season

A wide range of accessories available for Movie Season campaigns has been prepared by the sponsors of the movement to celebrate the thirtieth birthday of the motion picture. The press book issued by the Hays office contains illustrations of the posters, novelties, newspaper ad cuts, heralds, etc.

A few of the materials which will enable Movie Season campaign committees to give the widest exploitation to the movement are illustrated on this page. While these illustrations comprise but a small proportion of the accessories furnished at small cost to committees and individual theatres, and do not give an adequate idea of the scope of the advertising equipment, they indicate the high quality of the prepared matter for this season's campaign.

The cut of the one-sheet shown here carries an illustration which is featured in heralds and window cards for Movie Season. It is one of two styles of one-sheet paper. There are two styles also in the 24- and 6-sheet sizes as well. The newspaper display, shown at the top of this page, is laid out for a quarter-page ad. The display matter is obtainable in mat and cut form.

Official Endorsement to Aid Campaigns

Support for Movie Season Movement to be Sought of Leading National and Local Personages---Procedure Outlined by Sponsors

OFFICIAL endorsement of the Greater Movie Season movement is expected to play a large part in bringing to a successful issue the campaign which is to be waged this year for the annual drive to stimulate interest in pictures and picture theatres during the month of August. Sponsors of the campaign have paved the way for a vigorous drive along these lines by obtaining expressions of approval for the Greater Movie Season from public officials, heads of industrial, social and civic organizations and religious bodies.

Local campaign bodies and individual exhibitors participating in the campaign are being urged to stress this phase in exploiting their Greater Movie Season movements. In order to facilitate the work the Hays office has prepared material for the use of local campaign units seeking to take advantage of this phase of the campaign activities.

The campaign book issued for Greater Movie Season includes an imposing list of endorsements from prominent men and women. These expressions will be used to impress local officials with the dignity and importance of the campaign.

Sample endorsements and proclamations, to be signed by mayors of cities, are included among the exploitation aids offered in the campaign book.

Following are some of the endorsements for Greater Movie Season written by men and women of national prominence.

WILLIAM GREEN, PRESIDENT, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR:

"It gives me sincere pleasure to congratulate the motion picture industry on the marvelous progress it has made toward meeting the wishes of public opinion by exhibiting pictures that have so much influence for good.

"The celebration of Greater Movie Season this year will recall the history of the industry which during thirty years has proved one of the world's wonders. The motion picture is among the greatest discoveries. It can be classed with movable types, the telephone, electricity, radio and graphophone, all except one having been discovered within the memory of those now living.

FRED C. ROBINSON, GRAND SECRETARY, GRAND LODGE B. P. O. ELKS, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS:

"I am heartily in accord with the plan of the motion picture industry to observe its thirtieth anniversary this year with a Greater Movie Season Celebration.

PROCLAMATION

To the People of . . .

Greetings:

To impress the importance and possibilities of motion pictures and to signalize the immense advances the art has made, a national celebration to inaugurate the Greater Movie Season will open in August throughout these United States.

It is desired to enlist the people of .... in this movement which has the support of many great civic, industrial and social-betterment organizations.

Because of the prominent place motion pictures hold in the public regard, their qualities of entertainment, their educational influence, I hereby urge the people and the commercial bodies of .... to participate in Greater Movie Season that screen-art may continue to advance to our personal happiness and industrial good.

(Signed).......................

GOVERNOR (OR MAYOR)

Today—wherever you go there's a greater show. New model pictures, finer music, comfort, coolness.

No wonder the whole country celebrates!

(List Below Theatres Participating)

"The first observance of this kind, last year, brought the theatre owner and the public into a co-operative relationship that has since manifested itself in the adoption of suggestions and constructive ideas for the advancement of motion pictures to a high degree of usefulness, and this condition has developed a community interest that inures to the upbuilding of every 'neighborhood.' I like to think of the motion picture theatre as a 'neighborhood' asset, and that is what your splendid organization is making it from the standpoint of enjoyable, wholesome and educational entertainment."

GOVERNOR LEN SMALL, ILLINOIS:

"Relative to the observance of the thirtieth anniversary of the motion picture industry with a Greater Movie Season celebration.

"I heartily endorse such observance of one of the greatest features of our National life. I believe the amazing development of this art has brought more happiness and recreation to our people than any other one thing. I trust your efforts for a great celebration may have the largest measure of success."

F. H. KNUBEL, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED LUTHERAN CHURCH IN AMERICA:

"The church is interested in the plans for the thirtieth anniversary of the moving picture industry, because the church is sincerely concerned for that industry. It provides the chief recreation of the people at the present time. It is also one of the important educational influences of the day. The church's concern for that industry arises furthermore, from a recognition of the many grave temptations to which those who direct our moving pictures are inevitably subjected. Every evidence that such temptations are being overcome is a source of genuine joy. It is a cause for sincere congratulation to the industry that the thirtieth anniversary will aim to reveal anew the high purposes of producers and distributors. May our moving pictures go on ever more strongly to uphold the home, the government, and the church."

MRS. MARX E. OBERNDORFER, CHAIRMAN OF THE MUSIC DIVISION OF THE GENERAL FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS:

"I want to congratulate the motion picture industry upon its thirtieth birthday and to assure producers, distributors and theatre owners of my heartiest wishes for the success of the Greater Movie Season Celebration.

"The members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs have received excellent co-operation from the motion picture industry in the recent celebration of Music Week and I feel certain that the vast majority of the members of this organization of three million women will be eager to reciprocate in helping to make Greater Movie Season a success."

HERBERT HOOVER, SECRETARY OF COMMERCE:

"It gives me great pleasure to endorse the second Greater Movie Season which I understand is being held in conjunction with the thirtieth anniversary of the motion picture industry. Any means which has for its object the encouragement of worthwhile pictures both in the educational and entertainment field is certainly deserving of support.

"The progress which has been made in the short space of thirty years toward achieving this end and the striking success of American-made pictures, both at home and abroad, are worthy of the heartiest congratulations. I want to assure you of the co-operation of the Department of Commerce in the movement for celebrating the industry's thirtieth year and in this celebration as well as in your plans for the second Greater Movie Season I wish you every success."

Welfare Leaders Praise Work of Hays

Representatives of Eighteen Large National Organizations Renew Pledges of Cooperation With Motion Picture Industry

A GENUINE testimonial of confidence in the work Will H. Hays is doing toward making the motion picture a vital and living factor in the social and educational life of the world was given Tuesday at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, when representatives of eighteen of the largest national organizations met and reiterated their pledges of cooperation with the motion picture industry.

The dinner was given in honor of Mr. Hays by former members of the Committee of Public Relations which was organized four years ago and the function was presided over by Lee F. Hanmer, of the Russell Sage Foundation, who was chairman of the committee throughout its existence.

Among those attending were James E. West, chief scout executive for the Boy Scouts of America; John F. Moore, representing the Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. Robert Speer, representing the Y. W. C. A.; the Rev. George Reid Andrews, of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Charles A. McMahon, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; Mrs. L. Grant Baldwin, motion picture chairman for the Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Thomas A. McGoldrick, Chairman, Department of Literature, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; Hugh Frayne, of the American Federation of Labor; Howard A. Braucher, Community Service, Inc., C. H. Atkinson, of the Boys' Club Federation; Arthur E. Bestor, of the Chautauqua Institution; Leroy E. Bowman, of Columbia University; Harold S. Buttenheim, of the American City Bureau; George E. Dickie, of the Playground and Recreation Association of America; Mrs. Benjamin Marshall, of the Young Women's Hebrew Association; Mrs. S. Marshall Williams, of the Parent Teachers' Association; Mrs. George M. Young, of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Charles M. Bull, of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer, of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Miss Ruth Rich, of the National Committee for Better Films; Wilton A. Barrett, National Board of Review; Henry Israel, of the American Country Life Association; Mrs. J. E. Featherstone, Pres. N. Dak. Federation of Women's Clubs; Jason S. Joy, director of the Department of Public Relations; Governor Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and others.

The progress that has been made by the motion picture industry in the last few years, the unfailing cooperation given by Mr. Hays, and the wisdom of the cooperative efforts made possible through the Open Door policy of the industry—now developed into the Department of Public Relations—were the principal points brought out at the meeting.

''The reputation of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ is staked on the success of work Mr. Hays is doing,'' Dr. Andrews said. ''And we are going to help him to success,'' he added.

''During the years we have been cooperating with Mr. Hays we have met with unfailing courtesy and the heartiest spirit of cooperation. I feel we are making real progress and every day the relations become more cordial and more cooperative. As I try to think the situation through, there is one thing on which I fasten—that is, that we can get at the motion picture industry. That is an advancement. And the motion picture industry can get at the church through the organized Protestant churches in the Federal Council, and through these two organizations we confer.''

Will H. Hays

Mr. Hanmer, after outlining the progress of the Public Relations Committee and the Department, declared that three things struck him in the development: First, he noted the improvement in advertising motion pictures, he said. Another thing is the strides made in the ''humanitarian'' work incident to the employment of men and women, he declared, and the third the discrimination displayed in the selection of subjects for pictures through a mutual agreement and understanding by which certain books and plays do not become motion pictures.

''I feel awfully good about the situation,'' concluded Mr. Hanmer. ''I feel that a great achievement has been put through.''

Mr. West declared it was the duty of every one to avail himself of the opportunity offered by the Open Door to do his share. Any one who does not do something constructive, he said, has no just right to complain. He, too, said he knew of nothing offered which had not been productive of results if a real earnest effort was made by the public.

''The responsibility is on our doorsteps,'' he said. He pleaded for a better understanding of the whole idea behind the public's relations with the motion picture industry and for a clearer understanding of the men who are engaged in the work, and suggested that steps be taken immediately to bring to the public consciousness of these important points.

Mr. McMahon said he came from Washington, D. C., where the Upshaw and Swoope bills for federal censorship had recently been argued, and he told of the protest he had lodged with the congressional committee against both.

He protested against the bills on which he said no civicly inclined man or woman would be allowed to serve. He, too, spoke highly of the cooperation given by the industry.

Mrs. McGoldrick said that the International Catholic Alumnae had tried every way to help pictures and that the only really successful way they had found was in cooperation with the industry.

The vast superiority of American films to the films of other lands was commented upon by Mr. Moore, of the Y. M. C. A.

''I think it is only when one has been in Europe and attended motion pictures in different lands that he begins to realize the very fine motion pictures we have here at home,'' he said. ''In contrast with those of European production, they are far, far ahead and this also impressed me. From the standpoint of cleanliness of theme and treatment we are immeasurably ahead of most of the European countries.''

Mrs. Baldwin said that one of the most encouraging things to her in the situation was the increasing cooperation between exhibitors and the public.

''I think you all know that my one plea has been for personal responsibility,'' she said.

Mr. Frayne spoke of the cooperation between the American Federation of Labor and the industry.

Colonel Joy told of the accomplishments of the past few years and laid particular importance upon definite forward steps which had been taken as a result of suggestions made by members of the committee.

Mr. Hays, who was the last speaker, voiced his appreciation for the spirit of the dinner and reaffirmed his promises.

''This is to me,'' he said, ''the accomplishment of success—the squaring of the performance with the promise of performance, the accomplishment of which is yours. The doing of its duty by the industry measured by its importance in the fabric of society is the dearest thing in life to me. Now that is almost literally true. Certainly there is nothing aside from that which all of us regard as dearest to the heart—with only those intimates of home excepted—and the accomplishment of this purpose is my life.''

''Let us make the motion picture all that we know it can be in furnishing amusement for the masses in this country and the world—an essential thing,'' continued Mr. Hays. ''Let us make it fulfill its possibilities as a means of education; fulfill its possibilities as a means to advance right ideals and religion and to carry to the whole world such an understanding of each part to the other parts that with such understanding they cannot hate, so that when they cannot hate they cannot make war. So all together let us go forward with the enthusiasm we had when first we saw the vision—with that confidence that the thing can be and will be done.''

"Danny" Honored at Golf Tournament

Committee Reports Over $1,000 Subscribed for Memorial—New Plan for Donations Announced

ONE hundred and eighty golf players, all connected with the film industry, had a great day at the Wing Foot Country Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., Tuesday. They broke no records and most of them failed to get under the hundred mark but every man came away with the feeling that it was the most successful and enjoyable tournament ever held, in spite of the fact that there were moments of sadness when the name of Joseph Dannenburg, who originated the film tournament idea, was mentioned.

Tribute to the memory of Danny came to a dramatic climax at the dinner when Elmer Pearson proposed that thirty seconds of silent prayer be offered by those assembled at the tables in the main dining room of the Wing Foot clubhouse.

Prior to this there had been noise, laughter and considerable hilarity of various kinds. In a moment the whole room was as still as a church and the service began. Many eyes were wet when the half-minute was over.

After the prayer, Mr. Pearson made some explanations regarding the Danny Memorial.

He stated that over a thousand dollars had been received by the committee composed of William A. Johnston, editor of The NEWS; Jack Alicoate, Danny's partner in the publication of Film Daily, and Ralph Kohn of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, but that it had been decided by the committee that donations of over $10.00 per person are to be refused. Donations of fifty and hundred dollars each, already received, are to be returned.

The committee is to make all the arrangements for the memorial before the next tournament to be held in the Fall. In the meantime subscriptions will be received by any member of the committee.

The golf tournament was blessed with wonderful weather that brought an unusually large crowd out for the morning rounds and made the foursome matches in the afternoon doubly enjoyable.

M-G-M Report for 12 Weeks Shows Gain

THE Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer report for the twelve weeks ending May 8th, 1926, indicates a profit of $1,465,667 after the deduction of all expenses except the Federal taxes. The gross profit amounted to $5,807,480 from which the operating expenses when subtracted leave a balance of $1,306,510. Other sources of income totaled $159,157.

The low gross score was won by Tom Moore, of Washington, D. C., with a card of 77. Mr. Moore secured the Warner Brothers Cup which last Fall went to Christy Deibel of Youngstown, O.

Mr. Moore also won the Jules Mastbaum Cup for low gross exhibitor score and might have claimed the F. B. O. Birdie Cup. He made three birdies but withdrew his claim in favor of George Wilson the Tyrone, Pa. exhibitor and Felix Feist of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who had two each. Mr. Wilson won the cup on the toss of a coin.

The low net Reuben Samuels Cup was won by Mr. Wilson also. This trophy was also tied between Mr. Wilson, Eddie Aarons of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and John Sullivan. The score was 88.

Mr. Aarons won the low gross runner-up trophy, the cup donated by MOTION PICTURE NEWS with his 88. The low net runner-up cup (Pathe Exchange, Inc.), was won by W. H. Rabell on the toss of a coin with Herbert Lubin. Mr. Rabell's and Mr. Lubin's low net was 72.

George Wilson was the winner of the leg on the Film Daily trophy and the Carl Laemmle putting contest cup went to John Sullivan, with a one.

Other winners of grand prizes are as follows:

Class A (Arthur W. Stebbins Cup) by Elmer Pearson.

Class B (Watterson R. Rothacker Cup) by William Collier, Jr.

Class C (Jack Cosman Cup) by George Blair.

Jules Brulatour trophy, a brassie, spoon and driver, by Roy Aitken.

J. P. Muller Agency trophy, a $25 order on A. G. Spalding, by Elmer Pearson.

The following won flight foursome trophies: William E. Raynor, E. P. Curtis, J. A. Roe, Melvin Hirsh, George Byrnes, Fred J. MacConnell, C. E. Sawyer, Guy Wonders, Al Fair, Harley Knoles, Hal Hodes, Fred Rothenberg, Al Feinman, J. S. Dickerson, Roy Aitken, Samuel Rubenstein, Jerry Keyser, George Mueller, Harry Scott and Milton Jentes.

The runner-up flight winners were:

Billy Gaxton, Fred L. Herron, W. E. Atkinson, Pat Campbell, J. W. Hoover, Oscar Shaw, Ray Johnston, Arthur A. Kane, Charles Schwartz, D. J. Chatkin, F. W. Crosbie, A. L. Pratchett, Dick Weil, Tom Evans, J. V. Ritchey, Jr., William Orr, Lynde Denig, Arthur Hoerl, A. L. Gray, H. Raives, Frank Newman, Felix Feist, J. V. Ritchey, Jr., John Clark, Joseph Miles, Hy Gainsboro, Earl W. Hammons, Louis Brock, Jean Picker, W. A. Johnston, Bernerd Edelhertz, Harvey Day, Fred Wilson, Harry Brandt and Oscar Neufeld.

The booby prize went to Mike Simmons of the Exhibitors Daily Review.

No plans were made for the Fall meet but it seemed to be generally agreed that the Wing Foot Course is the best place to hold the tournament if it can be secured.

The Consolidated Film Laboratories were on hand with a motion picture camera, shooting the guests as they arrived. A print of the film was developed and rushed to Wing Foot in time to be shown at the dinner.

Portions of a golf sequence of "The Old Army Game" were also shown as a part of the film program.

Fox Advanced on Filming Schedule

Production Finished on Five Features; Four Pictures Are Now Being Cut and Titled

IN preparation for the coming season Fox Films now have ready five feature productions with four more being cut and titled. Five others are in various stages of production and approximately fifteen are being made ready for filming.

Those completed are: "3 Bad Men," which John Ford took a year in making; "No Man's Gold," starring Tom Mix; "30 Below Zero," a Buck Jones starring vehicle; "Fig Leaves," "The Family Upstairs," "The Lily," with Belle Bennett; "Married Alive," with Matt Moore, Margaret Livingston and Lou Tellegen; "Pigs," and "Womanpower," from the story "You Never Can Tell," by Harold MacGrath.

Raoul Walsh is well along on "What Price Glory?" Tom Mix is at work on "The Arizona Wildcat," John Ford is working on "The Devil's Master," Alma Rubens is engaged in "The Pelican," and Buck Jones is busy with "White Eagle."

Particular attention is now being given by the casting officials to "The Return of Peter Grimm," which Victor Schertzinger will direct with Alec B. Francis in the title role, while Alfred E. Green will soon come to the New York Studios to make "The Auctioneer," in which George Sidney will be featured.

Shortly after Madge Bellamy returns from Europe within a few weeks, she will start on "The Monkey Talks," Rene Fauchois' international stage success, in which Jacques Lerner, "the monkey" in the legitimate production, will make his movie debut.

After Frank Borzage finishes directing "The Pelican," he will give his attention to "7th Heaven," some scenes of which probably will be shot in Paris, the locale of the play which John Golden presented. Announcement is expected shortly on the director and cast for "One Increasing Purpose," the A. S. M. Hutchinson best seller, the outdoor scenes of which are scheduled to be made in England.

Among pictures in various stages of progress toward the studios is "The Music Master." It will be directed by Allan Dwan.

Irving Cummings will start shooting next week on "The Country Beyond," from the James Oliver Curwood novel.

Famous Players Case Again Delayed

Failure of Trade Commission's Council to Agree on Course of Action Holds Up Decision on Reopening

INABILITY of the legal staff to agree upon a course of action is greatly handicapping the Federal Trade Commission in its efforts to complete the case against Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, it was declared by Commissioner Van Fleet during the course of a hearing June 3, in Washington, D. C., on the application of Chief Counsel Hainer for an order reopening the case.

The order asked would vacate all rulings of the trial examiner striking out evidence introduced by the respondents and provide for the consideration by the commission of all such evidence physically in the record. It would further permit the respondents, if they desired, to introduce additional competent and material evidence "upon any matter in issue herein," it being upon this point that the arguments centered.

The argument in favor of the order was presented by Martin Morrison, of the commission's counsel, who criticized his opponents for the lengthy brief of exceptions they had filed, declaring that it would have been necessary only to point to one instance where the trial examiner had barred material testimony. He charged the respondents with lack of faith, declaring that they had withheld some exceptions in order to bring them up later, should they desire, which was later denied emphatically by Bruce Bromley, counsel for Famous Players.

Mr. Bromley offered a modification to the order, limiting the taking of testimony to the question of block booking, declaring that block booking and theatre ownership were the only real issues in the case and that the latter could be disposed of by acceptance of the stipulation filed some time ago setting forth the theatre acquisition of Famous Players and its competitors between 1924 and 1926.

This suggestion was immediately seized upon by the commissioners, who declared that if something of the sort was not done "no present member of the commission will be here when the decision is finally made." Mr. Morrison, as well as Chief Counsel Hainer, was asked whether this would be agreeable, and their failure to make a satisfactory response was severely criticized by members of the commission, it being declared by Commissioner Van Fleet that the commission's greatest trouble was in getting the legal staff together and that if Mr. Hainer did not want to take the responsibility of acting in the case he should designate one of his associates to do so.

It was suggested that the legal staff, four members of which were present at the hearing, should get together and decide whether the new testimony could not be limited as suggested by Mr. Bromley, which elicited no response from Mr. Hainer. Mr. Morrison declared there was no necessity for the taking of further testimony, but that the commission should issue an order requiring the respondents to cease their unfair methods of suppressing competition.

Mr. Bromley pointed out that the bill of exceptions was filed in response to a definite order from the commission and had been kept to a minimum of space.

Unless the order providing for the taking of further testimony is modified, he declared, it would be necessary again to tour the country at great expense, both to the Government and the respondents. Many of the former witnesses cannot now be secured, it was pointed out, leaving the possibility that the respondents would be unable to cure the trial examiner's errors. Further, he said, it has been admitted that the commission's theory of the case has been completely changed in some particulars. "Commission's chief counsel," it was declared, in a brief filed with the commission, "has candidly stated that it is ridiculous to contend for the theory (upon which a large part of the commission's evidence was taken) that it is illegal for a producer and distributor of motion pictures to own and operate motion picture theatres. His assistant, in charge of the case as trial counsel, now contends that block booking constitutes an illegal price discrimination under Section 2 of the Clayton Act, whereas the whole case against block booking was tried on the theory that the practice if it possess any taint of illegality, was because it was a form of full line forcing."

All that is desired, Mr. Bromley said, is to introduce a half-dozen witnesses to show that block booking is almost universally employed in the industry, and the only issues left in the case are whether the respondents have a monopoly in any substantial section of the country and whether block booking, as practised by the respondents, is an unfair method of competition.

"It is obvious," he pointed out, "that, were respondents in response to the order for which the commission's counsel contends at once to start another year's journey in an attempt to gather the testimony excluded by the trial examiner, they would still, in 1927 or 1928, be in the position of claiming that the trial examiner's errors had not been cured."

The commission adjourned the hearing when it became evident that its own counsel could not come to an agreement on this point, taking the proposed order under consideration.

"U" Again Offers Complete Service

Success of Plan Last Season Leads Company Officials to Heed Requests of Exhibitors for Product on Same Terms

CARL LAEMMLE announced this week that the bulk of the Universal product for next season would be offered to exhibitors under the Complete Service Plan, inaugurated by the company last year, in response to the requests of the many exhibitors who signed for the product under this type of contract last season. Universal officials claim five thousand exhibitors utilized this means of getting product during the past year.

The Complete Service Plan, which consists of offering the entire Universal output at a flat weekly rate, except the super-Jewels and a few other pictures prohibited from such an arrangement by unavoidable producer-distributor contracts, has worked to the advantage of small theatres as well as big first-run houses and chains.

The contract allows the exhibitor, for a flat weekly rate, to play a Universal feature and the accompanying short product every week. The short product alone amounts to enough footage to supply short subjects for his feature program and an additional All-Short Subject show during the week. When it is realized that Universal releases one feature picture, a two-reel Stern Brothers Comedy, a one-reel Bluebird Comedy, a two-reel Mustang Western drama, a two-reel chapter of a serial, as well as other special short subjects now and then, it readily can be seen how selective the Complete Service contract is for the theatre owner.

The novel sales method originally was intended for the small theatre only. It was a means of giving the little theatre a complete show at the minimum price. The extension of the Complete Service plan to larger theatres and even to first-run houses and theatre chains was a logical development.

Twenty-eight Jewels, twenty-four Blue Streak Westerns, the Famous Authors five serials, the new Buster Brown comedies, the four new Stern Brothers series, including "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies and three other series, as well as 52 two-reel Mustang Western dramas, 52 Bluebird one-reel comedies and 24 Gump comedies, are made available to exhibitors for the coming year under a flat-rate basis.

Wobber Enroute for Berlin to Assume New Duties

Herman Wobber, West Coast district manager of Paramount, sailed on the Majestic this week for Berlin, where he will assume his duties as a member of the executive board of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The executive board is in charge of the company's affairs in Europe and is made up of Wobber, in charge of distribution; Cecil Graham, chairman in charge of finance, and Albert Kaufman, in charge of exhibition.

Cruze Now Filming "Old Ironsides"

Radio Utilized in Shooting of Battle Sequences; "Fort of Tripoli" Set One of Largest Ever Erected for Motion Picture

FILMING of practically all of the main sequences of "Old Ironsides," the Paramount special production which James Cruze is directing, have been completed and B. P. Schulberg, associate producer at Paramount's West Coast Studio, who has just completed a survey of nine reels of the picture, pronounces it one of the best ever made by Paramount. Esther Ralston, Wallace Beery, George Bancroft, Charles Farrell and Johnnie Walker are featured in the cast of this production which will be shown in New York this Fall as a roadshow attraction.

In directing the battle sequences James Cruze, for the first time, made practical use of the radio, and through the medium of 26 specially designed receiving sets he commanded more than 2,000 actors and 26 ships.

Radio to Direct

Peter Harrod, head of the electrical department at the Paramount Studio, worked for more than three months perfecting a broadcasting outfit small enough not to interfere with local radio stations yet large enough to prove efficient. The station operated on a 110-meter wave length, with the code letters KFP. It was Harrod and his staff who also made the specially designed receiving sets.

One set in this picture is looked upon as a masterpiece by the men who made it. It is the towering Fort of Tripoli, which stands on the coast of Catalina Isthmus.

When Cruze was assigned to direct the picture by Paramount he sailed to Tripoli to get maps, drawings, photographs and paintings to be used for a faithful reproduction of the original locations. The photographs and plans of the Fort of Tripoli were turned over to Edward J. Smith, art director at the West Coast Studio. Infinite detail went into the architectural plans and specifications.

Shaw Constructs Sets

The actual building was in charge of Leroy K. Shaw, construction expert, who aided in erecting the magnificent sets used in such productions as "The Ten Commandments," "The Pony Express" and "The Vanishing American."

The dimensions of the fort are as follows: 750 feet at the base in a straight line, or 1,500 feet in a serried line, following the shore contour, with a sea wall 3,000 feet long. The height in a straight line from base to top is 225 feet, or 375 feet on a diagonal.

It took 150 artisans to build the set. First the area had to be cleared of cactus and greasewood. Two roads, each half a mile long, had to be built inside of four days, the men blasting part of the roadbed out of rock. Not the least task was the planting of 75 full-grown palm trees on the fort premises.

The fort is a thing of menace and beauty, painted a sand gray. It mounts a dozen long-barreled cannon, has concealed platforms for cameras, and a feature is the dome of a mosque almost in the center, marking the top of the prayer hall where the Tripolitan warriors prayed to Allah for victory before going into battle.

The long shots of the battle scenes were taken both from the shore and from a barge anchored at sea. On the barge were Cruze and his technical assistants, cameramen and helpers. Cruze stood in front of his radio microphone, directing every detail of the battle. Loud speakers on each vessel and on the shore carried his instructions to all of the 2,000 men participating. More than two weeks' of intensive effort were required in the filming of the sea battle.

Feeding, Big Task

In producing a picture of the size of "Old Ironsides" there are many things behind the scenes which are just as amazing as those which you see on the screen. A big task was the feeding of the 2,000 actors appearing in the battle sequences, and these 2,000 were fed within a period of 60 minutes. More than three tons of food was prepared daily.

These camera angles convey some idea of the sweep and grandeur of "Old Ironsides," the tale of the battle-scarred frigate which James Cruze is directing for Paramount. More than two score vessels and twenty-one hundred men participated in the sea encounters which form such an important part of the film.

Al Christie, Comedy Producer, Analyzes Box

THE money making miracle of mirth is not at all miraculous when one considers that the whole world loves to laugh and the purveyor of mirth has an inexhaustible market.

In the United States the popularity of feature length comedies is as general and as American as ice cream soda. And cold figures show that the appeal of the feature comedy is universal because it goes out over all the world and makes its mark in the foreign field as a ''money making miracle.''

I have just finished reading a trade paper which reviewed six new productions. Of a western melodrama they say: ''Will fill the bill wherever fast Westerners please 'em''; of a melodrama they say ''Should win anywhere unless your patrons are extra prudish''; of a comedy melodrama with a foreign setting they write ''May do business in some neighborhood houses and smaller theatres'': another melodrama: ''Should win wherever they want the real fast action melo films'': a crook mystery-comedy: ''Suitable for average house, community theatres and towns.'' Then—the sixth picture, a feature comedy, they say: ''A good box office bet for all sizes and classes of houses. Has universal audience appeal.''

This is just a chance example, but one I think of great significance. The other five pictures appeared to be all very good productions, and one especially was an outstanding attraction. It was the comedy, however, which received the recognition of being a picture of ''universal audience appeal.'' And I believe it is unquestionably true that comedy comes closer to the universal taste than any other form of entertainment.

While the appeal of humor is universal, public taste for mirth is constantly changing and the producer of comedy has to keep an ear even more closely to the ground than the creators of dramatic offerings.

At present there is a tendency both in feature length pictures and in short comedies to entertain with light sophisticated stuff. An audience preview last week in Los Angeles of ''Up In Mabel's Room'' demonstrated the amazing fact that youngsters in the audience were the quickest of any to grasp the humor of the subtle situations and laughed harder at them than they used to do at acrobats who fell into the mortar vats and tar barrels.

If it is true as certain psycho-analysts tell us, that the average movie audience has the intelligence of a fourteen-year-old, I'll say that a movie producer has got to be up on his toes to satisfy the super-critical and keen-minded fourteen-year-old youngster.

This fact imposes the hardest kind of study and work upon the producer of feature comedies and the preparation and actual production of five or six thousand feet of comedy film must be done in an environment of mirth. By this I do not mean that we work in a riotous atmosphere. The production of comedy is, after all, serious business and I have found that comedy can best be produced in a studio devoted exclusively to comedy; where everybody is thinking and studying the psychology of humor. And this study is at once the most interesting as well as the most difficult in the entire range of entertainment.

To secure adequate material for our feature length productions released by Producers Distributing Corporation requires constant vigilance. Every form of comedy that is produced on the stage in every foreign country as well as in America receives our immediate attention. It is studied from every angle and its public reception is carefully noted. In New York City Carroll Trowbridge is constantly on the alert for material that makes its appearance in the metropolis, either at the Broadway theatres or in printed form. In England and in the Continental countries we have representatives who review and advise us of every stage comedy and everything written in a humorous vein that appears in printed form in their respective countries. Charlie Christie, who looks after the business management of our various enterprises, is also a scout for material; and in his travels in America and abroad he is constantly on the lookout for production material.

In connection with the subject of the value of comedy at the box office, it is particularly interesting to note the case of the stars, whose very names alone bring crowds to theatres both here and abroad, but who are, nevertheless turning to comedy to supply material for their stories.

Most noticeable of such cases is the instance of one of the most beloved of all the stars, a woman whose dramatic genius and personality have endeared her to millions of people the world over, Miss Norma Talmadge. Her latest vehicle, "Kiki" is a comedy, and according to all indications will eclipse box office records hung up by her previous pictures, none of which have been comedies.

No mention of feature comedies could fail to include the phenomenal success of likable, unassuming Harold Lloyd. Abroad, his popularity is just as outstanding a factor, which makes a tremendous difference in the grosses.

Chaplin's artistry is so unbounded by territorial limits that he reaches perhaps the highest point of universal appeal. What seems to be a miracle indeed, is the tremendous value of the re-issues of his old comedies, even the three-reelers—proving indeed that good comedy is a miracle at the box office, not for just a few weeks but for an apparently unlimited length of time.

That great artiste, Mary Pickford, is, I venture to say, indelibly etched on the hearts of picture goers everywhere as a comedienne, and beloved as such rather than as the actress of great dramatic power that she also is.

Another specific case, where a comedy through its wide appeal has astonished the trade by its box office records hung up over all the world, illustrates the money making miracle of the feature fun film. "Charley's Aunt" has become a box office byword in America and reports from other countries indicate that its world distribution is growing to extraordinary proportions.

With such domestic success, it might be taken for granted that something about the story had a particular appeal to the American mind but such has not been proven the case. In the United Kingdom of Great Britain it is considered the most successful box office picture of the year, although it was only released last fall. It is of interest to note that when rating pictures the "most successful," "most artistic," "greatest romance," etc., the London Weekly Dispatch awarded "Charley's Aunt" the position of the most successful picture of 1925. The picture won this place in less than three months as it was not released for British Exhibition until October, 1925.

I was surprised just the other day when I saw "Charley's Aunt" on the marquee of a new Hollywood theatre on Vine Street.

The secret of the box office appeal of the feature comedy is the deep rooted desire of every human being to be free of the cares and depressing things of everyday living. Without a doubt the really funny picture is the most diverting form of entertainment to not only the American, but the foreigner of every race, color and creed. Underneath we are much the same. Laughter is a tonic and a relaxation that we are more than willing to buy for a few cents at the ticket window. It is a commodity for which there is a desire as well as a demand and therefore "the money making miracle of mirth" is not a miracle at all.

British-American Reciprocity on 1-25 Ratio Proposed; No Action Yet on Plan

ALTHOUGH there was nothing in New York to indicate acceptance or definite consideration on the part of the American industry, reports from London this week stated that the sub-committee representing the British film industry has formulated a definite plan for reciprocity between the two countries.

The plan is understood to call for the distribution in America of one British-made film for each 25 American pictures sent to England, the same to be given regular distribution. The cost of each British film is to be not less than $50,000, one-third of which is to be advanced by the American distributor upon delivery of the American negative, the producer to receive one-third of the gross after negative cost is returned. The American distributor is to have full control over story, cast and director.

Newspaper reports to the effect that Colonel Lowry, acting for the Hays organization, had accepted this plan were denied in a cable from Lowry. Individual companies denied knowledge of any definite arrangement, and indicated that individual deals of this sort were likely to obviate the need for concerted action by the industry.

Paramount, it is understood, has acquired American distribution rights to "London" from British National Pictures, to follow "Nell Gwynn."

Original Music Best for Films

Mrs. Del Castillo Predicts New Method in Talk to General Women's Clubs

A NEW form of music, written to meet a special need, is going to develop in America soon because of the motion picture.

This is the opinion of Mrs. Mina G. del Castillo, of Cambridge, Mass., noted musician, wife of a noted musician, and mother of an equally distinguished musician, who was one of the chief speakers at the General Federation of Women's Clubs Biennial here Saturday.

The screen, with its flash-backs, its rapid movements, its restless, shifting scenes, holds within it tremendous possibilities for creative composition, Mrs. Castillo believes, and as rapidly as composers are made aware of these possibilities a new form in music is to develop.

''Much already has been done,'' Mrs. Castillo said, ''and many pictures have been scored with original music. 'The Miracle Man' was one such and practically all of the Douglas Fairbanks productions have splendid musical scorings.''

Mrs. Castillo is convinced that the quality of music is a distinct factor in the enjoyment of pictures and she believes that good pictures may be spoiled to lovers of good music by inappropriate accompaniment.

''The women's clubs of America,'' she said, ''have a very definite opportunity and responsibility for working on musical appreciation through the moving picture theatres of our country. They must take it upon themselves, as a part of their work, to spread the gospel of good and appropriate music in the theatres.

''Two ways to do this suggest themselves to me. First, they should interview their theatre managers and tell them of their wishes in this regard. They will find the theatre manager willing to co-operate with them if they go at him in the right way. Second, they should encourage the best musicians of the community—those with real musical ability—to play in the motion picture theatres. These musicians should have dramatic sense as well as musical ability and the best musicians, therefore, should be available.

Lou Tellegen to Enter Fox Directorial Staff

Lou Tellegen

AS soon as he finishes his work in "Womanpower" and "The Pelican," Lou Tellegen will bring into play his stage and film experience when he will handle ''His Honor's Wife" in association with Robert Lord.

Tellegen has had directorial experience before, having piloted Jack Pickford about ten years ago in "What Money Can Buy." On the stage he was associated with the late Sarah Bernhardt as leading man, often staging her productions. He was also associated with the late Eleanora Duse.

Francais Theatre Acquired by Quebec Exhibitor

Donat Paquin, veteran exhibitor, of Hull, Quebec, has further increased his theatre enterprises by taking over the Francais Theatre, Dalhousie Street, Ottawa, this making the fourth theatre which he operates in Ottawa and Hull. He re-opened the Francais on June 5 after it had been thoroughly renovated.

June 25th Date of Midwest Film Golf Tournament

To assure the success of the Spring tournament of the Midwest Film Golf Association, the Film Board of Trade, and the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, have both declared June 25th a holiday so that film men and exhibitors alike may attend without any worry over business cares. Invitations to the tournament went out on June 7th, but any golfer in the industry failing to receive one is urged to get in touch with Len Ullrich at Pathe's Chicago exchange, 1025 S. Wabash.

The list of prize donors to date includes in part: Ascher Brothers, Lubliner & Trinz, Marks Brothers, Balaban & Katz, Midwest; Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Associated First National Exchange, Fox Exchange, Pathe, F. B. O., Schoenstadt Brothers, Beverly Bayne, Martin Quigley, Harry Langdon Corporation, Balaban & Katz, Si Greiver, Renown Exchange, Winkler Pictures, and the Standard Cinema Corporation of New York.

Chas. Meade Resigns From Canadian Universal Films

Charles A. Meade, an outstanding exhibitor of Canada, has resigned as general manager of theatres at Winnipeg for Canadian Universal Films, Limited, to accept an important theatrical position in New York City.

Meade was formerly with United Artists Corporation but became identified with A. R. McNichol, millionaire theatre owner of Winnipeg, later becoming general manager of the three houses controlled in Winnipeg by Universal, there being the Lyceum, Starland and College. He has been in Winnipeg during the past three years.

Open Detroit and Pittsburgh Tiffany Exchanges

M. H. Hoffman announces that Tiffany Exchanges have been opened in Detroit and Pittsburgh to handle Tiffany productions exclusively. Allan S. Moritz has been appointed manager of the Tiffany Detroit Exchange with offices located at No. 153 E. Elizabeth Street. The Pittsburgh Exchange will be under the management of Charles A. Lynch with exchange headquarters at No. 1010 Forbes Street.

Fox Invades Foreign Field for Successful Plays

MAURICE S. REVNES, an executive of Fox Films, and Arthur Hornblow, Jr., manager-director of the Robert Milton Company, sailed Saturday, June 5th, on the "Majestic" to negotiate contracts in London, Paris and Berlin. They will be gone for a period of two months.

The reason for going abroad is to secure both stage and film plays adaptable to motion picture treatment. Consideration will be given to an exhaustive list of plays and others which they may be attracted or advised to see.

Aside from his activities for Fox Films, Revnes has been deputized by Sam Harris to scan the dramatic field and make recommendations he may deem advisable regarding the securing of rights to successful plays for presentation by the theatrical producer.

Midwest Booking Company Organized in Oklahoma

A booking company was organized in Cordell, Oklahoma, last week, to be known as The Midwest Booking Company. Buck Wakefield, of Clinton, is the president; G. A. Peterson, of Hollis and Cordell, vice-president, and C. M. Jagers, of Oklahoma City, secretary and booker. So far the towns controlled by this company are eleven.

The next meeting of the Booking people will be June 12th at a resort, Dripping Springs, at Cordell, Oklahoma, when a large picnic will be held. All the film exchange managers, bookers, salesmen, and exhibitors throughout the state will be invited to attend.

Maine Supreme Court Gives Daylight Saving Decision

The Supreme Court of Maine has just handed down an important decision on daylight saving, under which schedule many of the Maine theatres are operating. The court rules that the use of other than Eastern Standard Time in Maine is not a matter against which an injunction may be issued except in cases where a municipal order is issued to authorize it.

Maine Statutes prohibit enactment of any municipal order permitting the use of daylight saving time. The court rules that even public schools may be on daylight saving time provided no municipal order is necessary to authorize the change.

Bullock Named Counsellor by Cleveland M. P. L.

Sam Bullock, for many months out of the local film activities on account of poor health, has sufficiently recovered to make a personal appearance in the Film building. The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors League has appointed Bullock counsellor-at-large. His duty is to help any exhibitor member of the organization in presenting his case before the Board of Arbitration. Because of his vast experience as an exhibitor and as a field worker, Bullock is especially fitted to help any exhibitors who want to avail themselves of his assistance.

Mary Brian Signed to Long Term Contract

MARY BRIAN has been signed to a new long term contract by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Mary Brian

Miss Brian first came into prominence with her portrayal of "Wendy" in the Paramount picturization of Barrie's "Peter Pan." She afterwards appeared in "The Street of Forgotten Men," "The Air Mail," "A Regular Fellow," "The Enchanted Hill," and "Behind the Front." Her latest Paramount picture is "Beau Geste." The production in which she will appear has not yet been announced.

Cecil B. De Mille

DE MILLE PLANS PRODUCTION
To Be Based on the Life of Christ

OFFICIAL announcement was made this week by Cecil B. De Mille of his intention to visualize the life of Christ in a production bearing the title, "The King of Kings." No date has been set for the commencement of filming but Jeanie Macpherson is now at work on the story with Dennison Clift, Clifford Howard and Jack Jungmeyer rendering assistance.

"It is my intention," states Mr. De Mille, "to stress the humanity as well as the divinity of Christ in "The King of Kings." He will not be suggested by a beam of light or a glowing halo, but will be seen as a living, breathing, lovable man. I approach with humility the greatness of this subject and am fully aware of the tremendous difficulties that will be presented in its filming. But I know I have with me the faith and hopes of millions, and with these behind me I am confident of presenting to the world an effective and lasting screen portrait of the greatest, most lovable, most dramatic life history has ever known."

Grauman Houses in U. A. Chain

Two Theatres Form Nucleus; Other Building and Circuit Expansion News

SID GRAUMAN'S fifty percent interest in the Egyptian Theatre, and his two-third interest in the Chinese Theatre, now under construction, both of which are in Los Angeles, will form the nucleus of the United Artists chain of twenty pre-release houses. It is planned to present United Artists features with elaborate presentations, says Grauman.

Reports of theatres to be built and the acquisition of houses by circuits were not as numerous this week as they have been during the past month. The Luna Theatre, Danville, Pa., which has been operated for a number of years by Comerford, has been sold to the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc.

One of the important deals among exhibitors, and which has been pending for some weeks, was consummated this week with the purchase of the Premier, Empire, Palace and Colonial theatres in Lawrence, Mass., by Dr. Siskin and Frank Bosketti. The Premier and Empire theatres are strictly picture houses, the Palace runs pictures and vaudeville and the Colonial plays stock.

Present plans of the new owners are to continue the same policies in operation in each of the theatres with the probability that the Colonial will run pictures when the stock season closes. The new owners have incorporated under the name of the Empire Amusement Co.

The Apollo Theatre, 52nd and Thompson Streets, Philadelphia, which has been operated for some years by Charlie Segal, has been sold outright to the Stanley Company of America. The Apollo has been one of the most profitable smaller houses in West Philadelphia and its acquisition by the Stanley Company gives the company control of practically all of the houses on the Broadway of West Philadelphia.

Two theatres in Wellsboro, Pa., the Arcadia and the Bache Auditorium, have just passed into the control of William Woodin, who has for some time been operating the Keystone Opera House in Towanda, Pa. The former owner was L. H. Cooke, who operated the houses. Mark Woodin, son of the new owner, will continue as house manager of the Wellsboro properties.

In a deal just consummated in Hazleton, Pa., the Diamond Theatre comes under the control of Fred Wurtz, who has acquired the property from Fred Drumbraski. No change will be made in the policy of the house.

Julian Will Direct Two Specials for De Mille

UNDER his new contract with the De Mille studio Rupert Julian will direct two specials this year. They are "The Yankee Clipper" and "Silk."

Rupert Julian

"The Yankee Clipper" is a story by Dennison Clift as prepared for the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan. Production will start late in June with most of the scenes to be filmed aboard the clipper ships, "Indiana" and "Bohemia," both of which are owned by Cecil B. De Mille. Julian will be assisted in this production by Leigh Smith.

The second special, "Silk," is an adaptation by Jeanie MacPherson of the novel by Samuel Merwin.

CELEBRATE 400th PERFORMANCE OF "BIG PARADE" AT ASTOR, NEW YORK CITY

ON Sunday evening, June 6th, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer celebrated the four hundredth performance at the Astor Theatre, New York City, of "The Big Parade," with a gala showing which was attended by many stars of the screen and stage. Renee Adoree, who is featured in the production, was introduced to the audience and spoke on the picture.

Judging from the financial returns at the box-office of the theatre for the past seven months "The Big Parade" promises to earn considerable sums for the exhibitors and its producers. The average weekly receipts have slightly exceeded $20,000 with a grand total for the period of $571,818.68.

According to the producers the picture has proved just as popular in all other cities.

Three Supervisors Appointed

Cunningham, Ritchey and Willis Named for Metropolitan Studios by Sistrom

WILLIAM SISTROM, general manager of the De Mille-Metropolitan studios, this week appointed Jack Cunningham, Will M. Ritchey and F. McGrew Willis production supervisors at the Metropolitan plant where they will carry the making of pictures right through from beginning to end. This is in line with the big production schedule mapped out for the 1926-27 season.

Jack Cunningham, who is also acting as Metropolitan's general scenario editor, will have supervision over two of the Marie Prevost productions, ''The Night Bride'' and ''Man Bait,'' the Metroplitan special, ''Jim the Conqueror'' from Peter B. Kyne's story; ''The Heart Thief,'' with Joseph Schildkraut, which is to be made from the stage success, ''The Highwayman,'' and also Priscilla Dean's ''West of Broadway.''

Will M. Ritchey, who is one of the most successful writers in pictures, will be the supervisor of Peter B. Kyne's ''Pass in Paradise,'' one of the coming Metropolitan specials; ''A Harp in Hock,'' Priscilla Dean's ''Jewels of Desire,'' and the big western epic, ''The Last Frontier,'' which he also adapted for the screen. Ritchey joined Metropolitan after being sent abroad to do the scenario of ''Romola.''

F. McGrew Willis, who did the scenarios for such productions as ''Charley's Aunt,'' ''Madam Behave,'' and ''Up in Mabel's Room,'' for Christie productions, and who did ''The Million Dollar Handicap'' for Metropolitan, will be the supervisor of three of the Marie Prevost starring pictures, ''Almost a Lady,'' ''For Wives Only,'' and ''Getting Gertie's Garter.'' He will also supervise Frank Condon's story ''No Control,'' which will be a Metropolitan comedy special, and ''The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary'' to be filmed from the stage play in which May Robson appeared for many seasons. Willis has just finished the scenario of the Al Christie special, ''The Nervous Wreck,'' and the supervision of ''Almost a Lady'' Metropolitan's first production starring Marie Prevost.

Father of Lee Marcus, F.B.O. Executive, Passes Away

Albert Marcus, father of Lee Marcus, general sales manager for Film Booking Offices, died early Saturday morning, June 5th, at his home in Buffalo, N. Y., from a complication of diseases. Mr. Lee Marcus, who had been called to Buffalo by his father's illness, had returned to New York, but went back to Buffalo late in the week when it was known that his father would not survive, and was at his death-bed.

Mr. Marcus, who was fifty-eight years old, is survived by his wife and Lee Marcus, his only child. The burial took place last Monday.

Columbia Pictures Signs Harry O. Hoyt

COLUMBIA Pictures Corporation has engaged Harry O. Hoyt, director and writer of motion pictures, to write and direct a series of Columbia pictures, according to an announcement this week from the Columbia studio in Hollywood by Harry Cohn, vice-president.

Hoyt has just completed the continuities for two recently purchased pictures, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and "Pleasure Before Business," the last named by Montague Glass. The first of the series which he will direct will be a screen adaptation of Jean Peary's story, "The Belle of Broadway," to be written by J. Crubb Alexander. Some of the things he has done in the past are "The Lost World," "The Perfect Flapper," "The Primrose Path," "Flaming Youth," "The Unnamed Woman" and "The Woman of the Jury."

"Mighty Like a Moose" and "Long Fliv the King"

Two Reel Comedies

If you could get features that every one averaged as high in quality as the Chase comedies, you'd be a mighty happy man. You'd yell about them from the house tops.

How often do you read trade paper reviews of features as enthusiastic as those on this page?

If you want to have your house rocked by laughter; if you want to get as much money as you can, play Chase.

Here's a straight tip,—you'll hear it by the "underground" later; "Mighty Like A Moose" is just about the greatest two reel comedy ever made!

"Dog Shy"—Hal Roach—Pathe
A Very Good Comedy

Type of production . . 2 reel comedy

Charley Chase and an excellent supporting cast which includes Stuart Holmes, Mildred June and Josephine Crowell and a most important bull pup are the fun-makers in this Roach comedy which easily ranks with the high average hit by this comedian. The laughs depend a good deal on the many excellent touches and bits of business injected by the director—Leo McCarey. The plot is slight. Charley whose pet aversion is dogs, takes a job as butler just to be near the girl he loves. Her parents want to marry her off to the Duke—Stuart Holmes—but he turns out to be a crook and just by accident Charley apprehends him as he is throwing the family safe out of the window. To be exact, the safe lands on Charley. Some very good laughs have been gotten out of the situation in wh Charley is told to give the Duke bath, the dog's name being Duk Charley misunderstands and attemp to forcibly wash Stuart Holmes. An other funny bit comes where Charley is told to exercise the dog. He takes the dog out on the lawn and proceeds to walk around him.

"Mum's the Word"
(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

THIS IS AN absolute knockout of a comedy. Hal Roach has supplied Charley Chase with possibly the best vehicle he has ever had, and Charley, directed by Leo McCarey, does splendid work. There can be no mincing of words in describing this subject. From beginning to end it is one of the funniest yet, and sure-fire in a showman's eyes. He who doesn't book it will lose one of the best comedy bets of the year. Martha Sleeper, Virginia Pearson and Anders Randolf are in the cast. The story: Charley's mother has married again, without mentioning her grown-up son. He visits her and her new hubby, the suspicious sort, and she makes her son masquerade as valet. The way Charley wields a razor and shines shoes is a caution. There also is a new maid, and Charley and she fall in love. Charley gets caught paying a night visit to his mother, and catches the maid visiting his father-in-law. Explanations reveal that the maid is really the man's daughter.—Sumner Smith.

"Mama Behave"
(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

THIS Hal Roach comedy starring Charley Chase will tip off husbands as to how to avoid going dancing with their wives, when said wives insist on spending most of their time on the polished surface. Charley, it seems, cannot master the intricacies of the Charleston, no matter how long instructed by his wife, in this subject Mildred Harris. With the aid of a faithful butler he dodges dancing appointments until Vivian discovers, by a bit of detective work, that Charley is really a Charleston expert. The ensuing events, with Vivian Oakland and Syd Crossley assisting in their developments, are funny enough to make a blind man laugh. In fact, this is a peach of a Charley Chase comedy. Leo McCarey directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.—S Smith.

"Dog Shy"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

HAL ROACH has scored another two reel comedy hit with this one which features Charley Chase and Stuart Holmes and other favorites of the screen. Apparently, this is further evidence of Roach's plan to supply exhibitors with the addition of a prominent star to a well balanced cast. So, call in your publicity man again—and tell your electrician to get busy—for here's one that will bring your patrons back for more. It sparkles all the way through with just about as high grade comedy as any one will want to witness. Charley Chase is cast in the most prominent role—however, Stuart Holmes teams up with him in great shape. As to the story—Charley, who has been "dog shy" since childhood, is chased into a telephone just vacated by Holmes who has the role of the fake Duke. The receiver is off the hook and at the other end of the line is the girl who is trying to avoid marriage with the supposed nobleman. She tells her troubles to Charley who gains entre to her home in the guise of a butler. A scream of a scene follows when Charley is given the task of washing a pet dog called "Duke." Charley siezes the real Duke instead of the dog. Events follow which reveal the pseudo-duke and Charley gains the good graces of the family and a fiance. Leo McCarey is credited with the direction.

The Cast

Charley Chase, Stuart Holmes, Mildred June, Josephine Crowell and William Orlamond.

Summary—A sure fire comedy attraction with a strong aggregation of players. Pla the picture would be great instead of merely good

CHARLES CHASE IS ON CHICAGO screens again, in "Dog Shy." He took the town by storm with his "Mamma Behave," and it ought not to be long now before exhibitors begin billing his comedies as they deserve.

Mr. Chase has the comedy sense. Someone else may or may not plot his gags, but he snaps them across. There is the impression, too, that he insists upon funny ones. At any rate, this comedy, like the other more recent ones before it, is as funny as two reels of him can be made in 99 cases out of 100. That's funny enough for me.

CONWAY TEARLE, AGNES AYRES and Alyce Mills are the three

"Dog Shy"
2 reels
Pathe

This two reeler stars Charley Chase who has in his supporting cast such well-known feature players as Stuart Holmes, Josephine Crowell and William Orlamond.

Charley as a baby was scared by a dog and although grown to manhood, he has never outgrown his fear for the canine species. When he takes the job of butler in the home of the girl he loves, things move at a quick pace for Charley, since one of his duties is the care of the pet dog.

There are several extremely funny incidents in this altogether entertaining comedy. For example when Charley is ordered to bathe the Duke, being advised to use force if necessary, a side splitting situation develops when he commences to disrobe a distinguished looking count who is visiting. Of course, Duke is the dog. Charley's pantomime is wonderful.

When Charley is instructed to exercise the dog, he proceeds to demonstrate for him by doing the daily dozen.

And besides, this is a comedy with a real plot.

Decries Presentation Stress

Jack Warner Foresees Lowering of Production Quality if Tendency Persists

TOO much stress is being placed upon big presentation acts by picture houses at the present time, says Jack Warner, production chief for the Warner Bros. Instead of improving the quality of their pictures producers are concentrating too much on presentation features that are used for advertising purposes, says Warner.

Jack L. Warner, production chief of Warner Bros.

Warner sees ahead only disaster for the exhibitor and producer, save those producers and distributors who maintain extensive theatre chains and can guarantee vaudeville headliners up to thirty weeks of lucrative work, if the present tendency persists. It will mean a stifling of competition in the production end and sure death to the smaller exhibitor, he contends.

"At the present time there is a very small margin of profit to the picture producer," says Warner. "He is putting tremendous sums in his productions and he is reaping but little reward. There are few producers who can stand this gaff long. Consequently, less money will be put into pictures and the market will be flooded with inferior pictures.

"Warner Bros. are spending more money this season on their Twenty-Six Warner Winners and the nine big specials than the company has ever spent on production in a single season in the past. We hope continuously to improve our product, but we can only do this with the support of the exhibitors and others who should have the interest of the industry at heart."

As illustrating his contention Warner pointed out that the Capitol Theatre, New York City, grossed $30,000 a week during the running of a poor film and $70,000 with a good production though the presentation both weeks was just as good.

Sets 43 Days' Protection Limit in "Kiki" Case

JUDGE JACOB STACEL, seventh arbitrator appointed by the Board of Arbitration of Cleveland to decide the case of the Ohio Amusement Co. against First National Pictures, Inc., which culminated in a tie when tried by the Board, ruled that "Kiki" although listed as a "Special" should be available to the subsequent run house operated by the plaintiff company, 43 days after the close of its first-run engagement at the Stillman. The ruling was made in accordance with the zoning plan in effect when the contract in question was made, but which has since been abandoned.

Regarding this phase of the case, Judge Stacel said, "It is my opinion that the contracts and the zoning plan agreed upon at the joint meetings should be construed together in determining the intention of the parties and the usages of the trade."

According to the ruling the Jewel Theatre should have been permitted to exhibit "Kiki" on May 30th. However, Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres, blocked this when he obtained a temporary injunction against the local First National Exchange, restraining the Exchange from delivering a print of the picture to the Jewel Theatre. Desberg claims priority rights on the picture.

Changes Made in Release Schedule of Gotham

A slight re-arrangement has been made in the release schedule of Gotham Productions. "The King of the Pack" will be released as number four instead of number three and will be available November 1st instead of October 4th; "The Final Extra" will be moved from the sixth place to number three, making this picture ready October 4th instead of January 3, 1927; "The Block Signal" will be moved up to sixth place and will be released on January 3, 1927, instead of November 1, 1926.

The balance of the Gotham list will remain as originally scheduled and announced.

Walsh Filming Battles in "What Price Glory?"

PRODUCTION work on "What Price Glory?" has been brought up to schedule in spite of delays caused by fogs earlier in the season. The battle scenes are being staged under the direction of Raoul Walsh at the Fox West Coast studio with hundreds of ex-service men in the garb of U. S. Marines re-enacting the battles featured in the narrative by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson.

The lot wears a decided wartime aspect with French villages, long lines of trenches, field pieces, caissons, mortars, long range guns and guns on railway tracks, ambulances, motorcycles and numerous vehicles propelled by horse and mule power.

"Three Bad Men" Will Be Released Sept. Fifth

"Three Bad Men," John Ford's romance of a nation in the building, will be released direct to exhibitors on September 5th. The decision to place this successor to "The Iron Horse" at the first of the season was spent a year on location with his company in the Jackson Hole country in Wyoming and in the Mojave Desert reconstructing the story of the westward march of civilization.

"The Three Bad Men" are J. Farrel MacDonald, Frank Campeau and Tom Santschi. The roles hero and heroine are played by George O'Brien and Olive Borden. Other names in the cast are Lou Tellegen, Otis Harlan, Alec B. Francis, Priscilla Bonner, Grace Gordon and George Harris.

Murnau to Make "A Trip to Tilsit" for Fox Films

F. W. Murnau, European director, will do "A Trip to Tilsit," based on Hermann Sudermann's novel, for Fox Films.

He has booked passage on the S. S. Columbus from Bremen on June 23 and is due in New York on July 1. He will be accompanied by his own technical staff and cameramen.

The Sudermann opus is now being adapted for the screen by Dr. Karl Mayer, who adapted "The Last Laugh," "Faust" and "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari."

Metropolitan to Limit Length of Pictures

A POLICY to make all their coming productions adhere to a uniform length has been adopted by the production departments of Metropolitan Pictures Corporation.

"Six reels has been decided upon as the ideal length for all good feature productions," says William Sistrom, general manager, "and this limit will be adhered to with possibly few exceptions during the coming season. The exhibitor would prefer productions in 5,800 feet rather than in 7,000 feet if they can be produced without sacrificing showmanship value."

This decision, which was decided upon after an investigation of exhibitors needs, will enable showmen to build a show successfully without sacrificing the surrounding bill of comedies, news reels and novelties.

Woodhull Lays Cornerstone of New Paramount Studio

Motion Picture exhibitors and producers joined last Saturday in the dedication of the new Famous Players-Lasky studio on Melrose Avenue, Hollywood. Gathering about the foundation stone were several hundred members of the M. P. T. O. A., studio officials, and screen players, who watched R. F. Woodhull, retiring president of the exhibitors' organization, perform the last official act by applying mortar to the cornerstone of the structure.

The visiting delegation was headed by Woodhull, Sydney S. Cohen and Glenn Harper. They were welcomed in a short speech by Milton E. Hoffman, executive manager of the studio. The visitors concluded the day's program with a trip through F. B. O., Mack Sennett and Marshall Neilan studios.

Warners Finish Barrymore's "Manon Lescaut"

"Manon Lescaut," John Barrymore's starring vehicle adapted from the famous opera of that name, has been completed at the Warner Bros. West Coast studio. The final shots were made last week and the picture is now in the cutting room. It has been in production for several months under the direction of Alan Crosland.

"Manon Lescaut" will have the benefit of synchronized music by the Vitaphone, the new synchronization device controlled by Warner Bros.

Pathe Will Release Carey Film on June Twentieth

June 20th has been set by Pathe as the release date of the Harry Carey feature, "The Frontier Trail," which was produced by Charles R. Rogers and directed by Scott Dunlap. It is an adaptation of a story by Richard Schayer and Basil Dickey. The supporting cast includes Julian Mabel Scott, Ernest Hillard, Frank Campeau, Nelson McDowell, Charles Hill Mailes, Harvey Clarke, Aggie Herring and Chief Big Tree.

F. B. O. Completes Cast for "Kosher Kitty Kelly"

The complete cast for "Kosher Kitty Kelly," one of the early Gold Bond productions of F. B. O. for the coming season, will consist of Viola Dana, who plays the title role; Tom Forman as Pat O'Reilly, Vera Gordon as Miss Feinbaum, Nat Carr as Mr. Ginsberg, Stanley Taylor as Morris, Carrol Nye as Barney, Kathleen Meyers as Rosie, and Aggie Herring as Mrs. Kelly. Production has already begun under the direction of James Horne.

Ginsberg-Kann May Open Series of Exchanges

It is rumored that the Ginsberg-Kann Distributing Corporation is contemplating the opening of a series of Sterling Exchanges which will market their product directly to the independent exhibitors. The report goes on to state that two or three Sterling Exchanges will be opened shortly in some of the best territory of the United States as a forerunner of a fuller organization to follow.

Universal Buys "The Cat and the Canary"

THE screen rights to "The Cat and the Canary," the successful stage play written by John Willard and produced by Kilbourne Gordon, Inc., have been purchased by Universal as the result of negotiations arranged by David Werner of the Stage Play department of the company.

It will be produced as a Universal Jewel picture with an all star cast and it is understood that it may be the first American directorial assignment of Paul Leni, internationally known film artist and director, recently signed by Carl Laemmle after a successful career with the Ufa Company in Germany.

Alice Joyce Leading Woman in "Ace of Cads"

The leading feminine role opposite Adolph Menjou in "The Ace of Cads" has been assigned to Alice Joyce. The story by Michael Arlen will be started as soon as Malcolm St. Clair has completed "The Show Off" and after Menjou has finished the role of the arch fiend in the D. W. Griffith production, "The Sorrows of Satan."

The screen adaptation of the Arlen tale is now being done by Pierre Collings.

Evelyn Brent's Next Feature Purchased by F. B. O.

An original story by Harry Hoyt entitled "The Princess Pro Tem" has been purchased by F. B. O. as the next starring vehicle for Evelyn Brent. Miss Brent will begin work on the new picture as soon as she has completed "The Flame of the Argentine," under the direction of Edward Dillon, which will be within a few weeks. It will be the seventh of her series of eight pictures for the current season.

First National Begins Summer Billing Drive

The thirty-nine branches of First National started their summer billing drive Sunday, May 30th, and will end it the week ending August 28th. Liberal prizes have been offered branch managers and personnel of the exchanges in connection with the campaign to combat the summer slump.

Warners Secure Screen Rights to Jessel Play

NEGOTIATIONS were concluded this week between Harry M. Warner and Albert Lewis whereby Warner Bros. will picturize "The Jazz Singer," the musical comedy success in which George Jessel has been starring during the current season. By the terms of the agreement and under his contract with Warner Bros., Jessel will be starred and a number of the chief supporting players in the stage production will assume the same roles in the picture.

Plans are already in the making for putting the play on the screen. It is likely that it will go into production next Fall and will be released next season.

Fake Arrest of "Dance Madness" Victim

Charlestons Till Cop Pinches Him—Stunt For Casper Theatre

A FAKE arrest for a dancer who claimed to be afflicted with "Dance Madness," and a sidewalk ballyhoo that complemented the stunt, was one of the novel features of the brisk exploitation for "Dance Madness," when it played the America Theatre in Casper, Wyoming.

M-G-M Exploiteer Hal Elias, who assisted Theatre Manager A. H. Stewart on this campaign, had a "plant" do the Charleston in the center of Casper's busiest corner during the noon hour. After the dancer had attracted the desired attention a patrolman approached him and inquired the "why" of the dance, the Charlestoner replied, "I'm suffering from 'Dance Madness.'" An argument followed, and as the patrolman was about to escort his prisoner to the station house, Assistant Theatre Manager Chancellor intervened and offered to employ the dancer if he were given his freedom. An agreement was reached, and the dancer immediately employed.

Police Commissioner Jarvis was informed of the stunt in advance, and the patrolman acted his part to perfection. Traffic was somewhat confused for a few minutes, but otherwise the city suffered no embarrassment.

This stunt was followed up by having a professional looking man parade the streets carrying a physician's bag on which was neatly lettered, "Prof. Jazz. I cure all sufferers from 'Dance Madness'. Meet me Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at 119 Center Street." (The theatre's street number.)

Warner Bros. radio broadcasting station, 6xBR, is shown here. The traveling station will broadcast programs from leading picture houses of principal cities throughout the country.

Firemen Give Realistic Demonstration to Ballyhoo "One of the Bravest"

AS a result of his exceptional campaign, which featured a tie-up with the local fire department, H. J. Graybill of the Capitol Theatre, Bellaire, Ohio, stands well up among the leaders in the exploitation contest for showmen sponsored by Gotham Productions in connection with that company's picture, "One of the Bravest."

The picture is a "fire" melodrama, and the leading effort in the drive staged by Graybill in Bellaire was a co-operative arrangement with the local department. This tie-up was announced in a most spectacular way. On a Saturday night when crowds populated the streets of Bellaire, the roof of the Capitol Theatre "burst into flames"—an effect obtained with red flares. In record time the fire engines appeared and when the men scrambled up the ladders they unfurled banners reading, "One of the Bravest—Auspices of Uniformed Firemen" and with dates and name of the theatre conspicuously displayed.

The Capitol Theatre had the perfect co-operation of both the police and fire departments and the arrangements went through without a hitch. Newspaper space galore was received by the theatre. The local Chamber of Commerce took the matter up with the city government and "One of the Bravest" became the talk of Bellaire.

Mr. Graybill of the Capitol, backed up his stunt with effective lobby displays and mechanical and electrical fire effects.

Sheridan, in New York, Stars "Fables" in Marquee Lights

The Sheridan Theatre, in New York City, gives feature space in the marquee electrical display to the "Aesop's Fables" films shown there each week. Edwin T. Al St. John Signs for Educational Comedies

THE Educational line-up of comedians who will participate in the 1926-27 product of Educational has been strengthened by the recent signing of Al St. John to appear in eight new Mermaid comedies.

St. John's comedies are of the fast action type in which the comedian displays his athletic prowess. Before appearing in the Mermaid series the comedian was featured in Educational-Tuxedo Comedies, of which "The Iron Mule" was a typical example.

Sennett Lot Busily Engaged in Pathe Comedy Making

Mack Sennett's comedy lot in Hollywood is busier than it has been for the past six or eight months. Four companies are now at work on Pathe comedies and another may soon be added.

Gil Pratt is directing Ben Turpin in a farce laid in France and in Persia, and Eddie Cline and Johnny Burke in a wartime comedy, as yet without a title. Alf Goulding is directing another of the "Smith Family" series. Del Lord is busily occupied finishing a beauty parlor farce with Billy Bevan and beginning another which will feature Billy Bevan, Thelma Parr and Vernon Dent.

Three recently finished comedies, "The Prodigal Bridegroom," "The Dinner Jest" and "Should Husbands Marry? have gone to Pathe for release while "Hubby's Quiet Little Game" has been booked for prerelease showing at the Metropolitan Theatre, Los Angeles.

Choose Leads for Second Fox Animal Comedy

Ernie Shields and Barbara Luddy have been cast for the leads in the second of the Fox Films new Animal Comedies to go into production at the company's West Coast Studios. The first was "Jerry the Giant," recently completed, with Jerry Madden, a three-year-old boy, achieving such success he was featured.

The new picture will be directed by Max Gold and Al Davis and the story and scenario is the combined work of Gene Ford and Henry Johnson.

Lois Boyd Will Support "Fat Trio" in Comedies

Lois Boyd has been engaged to play the leading feminine role in the series of Standard Comedies produced for F. B. O. release. She will furnish the feminine support for the three heavyweight stars of the series, "Fatty" Alexander, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fat" Karr.

Sennett Promotes Ruth Taylor to Feminine Lead

Ruth Taylor of the Mack Sennett players has been promoted by the producer to the position of leading lady opposite Johnny Burke, former vaudeville star, in his first comedy.

Different Star and Director in Each of New Series Proves Exhibitor Aid

THE rapidly growing list of comedy players and directors, of established reputation in the short subjects field, now available to the producers on a single picture contract basis, is proving a boon to the makers of this type of picture, according to production executives. The condition they say makes for a healthier situation in the short comedy field, permitting greater variety in the preparation of programs and allowing more flexibility in the arrangement of schedules designed for the exhibitors, who, in booking the individual star type of series, are up against the necessity of spacing out play dates to avoid too frequent appearance at their theatres of any one star.

Among the companies which during the past season have experimented successfully with the comedy series offering a different star in each release, is the Standard Cinema Corporation in their group of Blue Ribbon Comedies, released by Film Booking Offices. This series stands as a typical case in which a short comedy producer started out on the then daring enterprise of announcing a series of 13 two-reelers for which thirteen different stars and directors would have to be signed on a single picture basis.

Though doubts were expressed in some quarters at the outset of the season, the project has long since passed the experimental stage, and with nine of the pictures already completed and the rest cared for insofar as players and directors are concerned, the policy has proved a noteworthy success in this instance and in others where the same formula was followed. The advantage of the arrangement to the exhibitor soon established the plan with theatre men, who are thus enabled to book the series and play two or even more of the pictures in a single week, without repetition of star or directorial treatment, until the series is entirely run at his house.

As an index of the quantity and quality of "names" that are available to the producers on a single picture basis at present the Blue Ribbons serve as an interesting illustration of a new condition existing in the comedy field. In the Blue Ribbon series to date the following comedians have appeared as stars: Chester Conklin, Neeley Edwards, Hank Mann, Lee Moran, Gale Henry, Sid Smith, Les Saylor, Slim Somerville, and Joe Rock, producer of the films, who starred in one of the releases.

Three Educational Units Start Production

Three two-reel comedies were put in production this week at the Educational studios. Norman Taurog is directing Lloyd Hamilton in the first of his series of eight for the new season with Aileen Lopez appearing opposite the star. Al St. John has started on a new vehicle with Stephen Roberts at the megaphone.

Estelle Bradley will be seen opposite Johnny Arthur in a new two-reeler which Charles Lamont is directing.

Roach Signs "Babe" Hardy for Pathe Comedies

Oliver Norvelle Hardy, more generally known as "Babe" Hardy, has been signed by Hal Roach for a long term appearance in two-reel comedies for Pathe release. He will play various types of supporting roles in Charley Chase and Mabel Normand comedies, and featured parts in the series of all star two-reelers. His latest appearance was in the Glenn Tryon comedy "Along Came Aunty."

Aileen Lopez Signed by Lloyd Hamilton Co.

Aileen Lopez, who has been working in Christie comedies and in several independent productions, has been signed to appear opposite Lloyd Hamilton in a comedy which he has just started.

Comedy highlights from the Educational release, "Till We Eat Again."

"Ham" Hamilton in scenes from his latest Educational two-reeler which bears the title of "Nothing Matters."

Pathe Lists June 20 Product

Mack Sennett and Hal Roach Each Have Two-Reel Comedy on Current Schedule

INCLUDED in the Pathe releases for the week of June twentieth is a two-reel comedy from Hal Roach and Mack Sennett. Other subjects making up the week's program are Chapter 9, of the Patheserial, "The Bar-C Mystery," a Hal Roach single reel comedy, Pathe Review No. 25; "The Land Boom," an Aesop's Fable, Topics of the Day No. 25, and two issues of Pathe News.

"The Cow's Kimona" is the title of the Hal Roach two-reel comedy in which Glenn Tryon is starred, supported by Vivien Oakland, Charlotte Mineau, Charles Sellon and Jerry Mandy. It is the usual tale of the vacation trip in the family "flivver" of a young married couple who meet with divers disastrous adventures. Fred Guiol directed.

The Mack Sennett comedy, "Ice Cold Cocos" was directed by Del Lord with a cast comprising Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Kewpie Morgan, Madeline Hurlock and Louise Carver. The story deals with two ice men, one of a flirtatious nature which gets him into trouble with the husband of a girl with whom he flirts. Most of the action takes place in a skating rink with the ice men attempting to steal the ice with laughable results.

Chapter 9, of the Patheserial, "The Bar-C Mystery," is entitled "The Wolf's Cunning." Dorothy Phillips is starred in this C. W. Patton production. In this chapter, with the aid of fists and wits, Bert Robbins and Octavia Lane are caught red-handed, but just when all trouble seemed to have reached an end Robbins makes a daring get-away and in pursuing him the lives of Jane and Nevada are menaced.

Pathe Review No. 25 presents "The Romance of News." This interesting feature reveals the activities of the Associated Press from the gathering and distribution of news to its presentation in the printed page, and its handling by the newsboys in the street. Also in this reel are offered "Little Ships," scenes how a master workman makes them and the University of Washington in Pathe color views.

"Take the Air" is a single-reel Hal Roach comedy, featuring Paul Parrot. "The Land Boom" is the latest animated cartoon by Paul Terry of his popular Aesop's Film Fables Series. Topics of the Day No. 25, presents the latest wit and humor, culled from the press of the world; and the two issues of the Pathe News present last minute world news happenings.

Coffin Engaged as Personal Representative to Roach

Ray Coffin, publicist who for the past year has been director of publicity for Samuel Goldwyn productions on the West Coast, has resigned that position to assume the duties of personal representative of Hal Roach, Pathe producer.

H. F. Arnold, a local California newspaperman, succeeds Mr. Coffin with the Goldwyn Company, while Arthur Q. Hagerman continues as director of publicity for the Hal Roach studios.

Arthur "Bugs" Baer Captions "Curiosity" Release

Arthur "Bugs" Baer has finished captioning "Rare Bits," the second release of the Walter A. Futter series known as "Curiosities—the Movie Side-Show," released by Educational. Other writers equally well known will prepare the title for those to follow.

Opinions on Current Productions

"Black and Blue Eyes"

(F. B. O. Standard—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

THE comedy situations here bear the scars of ancient use, and the gags are of the class that have been seen before the total result of which is that of only a mildly amusing entertainment. The hero finds baby clothes in his wife's sewing basket and is elated over the idea that a new member of the family is on the way. He rushes out to buy everything in sight for the baby and showers invitations to friends and strangers alike to spend a month at his home by the way of celebrating. In the midst of his rejoicing he gets arrested for speeding and given life sentence but is ejected from jail for boisterousness. Hurrying home he finds there Dr. Brown and his wife holding two lusty infants and learns that his wife has made their clothes. The disillusioned hubby is obliged to greet the mother-in-law instead who has come to stay for a month. Most of the tricks are antiquated but there are a number of incidents such as the scene in jail, or when trying the hard boiled egg which jumps off the table, breaks and a chick walks out kicking the shell with disgust, that will evoke plenty of laughs.

Summary—Nothing startlingly original but great deal of it extremely funny. Fairly good comedy for the smaller houses.

"The Newlyweds and Their Baby"

(Universal-Stern—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

"THE Newlyweds in Quarantine" is perhaps the funniest of the series. Snookums seems to thrive on household vandalism, while the Newlyweds' idea of bringing up a baby is that the darling must have everything it wants. Accordingly the kid proceeds to spill glue on some chairs and saw off the legs and backs of the rest, to make it comfortable for the guests. To make a perfect job of it he fetches a "Quarantine" placard, which he hangs on the door, thus forcing the guests to remain at the Newlyweds' home.

This number maintains the ace-high quality of humor, the action is crisp all the way through and is singularly free of slapstick. Snookums here is at his best to date and his spontaneous propensity for mischievous pranks is nothing short of amazing.

THE CAST

Ted Dooley, Ethlyne Clair, Sunny. Directed by Gus Meins.

Summary—This number of the series is the high water mark so far. The kid is irresistibly funny

"The Newlyweds and Their Baby"

(Universal-Stern—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

IN "Snookums' Buggy Ride," the darling plays hide and seek with his distracted mother, as she is darting hither and yon in search for him. Later Snooky creates havoc at his father's office whence both are ejected by the irate boss, and finally the baby is lifted skyward in its perambulator by the balloons and left to enjoy a nap on top the telegraph pole.

If the first numbers are indication of what is to follow, it looks like a clean-up for Universal. These two-reelers are surely the finest juvenile blue devil chasers that have been put on the market in many moons; the comedies are teeming with action, are capably directed and can boast of an ideal cast. Much of the unadulterated slapstick can be overlooked because it emanates from a baby, the prankish kid whose guileless grin would disarm even his severest critic.

THE CAST

Ted Dooley, Ethlyne Clair, Sunny. Directed by Gus Meins.

Summary—Well up to the standard of the previous two numbers. Safe bet for all average houses.

"Rah Rah Heidelberg"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

THE Van Bibber comedies are getting better with each issue, latest one of which represents the last word in entertainment. Gentleman exhibitors, if you have to fight the competition of a circus for which free tickets are being given out, put this one on and charge double, it will get the crowd. Van in his inadvertent style, plays double to a dashing student prince at Heidelberg and being somewhat of a bravado himself, he runs into excruciatingly ticklish complications. It so happens that he is visiting the famous university with his friends and is mistaken for one of the students, Prince Otto. From there on, Van appears as the millionaire fop and as the jaunty prince. He joins the beer party and is generally having a good time, when a rival challenges him to a duel. Van feels quite uncomfortable when he learns that the challenger is a deadly duelist, but fortune puts the prince in his place who trims the villain then disappears leaving our hero to reap the laurels of victory. Without exaggeration this is one of the finest comedies on the market. It has a wonderful pictorial atmosphere, excellent photography, screamingly funny titles and clever, original comedy incidents.

THE CAST

Earle Foxe, Florence Gilbert, Lynn Cowan, Frank Beal, Jore Austin, Edna Marian.

Summary—This is a sure fire for any audience, atmosphere, titles, photography, situation and laughs are there aplenty.

"Dinky Doodle and the Little Orphan"

(F. B. O.-Bray—One Reel)

IN this cartoon Walter Lantz, the artist, is having some excruciating experience with a pesky infant found at his door. He tries to appease his crying by drawing a cow and sending Dinky to get a bottle of milk for the baby. Dinky is too shy to milk so he induces the cow to Charleston and thus fill in the glass, which the baby gulps down with a gusto but continues mewling. Dinky's mutt then volunteers to give his dog biscuit to the baby, but even then the cry doesn't subside. After many other highly amusing trials their patience gives out and the artist decides to get rid of the shrieking conundrum by drawing a stork and telling him to take the baby away. This is an excellent booking for all houses where animated cartoons are liked. Directed by Walter Lantz. —MAURICE ANDREWS.

"Creeps"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

TWO heroes profoundly dumb and a colored man susceptible to fears are the principals around whom revolves the plot of a sudden inheritance and a haunted house wherein dwell manifold spooks bent upon terrifying the inheritor. The numerous sequences of veiled apparitions, of encounters with dead bodies lying strewn about, and with mysterious figures arrayed in black—all these lend an element of uncanniness which, mixed with a generous assortment of gags, tends to elevate this comedy above the ordinary. The leads are very nicely and capably portrayed. This haunted house business is replete with humor. Other situations are the automobile ride of the adventurous two over an extremely rocky road, the subsequent fright of one when he thinks he has lost a leg and the adventure with the bear. Excellent comedy, this, of the engaging sort that causes audiences to chuckle, fat men to roar with laughter and children to scream with glee.

THE CAST

Lou Archer, Phil Dunham, Stanley Blystone, Anita Garvin, Jack Lloyd.

Summary—A splendid comedy with a generous amount of laughs.

"Swat the Crook"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is a Harold Lloyd reissue in which the famous star is supported by Harry Pollard and Bebe Daniels. Harold's sweetheart and her mother are forced by circumstances to rent their residence to strangers, who prove to be a gang of nefarious crooks, and are planning to use the rented house for their rendezvous. Harold is engaged as butler and in this capacity overhears the plot and decides on an ingenious scheme to get rid of the thievish gang. He summons the crooks individually to the hall during dinner, and puts them to sleep with a blackjack, then calls the police wagon but is mistaken himself for one of the gang and forced to ride to jail. A hodge-podge of slapstick and horseplay sufficiently funny to hold its own.—MAURICE ANDREWS.

"The Mountain of the Law"

(Fox Variety—One Reel)

BEYOND doubt this subject will strike the top-notch mark of popularity, dealing as it does with one of the best-known incidents in the Bible. The subject is none other than Mount Sinai, where Moses received and gave to the world the Ten Commandments. Exact locations of those historic and religious places where the great law-giver carved the Ten Commandments on the rock, where he later broke them, the place of the Golden Calf, the rock which he smote to obtain water for the thirst-crazed Israelites, and the desolate peak from which he looked into the Promised Land, are shown. A bleak convent built by Greek monks now stands on Mt. Sinai. Excellent film for church use and worthy of place on any program.—MAURICE ANDREWS.

The Valley of Bravery

(A Fair Western With Two Reels of War Background)

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

BOB CUSTER departs again from the beaten path routine for regulation Westerns and goes back to the late war for atmosphere to establish the preliminary situations. The picture opens with a breath-taking speed and exciting action throughout the first two reels, most of which takes place in France, then slackens pace and depends on light comedy, only mildly entertaining, for interest until the last reel, where an occasional outburst of action stirs up. There isn't much to the story that has not been told before. Two cowboys enlist and serve overseas together, and when one is badly wounded and taken to the base hospital, they meet a head nurse with whom the hero falls secretly in love. After the war, the action shifts back to the ranch and the interest suffers accordingly, from the conventional yarn about marauders, gold shipments, and a pretty heroine in distress. There are some capital outdoor shots, but outside the impressive background, good photography and a feebly effective comedy elicited by a crook masquerading as a bally Englishman, the picture has little to recommend it.

The Cast: Bob Custer, Tom Bay, Eugenia Gilbert, William Gillespie, Ernie Adams, Art Artego, Nelson MacGowell. Author, Lanning Masters. Director, Jack Nelson.

THEME. Western. Two cowboys, war buddies, work on ranch owned by the former head nurse. They frustrate the scheme of nefarious crook masquerading as an Englishman to win the confidence of the girl and abscond with her gold. One of them wins the girl.

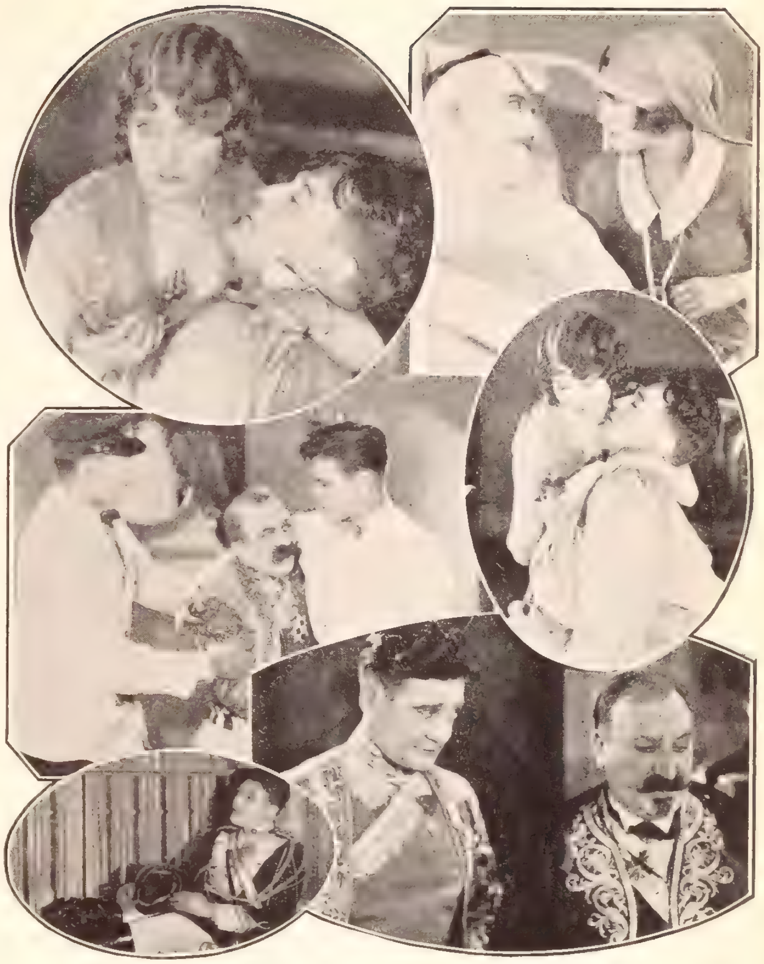
PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The great outdoor photography and the war scenes. Stirring western background and fine atmosphere,

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Custer's name and promise them two excellent reels of war atmosphere. Try a tieup with the local Legion Post and Ladies' Auxiliary, exploit the title with cards newspaper contests, go after the juvenile fans vigorously.

DRAWING POWER. Mediocre entertainment but ought to do well in small town houses as a one-day program

Produced and Distributed by F. B. O. Length, 5,021 feet. Released May, 1926.

Anna Q. Nilsson plays a role reminiscent of her "Ponjola" in her latest vehicle for First National, "Miss Nobody"



Highlights from Richard Dix's latest Paramount feature comedy, "Say It Again"

A Trip to Chinatown

Definitely. Entertainment for the Masses

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

DIRECTOR ROBERT KERR took the frolicsome comedy by Charles Hoyt, which delighted the theatregoers a decade or so ago, and turned it into a thoroughly enjoyable screen version. There can be but one adverse criticism of the picture; it is deliberate in getting started and doesn't capture the local atmosphere until the end of the third reel. Once the tempo accelerates, however, the story maintains high tension of interest, is charged with delicate comedy and winds up in an absorbing climax.

The interest centres around a hypochondriac whose obsession is an explosive lung which will permit him to live only six weeks. With this idea he is determined to get the most of life while it lasts, goes to San Francisco where his uncle, a gay blade, inveigles him in romantic escapades which finally cure him. It is towards the end that the unfolding of humorous situations hits the zenith of fun, and although there are many incidents of the broad-farce and slapstick variety, they will no doubt serve to appeal to the vast hoi polloi, being full of explosive antics.

The Cast: Earle Foxe, Margaret Livingston, J. Farrell MacDonald, Gladys McConnell, Hazel Howell, Harry Woods, Marie Astaire, George Kuwa, Anna May Wong. Author, Charles Hoyt. Director, Robert P. Kerr.

THEME: Comedy-farce. Young millionaire believing he will die in six months, joins his gay uncle in San Francisco and at a Chinatown party, given by the latter, he meets a charming widow, gets involved into exciting troubles which help to cure him. He wins the widow.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Brilliant performance by the principals, especially MacDonald and Margaret Livingston. The explosive lung incidents.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The title has excellent exploitation possibilities. Dress up lobby in Chinese atmosphere, arrange tieups with novelty shops, drug stores, etc., play up the star cast and use the "hypochondriac" contest idea.

DRAWING POWER: Will be enjoyed by the average fan wherever fast action and bonnie comedy are liked.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Length, 5,594 feet. Released June, 1926.

Say It Again

Dix Has Another Winner

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is a clever satire on the mythical kingdom plot made famous by Graustark. This isn't to say that the romantic issues are lost sight of by the director in his effort to burlesque the ancient pattern. Indeed, there are times when the fun is cornered so that the princess can indulge in love-making with the strapping youth whom she believes to be the newly-crowned king—and husband in the bargain.

La Cava, the director, doesn't keep his plot entirely even. He starts off on a romantic tack and then changes to burlesque—then back again to the serious love scenes before he finishes with a rollicking orgy of absurdity. But there is no question about the manner in which he holds the attention—whether he runs to burlesque or romance. His kingdom is Spezonia and the heroine, played charmingly by Alyce Mills, has met the youth while nursing him in a native hospital. She has only seen his eyes (his face being swathed in bandages) but she has remembered him. Thus the romance. The burlesque enters with Chester Conklin who is being lugged back to be crowned as king—Chester playing a bologna magnate from Detroit.

It is a lively number and breezy in its burlesque which enters not only in the action but also in the subtitles. Dix gives an amusing performance—and the "Gunboat" is not far behind.

The Cast: Richard Dix, Alyce Mills, Chester Conklin, "Gunboat" Smith, Bernard Randall, Paul Porcasi, Ida Waterman, William Ricciardi. Director, Gregory La Cava.

THEME: Romantic comedy of mythical kingdom with doughboy winning love of princess.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Scene in hospital. Conklin's comedy—and incident with book of drawings of dead kings. Scene in bride's chamber. The scene of the bodyguard. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as another winner for Dix—a picture sure to entertain. Tease the title and feature as take-off on mythical kingdom.

DRAWING POWER. Sure to pack 'em in everywhere. For all houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players-Lasky.
Length, six reels. Released June, 1926.

Miss Nobody

Nothing Much To It

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S nothing much to this one—certainly no more than what could be contained in the space of three reels. The plot has a way of evaporating and to keep it going the director resorts to the convenient trick of padding it out to make it feature length. The idea behind it is nothing more than capitalizing a hobo in feminine clothes. It is planned that she is left destitute by her financially-ruined father—which gives her a chance to meet a quartette of hoboes and pal around with them.

Lacking any novel incident aside from certain didoes executed by the tramps the story doesn't demand any concentration on your part to digest it. Its appeal rests with Anna Q. Nilsson's adaptability for wearing masculine attire. She meets the leader of the tramps when he saves her from his pals' insults. And when she makes her exit from a swank party she encounters the hoboes and hits the rails with them. From this point until the climax the spectator sees very little action—and practically no suspense. The romance comes into expression—and the culmination of it finds a belated twist to give a reasonable premise for the girl striking it off with a tramp. In reality this chap is a writer in search of atmosphere.

The Cast: Anna Q. Nilsson, Walter Pidgeon, Louise Fazenda, Mitchell Lewis, Clyde Cook, Arthur Stone, Anders Rondolf, Claire Du Brey, Jed Prouty, Caroline Rankin, George Nichols, Oleta Otis, James Gordon, Fred Warren. Director, Lambert Hillyer.

THEME: Romantic drama of girl left destitute who has enough initiative to accept courtesies of hobo. She masquerades as a tramp and falls in love with one.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The romantic moments. The captions. The scene in the garage.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Would advise playing up star in masculine attire and featuring picture as story of feminine tramp. Play up the supporting cast and use a teaser campaign.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average houses.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, 6,859 feet. Released June, 1926.

The Love Thief

Fascinating Greta Nissen in a Pretentious Story

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

BY far the most engaging feature of this picture is the bewitching personality of Greta Nissen the Viking beauty. Here is a star who should prove a big drawing card anywhere. The story, which is by no means worthy of her talent, is of the mythical kingdom type, quite entertaining and even glamorous at times, but must suffer in comparison with "Graustark," "Swan" and other popular productions of that type.

It would seem from the first three reels that the director intended to satirize the mythical kingdom idea, but the plot shifts suddenly into a serio-comic tone, and takes the hue of light comedy and romance, punctuated at intervals with melodramatic incidents. The central idea revolves here about a gay deceiver, Prince Boris, who leads an effortless life and who has a weakness for feminine charms. In the end he falls in love with his latest find, a girl with bobbed hair, not knowing that she is Princess Flavia of Norvia, whom he is to marry as an affair of the state. Miss Nissen is captivating beyond words as the princess, and Norman Kerry will strike the feminine fancy as the prince in his slick uniform,

The Cast: Greta Nissen, Norman Kerry, Marc McDermott, Charles Puffy, Emilio Borgato, Oscar Beregi, Cissy Fitzgerald, Nigel Barrie. Author and director, John McDermott.

THEME: Romance with melodramatic punches. Crown Prince Boris is persuaded to marry Princess Flavia of Novia to avoid war. She meets him incognito, he falls in love with her and renounces his proposed marriage with Flavia, is degraded and banished, later discovers that she is Princess Flavia.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Exhilarant performance by Greta Nissen and good support by the principals. The scenes where Boris offers gold chains to his paramours, the duel, the scene where Boris is drummed out of his regiment, the magnificent settings and the decidedly pleasing climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the all-star cast and boost Greta Nissen to the limit. Promise them another Graustark story with action, romance and comedy skillfully blended. Exploit the title.

DRAWING POWER: Should score reasonably in all average houses.

Length, 6,822 feet. Released June, 1926.

Winsome little Colleen Moore in scenes from "Ella Cinders," First National's picturization of the comic strip

Glenister of the Mounted

A Wobbly Melodrama of the Grim North

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

LEFTY FLYNN appears in this crudely constructed contraption which is little better than a hodge-podge of melo stuff cheapened further by theatric effects and poor photography. Lefty looks every inch the part as one of the best on the force, and he delivers a conscientious performance, but they have handicapped him on this occasion with a singularly spineless yarn, one that has little of the intrinsic story value and at times approaches the border line of burlesquing those undaunted heroes of the frozen North.

Fortunately the last two reels present a sharp contrast. Here the director succeeds in establishing a suspense tense in spots, and holds interest well in hand until the fadeout where he indulges freely in maudlin love affair.

The Cast: Lefty Flynn, Bess Flowers, Lee Shumway, Walter James, Jim Gibson, Arthur Millette. Author, Arthur Guy Empey. Director, Henry Garson.

THEME. Melodrama. Glenister of the Mounted is sent to capture a man and a woman wanted for murder. He gets them, but on the way back they are caught by a forest fire; he saves woman's life and falls in love, then gives them a chance to go free, but they stay. He then discovers his prisoners innocent and helps to clear them

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine, expensive scenic background, Lefty's sincere acting as the trooper, bits of comedy supplied by Lefty's horse. The forest fire and the scene where Lefty saves his prisoners from certain death.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The name of Mounted Police is sure to catch their fancy. Play up Lefty Flynn's name and his splendid performance. Advertise as a virile story of the trooper of Mounted Police trapped by love while performing his duty; stress the romance stuff and use street ballyhoo in the garb of Mounted Trooper.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to do fair business in houses where patrons like the melo and romance stuff, and where the production value is of no significance. Lefty Flynn's name will help to put it over, but don't promise much on the story.

Produced and Distributed by F. B. O. Length 5,480 Feet.

Ella Cinders

All's Well With the Comic Strip

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT isn't very often that a comic strip can stand up on its own when converted into celluloid. Generally it demands too much directorial license and so we see a "gag" picture. "Ella Cinders," however, manages to thrive because the director has sought for and found the humanities behind the idea—and then he's tempered them with bright incident without puncturing the plot.

The comic strip, known to thousands of newspaper readers, is visualized with a fine display of pathos—a pathos akin to the serio-comic pieces of Lloyd and Chaplin. Ella is a pathetic creature whose movie-mad fancies take her out of drudgery into the spotlight of the studio. She succeeds in winning a beauty contest, and with the throaty tributes of the home folks ringing in her ears she is carried into Hollywood where she crashes the w. k. studio gate. Here is where the pathos disappears to be replaced by a clever array of bright comedy gags. It is all good humorous hokum which is never overdone. The incident might reasonably happen if you care to stress a few points here and there.

No better choice could be made than Colleen Moore in the title role. She conveys the impression that she is really living the part—and tempers the tragic side of life with a fine sense of humor.

The Cast: Colleen Moore, Lloyd Hughes, Vera Lewis, Doris Baker, Emily Gerdes, Mike Donlin, Jed Prouty, Jack Duffy, Harry Allen, D'Arcy Corrigan. Director, Alfred E. Green.

THEME: Romantic comedy of movie-mad slavey who wins a beauty contest, breaks into the movies and makes good.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The contest. Scene at station. Scene of Ella with Indians aboard train. The studio incident. The acting by Colleen Moore.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: First you have the wide publicity of the comic strip from which picture is adapted. Go after the newspaper readers. Play up as clever version of Cinderella story. Feature star in her grotesque clothes.

DRAWING POWER: Should attract them in droves because of comic strip and the popularity of star. Suitable for all types of houses.

Produced by John McCormick. Distributed by First National. Length, six reels. Released May, 1926.

Why Girls Go Back Home

Interesting Enough to Have Its Appeal

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

TO judge from this title one may be excused for believing it, one of those home and fireside melodramas in which Pop and Mom wait patiently for their erring daughter to return by the light of the parlor lamp. In a measure this is true, but those in charge have wisely seen the obviousness of it in time to brighten it up with humor and humanities. It doesn't take itself too seriously even if its plot does get out of hand here and there. The director errs in pounding home its message.

The girl of the title pursues an actor to New York and becomes a chorine. When the man of her heart gets on the front pages she falsely announces her engagement—to the consternation of the thespian and his press agent.

It shapes up as moderately entertaining because its good points far outweigh its flaws. Clive Brook is the reason for the title. He manages to make his acting felt even if you can't extend him much sympathy. Patsy Ruth Miller is good enough as the rustic maid and a first rate bit of acting is contributed by Myrna Loy, who has that "It," or what Elinor Glyn calls personality.

The Cast: Patsy Ruth Miller, Clive Brook, Jane Winton, Myrna Loy, George O'Hara, Joseph Dowling.

THEME: Romantic drama of stage-struck girl who follows actor to New York and involves him in an engagement. Eventually he capitulates to her charms.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Brook's performance of the thespian. The scenes back home when the girl gets the thrill of her life in watching the trouper. The success on Broadway.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Certainly this title suggests a teaser campaign—which can be worked out by throwaways, etc. Play up the theatrical flavor.

DRAWING POWER: Title should lure them. Suitable for small towns and average houses in neighborhoods. Good enough for a two or three day run in this type of theatre.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers.

Length, Six reels. Released June, 1926.

Canada

CLARENCE ROBSON, Toronto supervisor of theatres for Famous Players Canadian Corp., figured in the sport news on June 3, after his horse, "Seven Oaks," had won the six-furlong race at Thorncliffe Park, Toronto.

Ernie Moule, veteran manager of the Brant and Temple theatres, Brantford, Ontario, received unusual remembrances on the occasion of his recent birthday. Mr. Moule was down in Toronto trying to forget the day when he received forty personal letters from the members of his theatre staffs at the Toronto hotel.

Toronto, Ontario, is to have a brand new moving picture theatre costing $225,000. The new house, which is being built by N. G. Reynolds, 103 Merrick Avenue, is on Bloor Street, between Runnymede Road and Beresford Avenue, a singular fact being that half of the house will be in the city and the other half in the country. The site, which was purchased for $50,000, has a frontage of 109 feet and the building will have a depth of 165 feet, accommodating 1,800 patrons. Architectural plans have been drawn by Raymond Card.

ROBERT C. HORNUNG, manager of Shea's Theatre in Jamestown, N. Y., has qualified for a Carnegie life saving medal. The other day while walking in Steele Street near the Chautauqua Towel Mills with Mrs. Hornung, he saw a boy about 15 years old wading in the Chadakoin River trying to bring in a rowboat which had broken loose from its moorings on the bank. The boy, evidently not realizing the depth of the stream, plunged right in and went down twice before Mr. Hornung jumped in and rescued him. The lad proved to be a game one, for after shaking some of the water from his clothing he waded down along the shore and finally brought in the boat.

BILL MALONEY, recently employed by Fox as assistant office manager, has gone on the road as salesman for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Wallace Walthall, president of the Enterprise Film Corp., announced recently that his company would have the Oklahoma agency for National Screen Service Trailers.

W. C. Blackstone, better known as "Blacky," surprised Film Row this week by announcing his marriage to Miss Artie Westand. "Blackie's" favorite hobby was being a bachelor. Mr. and Mrs. Blackstone are now at the Great Lakes and will be at home in the city after July 1st. Mr. Blackstone is head salesman for First National Exchange.

W. Z. Spearman, vice-president of the Oklahoma M. P. T. O., is out in the territory securing memberships for the Association. So far Mr. Spearman reports that he has met only one exhibitor who refused to join. Sounds like a big convention for the fall.

Kansas City

IMPROVEMENTS to cost $35,000 soon will begin on the South Troost Theatre, operated by M. M. Gleeson and his son, J. J. Gleeson. The changes will be made without interference with the programs. A new roof over the balcony space, a sound-proof, glassed-in cry room and a terra cotta front of ornamental and an increased seating capacity to 1,200 will be among the improvements.

More than one hundred persons in a small suburban theatre of Joplin, Mo., the name of which was not revealed in press dispatches, narrowly escaped with their lives Monday when they were warned by a rumbling sound and vacated the theatre just before the roof caved in. A check-up by police indicated that none was injured. Water accumulating on the roof caused the super-structure supporting the roof to give way, it is believed.

When Jay Means, owner of the Oak Park, Murray and Prospect Theatres, Kansas City, leaves town he makes his employees happy, but in a different way. Just before leaving for California, where he and Mrs. Means will visit Hollywood studios, Mr. Means staged a banquet at the Hotel President, Kansas City, for his thirty employees. It was a royal send-off for the veteran theatre owner.

The projection at the Grand Theatre, Pittsburg, Kan., recently caught fire and all projection equipment destroyed. At 10:30 p. m. Wednesday T. F. Cole, manager of the Cole Theatre Supply Company, Kansas City, received a rush call for new equipment, which was loaded into trucks of the Exhibitors' Film Delivery and Service Company, which arrived at 6 o'clock the next morning at the theatre, a distance of about 175 miles, and was ready for the matinee performance.

Bob Withers, Enterprise Exchange manager, took to the road to gather a few contracts.

J. B. Ebersoll has purchased the Phototorium Theatre at Hamilton, Mo., from J. M. McBraymer, while Earl Jameson has taken over the Beaufort Theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: T. D. Real, Royal, Grain Valley, Mo.; "Curley" Wilson, Casino, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; Ben Hill, Belton, Mo.; C. L. Bob Mochrie is back in Pittsburgh after recovering from a siege of scarlet fever and is happy to be back on his job as manager of the P. D. C. Exchange in that city.

Ralph H. Clark, who carries the title of assistant sales manager for P. D. C., spent a goodly portion of last week in Cleveland.

Jack Soglovitz, who has been office manager of the Cleveland Standard Film Service Exchange, has been made branch manager of the company's office in Pittsburgh.

A. L. Goodsteen, formerly with Associated Exhibitors in Cleveland, is now manager of the Cleveland office, succeeding Soglovitz. Bill Onie continues in the role of branch manager.

Sam P. Correll, long identified with J. S. Jossey of the Progress Pictures Company, is now with the Standard Film Service Company as city salesman.

Milton Simon, representing Rayart, was in town last week.

Max Milder, Fox home office representative, paid local exchange manager Ward Scott and his Cleveland associates a visit last week.

Christy Deibel, manager of the Liberty Theatre, Youngstown, has been spending the week in Cambridge Springs getting in trim for the Film Daily Golf Tournament.

J. A. Beidler, who has long operated the Eastwood, Royal and East Auditorium theatres in Toledo, has recently increased his theatre holdings through the purchase of the National and Pastime theatres. These houses formerly belonged to John Spurlock.

The June wedding bug is operating in full force in the Film Exchange building. Four girls in the building have already been seriously bitten and rumor has it that others are threatened. Gertrude Willard of Pathe was married last week. Jeanette Horwitz, booker for Vital Exchanges, and sister of M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington Circuit of theatres, has chosen Sunday, June 6th, for her wedding day. Ruth Gordon, secretary to the secretary of the Film Board of Trade, will commit matrimony on June 27th, and Eva Katz, of the Ohio Educational Exchange, is exhibiting a new solitaire, which is just the forerunner of a wedding announcement.

Ed Schumann, of the Poster-Rental Company, has broken into the exhibition field via the Wade Park Orpheum. Schumann bought the house last week from O. E. Tarvin.

Sam Barck has sold his Market Square Theatre, Cleveland, to Maurice H. Wolf, after owning and personally managing the house for twelve consecutive years—almost a record. Daniel Grossman will manage it under the new ownership. And Barck? He's willing to listen to any good proposition.

The Fischer Film Company has just been incorporated in Columbus for $50,000. Mayer Fischer, who has been operating independently in this State for the past year and a half, is president and general manager of the company. J. M. Johnson, well known in the southern part of the State, is vice-president and manager of the Cincinnati branch of the company. W. Weiss has been appointed secretary and treasurer. The Fischer Film Company has acquired the Ohio and Kentucky franchise for the American Cinema Association's product. J. M. Johnson, who has become associated with the company as vice-president, has been active in Ohio picture distribution for the past twelve years. He will open the Cincinnati branch of the Fischer Film Company in the Broadway building immediately. The Fischer Film Company is a closed corporation and no stock is being offered on the market for sale.

Albany

THERE was much going and coming along Film Row during the past week. Patrick Campbell, eastern division sales manager for Pathe, and Charles Henschel, assistant, were up from New York, to confer with E. J. Hayes, local manager. Alec Herman, manager of the First National Exchange here, and J. H. MacIntyre, manager of Famous Players Exchange, were in New York. Miss Betty Donnelly, billing clerk at the Pathe Exchange, and Rhea Carmody, sales control girl in the same exchange, were also in New York City. Miss Renee Craven, of the First National Exchange, spent the week-end in New York.

Mrs. E. J. Hayes and children, of Buffalo, have arrived in Albany, and rejoined Mr. Hayes, who was recently appointed manager of the Pathe Exchange.

Harry Rose, of the King Theatre in Troy, opened his theatre at 10 o'clock on Memorial Day morning, and by noon the place was jammed.

Jake Rosenthal, of the Rose in Troy, returned last Friday from Philadelphia, where he attended the Shriners' convention. He is installing a new projection booth in his theatre.

Harry Symansky, one-time manager of the Lincoln in Troy, will shortly wed a young lady in Syracuse, the engagement having been announced last week.

Few pictures have ever been shown at the American Theatre in Troy that attracted more attention from Ed Trembly, the manager, than the one of last week. It was a war picture that carried Mr. Trembly back to the days when he served with the troopers in the Philippines.

Uly S. Hill announced this week that the new theatre being erected in Albany by Strand interests would be opened between August 15 and Labor Day. No manager has yet been selected.

Nothing has been heard recently from Boston relative to the condition of Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold Theatre in Troy, who has been sick for several months and confined at a hospital in that city.

The Albany Theatre in this city closed its doors last Saturday night and will probably be converted into a store. Herman Vineberg, manager, has gone with the Schine Brothers.

Moe Mark and Walter Hayes are busy these days in picking the winner of the best name for the new theatre being erected in Albany. There were over 4,000 names submitted.

C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, spent all of last week in New York City. Mr. Buckley has just bought himself a beautiful home at Loudonville.

P. J. Quinlan, one of the owners of the Ideal in Chateaugay, was along Film Row last week for the first time in many months, and received a warm welcome from exchange managers and salesmen. William Smalley, of Cooperstown, and Charles Sesonske, of Johnstown, were also in town.

Bob Pierce, of Ilion, is considering the advisability of closing one of his two theatres in that village during the summer months, and throwing the business to the larger and newer house.

Myer and Louis Schine, of Gloversville, motored to Lake Placid last week in order to be present at the opening of the theatre which they will operate from now on in the well-known resort town.

George Goldberg resigned last week as a salesman for Associated Exhibitors here, and is now peddling the F. B. O. product over the local territory.

W. H. Linton, of Utica, has taken his son in partnership, in the operation of the Olympic, which was recently opened in that city by Mr. Linton and which replaces the house that was burned to the ground two years ago.

George Wright, one-time owner of the Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, and later salesman for Universal here, was in town last week, for the first time in seventeen months. Mr. Wright is now located in Miami, and will return there within a few days. He said that Max Spiegel was having much success with the theatre recently opened at Miami Beach.

Harry Lazarus has a stock issue on the market in connection with a large theatre which he is planning to erect in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Roberts of the Troy Theatre, are praying for warmer weather these days. They have taken a camp for the summer on Burden Lake.

James Papayanakos, of the Graylin Theatre in Gouverneur, cooperated with the Boy Scouts of that city last week, in a benefit picture that netted the boys a handsome sum.

Harry Seed, manager for Warner Brothers here, was out on the road nearly all last week.

Louis Cappa was installed a manager at the Delaware Theatre in Albany, which he recently acquired, and is devoting his entire time to the fruit business.

George Roberts, of Albany, has resigned as manager of the Playhouse and Rialto theatres in Hudson, and has been succeeded by Walter Suckno.

Lee Langdon, of Warner Brothers' Exchange, drove to Tannersville last week, to bring back a picture being shown by Julius Byck, and encountered a twelve-mile detour that all but wrecked his machine. Mr. Byck was in town during the week, and reported that he might build another house in the near future.

HENRY KOPPIN, of the Woodward Theatre Co., has taken over the theatre interests of Lester Matt in Flint, Michigan. It is said that Matt is retiring from the picture business.

Jess Sellers, who operates the Willis Theatre in Detroit, has taken over the Dunbar and inaugurated with a daily change of program. Jess is a live wire showman and reports business as very good.

A. B. C., an independent distributing company in these parts, are without state salesmen at present. George Davison and Kelley Decker, however, still remain on the city sales force.

Genial "Les" Sturm, local manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange, is wearing a particularly joyous smile these days, and, instead of the cautious "not so good' that some of the exchange men hand you in reply to the inevitable "How's business?" Les chortles, gleefully, "Great! Couldn't be better!"

Freddie Strubank, tremendously popular film salesman for Pathe, has acquired a passport and necessary "scraps of paper" which will enable him to sail across the Detroit River to Windsor, Canada, on the 29th of June. This is one day in the year that Freddie sets aside, himself, as a holiday.

Robert Drew, brother of Frank Drew, after two years with Fox has resigned and is now covering the Michigan field for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, reports Manager Les. Sturm.

There seems no doubt that the announced new theatre to be built by C. H. Miles will be a reality and that actual construction will start during the summer. The new Miles house is to be on Adams Avenue, west, near Park Avenue, directly across from the Hotel Tuller.

Otto Bolle, Detroit manager for Paramount, was called to St. Louis, Mo., last week over the serious illness of his mother. Her condition has greatly improved since.

Miss Edith Candler, former secretary to Otto Bolle, manager of the Paramount Exchange in Detroit, has returned to this city after a very pleasant journey abroad.

Celebrating his 8th anniversary as an exhibitor, Geo. Koppin gave a party at his offices in the Broadway Peninsular building the evening of June 8. For the occasion and for future use as well he built a miniature theatre on the third floor of this building.

The new Lasky Theatre in Detroit, leased to Geo. Koppin, will open sometime in June. Everything is completed except to install the seats, set up the organ and some minor details. The house has a forty-foot lobby and all seats are on one floor. The Lasky policy will be pictures and vaudeville.

Salt Lake City

THE Intermountain Film Board of Trade met at the Hotel Utah here May 28th, to pay honor to C. C. Pettijohn, General Counsel of the Hays Organization.

Pettijohn gave a most interesting talk, touching on the many matters of interest in the film industry today.

D. T. Lane, Secretary of the Intermountain Film Board of Trade, presided. All of the exchanges were well represented. Harry Meyer, Secretary of the Montana Film Board of Trade, journeyed from Butte to attend the meeting.

Following the meeting, a dinner was served in the Presidential Suite of the Hotel Utah.

New York and New Jersey

ONE of New York's most popular and best-known exchange men figured prominently in a motor boat tragedy on Long Island Sound last week, which very nearly resulted in the loss of his life.

John Dacey, assistant-manager to William Raynor in the New York Pathe Exchange, with two others, embarked on the sound in their boat for a pleasure trip; and trouble occuring to the motor occasioned a shift of weight to one side of the boat, causing it to capsize. The three occupants sprawled in the waters of the sound and when all was over there were but two survivors; and John Dacey was one of them. Presence of mind displayed by wrapping a straggling rope around his arm which held him up until help arrived, undoubtedly saved his life.

This week marks the twenty-first wedding anniversary of John Dacey, which he is said to be celebrating with particular zest.

Sam Perry, well-known exhibitor from Englewood, N. J., has been seen carrying around several of the unusually attractive "picture-book" announcements for 1926-27; and casually hinted that he was about to fall under the spell of one of them, although, he may just be making a collection. At any rate, Sam states that he "must have the best" for his Englewood customers.

Irving Wormser, of Pathe New York Exchange, is the latest salesman to step out into business for himself. According to report, Wormser is now part owner of Short Films Syndicate which recently took over the product of the Hal Hodes Exchange.

Mr. Wormser is particulary well-known and liked among the local exhibitors and established an enviable record at the Pathe branch where he has been for the past nine years.

It is reported that Judkowitz and Smollen, New Jersey exhibitors, have taken over an 1800-seat house now under construction at Reading, Pa., and will add it to their holdings affiliated with the Walter Reade circuit. The house is near completion and will adhere to a policy of pictures and vaudeville.

It is rumored that Loew, Inc., have taken over Keeney's three Brooklyn theatres. These are the Bedford, Bay Ridge and Livingston; and with the exception of the last named house, are closed for the summer season. If this report be correct, it means the practical sewing up of that portion of Brooklyn.

Although news of Henry Siegle's acquisition of the Beck Theatre circuit has been thoroughly broadcast around the curb for the past two or three weeks, there comes now a report that the deal did not go through on account of the Siegle interests being unable to secure a clear title to the several properties.

Ben Leo and Jack Ungerfeld have leased the Empire Theatre, Rahway, N. J., for a term of 20 years; and along with this announcement comes the news that Louis Heiman—manager of the Empire for the past five years—will retire from that post. Mr. Heiman's future plans have not been made public, except that he and Mrs. Heiman will probably tour Canada and the Northwest for a month or so.

Leo, one of the lessees, is a brother-in-law of William Fox, and Ungerfeld, the partner in the Rahway enterprise, has long been associated with several theatres in the metropolitan district. Leo and Ungerfeld are also building a large theatre in Westchester County and have other houses in Ossining, Nyack, Brooklyn and New York City.

Bob Ungerfeld, brother of the new lessee, will succeed Louis Heiman as manager of the Empire. He has been associated with the Ossining theatres for some time.

According to report, plans will soon be filed for the erection of a new 800-seat theatre in the "Getty Square" section of East Yonkers. It is said that the population in this part of the city has shown an increase of 3000 during the past six months.

The Namford Operating Company of Brooklyn have recently announced plans for the erection of a store and theatre building at the corner of Fort Hamilton Parkway and 67th Street.

Another theatre construction announcement of interest to exhibitors of this zone, is that of David Weinstock, who has broken ground for a new playhouse on State Street, Hartford. It is a downtown location and completion is looked for about October 15.

Mr. Weinstock also operates the Grand Theatre at Hartford, and has another house at Manchester, Conn.

It is reported that Irving Lesser has taken over the Bayside Theatre, Bayside, L. I., and will operate it under a vaudeville and picture policy. Its reopening is said to be set for September 1.

Local exchange managers were conspicious by their absence on Tuesday of this week on account of the golf tournament at Mamaroneck; therefore, there is a scarcity of news in that direction. However, Phil Meyer, of Associated Exhibitors, stuck around the office until noon time; and then, he was observed departing with the 19th hole as his destination.

Eddie Carroll, star salesman for Associated Exhibitors, has decided to spend the entire summer in his cottage at Avon-by-the-Sea. At the end of the season he will return to Montclair.

Andy Sautelle, manager of the non-theatrical department in the Pathe Exchange, is making his home in Montclair these days.

Leon Adler, traveling auditor for Pathe exchanges, is at present taking over the duties of Adolph Goodman, who is confined to the Roosevelt Hospital prior to undergoing an operation.

Another Pathe man on the sick list is Charlie Stombaugh, who is suffering from a heavy cold.

Still on the subject of Pathe, we might mention that Milt Kronacher, from last reports, is holding his position at the top of the list—and, if this keeps up much longer, his retirement at Oyster Bay or Newport may be expected.

Several theatre closings reported for the summer season are: Keith's Riviera, St. Johns Place, Brooklyn; Moss' Flatbush, Flatbush Avenue and Church Avenue, Brooklyn; Keeney's Bay Ridge; Keeney's Bedford, and The Review Theatre, New Lots Road and Sheffield Avenue, Brooklyn.

The North Star Theatre, upper 5th Avenue, New York City, is reported as definitely closed. This house was operated by Sydney Cohen.

Philadelphia

THE Film Board of Trade, which has formerly met every other Friday, has changed its schedule for the months of June, July and August and will meet on the third Thursday of each month.

Harry Wiener, who, several months ago, was appointed Philadelphia branch manager for Associated Exhibitors, and Sam Phalen, who has been acting as salesman in the Harrisburg territory, have resigned. Al Blofsom, district manager, will serve as branch manager in addition to his other duties.

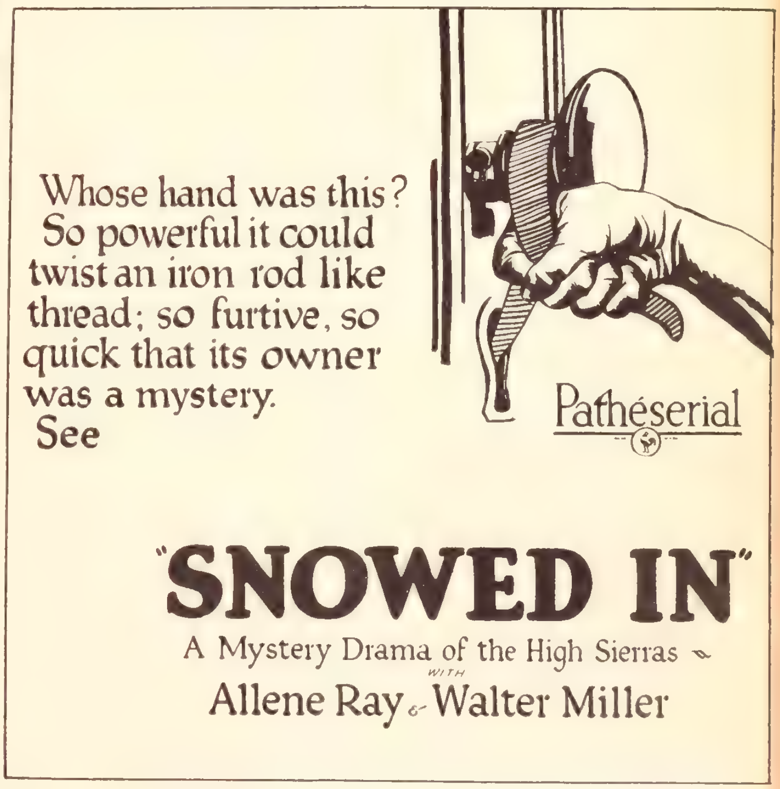
A. Graham Mango, general manager of Matin Film Production Co., of Paris, was a recent visitor in Philadelphia, the guest of Al Blofsom, district manager for Associated Exhibitors.

Mike Landow, sales manager in the Philadelphia exchange of Paramount, is receiving expressions of sympathy from his many friends in the industry on account of the recent death of his father, Semon Landow, aged 75, who died in Reading.

The Howard Theatre, Front and Lehigh avenues, which has been owned and operated for many seasons by George Chapman, has been sold outright to Price & Kneller.

Nixon's Grand Opera, Broad and Montgomery, which is operated jointly by the B. F. Keith Theatre Co., the Stanley Co. of America, and the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests, has been closed for the summer after a successful season. Manager Joe Dougherty plans to make extensive improvements during the summer.

Hunt's Theatres, Inc., are planning to open their string of seashore houses at Wildwood and Wildwood Crest on June 27th. J. P. Coxe, who has been managing their Criterion Theatre at Moorestown, has been transferred to Wildwood and put in charge of the Casino. W. J. Keegan, who has been a special field representative of the company, will manage the Regent during the summer. The company will reopen the City Pier at Cape May on June 18th and at the same time will close the Palace Theatre, which has been operating during the winter. This house will remain closed for a four weeks' period, during which extensive alterations and improvements will be made.



Whose hand was this? So powerful it could twist an iron rod like thread; so furtive, so quick that its owner was a mystery. See

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In the way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

FOR BETTER PROJECTION SIMPLEX PROJECTORS

A Pledge

BETTER PROJECTION PAYS POWER'S PROJECTOR

WITH a full sense of our responsibility to this great industry we pledge ourselves to anticipate Your Requirements for Tomorrow by a thorough understanding of Your Practical Needs Today.

For nearly a quarter of a century, a period covering the entire commercial history of the motion picture industry, the products of the International Projector Corporation have played a conspicuous part in the development of this field. In our shops during the pioneer days of motion pictures were originated and developed the safety devices, ease of operation and light sources of motion picture projectors which permit them to be used with eminently satisfactory results in the motion picture palaces of the world's greatest cities and with dependability in the remote and isolated parts of the globe. In the science of projection we have kept pace with the art of production and today American motion picture equipment maintains an international leadership which is by no means inferior to the splendid pre-eminence of American motion pictures.

American Showmanship Scores in German Picture Theatres

Erno Rapee Introduces Modern Presentation Methods at Ufa Palast

UP to about one or two years ago, showmanship was as foreign to German motion picture exhibitors as night shirts are to the aborigines of the South Sea Islands. In fact, a German exhibitor would have been highly insulted if he had been classified as a showman, a word, which, to him smelled after circus sideshows and ballyhoos. No, sir! The German exhibitor was a dignfied person. He called — and still calls — himself a "Cinema Theatre Proprietor." His methods of selling his program to the public were more crude than dignified. A few unattractive posters, a small number of insignificant program placards of the size used by the royal opera in former years and a number of badly conceived and badly set newspaper avertisements. That was about all.

Equally crude was the way the programs were executed. An orchestra of about 12 to 15 musicians in the large theatres and of two or three pieces in the smaller houses, with a leader who did not care or was unable to adapt his music to the requirements of the picture, played some overture. Next came screen advertisements. No music with these. Next a weekly screen review, likewise without music and finally a comedy and a feature film with musical accompaniment of the worst type. That was all.

Study American Methods

Things took a decided turn to the better a few years ago when the big German theatre holding concerns sent their leading members to America to sudy American methods. They came back to Berlin with ideas of lobby displays, of certain comfort within the theatres, with thoughts of larger and better orchestras, and so on. All told, the results were meager enough, although the American trip of architect Bischof of the Ufa brought a practical result in the form of a new theatre, built in Berlin, with the latest American improvements and requirements.

But that finished it. Things were polished up a bit and German showmanship remained as obscure as it was before.

The complete change came on the day when Ufa succeeded in contracting for the services of Erno Rapee. At once, the biggest Ufa theatre in Berlin was completely rebuilt and modernized. Its seating capacity was increased to three thousand. And now, Rapee went to work.

The Berlin audience were full of expectations, for Rapee was well known in Berlin through the success he achieved when, on March 9, 1925, he appeared as a guest-conductor with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra. The American director engaged not less than seventy-five of the best philharmonic musicians to be found in Berlin and when the rebuilt house was opened in Fall 1925, Rapee and his orchestra created a sensation such as Berlin never witnessed. The newspapers wrote columns of praise and the Berlin public went mad over Rapee and his orchestra.

Introduces Stage Prologues

The next innovations introduced by the American conductor were artistic prologues and stage reviews of a splendor and exactness never seen in Europe before. Then came his symphonic jazz orchestra. Next his wonderful piano concerts played on four grand pianos by eminent pianists. With every program Rapee brought new and brilliant features. Soon, he was the most popular conductor in Berlin. The broadcasting station of the German capital secured his jazz symphony orchestra and the mere announcement of this fact sufficed to increase the number of Berlin radio participants 25 per cent. The most exclusive societies insisted to secure Rapee and his musicians for their festivities.

As far as the Ufa is concerned, his activities were not restricted to his one Ufa Palast Theatre. He has wielded his baton at the newly opened cinema de luxe, the Gloria, and in various Ufa theatres in Berlin, Frankfort, Dusseldorf and in other German houses.

Other Theatres Adopt Policy

Rapee's management of the Ufa Palast has acted as a stimulus to every German theatre concern. Better orchestras have been secured by the big German houses and the general endeavor is to imitate his methods of showmanship. To do justice to the imitators one must say that they are doing their best in skill and ability. To do justice to Rapee one must acknowledge that none of the imitations was half-way up to his standard quality. However the merits may be in this respect, the fact remains that Rapee's coming to Berlin has revolutionized German showmanship and that it has proved a blessing to the entire German trade.

How firmly this American musician is established in the opinion of the German audiences is proved by the fact that in that serene country of classical music, where men like Bach, Mozart, Brahms, Wagner, etc., are worshipped like gods, Rapee had the daring to introduce jazzed versions of standard works of German music classics. He not only "got away with it," but his clever arrangement and humorous distortions were even enthusiastically praised by the most severe newspaper critics. One of these eminent writers wittily remarked that Rapee was a combination of Charlie Chaplin and the famous German symphony conductor, Gustav Mahler. Another Berlin critic speaks of him as the "musical director for the people." A widely-read Berlin evening paper praises his style of conducting his giant orchestra as "rythmic hypnosis," underlined and enhanced by his "wonderful ability in arranging and handling colored lighting effects."

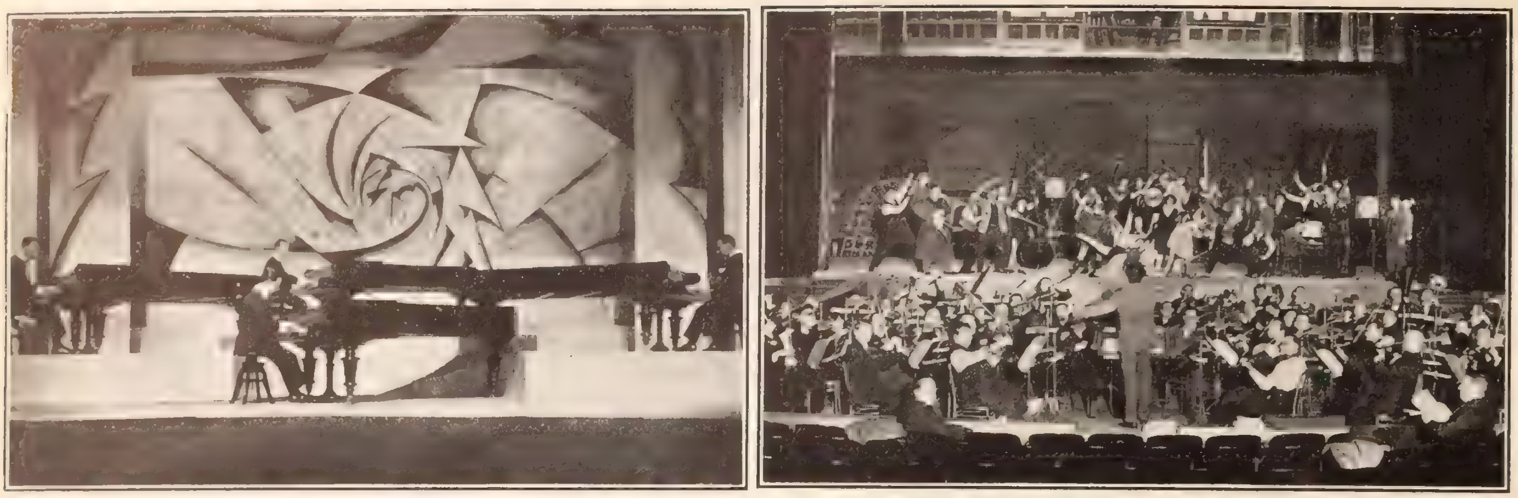
Critics Applaud Innovations

As a matter of fact his combination of music and light has so deeply impressed the Berlin and the German audiences that, for instance, the Vossische Zeitung terms him a "composer of lights" and his style of handling color effects as "symphony of lights."

Considering his achievements and his success one would be easily led to believe that he would have, in a short time, incurred the hostility and the envy of his German colleagues. The contrary has occurred. His pleasant personality, his artistic ambitions, his earnest and unrelenting work have made him a host of friends in Berlin. If it were not for a handful of ultra nationalistic cranks who condemn jazz as something anti-German altogether, one could safely say that since his coming to Berlin on September 25, 1925, not one unfriendly word has been said against this guest from American shores, who has revolutionized the German methods of motion picture screening.

Straight Pictures at Keith Grand Rapids House

B. F. Keith's in Grand Rapids last week started a summer policy of straight pictures at reduced prices. The opening bill offered "A Social Celebrity" as the main feature with Pathe News, Æsop's Fables and a Topics of the Day reel as the balance of the program. The shows are continuous from 1 to 11 P.M., at prices of 15 and 25 cents for matinees and 25 and 35 cents for night performances.



Erno Rapee's presentations at the Ufa Palast in Berlin have introduced in Germany the American cinema theatre methods. Above at the left is the novel stage arrangement for a number featuring four pianos—an unusual grouping which proved most effective with the lighting used. At the right is Rapee rehearsing a jazz number at the Palast.

Midnight Matinee a Sell Out at Queen, Galveston

A special midnight matinee offered by Manager E. E. Collins at the Queen Theatre in Galveston with winners of the Bathing Girl Revue held in that city recently as an added attraction with the photoplay "The Blind Goddess" drew a capacity audience.

The event was given to launch the following week's engagement of the picture but proved more than simply an exploitation stunt when the house was forced to turn away many patrons. Iced coffee and brick ice cream, donated by a local dealer, were served while the show was on. Following the performance the bathing girls formed a "receiving line" in the lobby and greeted members of the audience.

Pictures Replace Stock at Hershey Park Theatre

The Hershey Chocolate Company, which controls a big amusement park at Hershey, near Harrisburg, Pa., where its big chocolate factories are located, has adopted a new policy for its outdoor theatre in the park which in former summers has been devoted chiefly to stock company productions and musical recitals.

During the present summer the house will be devoted to motion pictures and vaudeville, with a change of program each Monday and Thursday.

Musical Comedy in Reading House for Summer

The Rajah Theatre in Reading and the State in Harrisburg, regular pictures and vaudeville houses, have adopted a summer policy of offering musical comedy for three days each week. Jimmie Hodge and his company will present a repertoire running through a period of ten weeks, appearing the first three days of each week at the Harrisburg theatre and the last three days at the Reading playhouse.

Columbia, Cleveland, Closes

R. C. Jones, manager of the Columbia Theatre, East Ninth St., Cleveland, has discontinued the picture policy which he inaugurated two weeks ago, when the Columbia burlesque season closed. Jones will keep the house dark until August when it will reopen with burlesque.

"Improve As You Go" Plan Keeps Strand Open 365 Days a Year

ALTHOUGH the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre has been running for seven years, it has not been closed down a single day during that period for repairs, improvements or changes.

While painting, redecorating and such things are being done every day, the work is carried on between the time that the house closes at night and opens the next day at noon. Doubtless many of the customers have wondered how the house can be in such spic and span condition without being closed.

At the present time Managing Director Edward L. Hyman is going over the theatre from the stage to the very front doors, to freshen everything up for the summer months. From the proscenium arch to the rear of the orchestra on the downstairs floor all of the walls and doors are being done over by the painters and decorators, and all soiled and worn drapes and hangings are being replaced.

The marquee and all of the doors in front of the house have been repainted in colors to correspond with the change in the season and thus giving an entirely different effect to the appearance of the theatre. Also the lights around the marquee and the flasher itself are being changed.

Such things as this avoid the possibility of patrons taking the theatre for granted. Periodic changes in marquee, doors, etc., reawaken interest in passers-by and all who visit the house. It also creates conversation and this conversation carried from person to person is excellent advertising for the theatre.

At this time, too, the summer covers are being put on all the chairs in the theatre, and the ushers, doormen and porters are being outfitted in their new summer uniforms.

The
MANAGER'S OFFICE

G. B. ODLUM is managing the Palace and Winter Garden theatres in Jamestown, N. Y. He formerly managed the Majestic in Hornell.

F. L. COLLINS, formerly located at Flint, Mich., has been appointed to succeed John DeStafano as manager of the Tootle, Orpheum and Royal theatres in St. Joseph, Mo. DeStafano, now recovering from a serious illness, will remain in St. Joseph for several weeks before being transferred to some other point by the Hostettler Amusement Co., owners of the chain which includes the houses mentioned.

L. H. LEWIS, for some time assistant manager of the Highland Theatre in Highland Park, Cal., is now manager of the Brooklyn Theatre in that city. Both houses are operated by West Coast Theatres.

L. & T. Operating Orchestra Hall for Summer

Lubliner & Trinz have taken Orchestra Hall for the summer season, and, following their custom in past years, are operating it as a picture house. An interesting experiment will be tried out this year in showing old favorites, starting with "The Kid." Others already booked for presentation during the season include "Beau Brummel," "Disraeli," "The White Sister" and others.

Lubliner & Trinz have also arranged to announce Sunday baseball scores of the Cubs and White Sox games at the Harding, Senate, Covent Garden and Windsor Theatres.

River Show-boat Season Opens

The annual show-boat season has opened in the Mississippi and Ohio River Valleys. Nine big boats are in this service, the largest being the Cotton Blossom, seating 2,000. These boats make river towns without regular theatres.

To Produce Presentations

The New Bostonians, Inc., Boston, has been incorporated to operate theatrical enterprises and presentations, with capital of $100,000. Incorporators are Charles D. Irwin, Brookline, Mass.; Eugene Cowles and Walter Lawrence, Boston.

A Nation-Wide Seating Service

AMERICAN Seating Company Service—nation wide—is prompt, efficient—satisfactory. Built up through fifty years of ever enlarging activity. Sustained by 15,000,000 chairs in the leading auditoriums and theatres from coast to coast. Kiddie Review to Play F. & R. Circuit

Clement Murphy Now Staging Act With 11 Youngsters as Stars

A [illegible] "kiddies" revue, which will tour the Finkelstein & Ruben Circuit for most of the summer, is now being organized and whipped into shape by Clement P. Murphy, production manager for the firm.

Eleven children, whose ages range from 10 to 14 years, will be used in the revue, which has been titled "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree."

The production will open at the State in Minneapolis, June 19. Finkelstein & Ruben have had spectacular success with their "kiddies" revues, and their several excellent presentations have proved to be fine drawing cards. Many of the children trained in these revues have later obtained vaudeville contracts.

Presentations at Stanley and Fox in Philadelphia

The Karavaeff Ballet was the principal attraction on the surrounding program at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, during the week of May 31st. Al Moore and his United States Orchestra was also featured. The feature was "Wet Paint."

At the Fox Theatre George Moran and Charles Mack, blackface comedians, and E. G. Sherman's Syncopated Ingenues were the outstanding features. "High Steppers" was the picture.

Atmospheric Presentation for "Volga Boatman"

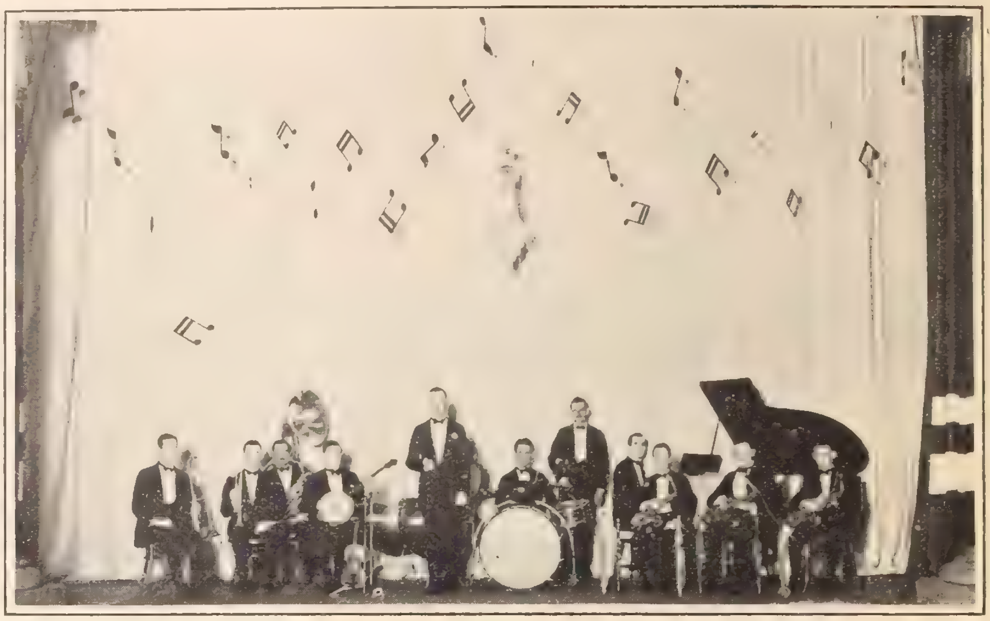
As "The Volga Boatman," is presented in its entirety at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, this week, the customary routine of the weekly program has been altered. The principal musical offering consists of a dramatization in song and dance of "The Song of the Boatmen of the Volga." A Russian ensemble of voices sings the composition, and Chester Hale has arranged an elaborate Russian Gypsy Ballet to music by Rimsky-Korsakoff. Doris Niles dances the principal role.

Frisco Booked to Play Over Loew Theatre Circuit

Frisco, will play the picture houses over the Loew Circuit, having been booked by J. H. Lubin, general vaudeville booking manager, for a tour, starting at Loew's State, New York, the week of June 14. Following the State engagement he will play Loew's Metropolitan in Brooklyn, and Loew's State, Newark.

Double Bill Opens Summer Policy

The Circle Theatre in Cleveland last week started its summer policy at reduced prices with a double bill on which "Hell Bent fer Heaven" and "The Marriage Circle" were offered. During the regular season pictures and Pantages vaudeville were the policy at the Circle.



JAZZ SETTING

Landry Orchestra in Return Engagement at Grand

Art Landry and his orchestra played a successful return engagement as the stage feature at the Grand Theatre, Pittsburgh, last week, when "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" was the leading attraction.

The Landry organization featured a spectacular presentation of Minstrel Days, with special costuming, settings and a program of comedy, novelty and musical offerings.

Sissle and Blake Head Bill at Missouri Theatre

Sissle and Blake headed the stage program offered last week at the Missouri in St. Louis. The featured attraction was Bebe Daniels in "The Palm Beach Girl."

The stage bill included the Publix unit show "Kids in Kandyland," produced by Gus Edwards, Charles Previn's orchestra and an organ solo, "Memories of the World," played by Milton Slosser, added to the musical features of the program.

Eddie Hines and Earl Smith at Omaha Strand

Eddie Hines and Earl Smith, rendering popular songs with banjo and piano, had the featured place on the stage program offered last week at the Strand, Omaha. The Strand presented "The Palm Beach Girl" as the leading attraction. Bobby Vernon in "Page Me," a Lyman Howe Hodge Podge and Kinograms made up the balance of the screen program.

Majestic in Hartford Shows Program of Revivals

On a Grand Revival Week program offered as a novelty last week at the Majestic Theatre, Hartford, Conn., that house presented seven outstanding screen productions of the past. There was a daily change of program.

The week opened with the showing on Sunday of "The Thief of Bagdad." Mary Pickford in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" was the feature Monday, and "The White Rose" was shown Tuesday. On Wednesday "Robin Hood" was the attraction, with Thursday, Friday and Saturday's programs headed respectively by "A Woman of Paris," "Rosita" and D. W. Griffith's "America."

Review Week at Tower, St. Paul

The Tower Theatre, St. Paul, offered a Review Week in which pictures released earlier in the season were revived as a special celebration last week. The pictures revived, and shown for one day only, were: "Go West," "The Ragman," "The Blackbird," "The Midshipman," "Mike" and "His Secretary."

Vadie Dancers Featured at Mosque

The Maryon Vadie Dancers in their "Repertoire of Dance Poems" headed the stage bill at the Mosque, Newark, N. J., last week. The program included Rae Bonstini, pianist, and Ota Gygi, violinist. "The Rainmaker" was the photoplay attraction.

Brooke Johns Stars at Aldine

Brooke Johns and his jazz band headed the stage offerings at the Aldine, Pittsburgh, last week. The featured attraction was "Brown of Harvard."

National Sextet at Colorado

The National Sextet appeared on the stage of the Colorado Theatre in Denver last week as added features with Scheuerman's Colorado orchestra in a special presentation in conjunction with the showing of "The Wilderness Woman."

Tips On Small Theatre Construction

Vital Points Involved in Building of These Houses Equal in Importance to Those of Larger Theatres

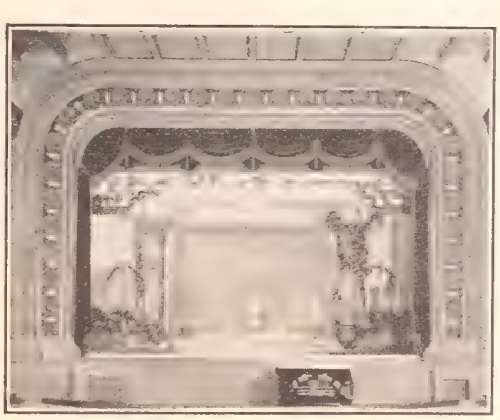
By H. Robins Burroughs, Consulting Engineer

COMPARATIVELY little has been written on the subject of construction for small capacity theatres constructed in small towns. It is usually considered a matter of minor importance, but if one will investigate the problem to any extent, it will be found that there are a number of vital points involved in building a small theatre in a small town equally important to those concerned in its construction as are similar points in projects of a greater magnitude.

In the beginning any investor who undertakes to build a small town proposition should be intensely interested in all of the elements involved and to a greater extent in detail than is usually the case in larger operations, due to the fact that his finances are limited, and he must make a dollar go a long way. It therefore becomes absolutely necessary that a thorough study be made of the small theatre operation as well as in the construction of larger work. The general points to be considered in this class of work are parallel to those of greater scale, and each item should be taken up and analyzed just as carefully as if it were of greater importance.

Proper Location

The first thing to be considered is the location, and it is important that the proper location be obtained in the small town as well as in a larger one. Property, of course, is of lesser value, but it has its comparative value in any case. The opinion prevails very frequently that inasmuch as a small population is being involved any central location will suffice. This is an erroneous idea, and should be dispelled from the outset if the undertaking is to be successful. The location should be selected with the utmost care, and in general it should be a main street and in the heart of the town unless there are two small towns which practically join and the theatre is intended to draw from both centers; then it is usually advisable to place the theatre approximately midway between the two town centers and on a main thoroughfare connecting them. This will enable the two populations to concentrate at a central point and thereby profit by having a common interest in the theatre. It is, of course, understood that the two centers of population are not too widely separated. In other words, the towns must join and there must be a considerable amount of traffic on the street passing by the theatre. This applies only where the two towns are not large enough to support a theatre of their own. Where they have sufficient population to support their own theatre it is decidedly better to operate two theatres, one in the heart and center of the two communities where it is a difficult matter to induce patrons to travel any appreciable distance to attend a theatre if there is one nearby, especially in a rural community where the country is open and travel not convenient.



View of the stage of the new Madrid Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. It is a thorough example of the modern suburban house and was built by the Westport Amusement Co.

Having thus determined upon the location of a small theatre in a small town, the next matter of importance is the amount that should be expended on the proposition. Certain towns, due to their local characteristics, will support a theatre of a certain size, whereas another town of the same population would not support a theatre of the same size. Different studies should be made of the composition of the population; their religion, their habits, their occupations and social standing, all of which tend to determine the extent to which any given community would be classified as potential theatre-goers. This is most important and should be taken into consideration by anyone who contemplates building and operating a theatre in a small town. So that a very careful analysis must be made of the town as a whole in order to determine the business that may be expected from a theatre operation.

Prior Analysis

Frequently the error is made of neglecting this analysis prior to construction and usually the theatre is built as a cut and dried proposition, so that the owner does not know, or even some time, have any idea of whether or not his undertaking will be successful until after he has opened the doors to the public. This question is too often determined in this way. The answer should be obtained prior to even the beginning of construction at least in a general way in order to reduce the element of risk involved in any building operation to a minimum.

It has been said, and quite truthfully, that it is impossible to determine in advance whether or not any given theatre location will prove successful in any size community. This to a certain degree must be the case, but it is equally certain that there are conditions which, if analyzed in the beginning, would certainly determine that any development of this kind would be doomed to sure failure.

Assuming then that a suitable location has been found for a theatre, the next thing is to determine the seating capacity and the amount of expenditure that should be justified in any given location. This brings forth the question of seating capacity which should be built for any given community. Herein is just the problem and one guess may be as good as another within reasonable limits; but it will generally be found that this will be determined by the estimated returns that can be attained from the size of the population from which the patronage of the theatre will be drawn. It is a well established fact that any investor can only afford to spend that amount which will bring him a reasonable return on his investment. For instance, if he estimates that his gross return from a small theatre will average $5,000 a year, he could not afford to spend $50,000 for the theatre; probably $30,000 would be the limit. On the other hand, if he should see an average return of $10,000 a year, he would be justified in expending double the amount of money, and so on.

In the proper analysis on this point it will be found that the question will present itself as to how many seats can be built for a given amount, making due allowance for the cost of the property, equipment and other elements that are necessary to complete the proposition as a whole.

Often Handled Wrong Way

Ordinarily this point is handled from the opposite direction; that is to say, the number of seats is assumed and plans and specifications on this basis and estimates obtained. The contracts are then awarded and the job is built. Afterwards it is discovered that too much money has been spent and consequently a proper return on the investment cannot be obtained. This places the entire operation in a bad light inasmuch as it is impossible to change the situation; after once a theatre is built it cannot be used for other purposes and unless the income is increased to a proper standard, the entire operation becomes unprofitable and frequently a dead loss. So that if the number of seats is made dependent upon the amount of expenditure, rather than the amount of expenditure dependent upon the number of seats, it will be found that the ultimate results will be more satisfactory. Again the number of seats is not the only determining factor, as the arrangement of the theatre, its decoration and equipment have a decided bearing on the number of seats that can be obtained from any given outlay for the reason that there is only a certain amount of money available and if that is spent in equipment and decoration, a lesser amount is spent on volume of construction. In other words, in small town work it is not desirable to spend too much money on the finish, but rather to put the greater percentage of available funds in the construction of the body of the theatre which will enable the building to be spread out over a larger area and hence a greater seating capacity. A proper balance must be struck between Three views of the new Roger Sherman Theatre, recently opened at New Haven, Conn., by the A. S. Friend Companies. At the left, note the effect of the beamed ceiling set with jewels and the ample space between the seats. Also, the tapestries and murals. In the centre is an exterior view and on the right, the orchestra pit and a portion of the Oriental decorative scheme of the side walls. Rich hangings blend in perfect harmony.

New Haven's Newest Theatre

Roger Sherman Offers Novel Scheme in Treatment of Interior

NEW HAVEN'S newest theatre, the Roger Sherman, is distinctly Oriental in atmosphere and unusual in the general treatment of the interior decorations.

Instead of the customary light colors for decoration, and the high sweeping arches and dome effects, more sombre colors are used and the ceilings are beamed in a deep, rich mahogany color, studded with jewels, while the walls are hung with rich tapestries. The same deep color effects are secured in the treatment of the furniture and the carpetings.

The seats of the main auditorium are set at a steeper pitch than is customary, following more the angle of the modern balcony, giving better screen vision from all parts of the house. There is also a much wider space between the rows of seats than has heretofore been used, permitting easy access and egress during a performance when sections of rows may be occupied, thus allowing people to enter and leave the middle of the rows with a minimum of inconvenience to other patrons.

The vaulted effect of the mezzanine floor, with the arched ceiling painted azure blue thickly set with silver stars, combines an effect both Oriental and Spanish in its treatment. Here every provision has been made for the comfort of patrons and the furniture is of heavily carved overstuffed pattern in mahogany and dark colored woods. Floor and table lamps supply the illumination and the hangings are deep and rich in color in keeping with the general scheme.

The main stairway leads from the right of the lobby, and in a niche at the landing where the stairway turns abruptly to the left sits a large idol before a background of azure blue, treated with special lighting effects which command instant attention.

The house seats 2,100 but because of the ample aisles and room between the rows of seats, has the appearance of larger capacity. Its stage is equipped for presentations, vaudeville and legitimate productions.

Special attention has been paid to the projection room which is the most commodious in the state. There are three projection machines, two spotlights, two stereopticons, etc., two interchangeable double throw with Westinghouse generators. The film vault is asbestos lined and tests have shown it to be absolutely fireproof, flames being quickly smothered by its automatic working.

The Roger Sherman Theatre is owned and operated by the A. S. Friend Companies, Inc., of New York City. The same company is building a new theatre in New London which will open early in the fall as the Garde Theatre, with seating capacity of about 1,500, and is also starting the construction of a new theatre in Springfield, Mass., on the site of the Massasoit Hotel which will be ready next year and will be the largest theatre in that city with seating capacity of about 4,000.

E. Mochary is manager of the Roger Sherman.

Baxter Springs Citizens Like Ritz Theatre

The new Ritz Theatre, Baxter Springs, Kan., owned by John I. Cooper, was packed to the guards during its recent opening, and both the owner and Clare Rehm, manager, expressed their appreciation for the magnificent response made by the people of Baxter Springs and vicinity.

Mr. Cooper said today that the newly installed Blizzard cooling system would be put in a state of perfection within a day or two and that the show house would be made as cool as a cave during the summer weather.

The theatre contains 346 opera chairs in the parquet and 167 in the balcony, making a total of 507 seats.

Mrs. Roy Brooks, organist of the Victory Theatre, Rogers, Ark., also owned by Mr. Cooper, came to Baxter Springs to play the Wurlitzer theatre organ during the initial show and the music was praised highly.

Approve Plans for Mount Carmel Theatre

Announcement was made on May 17 that preliminary plans have been approved for the erection of a new theatre and apartment building at an expenditure of $400,000, at Third and Hickory streets, Mount Carmel, Pa., by the Sons of Veterans organization of that city. The playhouse will be equipped for motion pictures as well as for vaudeville and legitimate shows. The theatre will occupy the sites of the present Burnside Opera House.

The theatre proper will occupy the entire lower floor and have a seating capacity of 2,000. There will be fifteen dressing rooms beneath the stage and the front part of the upper portion will be made into compartments. At the rear will be quarters for the Sons of Veterans and similar organizations.

Postpone Chambersburg Theatre Project

Announcement is made that Henderson & Mong, of Chambersburg, Pa., have indefinitely postponed their project of erecting a new motion picture theatre in that city. The firm had plans prepared for a house that would seat 1,000 persons, but it is learned that the plot that had been purchased as the site for the proposed theatre has been found to be too narrow for a structure of the size desired to meet the requirements of the firm and it is understood the company has placed the plot on the open market. It is said, however, that if the company can acquire adjoining property at satisfactory terms the theatre project may be revived.

Establish Rental Record in Kansas City, Mo.

A RECORD in North Side theatre property rental was established in Kansas City this week. The first ground floor store room in the new Gillis Theatre, now under construction on the site where the old Gillis recently was demolished by an explosion, will rent for $7,200 a year over a 10-year period—about $3.40 a square foot. The lease was obtained by Paul Pruzan from the Werby Realty & Investment Company.

The little more

The feature picture, the musical accompaniment, the supplementary attractions on the program—are of course of utmost box office importance.

But it's the little more that makes your theatre different—photographic quality on the screen, for example. When the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film the photography of the negative is saved for your patrons to enjoy. And that's of importance at the box office, too.

Prints on Eastman have the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in the transparent margin. Look for it.

Inquiries and Comments

Adjustable Shutters

SOME time ago, Mr. Carl J. Lang, of the Lang Manufacturing Works, Olean, N. Y., sent us some models of adjustable shutters, which were designed to facilitate rapid adaptation of the shutter blade widths to the diameter of the particular light beam obtained under any given condition.

We were requested to test out these shutters in order to note what increase (if any) in light on the screen was obtained when the necessary adjustments were made for any given size of light beam.

Mr. Lang wrote as follows:

"Gentlemen:

"We have at hand your letter addressed for the attention of the writer. Contents are carefully noted.

"Mailing you a copy of the patent grant was merely to give you an idea of what the writer has accomplished with this new design of shutter, in that we further claim, and nearly everyone connected with the industry knows, that 99 percent of the shutters furnished with any projectors have wings, or blades of an area much larger than is necessary, which results in a great loss of light. It is the subject of adjusting the shutter to the width of the light beam, which was overlooked by the engineers. (Manufacturers' engineers, presumably—Ed.)

"Complying with your request, we are making an express shipment of the original models, which is all we have on hand. A 3-wing shutter for Powers and a 3-wing shutter for Simplex or Motiongraph projectors. If you have a Motiongraph projector, it will be necessary for us to know the diameter of the shutter spindle and we would then be able to send you the proper size of bushing, which can be replaced with the one now in the hub of the Simplex type.

"Please note. When these model shutters were made there was no aluminum at hand and we constructed them with materials in stock at the time. We figured that should we manufacture these shutters ourselves, we could cut the weight down to about 6 ounces for the Powers type and about 7 ounces for the Simplex and Motiongraph types."

Focal Length Scale Not Correct

Upon examining Mr. Lang's shutters it was observed that a scale of objective lens focal length adjustments was engraved on the Powers type and we were somewhat at a loss to see just how such a scale could be applied in practice with any assurance that it would work satisfactorily under any given set of conditions.

Another letter was received later, however, which cleared up this point since we were informed that this scale was, in fact, incorrect, and had been roughly placed on the shutter for patent application purposes.

The object of this scale was to facilitate pre-setting the width of the shutter blades, knowing only the focal length of the objective lens.

The idea was, in theory, a good one since it would have involved but a single simple adustment. But a few important points were overlooked since a different scale would be required depending upon whether the condenser lenses were covered by a slide carrier or were free from such a device and also whether condenser lenses or a reflecting arc were used.

We are very much afraid, therefore, that this focal length is more or less useless calibrated for each particular condition.

Idea Not New

The idea of adjusting the width of the master of a shutter to the size of a particular light beam is by no means new, though Mr. Lang's device for readily enabling the projectionist to make this adjustment himself is a new one.

Heretofore, the recommended practice, which, by the way, has seldom been followed for some reason or other, best known to projectionists alone, has been to trim down the shutter blade to the necessary size for satisfactory performance.

The only benefits obtained by such practice was a relatively small increase in screen illumination due to increasing the ratio of light to dark intervals as the shutter revolved.

Great care had to be exercised to see that the width of the blade was not made too small, else it would not have the covering power required for the complete masking of the film traveling past the aperture.

In Error

We believe, however, that Mr. Lang was in error when he wrote that the engineers of the Projector Manufacturer had overlooked this important point of variable shutter blade width since it sticks in our mind that the Powers people attempted to correct this evil by sending out a shutter either adjusted for the local condition, or which could be adjusted by the projectionist after the arrival of the equipment.

If our memory serves us correctly, this scheme was given up after a trial has proven it impractical because it was either impossible to tell what the conditions would be or else the projectionist would not take the steps necessary to make it work.

Law of the Sectored Disc

It has long been recognized that it was necessary for each projectionist to carefully check the width of the shutter master blade so as not to permit it to mask the projection lens for a longer period than absolutely required, else a waste of illumination would result.

According to the Plateau Law, the illumination resulting from a beam of light interrupted repeatedly in a regular manner by a sectored disc, is directly proportional to the ratio of total area of the openings to the total area of the shutter disc; or, taken on a time basis, it is proportional to the ratio of period of uninterruped light passage to the period required for one complete shutter revolution.

Thus, to take a crude example, if it required 0.8 seconds for the shutter to make one complete revolution and during that time the light beam was permitted to pass for a total of 0.5 seconds, the resultant screen illumination would be $\frac{0.5}{0.8} = 0.625$ or 62.5 per cent. of what the screen illumination would be had no shutter been used.

In other words, the waste of light due to the shutter would be 100—62.5 = 37.5 per cent. In practice, the loss is somewhat higher than this—in the neighborhood of 50 percent, but this will serve to illustrate the necessity for removing all surplus metal from the master blade in order to prevent any unique waste of light.

How It Works

Mr. Lang's device does this in the following manner. Two sets of blades are used, one set sliding over the other so that it is possible, by holding one set stationary and sliding the other, to increase or decrease the width of the master blade alone. This sliding action is performed by means of a thumbscrew attached to the master blade, which, when loose, permits the shutters to be adusted, after which the thumbscrew is tightened and locks the blades in position securely, so that when the shutter rotates the blades will not slide apart due to centrifugal action.

It is not necessary to say that when these shutters were tested they were found to obey the Plateau Law above referred to, the variation of screen illumination obtained being directly proportional to the percentage increase or decrease in the area of the openings in the blades.

Tips on Construction of Small Theatres

rough construction and finish so that the greatest return may be obtained on the investment.

This cannot be too strongly emphasized, for the reason that herein lies the greatest error that is usually made. Lack of experience or good judgment on the part of the engineer or architect who is building the theatre will cause the owner to lose or make a considerable amount of money.

This leads to the subject of the class of construction. In other words, what materials should be used as a matter of economy and efficiency. In a small town of three thousand inhabitants, it would probably be found that an expenditure of $25,000 or $30,000 would be the maximum that the inhabitants would bear, and hence in order to build a structure with a reasonable seating capacity cheap material would have to be used and the structure built probably on a semi-fireproof basis, as it would not be possible to build of fireproof construction on account of the excessive cost. In determining the cost of any given operation, the design of it is the basis. Consequently in drawing the plans and writing specifications, particular knowledge of the construction available in any given community should be at hand. Otherwise it is not possible to design the most economical building for any particular place.

It is evident from the foregoing that a small theatre operation in a small town requires study and consideration as well as a larger operation. It does not mean that all one has to do is to find a vacant lot and engage some laborers or mechanics to go forth and construct a theatre. This is a procedure that is frequently followed, but it should be discouraged, as it only leads to uncertain results. Only care and forethought in any business operation will prove in the majority of cases successful; whereas a hit and miss proposition may turn out in the right way, in the majority of cases it will not be satisfactory.

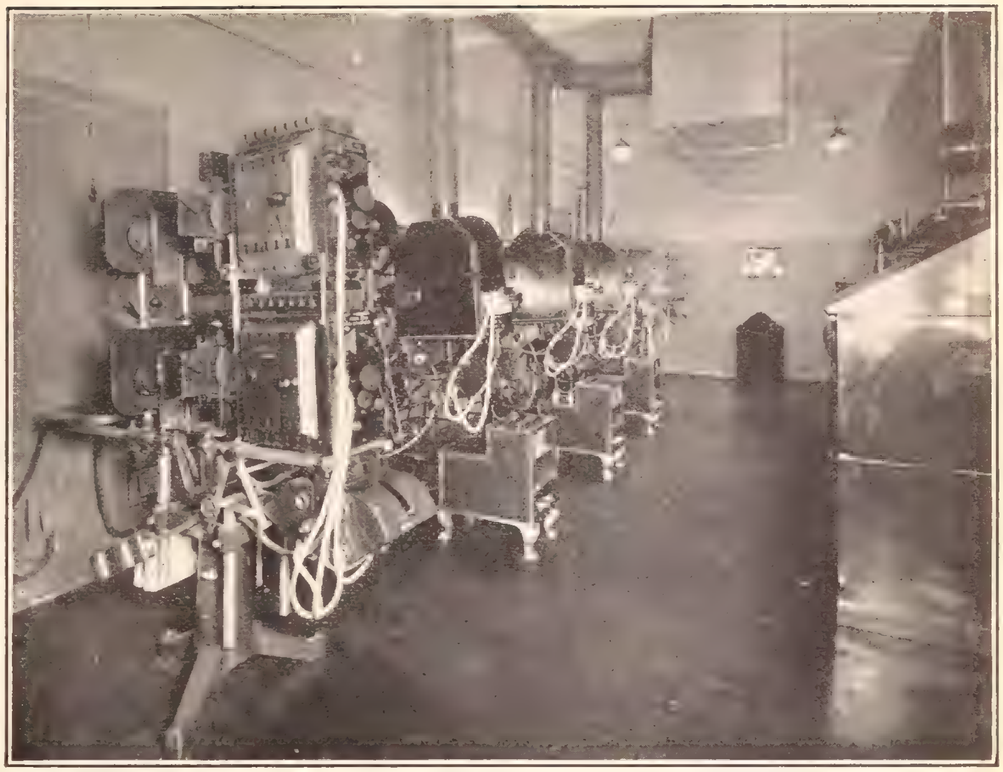
The principal question that will arise in the analysis of any given proposition is the cost of construction. For a theatre of any given number of seats, this, of course, will depend to a considerable extent upon the location of the town, which in turn depends upon the labor available and the kind of material that may be had.

In the Eastern and New England States the writer has found that in towns of five thousand or less a 600-seat theatre may be built and equipped complete, including the cost of the property, for from $20,000 to $30,000. This amount is sufficient to provide a neat and attractive, well finished theatre.

Consequently if an income of $5,000 a year can be reasonably assured, there should be no hesitancy on the part of the builder or owner to proceed on this basis.

We have then as a practical minimum a 600-seat theatre for an expenditure of $25,000. It is usually not advisable to build any smaller capacity, as the returns would not be in keeping with the cost. From this point on the increase is entirely in accordance with the surrounding conditions. For instance, a thousand-seat theatre would cost $100,000, or more, according to the kind of material used and the degree of elaboration in the interior.

Consequently the writer's advice to those contemplating and operating a small theatre in a small town is to analyze the situation carefully from every angle and if the owner is not capable of doing this, he should engage an agent, engineer or architect capable of acting as his guide through the entire operation.



View of the spacious projection room in Boston's Metropolitan Theatre, a Famous-Players house. First in line, is a Brenkert spot. Next, in order, are three Simplex projectors equipped with Hall & Conolly high intensity arcs The machine at the far end is a Mestrum Balluna spot. An American film safe also makes up part of the equipment. Howell's Cine Equipment Company made the installation.

Keith-Albee Buys Another Brooklyn Site

The B. F. Keith Theatres, Inc., which controls the Albee theatre chain, has purchased a site for a vaudeville and moving picture house at the corner of 50th Street and 5th Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. The plot is occupied at present by several buildings, including a small moving picture theatre in 50th Street near 5th Avenue. These structures will be demolished to make way for the new building. The plot measures 27x90 in 5th Avenue, 50x100 in 50th Street and 92x100 in 49th Street.

The site for the new theatre was assembled about three months ago and plans are now being made for the demolition of the present structures. The new link in the Albee theatre chain will have a seating capacity of about 2,500 and will contain the very latest features in construction and equipment. It will be the first house owned by the corporation in Bay Ridge and the type of attractions to be offered will be similar to that presented in the Prospect Theatre, the South Brooklyn house in the Albee group.

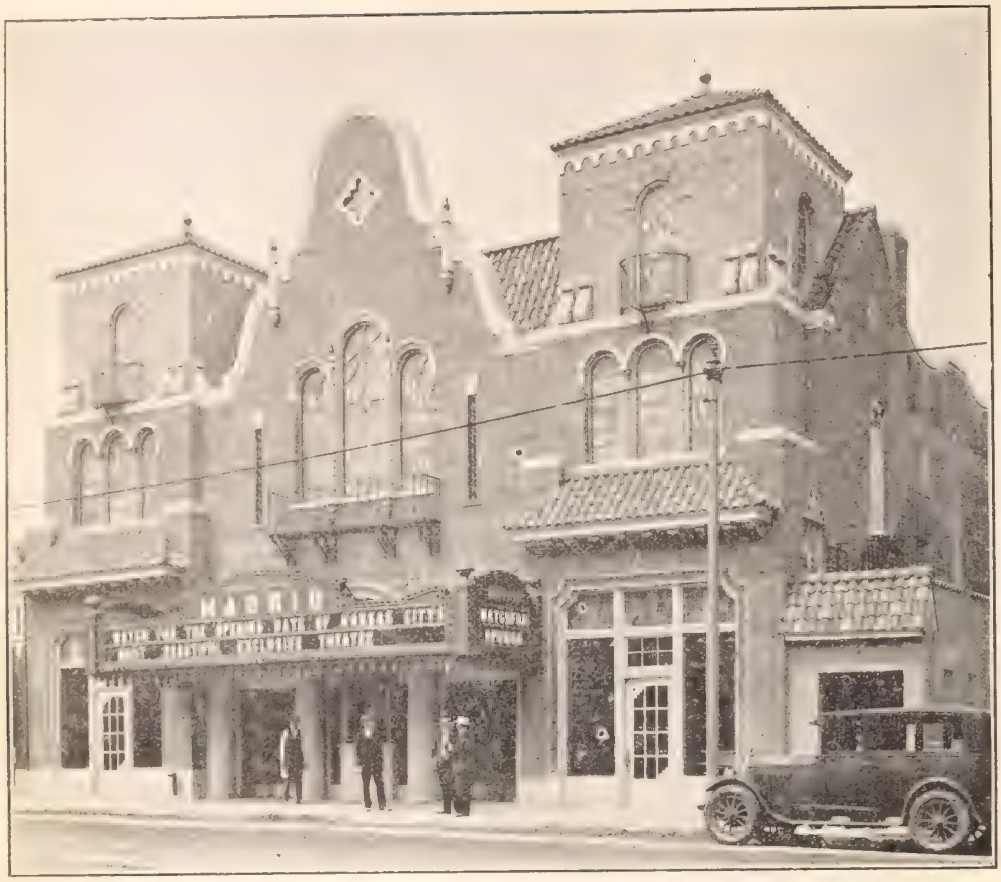
NOVELTY SCENIC STUDIOS
226 WEST 47TH STREET - NEW YORK CITY



An exterior view of Kansas City's newest suburban theatre, The Madrid, which held its opening last week under auspicious circumstances. The house is up-to-the-minute in every respect and is said to have cost $400,000.

Indiana House Opens Its Doors to Enthusiastic Audience

THE Strand Theatre, South Bend, Ind., recently opened its doors to an enthusiastic audience. The structure is located in the 300 block, South Michigan Street, and will show only first run pictures, comedies and news reels.

The theatre was erected at a cost of $125,000, and is said to be one of the most fire-proof in the city. The front is of terra cotta, and the remainder of solid concrete construction. Two storerooms have been constructed on either side of the theatre, which has a steel canopy, arranged so that three sides may be used for announcements, over the front entrance.

The box office is located in the center of the entrance, and is flanked by large double doors on either side. The floor of the lobby is of terraza, with sidewalls of Tennessee marble. Two large electrical fixtures with crystal trimmings will illuminate the lobby. A spacious foyer is just beyond, from which entrance may be gained to the main floor through two large archways, and also to the balcony. The seating capacity of the auditorium proper is 1,000, with 700 of the seats on the main floor. The seats have upholstered spring cushions of walnut-finished Spanish leather, and the aisles will be covered with rubber matting to deaden sounds.

Although it is expected that moving pictures will be shown exclusively at this theatre, the stage is large enough to accommodate prologues and similar presentations. A two-manual unit Kimball concert organ has been installed.

All seats have been arranged in a slightly circular manner, so that they directly face the stage. The narrowness of the theatre also makes every seat, even those at the sides, almost on a direct line with the stage.

The balcony is of solid concrete and reinforced steel. Special care has been taken to make the aisles even larger than the fire and building requirements specified, and a four-foot stairway has been constructed to lead from the balcony directly to the street.

The projection machine booth is of solid concrete, with two floors and other fire precautions. It is equipped with two Baird projectors. A spotlight has also been placed in the booth, and steel doors are an added feature. A "Da-lite" fiber screen has been installed.

Draperies on the stage and at the exit and foyer arches will be of Italian red velour, and are being designed by Robertson Bros. Two large double exits on either side of the stage lead to the alley, and will be used in case of emergencies.

Plainness at the front of the balcony has been alleviated by an Italian cross design in ivory, and 150 lights in red, white and blue have been placed in the cove. The indirect lighting system is used throughout. A singular thing about the theatre is that there are no posts to obstruct the view.

One of the latest type ventilating systems has been installed, with the "mushrooms" in the floor and a large exhaust in the ceiling.

The management includes Max J. Brown of Bremen, president; Moe Lowenstine, vice-president; Henry Lowenstine, treasurer; Lewis Cochovety, secretary and general manager and Harry Easton, assistant manager.

Plan $250,000 Theatre at Portland, Ore.

ERECTION of a $250,000 theatre and business building is contemplated by the Sax Investment Company, which yesterday acquired property at the intersection of Foster and Powell valley roads, Portland, Ore.

Plans for the erection of a theatre on the triangular piece of property acquired by the Sax Investment Company were announced by Julius Sax, president of the company. He announced that the theatre, which would be Arabic in design, with an attractive dome, would have a seating capacity of 1,500 persons. There also will be space for business establishments on the first floor and offices on the second. The property has a 270-foot frontage on Foster road and 167 on Powell valley road.

DeYoung & Roald have been commissioned to draw plans for the building and construction will be under way in 60 days, it was announced.

Two New Theatre Projects for New England

Lawler Brothers, Federal Street, Greenfield, Mass., have awarded contracts to M. J. Walsh & Sons, Holyoke, Mass., for a motion picture theatre on Amity Street, Amherst, Mass., from plans by Architects Silverman, Brown & Keenan of Boston.

A new theatre is to be built in Chicopee, Mass., to be known as the Roxor Theatre. James Tuck, architect, of Boston, is handling the construction for the owners, whose names are not announced. The playhouse will cost about $150,000. Construction is expected to start within a fortnight.

St. Louis Houses Improve Cooling Systems

A $50,000 unit has been added to the cooling system of the Loew's State Theatre, St. Louis, to function in the mezzanine promenade and lobby. It was designed especially for the comfort of persons forced to await seats between shows. The original cooling system is said to have cost $200,000.

The Grand Opera House, St. Louis, has expended about $21,000 for improvements to its monster cooling system, which was installed last year at a reported cost of $75,000.

Pictures Supplant Cabaret at Hialeah, Fla.

HIALEAH, Fla., will have a Moving Picture theatre with feature specialties at popular prices, according to Jimmie Hodges, who now is reconstructing his cabaret at Twenty-first Street and Palm Avenue into a theatre. Mr. Hodges said he would abandon cabaret shows and furnish Hialeah a house showing good pictures with prologues.

Workmen have been busy the last few weeks constructing a permanent stage and a fireproof operator's booth. Alternate windows along the sides will be used for exits leading to balconies. The theatre will be equipped with 900 opera seats and chairs and tables which will be placed along the sides. Shows will be given every night with Saturday and Sunday matinees. Change of program will be made three times each week.

Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo., Said to be Artistic Triumph

IMPRESSIVE as the great size of Loew's Midland Theatre at Kansas City, Mo., will be, the feature which probably will remain longer in the memory of visitors will be the artistic treatment to be accorded the immense lobby and the interior of the amusement place.

The theatre is to occupy the entire block between Baltimore Avenue and Main Street, on the north side of Thirteenth Street.

The architect of the theatre, Thomas W. Lamb of New York, has spent months on the artistic detail which is to embellish the theatre. A new standard in theatre construction was sought. In the opinion of M. B. Shanberg, managing director designate of the theatre, the hope of the architect will be realized.

The Main Street lobby of the theatre will approach the Roman type of construction in grandeur. Its ceiling is to be three and one-half stories above the floor. With an opportunity of that kind to carry out an artistic conception, the architect has sought a treatment which will yield an outstanding artistic result, compared with any other theatre in the United States.

The theatre will seat 4,000 persons. Because of its great size, the interior creates an opportunity for treatment on a superb scale. The effort will be to obtain an effect of coziness, a feature which adds greatly to enjoyment of theatrical offerings.

The stage will be of modern size. The height of the interior will be broken by mezzanine and balcony floors.

The ground floor of the building, other than the space reserved for the theatre proper, will be used for shops. Present plans call for the development of thirty business places on the three sides of the theatre building.

Elevators will give tenants access to offices on upper floors. The Baltimore Avenue side of the building will be twelve stories in height, rising in a tower effect from the top of the remainder of the building.

The theatre will have individual elevators. These will be placed in the lobby and will reach the two upper floors. A stairway, which is to be an essential part of the art scheme of the lobby, will give upper floor patrons convenient access to the street. A costly pipe organ will be built in the theatre.

An estimate of the cost of the building and theatre site is more than $4,000,000. The site has a frontage of 553 feet on the three streets. Assembling such a huge tract at the edge of the retail business section of the city was a task calling for months of hard work on the part of Max Skeer, realtor in the Bonfils building, who acted for the owner of the building, the Midland Investment company. Mr. Skeer will have charge of the rentals and leases of the building.

New House at Tonawanda Well Under Way

The new motion picture and vaudeville theatre of the Tonawandas in upper New York State, which is being constructed on Webster Street, has begun to take shape with the arrival of a large quantity of steel work. The concrete foundation has been completed.

Comfortable seats have been ordered for the theatre through the Heywood-Wakefield Company of Buffalo. These seats will be the equal to those with which the new Buffalo Theatre is equipped, both in beauty of design and comfort.

The seats are of three styles. The lower floor chairs will be of leather finish, upholstered with springs and with ornamental iron supports on the sides. The front row balcony seats will be elaborate in design, wide, plush-covered arm chairs.

Make Rapid Progress on Georgia Theatre

Construction work on the new theatre for the Southern Amusement Company, on South Patterson Street, Valdosta, Ga., is going forward rapidly. The walls are almost completed and the interior work is well under way. This building is being constructed by M. R. Ousley for the Southern Amusement Company, and it immediately adjoins the plant of the International Harvester Company, south of Florida Avenue. The house will have a seating capacity of approximately seven hundred and will be fitted with everything that is modern.

Tivoli, New Orleans' Newest Theatre, Opens with Gala Program

THE Tivoli, New Orleans' leading neighborhood theatre, opened its doors with a gala program on Friday, May 28. Radio and stage stars featured the program at the $250,000 motion picture theatre which is located at Washington Avenue and Broad Street. Speakers at the inaugural were Mayor Arthur O'Keefe of New Orleans, and Mrs. Elizabeth Werlein of the Will Hays organization.

The Tivoli represents something new in size, distinction and grace for a suburban theatre in the South. It is a concrete evidence of the faith exhibitors have in the expansion of their field.

The theatre is constructed of steel and reinforced concrete, with interior of marble. The walls are done in an artistic color scheme, and the lighting fixtures are a revelation in design. The lighting and scenic effect is on a par with the best in America. The auditorium, which is a clear span without columns, is ice-cooled, and there are ice-cooled and filtered water fountains. The chairs are four ply and restful, a fact of paramount importance on the question of theatre comfort.

The great feature in musical entertainment at the Tivoli is a Robert Morgan organ. The only other theatres in New Orleans with Robert Morgan organs are Loew's State, the $1,500,000 playhouse which opened the Saturday before Easter of this year, and Saenger's Liberty theatre.

An employee personnel, worthy of the Tivoli, has been selected. Horace Hougland, a resident of New Orleans, and an enterprising young college graduate and business man, has been named as manager.

The Tivoli is owned and will be operated by the Central Enterprises, Inc., of which E. V. Richards, Jr., is president; Edward Ludmann, vice-president; Nat Ehrlich, secretary; M. H. Jacobs, treasurer. The board of directors consist of the above-named, and of William H. Gueringer, N. Sobel, Vic Howard, Philip Foto and Mrs. A. G. Shear.

Daffin to Pattern Tallahassee House After Atlanta's Metropolitan

TALLAHASSEE is to have a handsome new motion picture theatre to be located at the most advantageous spot in the city, on the main thoroughfare, one half block from the Daffin Theatre. C. E. Daffin, owner of the Daffin Theatre, which house has been remodeled and improved three times since it was first opened by Mr. Daffin several years ago, is sponsor for the new enterprise that is to give Tallahassee one of the best motion picture houses in Florida.

Not only will Mr. Daffin be owner and manager of the new theatre, he is also owner of the site on which it will be constructed. Mr. Daffin bought the property some years ago and with the Florida boom it has increased steadily in value.

The interior is to be built along lines similar to the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, and the color scheme and general decorative design will follow closely that of the Atlanta house.

The new theatre will have a large and perfectly equipped stage adequate to handle the big road shows. The policy will include major pictures and road show attractions. With its opening, the Daffin, which has been the leading Tallahassee theatre, will become the home of program pictures, Westerns, melodramas and stunt pictures.

6 x 10 Strip Threatened Plans of Brooklyn House

A SMALL patch of earth, 6 x 10, owned since Revolutionary days, almost put to an end a $1,000,000 motion picture theatre prospect planned for a plot 94 x 175 on Fifth Avenue, between Prospect Avenue and Sixteenth Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., which took Cherry & Moskowitz three years to assemble.

Thirty transfers had been recorded when possession of the 6 x 10 strip balked the builders, who at one time were ready to quit. The building will be from plans by C. A. Sandbloom, architect, and will adjoin old Prospect Hall. Another recent enterprise by Cherry & Moskowitz is the National Theatre at Washington Avenue and Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Will Rebuild Englert, Iowa City

The Englert Theatre at Iowa City, destroyed by fire last Winter, will be reconstructed at a cost of about $100,000. It will seat about 1,300 and will be completed about November 1.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Aloma of the South Seas"—Rialto, New York City

American: "'Aloma of the South Seas' was the perfect part of her, just as she was the obvious star for this story of a native girl who loved a white man."

Daily News: "It is a good picture and a well directed one. With such a director as Tourneur and a cast including such capable performers as Percy Marmont, Warner Baxter and William Powell, the possibility of the star's first picture being a bad one is reduced to a minimum.

"Miss Gray, however, does more than dance. She interprets the role of the native girl in a satisfactory manner. She doesn't overplay her share of the dramatic scenes, and she certainly screens well. The scenes on the island are quite eye-filling, the photography of the film being, as Percy Marmont might say, 'top hole.'"

Herald-Tribune: "We enjoyed every minute of it. The direction is good, the photography is beautiful and the scenery magnificent. What more could one ask? Our answer is, nothing!"

Morning World: "The new picture starring Gilda Gray, dancer, is a remarkable combination of sure-fire box office fireworks, enchanting pictorial beauty and inept dramatic construction. In 'Aloma of the South Seas,' land, beach and seascapes are thrown upon the screen which surpass anything of their nature which I have seen in sheer loveliness of composition.

"The Bat"—United Artists, Newman, Kansas City

Post: "If it's a scare you want, and a good one, don't miss this picture."

"The Bat"—United Artists, Stanton, Philadelphia

Record: "'The Bat' is termed 'a comedy-mystery drama.' It is all of that, and more."

Inquirer: "Judging from the nervous giggles and the half suppressed screams which mingled with the moan of the organ in the Stanton yesterday, the audience was supremely well satisfied."

Bulletin: "It is an intermingling of laughs and thrills—but mostly laughs."

Ledger: "Full of laughs and scares, even for those who have seen the play, and for those whose friends (?) have disclosed the 'secret'; in fact it is a delightful change from the rather overabundance of morbid sex interest usually depicted today."

"Sparrows" — United Artists, Grauman's Egyptian, Los Angeles

Record: "Entertaining and appealing with its pathos and that irresistible undercurrent of wistful humor that is so much a part of Mary."

Times: "Mary Pickford has achieved her greatest triumph."

Express: "The production is Mary Pickford at the zenith of her fruitful career."

Herald: "Comedy and pathos intermingle throughout the film, keeping one's emotions in constant action."

"His Private Life"—Educational, Rivoli, New York City

"In point of massed popularity, the hit of the day is a Lupino Lane Comedy, took a full sized house at the 4:30 showing and set it rolling upon the Balaban and Katz rugs. Even the ushers broke down and bawled."

Times: "Lupino Lane's war comedy—a short subject—in which he does everything but go to the front, stirs up plenty of laughter. He is excruciatingly funny in some instances, notably that in which he endeavors in his awkward way to conquer the rebellious water hose. Bearing in mind that the proof of the pudding is in the eating, it should be told that staid old gentlemen and nimble youngsters often manifested their keen delight in Mr. Lane's comic conduct. Nobody could help laughing when the bantam-like private is endeavoring to obey his peace-time secretary by getting into line for vaccination and then by marching with men who towered above him like giants, who could therefore set a pace it was well nigh impossible for the little fellow with his short legs to keep up except by running."

Evening World: "Lunino Lane appears in a two-reel comedy that is really funny."

Daily News: "The customers laughed uproariously."

"Stella Dallas" — Max Linder Theatre, Paris, France

PARIS-MIDI: "I do not recall having heard of Belle Bennett before, but I shall not be astonished if she should not very soon become a star through her success in the very difficult rôle of Stella. Particular attention should be called to the excellence of the titles which are made with infinite intelligence and which not only describe the action of the scenes but as well convey their intent. They could not have been made better. We have United Artists to thank once more for bringing to us a production of real value."

Le Gaulois: "This film should have a long and brilliant career justified by the excellence of the direction and the art of the actors who play it."

Le Matin: "Ronald Colman is convincing in the role of Stephen, and Belle Bennett beautiful and pathetic and reaches dramatic heights in her interpretation of the part of 'Stella Dallas.'"

Le Temps: "'Stella Dallas,' which is now offered, may be classed in this category. It is a composition designed to produce tears from the most hardened."

Le Soir: "'Stella Dallas' is a film drama of great beauty and a study of characters, altogether impressive; all of the scenes are convincing—something that is not often seen on the screen."

Comeodia: "United Artists, whose releases are of unusual interest, has given us in 'Stella Dallas' a very excellent picture, both artistic and a production which should greatly interest the public. The well-known director, Henry King, made this production."

L'Echo de Paris: "'Stella Dallas' is a splendid drama and a high-class film. The excellent direction of Henry King should be particularly noted as well as the remarkably good acting in every part."

Le Courier Cinematographique: "'Stella Dallas' merits a place among the best films. The success of the picture upon its presentation seems to assure warm reception from the public. We have often remarked that stories which treat of intimate family struggles, and particularly where differences in mentality and education bring sorrow, are sure to interest theatregoers."

to owners of

MEDIUM SIZED THEATRES

An important message of economy

IF your theatre seats one thousand or less and your throw is not more than 120 feet you should take advantage of the economy of Incandescent Lamp Projection. There is no question about its efficiency.

When properly operated the 900 watt MAZDA Lamp gives an intensity of light on the screen that assures a first-class presentation of pictures. And the saving it makes of 50% in current costs goes a long way toward paying for all necessary equipment in one year. From then on the saving is clear profit.

To the projectionist Incandescent Lamp Projection means cleaner, healthier and better working conditions. There are no fumes, dust or excessive heat and once the optical system is properly aligned and adjusted it requires no further attention. Difficulties in adjusting the optical system are effectively overcome in the Simplex system. That is why owners of Simplex Units are most enthusiastic supporters of Incandescent Lamp Projection.

In the Simplex Unit the lamp is easily set and replaced. The Unit is well ventilated, of pleasing design and of dimensions that provide greatest comfort in operation. It is adjustable to any make of projector.

To appreciate the true merits of Incandescent Lamp Projection you have only to see it demonstrated with Simplex equipment. Your supply dealer will gladly give you a demonstration without obligating you in any way.

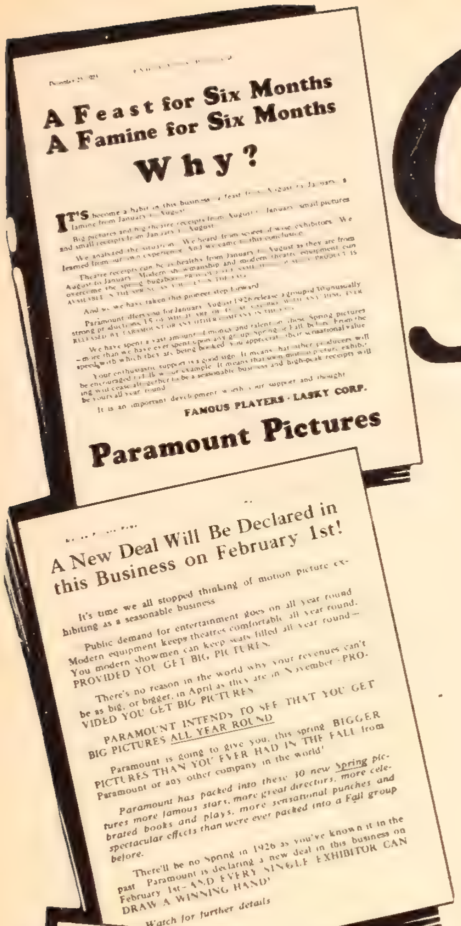
Paramount planned its whole present Jan-August group on the idea of BIG pictures in the Summertime



A Feast for Six Months A Famine for Six Months

Why?

IT'S become a habit in this business—a feast from August to January, a famine from January to August.

Big pictures and big theatre receipts from August to January, small pictures and small receipts from January to August.

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORP.

Paramount Pictures

A New Deal Will Be Declared in this Business on February 1st!

It's time we all stopped thinking of motion picture exhibiting as a seasonable business.

Public demand for entertainment goes on all year round. Modern equipment keeps theatres comfortable all year round. You modern showmen can keep seats filled all year round—PROVIDED YOU GET BIG PICTURES.

There's no reason in the world why your revenues can't be as big, or bigger, in April as they are in November—PROVIDED YOU GET BIG PICTURES.

PARAMOUNT INTENDS TO SEE THAT YOU GET BIG PICTURES ALL YEAR ROUND.

Paramount is going to give you, this spring, BIGGER PICTURES THAN YOU EVER HAD IN THE FALL from Paramount or any other company in the world!

Paramount has packed into these 30 new Spring pictures more famous stars, more great directors, more celebrated books and plays, more sensational punches and spectacular effects than were ever packed into a Fall group before.

There'll be no Spring in 1926 as you've known it in the past. Paramount is declaring a new deal in this business on February 1st—AND EVERY SINGLE EXHIBITOR CAN DRAW A WINNING HAND!

TIMES

"Egged On," created a good deal of laughter yesterday afternoon.

HERALD-TRIBUNE

For the first time in—we can't think how long—we sat through the comedy. It is called "Egged On." The plot is new.

POST

Fortunately Major Bowes has an excellent program on view including some good musical and dance numbers and a comedy called "Egged On," which succeeds in being really funny, an astonishing feat for a two-reeler these days.

NEWS

Don't miss the two-reeler at the Capitol, "Egged On." The machine built to make the shells of eggs elastic and unbreakable is something fearful and wonderful to behold. It's worth the price of admission.

Take it From ME

Reginald Denny

It's

Big Money

DENNY

now!

¶ Climbing by leaps and bounds in the past year Reginald Denny landed with a rush in the first three of sure-fire box-office stars.

¶ But wait—"TAKE IT FROM ME," first of the Reginald Denny SUPER-SPECIALS, has just been previewed by some of the shrewdest buyers of pictures in this business. And here is what they say:

> "The biggest price paid by ANY theatre ANYWHERE for ANY star at ANY time is that theatre's price for Denny now!"

A William A. Seiter Production

—and

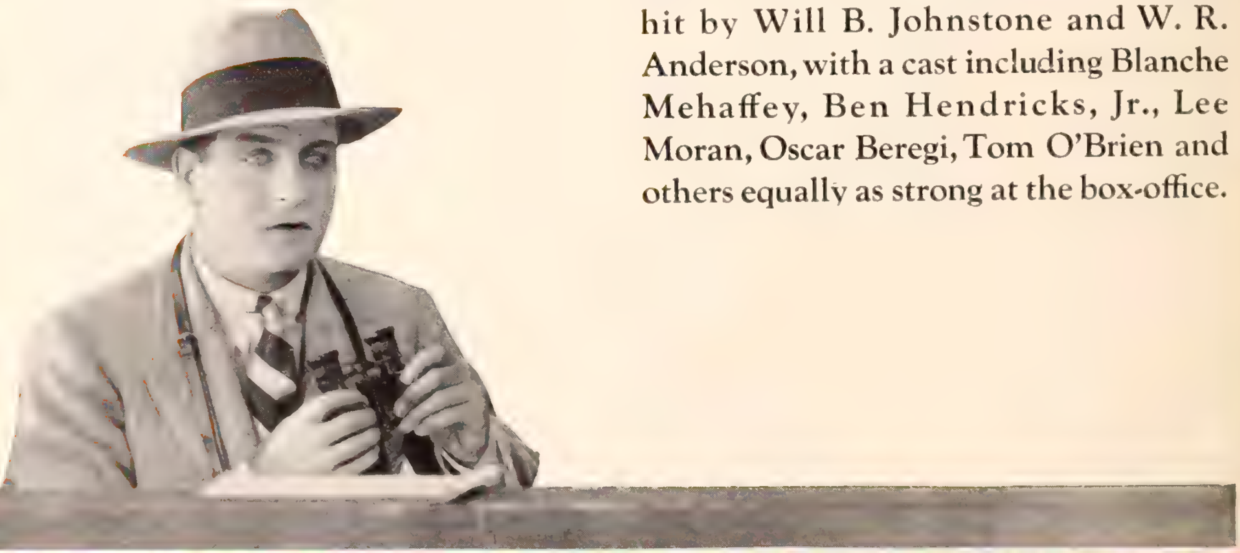
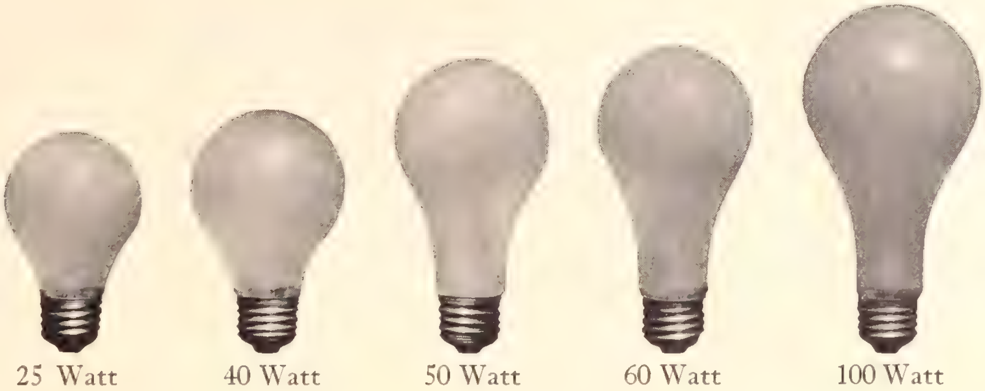
Take It From Me—

¶ —that "TAKE IT FROM ME" is only a worthy beginner for Reginald Denny in a series of SUPER-PRODUCTIONS which will have all that Universal's vast production strength can give. You know what Universal can do when it sets out to make SPECIALS. The utmost in story material and production genius is being placed on the screen to make pictures worthy of the "BIG MONEY DENNY."

"TAKE IT FROM ME" carries the Broadway stamp.—From the comedy hit by Will B. Johnstone and W. R. Anderson, with a cast including Blanche Mehaffey, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Lee Moran, Oscar Beregi, Tom O'Brien and others equally as strong at the box-office.





The New Standard Edison MAZDA Lamps

With the new inside frost Edison MAZDA Lamps you can have better lighting in every department of your theatre at no additional cost. These new lamps have all the advantages of both clear and outside frosted lamps; are better looking than any other type of lamp made, and they sell at clear lamp prices.

For the Lobby. Where color lighting is desired the new inside frost colored lamps are highly recommended. The frosting on the inside diffuses the light and gives an evenness of color that cannot be obtained from the old style lamps. If you do your own dipping of lamps you will get much better results from the new lamps than you will from clear lamps.

For the Stage. The new lamps are better for stage lighting. They so diffuse the light that all undesirable shadows are eliminated from the background of the stage. They banish the glare that has always been an objectionable feature of stage lighting with clear lamps. And these advantages are obtained without any sacrifice of light.

For the Auditorium. To appreciate the advantages of the new lamps over old types you have only to make this test. Equip two identical fixtures, one with an inside frost lamp and another with a clear lamp. Notice the tonal quality of the light from each, the appearance of the fixture itself and the amount of light emitted. Try the new lamps also in fixtures having transparent shades. You will agree that the new lamps are superior to all other types for any lighting purpose.

For the Lighting of Any Department. The new lamps are unequalled by any other type of lamp made. They are obtainable in sizes ranging from 25 to 100 watt, from your supply dealer or from any Edison MAZDA Lamp Agent.

SOME IMPORTANT FEATURES

25 and 40 Watt Lamps.
These lamps are more rugged, give better diffusion of light and are as efficient as any of the old type lamps that they replace. List price 27c.

50 Watt and 60 Watt Lamps.
Give 15% more light than clear lamps; are stronger and maintain candlepower better than old type lamps. List price 50 watt lamp 29c, 60 watt lamp 32c.

100 Watt Lamps.
Give better diffusion of light and are more pleasing in appearance than the old type lamps. List price 45c.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXIII NEW YORK CITY, JUNE 26, 1926 No. 26

Europe

OUR Berlin correspondent writes that, recently, an American film was hissed off the screen in a prominent German theatre. The show was stopped and money refunded, such was the uproar.

He cites some reasons for the outbreak, such as, for instance, the deplorable editing and title translation commonly done for American pictures by German renters. Perhaps the picture in itself was objectionable.

But it is obvious, quite obvious, that the individual picture alone cannot be blamed for the wild clamor that every so often is aroused among the European press and public.

The fact is that there exists a deep antagonism toward American pictures and the American trade; and we will be no wiser than ostriches to be blind to it, or even to regard it with smoked glasses of optimism.

What is the cause of it?

Let us say that there's a measure of trade jealousy; not merely film trade jealousy, but general trade jealousy, for it is well enough known that the film is the advance agent of general export trade.

But I believe that the real cause, the major cause, is this: that American pictures do not consider the all important matter of national pride; they do not try to meet it, and often, too often, they blindly trample upon it. And this thoughtlessness or obtuseness, whatever it may be, is true not only of our pictures but of our trade policies and too many of our trade representatives.

Our intentions are of the best. We are earnestly and sincerely aiming at the international film and for amity and fairness in trade relations. The Hays association, I believe, puts this aim among those at the head of its slate; and there is little doubt but that fine results have already been accomplished.

The ways and means, however, to the acceptable international film, are important. Cooperative production is much in the limelight; and there must be logical and fair cooperation in distribution and theatres abroad.

But the interchange of directors and stars does not go to the root of the matter, so far as pictures of international appeal are concerned. The story, as we call it, or better, the theme of the picture, is the all important thing. And here, in the creative effort, there are needed taste and intelligence and at least the same sympathy our producers now have with the rights and pride of the various states of our own country.

What American production most vitally needs today is a widening of the hard and fast and pretty small amusement circle it lets itself stay put in. American production needs this expansion, needs it mightily, if we are to continue to supply pictures for the world at large.

Speaking Editorially

ELMER PEARSON, of Pathe, in an interview this week pointed out that: "Entertainment is a matter of enjoyable minutes." In the midst of mergers, big deals and syndicate operations, the ultimate consumer—the public—remains the arbiter of the industry's destiny, Mr. Pearson declared.

"The giant public that the motion picture has created and which, by the same token, has created the motion picture, no longer is in the flock that is lured by the bellwether of tinkling promises," Mr. Pearson continued. "He has a very positive mind of his own and a sophistication well beyond his actual years. He demands not only his money's worth but his Time's worth as well."

IN the opinion of Mr. Pearson, the exhibitor is losing direct contact with his public. "Expansion, large theatres, centralized control have forced him to view his business from a new perspective. His vista today is national; yesterday it was bordered by the desires of his immediate clientele.

"Today the exhibitor, whether he be the operator of a single house or the directing head of a great circuit, cannot fail to recognize the mass-mood. Gone is its old-time maudlin sentimentality; gone is its naive response to the multi-colored adjective that gilded the lily. No longer does it believe that there are fifty-two best pictures in a single year at a single house. It may still nibble on the delectable frosting of the 'super-ized' picture fare, but when it sinks its teeth, it is into the solid meat of entertainment."

"BUT most important of all," Mr. Pearson continued, "is this great public's willingness to trade two hours of time for one hour of entertainment. Moments are precious and Caesar, who sits in the auditorium and has paid his money and traded time, is very likely to turn thumbs down on an entire program whose weakest spot has failed to please him.

"The short film, therefore, is rapidly becoming the great stabilizer of exhibition. It is bridging those deep gaps that show on the business curve between the too infrequent exceptional pictures that register 100% at the till."

AND here is an opinion from outside the industry —a very influential newspaper—on the general subject of present trends in exhibition. The Kansas City Star is speaking editorially:

"If this interspersing of music, vaudeville and pictures is to become general, there will be some disadvantages as well as advantages. Those managers who still depend primarily upon the films should be careful of their 'added attractions,' for they may alienate the affections of their audiences. Kansas City has been compelled to listen to some wailing sentimentalists in its moving picture theatres, singers whose effusions have been so painful as to ruin the whole evening."

THAT was a very interesting talk by Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, before the A. M. P. A. last week, in which Mr. Rowland made some pointed remarks about stage plays and the screen. Elsewhere in this issue, Mr. Rowland has summarized his views on the subject. They are well worth reading—and heeding.

CONSTRUCTIVE co-operation has been brought about between the church, the stage and the motion picture industry through the formation of the Church and Drama Association. At the recent meeting, Will H. Hays was the spokesman for the screen. All denominations—Catholics, Protestants and those of Jewish faith—are joined with the stage and the screen in the organization. The keynote is definitely against censorship in any form; changes for the better must come from within and not from without.

This is decidedly as it should be; and Mr. Hays deserves great credit for his part in bringing about such a remarkable and useful co-operative alliance. It is an extension of the work done for three years by the Federal Council of Churches, Catholics and others with the industry.

News

"NEWS is current, truthful and interesting information from the point of view of one who desires to be informed."

If there is a better definition than the above, of what constitutes "news," we would be glad to have it.

And I take the liberty of suggesting that this one be filed in the archives of this business—in which, publicity is at once a great potentiality and a glaring weakness.

The quotation, by the way, is from a new book on the uses and abuses of publicity. It is written by two practical publicity men; its title is "Principles of Publicity," and it is published by D. Appleton & Co., of New York. Most any publicity man will want to read it; for some it will prove highly instructive.

JUST here I want to speak only of the trade paper and the motion picture publicity man. Picture publicity for newspapers is quite another matter.

To begin with, the picture trade is the only one I know of in which men are hired to maintain a contact with the trade papers. It simply isn't done elsewhere, that's all. However, we will skip right over a discussion of this point and admit that the picture business is utterly different from any other.

THE practice of serving the picture trade paper is at once a blessing and a curse.

It is a blessing, potentially, at least, in this respect; that a trade paper could not possibly, with its own resources, cover the production, distribution and exhibition news of more than a thousand pictures a year.

It is a curse in this respect; that through these publicity men—and it is not their fault, of course, the trade paper is continuously beset to publish that which is not "news" but obviously a "puff," which is not "information from the point of view of one who desires to be informed," but wholly written for the individual or company which wants it "put over" on the reader for vanity, profit or what not.

In other words, it is what the reader immediately spots as "bunk." Of course he does. So it is all futile, stupid and a waste of effort and money on all sides.

THE weaker a trade paper gets the more it fills up with "bunk." The paper that fights the absurd practice is called "hard-boiled," and is said to be aloof from or unsympathetic with its trade, which is more bunk.

A trade paper that refuses to print obviously manufactured trade publicity is thereby giving its trade the highest and most sympathetic service within its power. It conscientiously strives to furnish its readers with "current, truthful and interesting information" from his, the reader's, point of view. And by acquiring thereby the reader's interest and confidence the trade paper in turn gives the advertiser full value for his space. For an advertiser to try and despoil a trade paper is to destroy his own ally. For speaking of sympathy, may we not remark that a trade paper is a member of the trade family and entitled to the same clear and full understanding that a trade paper is expected to have of the trade.

I HAVE said that the publicity man is, potentially, a blessing to a trade paper. We need his help in the presentation of news to our readers. We can work well together because we have a common aim: but his boss must be made to understand that this aim must be the interest of the reader and not the surreptitious use of editorial columns for that which by all the rules and the law of the land belongs only in the advertising pages.

W A Johnston

AN EDITOR ON BROADWAY

The Week in Review By William A. Johnston

E. F. Albee

“I HAVE been in the show business for fifty years,” said E. F. Albee, “and the one thing I have learned is that you must give the public what the public wants.

“And that is the only reply I can give to most any question you might put to me. If you want a newspaper yarn, why, my imagination is pretty good and I can help you spin one.”

I told Mr. Albee that, being a trade paper, we wanted only the most practical observations. Exhibitors, I surmised, were generally interested right now in the question: Is straight vaudeville the thing? Or straight pictures? Or mixed bills? They would be greatly interested in whatever E. F. Albee had to say on the subject.

“GIVE the public what the public wants That's all I say,” said Mr. Albee. “What do they want? Well, that's the eternal secret of good showmanship. Find out.

“Don't fight the public. And don't wait too long to find out what they want. Try new things on them.

“In the fifty years I speak of I have seen the public jump to vaudeville, serious drama, comic operas, musical comedy, burlesque, museums, carnivals—and jump back again. I have seen them want straight vaudeville, and pictures and vaudeville, and then go back to straight pictures or straight vaudeville.

“IT goes in cycles—the amusement business—ever-changing cycles.

“Go downstairs”—Mr. Albee indicated the Palace Theatre stage below his office—“and you'll find the stage filled with dancing girls. To-day the Charleston is the rage. Not so long ago, ‘Yes, We Have No Bananas’ was dinned into your ears on all sides. To-day—where do you hear it?

“YOUR picture industry is a great one—magnificent. It amazes and interests me. I can see great unborn possibilities. The picture can be utilized in so many, many ways.

“And there you are again. New stuff! They want it in pictures, don't they? You've got to give them new attractions, novelties—all the time.

“Of course you are giving them new theatres. That counts heavily. I raised vaudeville from the middle classes up to the highest class public by a new theatre which satisfied artistic Boston, and by keeping right on building fine houses. They are great drawing cards. They elevate and attract. They widen the circle of theatre patronage.”

THE studio house organ of one of the larger companies gives a list of box-office successes, covering the past several months. Perhaps the selections are made from our own Check-up list. At any rate, they agree thoroughly with our box-office percentages, the average being in excess of 76. Here's the list:

“Behind the Front,” “The Cohens and the Kellys,” “Kiki,” “His Secretary,” “What Happened to Jones,” “Brown of Harvard,” “Mannequin,” “Mike,” “Irene,” “For Heaven's Sake,” “The Pony Express,” “Sally, Irene and Mary,” “The Vanishing American,” “Let's Get Married.” “Dancing Mothers,” “Sally,” “Little Annie Rooney,” “Graustark,” “The Grand Duchess and the Waiter.” “Her Sister from Paris,” “The Eagle,” “I'll Show You the Town,” “The Gold Rush,” and “Classified.”

DOUGLAS D. ROTHACKER, president of Rothacker Industrial Films, Inc., who is serving his fifth consecutive term as president of the Screen Advertisers' Association and his fifth term as a member of the National Advertising Commission of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, has accomplished a great service for industrial advertising and for the motion picture industry in one outstanding respect. He has consistently fought for the principle that the industrial-educational picture does not have a place on the theatre program, and he has worked in co-operation with the Hays office to sell to both the producers and buyers of industrial pictures the idea that the proper outlet, and the one which will bring the greatest results, is that of the non-theatrical field where, when properly made, such pictures can be shown to the advantage of the owner and with great interest and educational value for those who see the subject.

This is a vital point, and one which came near doing much harm. We all remember how, but a few years back, national advertisers were making films with the sole purpose of getting them onto the theatre screens of the country. Sometimes they were willing to pay for the privilege, and in other cases they felt that the educational value incorporated in the picture should make it worth while as a theatre subject. One national distributing company went so far as to offer, openly, advertising “space” in its weekly magazine subject.

The justification usually quoted was the fact that every newspaper and magazine carries advertising and that there was no reason why a motion picture screen should not likewise intersperse its entertainment with advertising films, overlooking or ignoring the obvious fact that a magazine reader can skip the advertising pages at will, while a theatre patron cannot dodge the advertising films.

Complete segregation would seem to be the healthiest solution all around, with theatrical films for the theatrical field, and non-theatrical films for the non-theatrical field. Both are important and neither should be discriminated against—nor should they be confused.

THERE is increasing evidence that the all-important matter of preparation is receiving somewhat nearer the attention and respect which it deserves. We have no quarrel with the man who insists that once a picture is placed in production it shall be made reasonably within a schedule and an estimated cost. That is plain business sense. We do not agree, however, with those who believe in placing limitations upon advance preparation and the building up of continuity. The cost of time and effort spent in advance preparation is so small, compared to actual production with an overhead of anywhere from $300 to $1,000 an hour piling up, that there is no excuse for neglecting it.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

A SPLENDID RECORD

FRANK BAILEY, a member of the finance committee of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and chairman of the board of directors for both the Prudence Company, Inc., and the Realty Associates, last Saturday celebrated the completion of his 25th year as treasurer of Union College by presenting his Alma Mater with a fund of $200,000, to be used mainly for the erection of an Arts building on the campus at Schenectady. The gift was made by Mr. and Mrs. Bailey and was announced at the commencement luncheon of the alumni on Saturday.

Mr. Bailey has a record to be proud of in the financial world, but perhaps no more striking evidence of his astuteness could be cited than a summary of his 25-year service as treasurer of Union College. The receipts from students have increased from $6,442 in 1901, to more than $200,000 in 1925, while the net assets have grown from $406,000 to $3,500,000.

PATHE EDITOR SAILS

EMANUEL COHEN, editor of Pathe News, sailed for Europe at midnight on Friday via the S. S. Majestic, bound for England, France, Germany and other European countries, where he will confer with his camera staff and expand his facilities abroad along certain lines. He recently celebrated his 11th anniversary as editor of Pathe News, only a few months after the notable 15th anniversary dinner held by the news weekly at the Hotel Plaza.

ALLENE VACATIONING

ALLENE RAY, Pathe serial star, is enjoying her first real vacation in three years during the two months while Spencer Bennett directs Gene Tunney in "The Fighting Marine." She reports a glorious time, doing just what she pleases, when she pleases, with no eight o'clock company call to worry about.

Stymied again! Reginald Denny, who gets himself out of all sorts of difficult situations on the screen, is stumped by this problem on the municipal golf links at Universal City

PINNING THE MEDALS

TWO features and one short subject came in for special mention from the National Board of Review this week. The first was "The Marriage Clause," Lois Weber's production for Universal of the Dana Burnet story, "Technique." This picture should bring Miss Weber back with a bang, for its direction reveals a sure touch and a feeling for detail and convincing realism that are much needed. The other feature to be asterisked is "Nell Gwyn," which Paramount will distribute in this country. The merits of this picture have been dealt with at length before this. The third star to pop out of the hat went to Pathe Review No. 27.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

THE engagement of Miss Ann Bernstein of 422 West 171st street, New York City, to Sydney Singerman, head of the program department of Universal, has been announced. Singerman has literally grown up with the Universal organization, starting in the Home Office as an office boy 11 years ago, and is one of the most popular men in the organization. He now has charge of the arrangement of all release schedules, supervision over poster production and final editing of pictures as they come in from the Coast. Together with Maurice Pivar, he accomplished the final editing of "The Phantom of the Opera."

NIGHTS AT THE ROUND TABLE

WHAT might be called the "round table" method of producing is being used at the De Mille Studio, as is well exemplified by Jetta Goudal's first individual starring vehicle, "Her Man o' War," now being cut and assembled. Practically the entire consulting group which took the original magazine story and put it into continuity form is now cutting the film. C. Gardner Sullivan, production editor, Jeannie Macpherson and Garrett Fort, adapters of the story, Frank Urson, director, Charles Logue, continuitist, and Nicholas Nusuraga, head cameraman, are collaborating on the editing.

Hal Roach's rascals, appearing in "Our Gang" comedies for Pathe, were recently required to be vaccinated, but, as this photo proves, they made just as much fun out of that as anything else.

COLOR FILMS SHOWN

MEMBERS of the Dutch Treat Club, composed of leading artists, writers and publishers in New York City, were given a special treat at their luncheon last week, when two Educational subjects in color, "The Vision" and "Marionettes," were screened for them as typical of the best natural color motion pictures to date. So pleased were the members that they elected to honorary membership William Hamlin Childs, New York capitalist and a director of the Technicolor Corporation, and J. Melvin Andrews, Technicolor production manager, under whose auspices the showing was held, and bestowed upon them a plaque of appreciation.

FERGUSON RETURNS EAST

WILLIAM R. FERGUSON, manager of exploitation for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has returned to the Home Office after touring the country with Louis B. Mayer and a party of executives. He arranged the Regional Sales Conventions in Buffalo, Chicago and San Francisco, visited the Culver City studios and conferred with officials on exploitation plans, and returned directly to New York.

A 100 DAYS' WONDER

DESPITE a ten days' delay at the very outset, caused by torrential rains, the contractors who on April 28th began to erect the mammoth First National studios at Burbank, Cal., promise that the entire work will be completed in less than one hundred days from the time of commencement. The $2,000,000 plant will include thirty-odd buildings, representing 3,000,000 feet of rough lumber alone, tons of stucco and 50,000 square feet of glass. M. C. Levee, just appointed general manager of the enterprise, and John McCormick, West Coast production manager, announce that production will start full blast as soon as sets can be completed after the doors are thrown open.

PUBLICIZING ALBERTA

PAULA GOULD, having completed work on the publicity campaigns attending the New York openings of "The Flaming Frontier" and "The Midnight Sun," has left Universal to devote her attention exclusively to Alberta Vaughn's personal publicity.

Miss Gould was with F. B. O. for four years prior to her temporary affiliation with Universal, and was responsible for the remarkable publicity campaign surrounding Miss Vaughn's entry into pictures, which has played no inconsiderable part in her rapid rise, culminating in her present contract to appear in full length features of her own for F. B. O.

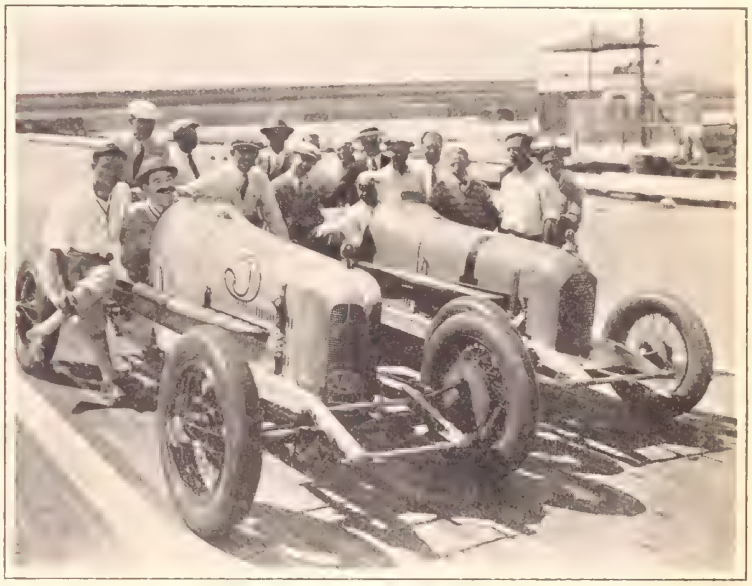
LASKY'S INFERNO

HEAVEN, Hell, the Elysian Fields, the Fourth Dimension and, for all we know, Einstein's Relativity, have been marching through the Paramount Long Island studios these days, as the filming of "Sorrows of Satan" draws toward a close with the shooting of the difficult Heaven and Hell sequences, which call for trick photography of the highest type. Fred Waller, head of the miniature department, is in charge of the photographic end, while the settings have been designed by Norman-Bel Geddes, noted stage designer and producer. Recently Waller had to photograph the figure of Satan, falling as a tiny figure out of Paradise, down through space, increasing to enormous proportions as he fell, and splashing plumb into the Inferno.



Johnny Hines in Harry Hartz famous No. 3 racing car, which he used at Miami for sequences of "The Brown Derby" for First National. Hartz is on the comedian's right. The driver of the other car is Pete de Paolo

The camera was placed on a truck that moved forward on a long track to create the effect of the figure's increase in size. The figure itself dropped in a slanting line across a large white drop. Waller had to make exact mathematical calculations co-ordinating the movement of the camera with the motion of the falling figure up to the point of its fullest proportions and allowing for its three dimensions of heighth, width and thickness. Also—and here is where the fourth dimension comes in—he had to allow for the retarded speed of the falling body as it increased in size. This made necessary what appears to be a fourth dimensional calculation.

At any rate, Waller did it. He used to be a professor of differential and integral calculus and molecular physics, and anybody familiar with these subjects can figure it out for themselves and see just how simple it all is.

The pearly gates of the Elysian Fields were opened on another occasion at Astoria, L. I., and a thousand lost souls marched into the Kingdom of Heaven. This astonishing event took place at the Paramount studio, in the presence of Fred Waller and three expert assistants.

Next week, as a sequence in the same picture, Hell in all its traditional and fiery ugliness will be created by these same magicians of the camera. It took Waller and his assistants one whole day to photograph the Elysian Fields, during which six exposures were made on the same negative—a process that brings out the eerie transparency and ethereal quality necessary in such highly imaginative screen art.

GRIMM WITH COLUMBIA

BEN GRIMM, erstwhile film tradepaper advertising man, who left Moving Picture World to go to Warner Bros., after which he joined Robert E. Welsh at Associated Exhibitors, this week took up his new duties as director of advertising and publicity for Columbia Pictures. The plans lined up for this company should give Ben ample scope for his ability, and the connection should prove mutually desirable.

WHAT PRICE REALISM?

So remarkable is the mass of material assembled for the filming of "What Price Glory?" that already the biggest problem confronting Fox officials is not what to put in but what to leave out. On the basis of material already filmed, Army officers have asked for a print for purposes of instruction.

These realistic results are the product of the co-operation asked and received from the U. S. Army and the Marine Corps and the War Departments of France and Great Britain. The Army has supplied hundreds of pieces of equipment and has also loaned the services of Sergeant Thomas Brady, who is detailed to the Fox lot. The Marine Corps detachment at San Diego has also detailed a number of men among whom is the barber of the barracks, who keeps Edmund Lowe and Victor MacLaglen, as well as other principals, "trimmed" according to regulations.

British and French officials loaned the Fox organization many thousands of feet of war film. Two or three times each week Director Raoul Walsh has the principals and many of the extras attend showings of these official war reels. The results have been unusually effective. Careful comparison between the footage being produced at Hollywood with what was taken during the war shows that Edmund Lowe in the character of Sergeant Quirt, and Victor McLaglen in the part of Captain Flagg, are perfect in every detail of dress, carriage and deportment. Film showing Dolores Del Rio, who plays Charmaine, is equal in realism to anything relative to French provincial life during the war that was brought over from the other side for purposes of comparison.

Army officials who have visited the Fox lot have become so enthusiastic over the sets as well as the action that they have requested reels for study by Army instructors. The "location" is a complete replica of the territory in and around the town of Bouresches and was planned and built from the huge relief map which the Signal Corps prepared after the war from its field maps and which is now on exhibition in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington. Trench warfare, night raids, artillery engagements and other activities have been caught by the Fox camera with more detail and clarity than the Army itself was able to obtain on the other side. It is for this reason that the visiting officers have been so anxious to secure prints.

THE NEW MADGE BELLAMY

We predicted, some time ago after seeing "Sandy," that the new Madge Bellamy revealed in that picture would create a sensation. Judging from the reception accorded her performance by the fan magazines and daily critics, the prediction was no overstatement. The reaction accorded the picture is a tribute to the showmanship of James R. Grainger, at whose suggestion the story was purchased and filmed.

Photoplay Magazine ranks "Sandy" among the six best pictures of the month and lists Miss Bellamy's portrayal of the title role first among the outstanding performances of the month. "Women and girls will love this," says the Photoplay reviewer, "and when they are safely out of hearing of the boy friend admit how true a picture of the modern girl's life it is. . . . So intelligently directed by Harry Beaumont and exquisitely played by Madge Bellamy that it is not merely another flapper film but a human document."

The remodeled Chadwick Pictures Corporation studios on the West Coast, the home of First Division pictures, and where the production of "The Bells" was recently completed with Lionel Barrymore in the principal role

Jack Buchanan and Beatrice Lillie, stars who created a sensation with their comedy playing in "Charlot's Revue," and who have been signed by Cecil B. De Mille for appearance in "Corporal Kate" (Producers Dist. Corp.).

Bill Colling in Screenland says: "Madge Bellamy, with bobbed hair, is a brand new Madge, prettier than ever, and as full of life and the joy of youth as a flivver is of rattles. She gives a performance that'll make you sit up and take notice."

Eileen Creelman in the New York American, commented on the star's work as follows: "I much prefer Madge of the bobbed hair and Charlestoning feet to the over-demure Madge of yesterday. . . . In addition to her new personality, there is greater depth to her acting than usual."

Mae Tinne in the Chicago Tribune, remarked in her usual individual style: "Madge Bellamy in the title role was surprising. To quote: 'some fairy wand has touched unsuspected reserves and caused her to flower magnificently'."

In Pittsburgh, the reviewer for The Press declared that: "Madge Bellamy . . . is alive, vibrant, full of the joy of living, just as the author, Elenore Meherin, has described her."

THEW WRITES "WILLY"

HARVEY THEW, one of the most fertile and witty of film scenarists, has added a musical comedy to his list of achievements. The title is "Willy," and Thew has written it with Roy Atwell. Lou Gottschalk will produce it first in the Oakland Auditorium, after which it will probably come to Los Angeles. Thew, meanwhile, is adapting "The Cheerful Fraud" as Reginald Denny's next Universal production.

MAJOR ROXY, USMCR

On July 2d, Major S. L. Rothafel, USMCR, reports at Quantico, Va., to Marine headquarters for a two-week training period. This will be nothing new for him, however. At the age of 16, he joined the Marine Corps and served for seven years, including the Boxer rebellion, as corporal. The title of Major in the reserve was personally conferred upon him by Major General John A. LeJeune.

BEN GETS THE PEARLS

BEN BLUMENTHAL, president of Export & Import, has purchased Tecla Pearls, Inc., from F. J. Godsol, himself formerly president of Goldwyn Pictures Corp. The Tecla concern is international in scope, having offices in London, Paris and Berlin, and will provide Blumenthal with further reason for his frequent commuting trips across the pond.

Industry Hails "Buyers' Guide" As New Advance in Trade Journalism

FROM all quarters letters, telegrams and phone messages have poured into the office of MOTION PICTURE NEWS commending in no uncertain terms the Buyers' Guide, published as Section Two of the June 12th issue. This marks the first use of full color reproduction editorially in a motion picture trade journal, and the innovation has met with a remarkable response on all sides.

From P. A. McGuire of the International Projector Corporation came this expression, typical of the attitude of the equipment men:

''Copies of the Buyers' Guide have been received by us, and the first thing I am doing this gloomy Monday morning is to compliment you and the MOTION PICTURE NEWS upon this splendid publication.

''The film end of this business has monopolized all the color and most of the attention in the motion picture trade journals and, of course, there is much justification for this. It was, however, a real pleasure to have the handsome and cheerful Buyers' Guide handed to us and to see equipment receive suitable recognition in this manner.''

"Most Beautiful Ever Issued"

John E. Hennegan of The Hennegan Co., lithographers and printers, Cincinnati, was equally enthusiastic. Mr. Hennegan said:

''Not meaning to just join the group of congratulatory letter writers, I do want to say that I think your Buyers' Guide is the most beautiful thing ever issued in the trade paper field.''

D. C. Lindsay of the Carrier Engineering Corporation went into greater detail in his praise:

''We wish to take this opportunity to congratulate you personally and to congratulate the MOTION PICTURE NEWS on your most recent edition of the Buyers' Guide.

''This book appears to us to be much more than its title indicates. In devoting the editorial section to an exposition of the work of a prominent architect, you have placed in most attractively printed and pictorial form a record of the wonderful advances that are being made in theatre construction and decoration. It appears to us that you have created something of permanent value and that this issue on the John Eberson theatres, together with the first number of the Buyers' Guide describing Rapp & Rapp theatres, should be kept permanently by everyone interested in the development of the motion picture industry.

''That you have surrounded the stories of this development with advertisements and with a directory of the people who are contributing to this advance, adds further permanent value. It places at the finger tips of anyone interested in theatre construction, improvement or operation, names of reliable firms in every contributing field. It further offers a wealth of new ideas which are the very life of progress in the theatre business.

''We hope that you will continue to publish this book and will continue in your policy of featuring the work of prominent architects or the new and latest developments in theatre construction.''

Particularly gratifying was the spontaneous letter from David Barrist of The Exhibitor, published in Philadelphia, in which he said:

''Please accept my congratulations on the first issue of the Theatre Building and Equipment Buyers' Guide.

''It is a genuine achievement which elevates trade journal publication in our industry to an art along with production and exhibition. For us on The Exhibitor, it is a new high-water mark which we may strive to reach, although with but little hope of success. Your initial issue is a distinct credit to our trade which increases the prestige of trade journalism in general in the eyes of the entire industry.''

D. Y. Bridges, of the Hotel and Contract Department of Mandel Brothers, Chicago, in requesting additional copies for the use of that department said:

''We have just received the special John Eberson number of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and wish to congratulate you on this beautiful issue.''

C. J. Frank, of the Voigt Company, Philadelphia, wrote:

''A few days ago, we received a copy of your Buyers' Guide issue and it certainly is a revelation. The manner in which the work of John Eberson is illustrated and the various equipment ads are very interesting.''

P. A. Carson of the Edison Lamp Works commented:

''While I have not had an opportunity of going through the contents of the Buyers' Guide carefully, judging from its appearance in general and the John Eberson section in particular, I believe you have set a new standard for this type of publication in the motion picture theatre field.''

"Wealth of Information"

Frederick F. Watson of the Duplex Motion Picture Industries, Inc., Long Island City, said:

''I have received my copy of the Buyers' Guide and wish to take this occasion to compliment you on both its appearance and the wealth of information contained therein.

''To any purchasing agent in almost any branch of the Motion Picture industry, the Buyers' Guide should become an indispensable directory by which immediate contact with the proper source of supply can be obtained.''

H. A. R. Dutton, president of the Exhibitors Supply Co., Chicago, expressed his views on the Buyers' Guide as follows:

''A splendid publication of interest to everybody in the trade and very valuable to supply houses. It would take much time and expense for a purchasing agent to get together such a remarkably complete list of equipment manufacturers and their products. Should also prove of constant use to every buyer of materials, supplies or equipment for theatres.''

Tom Brown of the B. F. Reynolds Company, Chicago, wrote:

''To say that you have placed a wonderful Buyers' Guide and Equipment Directory in the hands of the motion picture field would be a very meagre statement. You are to be sincerely congratulated on your achievement, which we feel positive will bring added success to all who are numbered among your advertisers. The picture people should be very grateful to you for giving them this most excellent assistance in their buying.''

"Will Be Kept and Used"

Eugene Wilder, Chicago manager for the Robert Morton Organ Company, expressed himself with equal enthusiasm:

''The Buyers' Guide is a credit to MOTION PICTURE NEWS and the finest publication of this character I have yet seen. I certainly am pleased that our company is represented by advertising in its pages, as I know it is a splendid advertising medium and will be kept and used by owners of and purchasers for motion picture theatres.''

The following statements from prominent exhibitors indicate the degree of interest felt by theatre men in the Buyers' Guide:

''I am greatly impressed by the splendid edition of the Buyers' Guide, which I have examined carefully. Mr. Eberson's interesting and beautifully illustrated article is well worth the attention of everyone interested in building, and the Equipment Guide makes this volume a valuable part of our purchasing agent's equipment. Congratulations.''—Charles Casanave, of National Theatres Corporation, Chicago.

''MOTION PICTURE NEWS Buyers' Guide as a publication is not only interesting but very useful to me as an operator of large theatres. It is well worth having on file. The advertising pages also contain valuable information for me.''—Frank Schaeffer, Crystal Theatre, Chicago.

''I regard the Buyers' Guide as an excellent publication. Please be sure to place one in the hands of the architect designing our new theatres.''—Jack Miller, owner of Lido and other large theatres, and business manager of the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago.

Ottawa Imposes Additional Tax on Movie Opposition

The Board of Control of Ottawa, Ontario, decided on June 4 to recommend to the Ottawa Police Commission that the civic license fees for touring circus and carnival attractions be doubled and it is also probable that a time limit will be placed on local carnival engagements because of the money which these features take from the city in opposition to local theatres which pay heavy taxes and license fees.

The first to come under the new ruling is Ringling Bros. Circus which is playing Ottawa on June 23, the license fee to be collected from this circus for the one day being raised from $250 to $500.

Famous Players Wins Point as Commission Orders Case Reopened

FAMOUS Players-Lasky Corporation on June 15 scored a victory at Washington over the prosecuting attorneys of the Federal Trade Commission when the commission issued an order reopening the case for the introduction of additional testimony on the questions of theatre ownership and block booking, permitting the respondent to introduce evidence regarding the ownership of theatres by competing companies, and declared invalid all rulings made by the trial examiner striking out evidence introduced by the film company.

The company has consistently fought for the introduction of this evidence and for the right to show the theatrical holdings of competing producers, and the issuance of the commission's order is deemed an admission by the Government attorneys that they erred in seeking to prevent the introduction of this testimony throughout the case. The commission's order also is couched in the language suggested by Bruce Bromley, who appeared as counsel for Famous Players in the argument before the commission June 3, limiting the taking of additional testimony to two questions.

The text of the commission's order, which was dissented to by Commissioners Nugent and Thompson, who have been steadily opposed to reopening the case provides:

"That all rulings made by the examiner sustaining motions to strike out evidence introduced by respondent herein, or on behalf of the commission, or otherwise striking out any of such evidence, shall be and are hereby vacated; and that such evidence, being already physically incorporated in the record in this case, shall be received and considered by the commission in the determination of this case, and be given such weight as it may be entitled to receive under the law, and with the same force and effect as if the same had been received in evidence by the examiner.

"That counsel for the commission and respondents are granted leave to adduce additional material evidence on the subjects only of theater ownership and block booking."

The next step in the case will be the appointment of an examiner and the setting of a date for the taking of testimony. It is believed that testimony will be taken only on the subject of block booking and that the subject of theatre ownership will be handled by the acceptance by the commission's attorneys of the stipulation filed some time ago by the film company, setting forth their theatrical holdings up to this year and those of their competitors. The company has long sought to have this stipulation accepted in lieu of the taking of direct evidence, and has offered to permit the commission to make such changes as may be found necessary upon a check of the data.

Charters of Incorporation Granted by Pennsylvania

Charters of incorporation, recently issued to amusement enterprises, in the State Department of Pennsylvania, at Harrisburg, included:

Over One Million Earned by Orpheum Circuit

The Orpheum Circuit for the four months ending April 30th last, reports a profit of $1,009,000, after all charges but before taxes, equivalent after allowing for 8 per cent. preferred dividend requirements to $1.51 a share earned on 540,170 shares of common. This compares with $1.32 on common in the same period of 1925. The circuit has been buying in its 7½ per cent. notes which mature September 1, and has reduced that issue to $1,126,000. In spite of this note retirement the financial position is strong, with current assets $6,057,000 and current liabilities $767,000.

The Orpheum Circuit is included in the Keith-Producers Distributing Corporation merger and subsidiaries.

A Box Office View of "Movie Season"

Movement is Now a Proved Agency for the Bolstering of Late Summer Business in Our Theatres

BY HARRY M. CRANDALL

Executive Vice-President, Stanley-Crandall Co. of Washington

ALTHOUGH skeptical, at the time, of any profitable benefit that might accrue from so revolutionary a late-summer project, we must, with equal frankness, admit that the "Greater Movie Season" launched in Washington, D. C., in mid-August, 1925, brought the exhibitors of the District of Columbia surprising returns at the box-office. There is no apparent reason why the prospective "Greater Movie Season" campaign being planned for the season of 1926-27 should not return even greater values, for the reason that since the idea has been proved both feasible and compensatory, the individual exhibitor will offer a greater measure of co-operative help than before conviction placed its grip upon his consciousness.

The Washington exhibitor is confronted with problems that do not obtrude themselves upon the showmen of other cities of comparable size. We, in the Capital, have a potential audience comprised of practically one type of patron. There is no appreciable trade or commercial class to which to appeal because there is no appreciable trade or commerce in the National Capital; there is no tenement element; no vast horde of artisans. Perhaps 90 per cent. of Washington's motion picture attendance is drawn from the huge army of government workers who occupy their posts by virtue of having passed competitive mental tests—the Civil Service examinations—and whose incomes are fixed throughout the year, regardless of industrial upheavals or financial depressions in other parts of the country. Appeal to this element must be upon a high plane of intelligence and integrity. They are just as smart as we are and cannot be hoodwinked.

It was with this thought in mind that our 1925-26 campaign was planned. The basic purpose was to convince the theatregoers of the Capital City that a month earlier than ever before in the history of the industry they would have available for their pleasure a better grade of picture than the corresponding weeks of earlier years had been able to provide. That idea was disseminated by the use of posters, window cards, newspaper advertising—apart from that devoted to the individual theatre's current attractions—honest and informative use of the news columns of the press and the radio. Nelson B. Bell, in charge of advertising and publicity for all of our theatres, was on the air at the time with "The Crandall Saturday Nighters" and was able to reach a tremendously large audience on the subject of the "Greater Movie Season," which he did consistently throughout the campaign.

While at time of writing the first organization meeting for the drive of 1926-27 has not been held (it is scheduled for June 22nd) it is probable that the same general plan of campaign will be adhered to.

An important factor in the success of last year's offensive, needless to say, lay in the fact that the exhibitor made good his every claim. The pictures WERE better and all of the representative first-run houses staged special attractions in addition to their usual programs to stimulate interest and encourage attendance on the part of the public. No better earnest of the conscientiousness of the Washington exhibitors need be advanced than that they increased attendance at a time of year when Washington's population is at its lowest ebb, purely by the merit of their bills and the honesty with which they sold them to the public as indicative of what "Greater Movie Season" really meant.

This I consider a genuine achievement, when thought is given to the fact that there were absent from the city the President and his Cabinet and their respective clerical forces; the Congress of the United States, with the large retinues of both House and Senate; the Supreme Court and its forces and governmental summer vacationers whose number cannot even be remotely approximated.

The "Greater Movie Season" is an admirable agency for the bolstering of late summer business in our theatres and should be wholeheartedly supported by every exhibitor in the country with the best interests of the industry, as well as himself, at heart.

An Editor on Broadway: By Wm. A. Johnston

"The big thing in the making of pictures," says Rockett, "is the proper preparation of the story or scenario. You hear frequently of directors who 'direct from the cuff.' That is, they have a partial script and build up the story as they go along with the filming. Many of these men do turn out excellent pictures, but it is only by rare good fortune that they do.

"There cannot be too much preparation. Every scene and sequence of the story should be worked out thoroughly, and gone over again and again to make certain that it is right and that the action is natural and logical; that there is proper motivation or reason for the action.

"Comedy should not be injected as one injects a serum for the prevention of disease. It should be built into the story in a reasonable and logical way. To sit by on the set and say, 'Here is a good place to insert a gag,' and then think up something of a slapstick nature to bring a laugh, is ridiculous, to my way of thinking.

"Not only does thorough preparation make for a better picture. It helps keep down the cost of production. Preparation is two-thirds of the battle, the keynote of good picture making."

CHARLES F. EYTON, special foreign representative of the Paramount production department and a studio executive of many years' experience, has just returned from an investigation of European conditions covering several months with several interesting convictions, one of which is that European film producers are working along sound lines and that America can expect to see more and more of their pictures. Accompanied by his wife, Kathlyn Williams, he left for Hollywood on Sunday and will confer with directors and producers at the Lasky studio on European conditions and film tastes.

"A thorough investigation of film production in Europe," said Eyton, "leads one to the conclusion that what is now chiefly lacking in European production is equipment. This lack of equipment and studio facilities is due, naturally, to the disorganized economic state of the various European countries following the war.

"In every country I found film producers intelligently bending every effort toward a solution of their problems so that their films can command a position in the world markets. They are studying motion picture production methods and, so far as their facilities will allow them, they are proceeding in a manner which is bound to bring them to a position where they can compete on the screens of the world with the best that this country has to offer. In some of the European countries there seems to be a disposition on the part of certain elements of the film trade to seek governmental regulation of the importation of American films on a percentage basis in respect to their own production. I think, however, that as business conditions adjust themselves and the European producers have an opportunity to put their production ideas into effect, the need for such will end.

"One of the important messages which I plan to give to our own directors and producers in our studios here and in Hollywood, concerns the necessity for taking into consideration European customs and European psychology in the production of American pictures. I feel that American producers in the rush of making pictures overlook the fact that their productions have an international distribution and that they must be as authentic and true to life in Paris, Stockholm and London as they are on Broadway and in Los Angeles. This is a very important factor in American film production and if our pictures are to continue to succeed abroad, our producers must give more consideration to our European audiences."

William H. Rudulph

RUDULPH GETS IMPORTANT POST

Supervising Director of Fox Exploitation

HAVING formulated plans for an intensive exploitation campaign, James R. Grainger has appointed William H. Rudulph as supervising director of the exploitation department, with Charles P. Cohen retaining his present position of manager.

"We propose to establish the biggest and most thoroughly equipped exploitation departmnet in the business," said Grainger on the eve of his departure for another cross-country trip. We will place from twenty-five to thirty high powered exploitation men in the field, in every section of the United States and Canada, and they will carry on intensive campaigns in behalf of every feature the corporation releases. These purveyors of publicity will maintain headquarters in our various branch office exchanges and work among the exhibitors of the key cities."

Rudulph is a graduate from newspaper and theatrical work, in both of which he occupied high positions. In pictures he has handled the publicity and management of many film stars, including several productions for Marion Davies. For the past several months he has been identified with Fox Films as a special represenative in the sales department.

Lasky Off to Coast Studio

Will Start Second Batch of Productions for New Season Under Way

JESSE L. LASKY, Paramount vice-president, left New York bound for the company's Hollywood studios, where he will get under way the second batch of productions slated for release during the coming season. Twelve of the forty-one productions scheduled for release have been completed. These include "Aloma of the South Seas," "Padlocked," "Beau Geste," "Mantrap," "Fascinating Youth," "The Sorrows of Satan," "Variety," the Ufa picture; "Nell Gwyn," the British National production with Dorothy Gish is starred; "Just Like a Woman," "Diplomacy," a Marshall Neilan production; "Lady of the Harem," and "The Cat's pajamas."

Jesse L. Lasky

Both East and West studios are busy at present. In the Long Island plant Gloria Swanson's latest, "Fine Manners," is nearly finished, as are Mal St. Clair's production, "The Show-Off," and Thomas Meighan's picture, "Tin Gods." All arrangements have been completed for the filming of Florenz Ziegfeld's "Glorifying the American Girl," "The Quarterback," Richard Dix's next picture; W. C. Fields in "So's Your Old Man"; Herbert Brenon's picture, "The Great Gatsby," and "The Ace of Cads," with Adolph Menjou.

At the West Coast studios, Erich Von Stroheim is about to start filming of "The Wedding March," in which he also plays a part, and Raymond Griffith's picture, "You'd Be Surprised," Eddie Cantor in "Kid Boots," Frank Lloyd's picture; "The Rough Riders," which Victor Fleming will direct, and "We're in the Navy Now," are in the early stages of filming.

Chief among Lasky's reasons for going to Hollywood at this time is to see "Old Ironsides," the James Cruze production. He will also confer with Marshall Neilan on the second picture to follow "Diplomacy."

Residents of Plymouth Hold Parade to Honor James

Motion Picture exhibitors of Pennsylvania are interested in the outcome of the portending elections in the Fall because of the result of the May primaries in which Arthur H. James was nominated for lieutenant-governor of the state on the Republican ticket.

James has for years been prominently identified with the Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton, and is district attorney of Luzerne County. On confirmation of the news that James has been nominated, the residents of Plymouth, his home town, staged a parade in his honor.

Exonerated of Blame in Theatre Disaster

Reginald W. Geare, architect of the Knickerbocker Theatre, Washington, D. C., the roof of which collapsed January 28, 1922, killing 97 and injuring 103 persons; John H. Ford, iron work contractor; the Union Iron Works, fabricators of the steel used in the building, and Frank L. Wagner, general contractor, were exonerated of blame for the catastrophe in a decision rendered last week by the Court of Appeals. The decision reversed the findings of the lower court.

The Appellate Court held that the persons involved in the proceeding had no connection with the building after they turned it over to the Knickerboker Theatre Company. The decision held that all responsibility for the safe condition of the building rested upon the owners after they had accepted it as a safe structure from those engaged in the actual erection.

Claimants for damages as a result of the crash now can proceed only against the District of Columbia, it is believed. Harry M. Crandall, head of the theatre company, has no liability in the matter, as the business was operated as a corporation. The corporation has been dissolved.

Judge Dissolves Injunction Against Two Theatres

Because of the action of Judge E. S. Wells in dissolving an injunction brought against two theatres in Chariton, Iowa, by County Attorney J. D. Threlkheld to restrain their opening on the Lord's Day on the ground of unnecessary labor the theatres are free to continue their Sunday showings.

In his opinion dispensing with the injunction Judge Wells stated: "No property rights are involved here in that the plaintiff has a speedy remedy at law if the penalty imposed by the statutes is inadequate to deter the defendants from violating the law. That is a question for the legislature and not for a court under the pleadings and the law as I view it. Injunction cannot lie. Motion to dissolve is sustained at plaintiff's cost."

Orderly Audience Escapes Peril in Burning Theatre

More than 200 persons narrowly escaped from the Whiteway Theatre, LeRoy, Kans., when it caught fire Saturday night, resulting in $14,300 loss on the part of J. M. Holmes, owner. The flames, of undetermined origin, spread rapidly, but the audience filed out in order and there were no injuries.

Northwestern Exhibitor Victim of Weak Heart

LEO A. LANDAU, well known for many years in the Northwest as a showman, is dead as the result of a heart attack. Mr. Landau was manager of the Lyceum Theatre in Minneapolis under Clinton & Meyer two years ago. He had been managing director of the Alhambra and Garden Theatres at Milwaukee, and helped form the company which leased the Garden Theatre, backed by the Uihlein interests.

German Antagonism to American Films

Situation Frankly Analyzed by News' Correspondent in Berlin and Constructive Solution Suggested

(EDITOR'S NOTE.—The accompanying article, written by Heinrich Fraenkel, correspondent of Motion Picture News in Berlin, is printed because this publication believes it will contribute toward impressing the American industry, first-hand, with some important truths about the foreign market. We feel that nothing is to be gained by ignoring the fact that antagonism exists. But we also believe that the situation should be dealt with constructively. Mr. Fraenkel's article seems to us to be timely and worth the careful consideration of the trade here.)

IT'S no use beating about the bush, and it's better to look an unpleasant situation right in the face as long as there seems to be time to meet it.

That's why, as Berlin correspondent of an American trade paper, it's my duty to clearly point out that never in the history of this trade has the situation here for the American film been as awkward as it is now; and, as a matter of fact, this seems to hold good for this country as well as for most others in Europe.

The general situation was rather clearly evidenced some time ago by a very deplorable incident which, although, of course, it was no more than an incident, has been so typical for the position that I can't help mentioning it. I am speaking of the first showing of Strohheim's "Greed." I do not intend to judge the merits or demerits of this film here, but personally I should have thought that just this sort of film should have appealed considerably to the German public which has been applauding "Caligari," "The Street," "Nju," "The Last Laugh" (or rather the first part of it) and other pictures which, by the non-German mind have often been criticized as "heavy," "Teutonic," "sordid," "lacking entertainment value," or "too ambitious from art's point of view," or anything of the kind.

All the more astonishing is the fact that this picture, "Greed," has been hissed down in a way which probably is unheard of in any movie theatre in the world and that—which is probably also an "unheard of incident"—the screening was interrupted in the middle of the film and the admission fees reimbursed to the public.

Speaking of the individual incident I personally think that at least 90 per cent. of the blame is to be allotted to UFA. First of all, it was, in my opinion, unnecessary weakness to yield to the hissing crowd. If the responsible managers had not lost their nerve and seen the thing through, I wouldn't be at all astonished if (the more so by the enormous publicity got out of the thing) the tables could not have been turned; provided that—and here comes UFA's most decided fault in this matter—provided that they would have taken the time to get the film re-edited altogether. Certainly, considering the absolutely hopeless way this picture had been "edited" the attitude of the public was partly not at all incomprehensible; the bad editing had ruined the picture altogether and indeed, made it look utterly ridiculous in parts.

Well, it is as little use discussing these details now as crying over spilt milk. What I am driving at is, to explain not this unique incident (which more or less should only interest the people directly concerned with it) but rather the ever so much more important story back of the whole thing. There are people who say that the whole thing has been plotted by some people who do not like Stroheim for political reasons and who incidentally wanted to use this opportunity of demonstrating against American films altogether.

I do not believe this. I happened to be in the theatre during those scandalous scenes and I closely watched dozens of people, overhearing their remarks during the performance and immediately after the close of it. I am positive that the excitement was absolutely genuine, and the all important fact clearly evident by the incident is the following state of things. At the present moment: A most decided ill-feeling against the American film within wide spheres of the movie-going public.

Now, what should and can be done against it?

First of all: American companies should do all they can to protect the success of individual pictures and still more so, their general prestige depending on it, against mutilation due to incapable editing which, unfortunately, is not at all an infrequent thing. Some German renters apparently having not yet grasped the great importance of editing; as a matter of fact, I know of cases in which office girls or anybody who could "speak English" were deemed fit to "translate" the subtitles of foreign films. Considering the fact that in future nearly all of the big American companies are going to rent their product here themselves it should safely be expected that next season films will be properly edited.

The second important item responsible for the antagonism against American films is the fact that the absolute predominance —or rather former predominance of American production—has been brought to bear too heavily on the European mind and that the press lately—and certainly not without some due reason—has been steadily clamoring for a chance of their own films on the American market. Looking at the matter from this angle I am glad to say that things seem to be improving. It is also a rather pleasant fact, evidencing this argument, that this improvement has certainly been appreciated here.

The strong position which MOTION PICTURE NEWS has repeatedly taken in favor of reciprocity has often been highly favorably commented upon in the German trade press. And here, I think, is the way to salvation. It's utterly essential to drive home to the German trade and also to the lay press that the American trade is earnestly willing to give a fair chance to each foreign product, whilst on the other hand it certainly also wants to be fairly treated abroad. I think if something along those lines would be officially announced by the Hays organization and given wide publicity accordingly it would do no end of good.

Altogether, I might say that the situation is serious, but far from irreparable. Something must be done, however, and done quickly, in order to give the American trade a fair chance on these markets during the coming season.

Ascher Circuit Building in Chicago

THREE theatres are now being erected and two more are planned in Chicago by the Ascher Circuit according to Max Ascher, who said on his visit to New York that $5,000,000 would be the sum involved. The total of theatres for this circuit will be raised to twenty-one.

The theatres under construction are: The Sheridan, Irving Park Road and Sheridan Avenue, seating 4,000, to be ready in September; the Colony, Kedzie Avenue and 59th Street, seating 2,000, to be ready in August, and the Drake, Montrose and Drake Avenues, seating 2,200, to be ready in August.

Negotiations are under way with Fox Films on a booking deal; associated with Ascher as personal representative in the buying of pictures is L. A. Rozelle, formerly manager in Chicago for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Another Tax Repeal Bill Introduced in Senate

A BILL to repeal the remaining admission taxes, similar to that introduced a week ago by Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, was introduced in the Senate June 3, by Senator Harreld, of Oklahoma.

Announcement that the Treasury would have a surplus of possibly $300,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year, coupled with the President's statement that the administration does not favor further tax revision at this time, has resulted in numerous democratic members of Congress coming out in favor of further tax relief. Among the number is Senator Copeland, of New York, who asserted that surplus funds should be used as a method of still further lightening the tax burden.

It is not likely, however, that any tax repeal measures will get through Congress this session.

F. and R. Offer Friendship Tour Free to Exhibitors

The Northwest Theatres circuit(Finkelstein & Ruben) is offering motion pictures of the 1926 friendship tour of Minneapolis free to exhibitors in towns along the route visited. The tour was taken by 100 business men of Minneapolis, and included stops at 17 points in Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. F. & R. showed the film to the business men concerned at a private viewing in the State Theatre.

Stanley Hand

HAND WITH WARNER BROTHERS

Named to Assist on Special Sales

STANLEY HAND, formerly New York Exchange manager for First National, has been appointed special sales assistant by Warner Brothers, in line with the company's plan of building a special national organization to handle the road show attractions they will present during the 1926-27 season.

Other recent appointments are A. P. Waxman, who has been placed in charge of exploitation and publicity at the home office under the supervision of C. W. Bunn, sales and exploitation director for the special attractions; Arthur Hickox has been made special representative on the West Coast.

Waxman's experience covers not only the picture field but the legitimate stage as well. He was connected with First National in the exploiting of a number of that company's special productions including "The Sea Hawk" and "The Lost World." Hand also served with Bunn on the First National force in the handling of specials. Hickox, another former First National employee, worked in the New York and Philadelphia territory.

For the present this trio will confine their activities to the opening of "Don Juan" and "The Better 'Ole," which are scheduled to open on Broadway on July 20th and August 1st respectively.

Sunday Law Battle on in K. C.

Long Wrangle Over Sabbath Closing in Kansas City, Kans., is Brought to a Head

THE smoke has cleared away and the blaze has leaped to the fore in the Sunday closing battle in Kansas City, Kans., which bids fair to be an epoch in the history of that city.

Beginning with President R. R. Biechele, of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, owner of the Osage Theatre, on down to smaller exhibitors, warrants for the arrest of the theatre owners have been issued and the fight is smeared on the front pages of all daily newspapers in the territory.

Harry Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures Corporation

Should the fight against Sunday shows, being led by the Ministerial Alliance of Kansas City, Kans., succeed, it would be disasterous to exhibitors, as only the Kaw River separates Kansas City, Kans., a town of 150,000, from Kansas City, Mo., where Sunday closing never has been dreamed of.

The exhibitors arrested thus far: R. R. Biechele, Osage Theatre; Frank C. Grubel, one of the owners of the Electric and Tenth Street theatres; R. G. Liggett, Gene Gauntier Theatre; J. M. Kopelus, Princess Theatre; J. L. Ricksecker, Rosedale Theatre; Fred Meyn, Pershing Theatre; W. D. Fite, Kansas Theatre; W. Lee Vaughn, Art and Midway theatres; Samuel Masters, Empire Theatre.

Prosecution of the exhibitors is based on an old law which prohibits "any unnecessary labor on Sunday." The law never has been enforced in Kansas City, Kans., although it is rigidly observed in most of the smaller towns of Kansas. One of the principal features of the fight is this: Several years ago the ministers attempted to close grocery stores on Sundays. The case was carried to the Supreme Court, where the grocers won. It is believed the exhibitors will do likewise. Harry Hayward, county attorney, said he could issue no warrants for grocers because of the Supreme Court decision, but that he would issue any other warrant demanded by any citizen on Sunday violation charges, "even if it reached church choirs, singers and organists." Henry E. Dean, counsel for the exhibitors, said that if the law, which is being cited by the ministers, was strictly enforced, all drug stores and filling stations would be closed on Sundays, causing the majority of the population of the city to leave in exodus across the bridge to Kansas City, Mo.

The exhibitors arrested are offering no defense except that they are doing no worse than other institutions which violate the Sunday closing law. The ministers assert they will continue the fight until the theatres are closed permanently on Sundays.

"If the ministers desire to close up every institution in the city on Sunday, we will help them do it," Mr. Dean said. "But they don't want that. They merely are singling out the exhibitors for an attack."

A petition signed by employees of theatres, expresses a willingness of employees to give their services free of charge on Sundays.

Ames and Chariton, Iowa, in Arms Against Blue Laws

Ames, Iowa, is up in arms over the Sunday show question. Business and professional men and members of labor organization are working for the restoration of Sunday pictures, and are willing to defray the cost of a special election to wipe the blue law off the municipal books. The theatres of Ames were darkened on Sunday four years ago by a narrow margin in a spirited contest which now threatens to be renewed with even more vigor.

Meanwhile Chariton, Iowa, is having its troubles with the blue-lawers. Harry Mitchnick, who manages the Lyric and Strand theatres at Chariton, has been served with a temporary injunction which prevents him from opening his houses on Sunday. The question of a permanent injunction will be decided at a hearing in August. The temporary injunction was served by the county attorney who acted on his own initiative in the matter.

Paramount Declares Regular Quarterly Dividend

At a meeting this week the Board of Directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on the preferred stock, payable August 2nd, 1926, to stockholders of record at the close of business on July 14th, 1926. The books will not close.

Says Co-operative Policy Will Aid Independents

IN a statement which he is now preparing for submission to the Independent Producers Association, David A. O'Malley, treasurer of Ellbee Pictures, will recommend the adoption of a co-operative policy which he declares will eliminate alleged difficulties resulting from existing contract arrangements between producers and distributors in the independent field. Discussing the present contract, O'Malley said that in his opinion there are clauses which are not altogether fair to the exchanges and that something more than mere legal arbitration, provided for in the contract, is needed to promote the cordial relationship and united strength of independent producers and exchangemen if they are to find a fair ground for competition with nationally distributed product.

The co-operative policy on which the Ellbee company is now operating, he said, has proved highly successful and he believes a wider application of the principle among other independent operators will "entirely dispense with all arbitration of any description."

Universal Will Have Two in Racine

Takes Over 1800-Seat House and is Building Theatre With 3,000 Capacity; Stanley Negotiating for Four More

INCLUDED in the reports of circuit expansion and theatre building for the past week is the announcement that the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises has completed a deal in Racine with I. Friedman, whereby Universal will take over the Rialto Theatre, which Friedman has been operating, and, in conjunction with Friedman, will build a house with a seating capacity of three thousand on one of the most valuable plots of ground in Racine, due to the acquisition of a ninety-nine year lease which was included in the deal with Friedman and the outright purchase of additional acreage.

At the Rialto, the present policy of vaudeville and pictures will be continued, and the new house will have a similar policy.

Houses under construction or projected will add approximately 20,000 seats to the chain operated by Universal. Some of the larger theaters being built are: 1,236 seats, Grand Island, Neb.; 1,400, Hastings, Neb.; 2,000, Somerville, Mass.; 1,000, Lowell, Mass.; 1,200 Beatrice, Neb.; 1,100, Danville, Va.; 1,400, Springfield, Mo.; 2,000, Orlando, Fla.; 2,500, Racine, Wis.

A large number of individual theatres have been acquired in various parts of the country, including the Franklin Park, a 1,200-seat house in Dorchester, Mass. Two new houses have been opened in Florida, at Sarasota and Orlando, and another house has been acquired at Dade City.

In Atlanta, the Candler interests are building a 2,200-seat theatre in connection with an office building. Universal has leased the house for 21 years.

Negotiations are pending between the Stanley Company and Herbert Effenger, who controls the Strand, the 69th Street, Glenside Theatre, Glenside, Embassy Theatre, Jenkintown, and has an interest in the Leader Theatre, for the taking over of Effenger's interests by the Stanley Company. The Strand and 69th Street Theatres are looked upon as being the most attractive houses in their respective sections of the city.

Jesse H. Jones who is building a million dollar movie palace in Houston, Tex., for Publix Theatre, Inc., which has been named the Houston Theatre, has announced that he will build another theatre for the same company. The new house will be located on Fannin Street, between Walker and McKinney, the original location for the Loew vaudeville theatre, which Jones is also building.

The Loew house will be located on Main and McKinney and will join the Houston Theatre which is located on Main and Lamar. The entire block will be used by the two theatres. This announcement brings the total to three theatres now under construction.

L. L. Dent, Dallas, head of the Dent chain of motion picture houses, who controls several theatres in the valley, south of Houston, and D. Calligan, Dallas, have purchased the lease and operating equipment of the Mexia, Texas, theatres. The Dent chain of theatres number about 50 in Texas.

Name Motion Picture Men to Help Survey

THE personnel of the committee appointed by Mayor Walker to study the city planning and to outline the future New York includes seven men prominent in the motion picture industry. This civic board of 471 members will provide for a more scientific distribution of population and industries throughout New York.

Included in this list are Samuel L. Berman, Secretary of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York; William Fox, President Fox Film Corporation; Dr. A. H. Giannini, President of the East River National Bank; Arthur J. Hirsch, member of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce; Bernarr MacFadden of True Story Films, Inc; Charles L. O'Reilly, President T. O. C. C.; and Abraham M. Schwartz, Director, Cortelyou Amusement Company.

Church and Drama Association Formed

All Denominations Unite in Enlisting Support of Public for Good Things of Stage and Screen

WITH the formation in New York of a Church and Drama Association which is to become national in scope, two of the greatest forces for molding human character and conduct are now definitely co-operating in the work of enlisting public support for the worthy things of the stage and screen. All denominations, Protestant, Catholics and Hebrews are joined with the stage and screen in the new association.

The Association was ushered in at a dinner at the Plaza Hotel in New York City and was the outgrowth of preliminary steps to bring the two forces in accord as undertaken by the drama committee of the Federal Council of Churches. The dinner was attended by many men and women prominent in church and stage work in New York.

Father William J. Donahue, secretary of the Catholic Actors' Guild, represented Cardinal Hayes.

"There is a tremendous waste of good zeal in this country," he said, "which if put into proper channels would result in great good. The methods of reformers are not only futile but often harmful. They give invaluable publicity and at the same time ignore those things which should have support. I am opposed to censorship, state or national, and I am heartily in favor of this movement to bring the church and the drama closer together. Cardinal Hayes is entirely interested and pledges his support."

Will H. Hays, speaking for the motion picture industry, declared that the Church and Drama Association is a step in the right direction. He declared that past experiences had proved the wisdom of the course to be pursued.

"There is no difference of opinion between the producers, distributors and exhibitors of motion pictures and the thoughtful public," said Hays. "We are all striving for better motion pictures. One way for you to help us make good pictures is very easy and that is, to support the good pictures."

Hays said the motion picture has now reached the place where the good is the rule and the bad the exception. "We stand at attention," he added, "to do what the church and the good people say ought to be done."

The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches of America, declared that the time has come for the gulf of misunderstanding between the two forces to be bridged. He bespoke hearty support for the new movement. "I am heartily in favor of the unity of the church and the drama," he said. "Already we have tested the plan out with the motion picture and have found it very successful."

The Hon. William C. Redfield commented on the improved quality of the motion picture and the Rev. George Reid Andrews, chairman of the association, and also chairman of the drama committee of the Federal Council of Churches, read the aims of the association and added, "It shall be our purpose to find who the folks are who are doing valuable pieces of work and to help them by the larger association to do it better and more effectively."

The Rev. Randolph Ray, representing Bishop William Manning, Episcopal Bishop of New York, spoke of the "oneness of purpose" of the church and stage and said the church must embrace the stage as a part of itself.

Two Iowa Towns Vote for Blue Sundays

Liberty, Ia., has voted 394 to 297 for a blue law which closes its theatres on Sunday. Correctionville, Ia., has also gone over into the ranks of the Puritans.

Selznick Still Negotiating for Associated Exhibitors; Announcement Soon

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, acting for a group of interests in which the Phillips-Jones Corporation, collar manufacturers, is prominent, was still negotiating this week for control of Associated Exhibitors, with the probability that final papers would be signed before the end of the week.

Under the terms of the agreement it is understood Lewis J. Selznick will become president, while Oscar Price, who has kept the company going during a difficult period of financial reorganization, will withdraw.

The Phillips-Jones Corporation has recently bought a number of small theatres, with other deals rumored pending, but whether or not this has any connection with the anticipated Associated Exhibitors' deal is not known.

John Zanft Sails for Europe

Vice-President and General Manager of Fox Theatres on Brief Business Trip

JOHN ZANFT, Vice-President and General Manager of the William Fox Circuit of Theatres, is scheduled to sail on the Majestic, June 24th, for a brief business trip to England and the principal European capitals. It is announced that Mr. Zanft will make a survey of several motion picture enterprises while abroad.

Immediately upon his return at the opening of the theatrical season, Mr. Zanft will take charge of the plans for the erection of new theatres in various sections of the country. The Fox circuit will acquire or build twenty additional playhouses.

One of the first theatres to be completed in the Fall will be the new Academy of Music, opposite Tammany Hall in Fourteenth Street. The historic Academy of Music, home of Fox pictures for years, is being demolished and the site will be used for a business building. This new playhouse is being built on the site of the Dewey Theatre, which was William Fox's initial venture as an exhibitor.

John Zanft, director of theatres for Fox

Another new Fox theatre in the Metropolitan area will be the Savoy, located at Lincoln Place and Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn. This new house of 2,500 seats, with a combined vaudeville and picture policy will be opened by Labor Day. In addition to these two new theatres the Fox Theatre organization announces that plans are being prepared for new houses in Detroit, St. Louis, Washington, Kansas City, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Baltimore and Boston.

Los Angeles Inventor Has New Photographic Process

A new motion picture photographic process has been invented and developed by Max Handscheigl, of Los Angeles, which the inventor believes will revolutionize production methods in the motion picture industry. The process embodies the use of a new patented camera permitting the photographing of two or more separate actions in absolute registration, it is stated. The original basic patent claims filed January 2, 1923, have been followed by numerous other patent applications covering every phase of the process.

The Handscheigl process, it is said, permits making scenes in the studio of any action and transferring it to still pictures, oil paintings, stock sets or miniatures. A miniature of a castle, fort or other structure can be put on a mountain, desert or seashore and any action desired can be put into the picture without the necessity of people leaving the studio, the announcement says. It is not a "duping" process, as over ninety per cent. of the work is on original negative. The process is sufficiently simple of operation that it can be handled by any regular cameraman and so perfected that its use can not be detected. Under this process upward of fifty per cent of the production cost of features calling for foreign scenes or massive sets can be saved, it is said.

Little Movie Theatre Plan Proposed for Hollywood

The artistic movement, the Little Movie Theatre, is the latest cultural idea to be sponsored by the citizens of Hollywood. Over one hundred representative citizens met at the home of Gareth Hughes in Hollywood to discuss the movement and definite steps were taken to make it a reality. A committee, headed by Donald Crisp, director affiliated with Cecil B. De Mille, was appointed to put into execution the preliminary plans outlined in the meeting. Others on the committee are Hugo Ballin, director, Gareth Hughes, actor, and Madelaine Brandeis, producer.

Crisp said at the meeting: "The purpose of the movement is to try to bring about something definite in the way of a cultural revival theatre, which ultimately would lead to a Little Movie Theatre project. We can and shall institute at once our revival showing plans, with an opportunity extended to all interested to view each week the revival of some artistic screen play, perhaps one which was not necessarily a financial success."

Beno Rubel New Secretary of Stern Film Corp.

Beno Rubel has joined the Stern Bros. Film Corporation as secretary. He will make his headquarters at the home office of Universal, thus enabling Julius and Abe Stern to devote more of their time to the production end of the business.

Rubel has been in the ready-to-wear field for the past twenty years as President of the Max Rubel Company and is a member of the Cloak and Suit Manufacturers Association.

Lake Norden, South Dakota, Bans Sunday Movies

As a result of a special election, Sunday shows have been banned at Lake Norden, South Dakota.

Warners Renew Contract With Irene Rich

WARNER BROTHERS have exercised their option on the services of Irene Rich and a new contract was signed this week which will keep the star in the Warner fold over a long period. Miss Rich, one of the most popular stars of the Warner aggregation, is at present working in "The Honeymoon Express" which James Flood is directing at the Warner Hollywood studios. Willard Louis appears opposite the star.

Irene Rich

Another option renewed this week was that of Myrna Loy, who has appeared in featured roles in a number of Warner Brothers productions during the past seasons. Her next appearance will be in "Across the Pacific," the Charles E. Blaney melodrama in which Monte Blue is starred.

IN

THE DEVIL HORSE

What human star can show a record like Rex?

He has been in just three pictures.

The first was voted by exhibitors one of the best pictures of 1924.

The second was voted by exhibitors one of the best pictures of 1925.

Yet neither of them came anywhere near the bigness of this.

If "The King of Wild Horses" and "The Black Cyclone" were close to the top, what will be the verdict of 1926 as to the standing of this amazing, novel and masterful drama?

The Devil Horse

YOU who have seen the great sheiks of the screen and thrilled to their art, see Rex!

See him make love. Admire the finesse and passion with which he wins his lady's heart!

You who watched the heroes of the silver sheet wage desperate battles, see Rex fight! He flashes in like black lightning, a very devil of rage. With flying heels and wicked teeth he is the incarnation of power, passion, fury, and irresistible might. Thrills? Man, you never knew what the word meant before!

This is a story of the last frontier, with thousands of soldiers, thousands of Indians in desperate strife.

And Rex, as the horse who hates Indians, has the greatest role of his sensational career.

Hal Roach has produced as big a picture as any you can buy.

Ten Attractions Comprise Chadwick Group

A SLOGAN of "first division pictures only" has been adopted by Chadwick Pictures Corporation for the 1926-27 season. Ten pictures are scheduled for the coming season. There will be no star series or program pictures, only special attractions. Stage plays and novels on the list bring to light such names as Owen Davis, Denman Thompson, Langdon McCormack, Erckmann Chatrian, Leah Baird, Hal Reid, M. M. Black and R. Evans Otis.

Lionel Barrymore

Directors who will be represented in the forthcoming Chadwick productions are James Young, Nat Ross, Frank O'Connor and Sam Zimbalist. The stars include Lionel Barrymore, Pauline Frederick, Alexander Carr, Mary Alden, Baby Peggy, Lola Todd, Edward Phillips, Raymond Keane and Marion Nixon.

Four films for the coming season have been completed. The first of these is "The Bells," James Young's production, adapted from the French play, "The Polish Jew,' by Erckmann Chatrian. Lionel Barrymore plays the part made famous by Sir Henry Irving. The supporting cast includes Edward Phillips, Lola Todd, Gustaf von Seyfertitz, Lorimer Johnston and Boris Karloff.

The Chadwick studios on the Coast have been remodeled and enlarged in preparation for the production schedule.

Lasky Appoints Jeane Cohen Editorial Dept. Delegate

Miss Jeane Cohen has been appointed by Jesse L. Lasky as special representative of the editorial department of the West Coast studio of Paramount and will travel frequently between New York and Hollywood with stories and the synopses of plays for the purpose of keeping West Coast stars, producers and directors in closer contact with the New York story market and stage. This, according to Lasky, is Miss Cohen's reward for ten years' service as his secretary.

Leads Selected for "A Trip to Tilsit"

George O'Brien will play the leading male role in "A Trip to Tilsit," the Fox Films picture upon which F. W. Murnau, German director, will begin work on July 1st, when he arrives from Berlin. O'Brien will be supported by Margaret Livingston and Janet Gaynor. Murnau will have his own technical staff and cameramen.

Donna Barrell Engaged for Educational Comedies

Jack White has re-engaged Donna Barrell, scenarist, to prepare plots for Educational Comedies. Miss Barrell turned out many successes last year, among them being the Tuxedo Comedy starring Johnny Arthur, "Home Cured."

Rowland Decries Play Prices

First National General Manager Says B'way Short Run No Criterion of Value

BROADWAY stage producers will, in the future, find the picture business rather "slim pickings" insofar as the payment of high prices for plays which have only had a short run is concerned, said Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, in a recent interview. "I do not see," Rowland said, "where the average play which has run only a few months on Broadway is worth any more than the average short story, unless the stage production has a special value for a particular star." First National, he said, is one company that will go very slow as regards this matter.

Rowland maintains a good novel has a far greater publicity value than the average play, that it has wider circulation and that throughout the country it causes more comment and discussion, printed and otherwise. "And yet," he said, "the play producers invariably demand a great deal more for screen rights. But the picture companies are coming to realize what a trimming they have been getting in the buying of plays. The fact is that a three months' play on Broadway doesn't even echo across the Hudson River.

"In the production of pictures the element of luck must be considered. Not frequently pictures start out to be just average, but as they develop they show possibilities that may be developed into special productions. Then, on the other hand, we know of pictures which were started as specials and turned out to be just pictures. This is the case frequently enough to upset calculations."

He also expressed the belief that the serious drama will not be much in demand this season. "Our tendency," he said, "is to find a light theme, entertainment possessing a comedy element that presents life with a touch of sophisticated irony, perhaps, but not over seriously. The trick is to guess what the public will want one year from now."

Four in July From First Nat'l

One Each From Johnny Hines, Milton Sills and Ken Maynard, Also "Savage"

FIRST NATIONAL this week scheduled four productions for release in July which includes Johnny Hines' latest, "The Brown Derby," "Puppets," with Milton Sills starred, "Senor Daredevil," a Ken Maynard vehicle, and "The Savage," with Ben Lyon and May McAvoy featured.

The Hines picture, which had a pre-release showing at the Strand Theatre, New York, tells of a young, good-natured and timid plumber who suffers from an inferiority complex until he inherits a brown derby the wearing of which makes him bold and brave.

Frank Hopper, chosen after a nation-wide search to play the role of Theodore Roosevelt in "The Rough Riders," Paramount

"Puppets," an Al Rockett production made at the Eastern Studios of First National, shows Sills as an Italian puppet master who bullies his associates. Gertrude Olmstead appears opposite the star.

"The Savage" is an original story of a reporter who is assigned a job that takes him to a South Sea Isle, where, in order to carry out the plan of the editor, he impersonates a white savage. Found by a party of explorers, headed by an eccentric scientist with a pretty daughter, Lyon continues to act wild and wooly. May McAvoy plays the scientist's daughter role.

"Senor Daredevil," the first Ken Maynard vehicle released through First National, departs from the usual run of Westerns. It was produced by Charles R. Rogers.

Frank Hopper Chosen to Play Roosevelt Character

Frank Hopper, one-time actor and at present a business man in Los Angeles, has been chosen to play the role of Theodore Roosevelt in "The Rough Riders," a Paramount production based on the late president's famous regiment in the Spanish-American war.

The selection was made after an exhaustive search by a committee composed of Hermann Hagedorn, biographer of Roosevelt, and Secretary of the Roosevelt Memorial Association; Lewis Maverick, vice-president of the Rough Rider's Association, and Victor Fleming, who will direct the picture.

M. G. M. Stories in Newspapers

National Publications to Carry Versions of at Least Eleven Productions

IN order to familiarize potential audiences with the stories to be picturized during the coming season, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will insert in a number of national publications the serialized versions of at least eleven productions, which will be released this season. Those of the stories not published serially at the present time will therefore become known to the readers of the country before the picture version is released.

This advertising medium will react to the benefit of exhibitors playing these pictures as by the time the production reaches his screen he will find a ready-made audience awaiting the filmization. The Cosmopolitan productions, which are released through M-G-M, will provide exhibitors with a list of pictures exploited nationally.

Pictures ready to be released and which have the benefit of this exploitation include "Altars of Desire," starring Mae Murray, which appeared serially in the American Weekly, a publication with a circulation of over eight million; "The Taxi Dancer," "The Callahans and the Murphys," which appeared serially in the Cosmopolitan magazine; "Blarney," from Donn Byrne's Saturday Evening Post story; "In Praise of James Carabine," "Polly Preferred," a Marion Davies starring vehicle, which was serialized in the Hearst newspapers.

Peter B. Kyne's story, "The Understanding Heart," is at present running serially in Cosmopolitan; "Captain Salvation" will soon be serialized in the Hearst chain; "The Flaming Forest," another Cosmopolitan story; "The Red Mill," another Marion Davies vehicle also to be carried in the Hearst papers, along with her "Mary of Vassar," and "Free Souls," an Adela Rogers St. John story, which the Hearst papers will also serialize.

Greater Movie Season Growing in Vigor

COMMITTEES of the Greater Movie Season are operating in full blast in practically every key city throughout the country, besides hundreds of the smaller towns.

Various people have already lent their support to get the celebration under way. The Cleveland newspaper, "The Plain Dealer," has signed up for the Season's contest, and the City of Charlotte, North Carolina, has organized and appointed a general manager, Warren Irwin of the Imperial Theatre of that city. R. E. Falkenberg, Majestic Theatre, Lexington, Nebraska, is the first exhibitor to order accessories for this year's Greater Movie Season. The circuits, the Stanley Theatres and the Frank Amusement Company, have already joined the movement.

Fox Lists Comedy Releases

Addition of Eight Two-Reel Animal Comedies Brings Year's Total to 52

WITH the release of "Jerry the Giant," the first of a new series of animal comedies in which three-year-old Jerry Madden will play the title role, the Fox company will be launched on its Short Subject program for the new season. The first "Jerry" picture will be released on August 22 along with "King of the Kitchen," in which Lige Conley is starred with Florence Gilbert in the chief feminine role and "Down to Damascus," a one-reel Fox Variety.

"The Clown," the first of a new series of eight Van Bibber comedies, based on the stories by Richard Harding Davis, will be released on August 29. Earle Foxe is starred and Florence Gilbert appears opposite. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley continue to play the leading roles in the "Helen and Warren" series, the first of which, "Easy Payments," will be released on September 5. "Money Screams," the second Imperial comedy for the new season and the second Fox Variety, "Riches of the Earth," will be released at the same time.

The first of the O. Henry series of eight two-reelers, "The Complete Life" will be released on September 12 with Ethel Sykes and Frank Butler in the leading roles. A novelty picture, "Around the World in Ten Minutes" is slated for September 19 along with the second Animal comedy as yet untitled. The second of the Van Bibber series, "The Swimming Instructor," will be released on September 26.

Lloyd Willis, special home office representative of Warner Bros., who died June 12th

Lloyd Willis Passes Away After Two Weeks' Illness

The grim spectre of death overshadowed the home of Lloyd Willis, 370 Riverside Drive, when that able executive of Warner Bros. passed away last Saturday, June 12.

The end came from septic poisoning as the result of an operation on Memorial Day. The sick man had been battling for his life for two weeks and at times it was thought that he would recover. The body was taken by Sam E. Morris of Warner Bros. to Church Creek, Md., the birthplace of the deceased. He is survived by his wife and little child, also his eighty-one-year-old mother who resides at Church Creek. He was forty-nine years of age.

Willis was a graduate of the newspaper ranks, having been a member of the staff of the New York Herald-Tribune. His first film experience was with Fox Films whose ranks he joined as a salesman. He afterwards went to National Pictures Theatres and then later to Selznick. Willis next became assistant to Fred Elliot in the organization that preceded the Hays regime. In the Hays organization he served as investigator under Charles Pettijohn and was later assigned to work under Jerome Beatty in the promotion of last year's Greater Movie Season.

Lois Wilson Will Be Seen in "The Great Gatsby"

Lois Wilson has been chosen to play the role of "Daisy Buchanan" in Herbert Brenon's picturization of F. Scott Fitzgerald's "The Great Gatsby." The picture went into production last week at the Long Island studio of Paramount. The principals are Warner Baxter in the title role, Georgia Hale, Neil Hamilton, William Powell and George Nash. Elizabeth Meehan did the adaptation from the novel.

Miss Wilson has just finished a featured part as the wife of Ford Sterling in "The Show Off," the successful play by George Kelly now nearing completion under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair.

"Tell It to the Marines" Goes Into Production

"Tell It to the Marines" went into production officially at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio last Monday at the same time that Eleanor Boardman, Frank Currier and Eddie Gribbon joined the cast. Miss Boardman will have the role of the Red Cross sweetheart of William Haines, who has the romantic lead in support of Lon Chaney, the star of the film.

Zion Myers Added to Fox Comedy Directorial Staff

Zion Myers has been signed by Fox Films to direct comedies. His first production is entitled "Killed by Kindness." The director is a brother of Carmel Myers, screen actress.

Ed A. Livingston Publicity Head Red Seal Pictures

Ed A. Livingston has replaced Mort E. Shaw, recently resigned, as director of publicity for Red Seal Pictures. For a long time Livingston handled the publicity for a number of Publix houses up-state.

Warner Bros. Schedule Three for Release

THREE productions are announced for release by Warner Brothers, one to go to exhibitors this month and two in July. "Footloose Widows," directed by Roy Del Ruth with Louise Fazenda and Jacqueline Logan in the "widow" roles, will be released on June 19.

"The Passionate Quest," scheduled for July 10, is an adaptation of an E. Phillips Oppenheim story directed by J. Stuart Blackton. Willard Louis, May McAvoy, Gardner James, and Louise Fazenda are featured in the cast.

"A Hero of the Big Snows," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, Warner Brothers' dog star, will be released on July 24. Herman Raymaker directed.

Al Rockett Planning Another Ben Lyon Vehicle

Upon the completion of "Subway Sadie" featuring Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, Al Rockett will produce "The Sheik of Hollywood," a picture starring Ben Lyon. It will be made on the Coast within the next few months and will be released next season.

At the present time Ben is working in the East on "The Duke of Ladies."

"Charlot Revue" Members in "What Price Glory?"

When the Charlot Revue company came to Hollywood to play at the new El Capitan Theatre, Raoul Walsh, directing "What Price Glory?" for Fox Films, invited players in the company to appear in the picture. Nearly all responded and donned French dress and were "shot" for several scenes. Among them was Beatrice Lillie.

Sam Rork Signs Principals for "The Blonde Saint"

Lewis Stone, Doris Kenyon, Tully Marshall and Ann Rork have been signed to appear in Sam Rork's production, "The Blonde Saint." The source of the picture is Stephen Whitman's "The Isle of Life." The new First National studios in Burbank will be the site of activities.

Ginsberg-Kann Open Two Sterling Exchanges

THE Ginsberg-Kann Distributing Corporation, in association with Meyer Fischer, of the Fischer Film Exchange of Cleveland and Cincinnati, has opened the first two Sterling Exchanges in those cities. This is in accordance with the recently published report that Ginsberg-Kann were about to expand their activities to include exchanges to distribute their product in certain territories.

Under the arrangement the Fischer Film Exchange keeps its identity and will continue to handle product of other organizations. The physical distribution of the Sterling and Banner product to be handled by the two new exchanges will be handled through the Fischer Film Exchange with Meyer Fischer supervising.

Laurence Stallings Will Title His War Drama for Fox

Laurence Stallings, who wrote "What Price Glory?" in collaboration with Maxwell Anderson, has consented to title the Fox Films picturization of his play which is now being produced under the direction of Raoul Walsh at the Fox West Coast studio.

Stallings has expressed himself as well satisfied with the realistic effects which have been put into the production, according to a telegram received from Winfield Sheehan. Stallings has just gone over the lot with Sheehan and Walsh and in a long discussion with the latter, tendered many valuable and constructive suggestions.

The author met personally all members of the cast and many of the ex-Marines among the extras. He expressed himself as enthusiastic with the principals, the telegram from Sheehan goes on to say.

"Summer Bachelors" Bought by Fox Films

Warner Fabian's novel, "Summer Bachelors," has been acquired by Fox Films as a photoplay for the 1926-27 season. After appearing serially in McClure's Magazine, beginning with the June number, it will be published in newspapers throughout the country. It is planned to bring out the picture some time next fall. Fabian is the author of "Flaming Youth."

Raoul Walsh to Direct "The Monkey Talks" for Fox

"The Monkey Talks" will be directed by Raoul Walsh as soon as he completes "What Price Glory?" There will be three leads in the cast, as follows: Madge Bellamy, Edmund Lowe and Jacques Lerner, who will be the "talking monkey." Margaret Livingston, Ralph Sipperly and Lou Tellegen have also been allotted important roles.

Bebe Daniels' Next Will Be "The Campus Flirt"

"The Campus Flirt" replaces "The College Flirt" as the title of Bebe Daniels' next picture for Paramount. The change was made because the original title conflicted with that of another picture. The production will soon get under way at the Paramount West Coast Studios.

Frances Marion Engaged by British National Pictures

British National Pictures, Inc., has just completed a deal with Samuel Goldwyn who has Frances Marion under contract, whereby the scenarist is to do the continuity for "Madame Pompadour," starring Dorothy Gish. The film will be produced in London and directed by Herbert Wilcox.

Tiffany Obtains Three Novels for Production

Tiffany Productions, Inc., has purchased three novels for picturization: "Jocelyn's Wife" and "The Luck of Geraldine Baird" by Kathleen Norris, and "The Broken Gate," by the late Emerson Hough. The company has acquired "The First Night," a farce comedy, and "Blondes Preferred," a comedy-drama.

Barrymore and Valentino Vehicles Selected

JOHN BARRYMORE'S first production for United Artists, "The Vagabond Lover," will be based on the life of Francois Villon, and Rudolph Valentino's next picture will be woven around the life of Benvenuto Cellino, according to information received at the home office of United Artists from Joseph M. Schenck at Hollywood.

Both of these personages are romantic figures in history. Villon is the subject of McCarthy's play, "If I Were King," from which source the present "Vagabond King" is derived, and it is understood that Barrymore is fulfilling a life-long ambition in portraying the vagrant poet. Production will begin in August with Alan Crosland directing.

The character of Cellini has also been the theme of a play, "The Fire Brand," with which Joseph Schildkraut won considerable success. Edwin Justin Mayer, the playwright, is preparing the scenario. No mention has been made as to the director or the leading lady who will play opposite Valentino in his portrayal of the versatile artist, great lover and author of the classical biography.

Improvements Planned for United Artists Studios

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK has reported a million dollar improvement program for the Fairbanks-Pickford studios in Hollywood where all United Artists members except Samuel Goldwyn and Gloria Swanson will henceforth make their productions. Work will start very soon on three stages and auxiliary buildings.

The increase in activities of the Joseph M. Schenck units and the individual members necessitate the improvements.

Jury Frees Proprietor in Sunday Showing Case

On June 4th the jury in the case of James Bailey, proprietor of the Strand Theatre in Greensburg, Ind., charged with violating the ordinance prohibiting Sunday movies, returned the verdict of not guilty after deliberating only ten minutes. There have been many discussions and disputes among the residents of the town concerning Sunday shows and this was the first time in years that Bailey opened his theatre on a Sunday evening. He gave bond when arrested.

Principals of "Tin Hats" Named by M-G-M

Claire Windsor, Conrad Nagel and Bert Roach have been cast for the featured roles in "Tin Hats," Ed Sedgewick's story of the American Army occupation in Germany. Donald Lee has prepared the scenario and Lew Lipton has adapted the story to the uses of the screen. George Cooper will play a comedy part.

Joseph Jefferson O'Neill Engaged by F. B. O.

Joseph Jefferson O'Neill, associated with the Hays organization for the past four years, has been engaged by F. B. O. as a special writer. Perevious to this joining the Hays staff, O'Neill was for ten years a feature writer for the New York World. He assumed his new duties June 14th.

Doug Fairbanks Hints at European Operations

AN Associated Press report from Paris this week indicates that United Artists will extend theatre holdings to all European countries. This information was disclosed in an interview with Douglas Fairbanks, who is stopping in Paris with Mary Pickford.

Fairbanks contemplates a visit to Russia where he will size up the proposed motion picture development in that country and will endeavor to settle the difficulties of the amount of money to be invested. United Artists now control twenty houses in Germany as a result of the recent deal with the Phoebus Films.

It is rumored that the Fairbanks will make a picture in Europe, the scenario being practically finished. No other details have been revealed.

American Movies Popular in Czechoslovakia

During 1925, there were exhibited in Czechoslovakia 1,528 motion pictures, an increase of 65 over those shown in 1924, when they totaled 1,463, according to consular reports to the Department of Commerce.

American-made films led the field with 777 showings, as compared with 720 in 1924. Germany finished second with 282, a gain of 79 pictures over 1924; domestic films came next with 209 as against 180 the previous year; France secured fourth place with 157 pictures, a loss of 58 from the 1924 business. The remainder was scattered among pictures from thirteen different countries.

Censorship prevented the showing of 33 pictures in Czechoslovakia during the year. No American films included in the number censored, according to the report.

Postmasters Told to Refuse Improperly Packed Films

Motion picture films not packed as prescribed by the postal regulations are not admissible to the mails and must not be accepted by postal employees, postmasters have been warned by Second Assistant Postmaster General W. Irving Glover in Washington, D. C.

It is stated at the department that several instances have recently been reported where films inclosed only in cardboard boxes and without the proper label have been shipped by parcel post. Instructions just issued by the department require that postmaster and postal employees shall be on the lookout for parcels from theaters and motion-picture concerns to make sure that every parcel of films is packed in the proper kind of container.

Utah Reports Sale of Six Powers Projectors

The Utah Theatre Supply Company, owned by E. D. Smith, reports the largest week's business in the history of the company from May 26th to June 2nd. Twelve Units Working on Rayart Releases

TWELVE companies are now at work on the West Coast on productions designed for release by Rayart Pictures Corporation.

Ben Wilson production unit is engaged in shooting "A Captain's Courage," and Tom Carr Productions is at work on "The Dixie Flyer." Dick Hatton is starring in, and at the same time directing, "Roaring Bill Atwood," while George Blaisdell is making "West of Rainbow's End." Another Ben Wilson unit is turning out "The Sheriff's Girl," Gerson Pictures Corporation is filming "The Last Alarm" and Harry J. Brown is busy with "Moran of the Mounted." "The Heart of a Coward," "Scotty of the Scouts," both Duke Worne Productions, are now in the midst of work.

The two final units are those of the Morris Schlank Productions and their comedies on the Rayart schedule are nearing completion.

Studio Briefs

Karl Dane will enact a comedy role and Warner Oland a "heavy" in "The Mysterious Island," the Jules Verne adventure story which Maurice Tourneur is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The greater part of the film will be made in the Bahamas and along the coast of Hawaii. The undersea sequences will be directed by J. E. Williamson, using the undersea tube and submarine plant at Nassau.

Universal has engaged Harry Edwards to direct the college stories of Carl Laemmle, Jr., which bear the name of "The Collegians." Rob Wagner will do the scripts and Bob Rose will be the unit's production manager. The series will star George Lewis. The only other member of the cast thus far selected is Hayden Stevenson. Production will start about June 10th.

Eric Pommer, European producer, whom Paramount placed under contract to supervise the filming of Pola Negri's productions, has launched his initial plans for the making of Pola's next picture, "Hotel Imperial," to be produced from Lajos Biro's drama. Filming will begin June 8th.

Eva Casonova, stage actress, has been added to the cast of "The Romance of a Million Dollars."

Robert E. O'Connor is returning to the films after an absence of sixteen years in "Tin Gods" the Paramount film starring Thomas Meighan. He last appeared in one of the "Chase" pictures of the old Selig Company at Chicago in 1910 with Alvin Wycoff as cameraman. The same Wycoff is now head of the Allan Dwan production unit making the Meighan picture.

Lew Brice, brother of Fanny Brice, the Ziegfeld comedienne, has been signed by J. G. Bachmann to play a comic role in the Preferred picture, "The Romance of a Million Dollars."

Through M. H. Hoffman, Tiffany Productions, Inc., announces that the casts are being selected for four Tiffany productions to be filmed during the month of June. The pictures are "That Model From Paris," "The First Night," "Blondes Preferred" and "One Hour of Love."

Work on "The Silent Power" has now started according to a dispatch from Renaud Hoffman, supervising director of Gotham Productions, in Los Angeles. In this subject Ralph Lewis will be starred portraying the character of an electrical worker in a power house. The leading feminine role opposite Lewis will be played by Ethel Shannon. Charles Delaney, a new screen discovery, and Vadim Urahoff are included in the cast. Frank O'Connor will guide the filming as director. The story and continuity are from the hands of James Bell Smith and Renaud Hoffman.

With the completion of a set two blocks long representing an East Side street in New York City, Director James Horne has started photography on F. B. O.'s picturization of the stage play, "Kosher Kitty Kelly." This production will be made entirely within the studio, the sets taking care of all exterior locations. The role of "Kitty" will be enacted by Viola Dana.

With Tom Tyler's present picture, "The Cowboy Cop," in the finishing stage plans are now nearing completion for his next and first of a new series, "Out of the West," an original story by Frederick Arthur Mindlin written especially for the star. Robert De Lacy will direct the new series.

Samuel Goldwyn has aded Paul McAllister, stage actor, to the cast of "The Winning of Barbara Worth." He will play the role of the seer in this screen version of the Harold Bell Wright story. Clyde Cook has also been signed.

The cast of the Paramount production, "The Show Off," now in its third week of production at the Long Island studio of Paramount, has been augmented by the addition of Harry Watson, Jr., comedian in the Broadway musical comedy, "Tip Toes." He will continue in the musical comedy, working at the studio in mornings and free afternoons.

In J. Stuart Blackston's production for Warner Bros., "The Passionate Quest," an adaptation by Constance Blackton from the novel by E. Phillips Oppenheim, Louise Fazenda and Willard Louis will play principal roles in addition to May McAvoy and Gardner James. The story concerns three people brought up together who go to London seeking power, social distinction and artistic self-expression.

John Miltern, stage and screen player, has been added to the cast of "Fine Manners," Gloria Swanson's latest Paramount picture. Another addition to the cast is Ivan Lebedoff, a young Russian actor who recently finished a characterization in D. W. Griffith's "The Sorrows of Satan." Walter Goss and Helen Dunbar also appear in important roles in the picture.

"Broken Hearts of Hollywood," scheduled by Warner Bros. as the last production on their old program, is now in production under the direction of Lloyd Bacon. Between the conclusion of the old schedule and the start on the new one, practically every star of the Warner Bros. organization will be available for scenes in this story of movie folk. Some of the stars who will appear in the production are Patsy Ruth Miller, Louise Dresser, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Barbara Worth, Dick Sutherland, Jerry Miley and Stuart Holmes. Also John Barrymore, Syd Chaplin, Louise Fazenda, Monte Blue, Willard Louis, John Patrick, Irene Rich and Dolores Costello.

Samuel Goldwyn, who is producing Harold Bell Wright's "The Winning of Barbara Worth," for United Artists, has made public his plans for the picture. Three towns, Rubio, San Felipe and Kingston will be constructed along with railroad, also an irrigation project subsequently to be destroyed. Three thousand people making up the population of the three towns will be employed for a period of three months. The entire Goldwyn production unit will be carried by special train north from Culver City to a desert region of Nevada where exteriors will be filmed.

On Friday of this week Fred Newmeyer arrived in New York City to begin preparation for filming "The Quarterback," Richard Dix's next starring picture for Paramount. Newmeyer's engagement as director for this production was made possible by arrangement with the Harold Lloyd Corporation with which Newmeyer has long been associated.

Mrs. M. B. Bower, author of "Chip of the Flying U," is now at Universal City writing an original story for Hoot Gibson, to be called "The Silent Rider." Lynn Reynolds will direct Gibson's next three pictures, starting with "The Texas Streak" his own story. He will follow with another of his stories, "Cheyenne Days," written around the Cheyenne frontier days celebration.

George O'Brien has been cast in another fighting role in "The Devil's Master," which John Ford is directing for Fox Films. The scenario was adapted from Gerald Beaumont's magazine story, "The Lord's Referee," a story of the prize ring and the underworld. Others in the cast are Janet Gaynor, William Russell, David Butler, Ralph Sipperly, Phil Ford, Harry Tembrook, Lew Short and Jerry Madden, a new child discovery.

"April Fool" is the first of the four Chadwick pictures of the new season which have been completed. It is an adaptation of the play, "April Showers," which served as a stage vehicle for Alexander Carr and was directed by Nat Ross under the supervision of Sam Zimbalist. Carr has the foremost role in the production and the supporting players include Mary Alden, Baby Peggy, Raymond Keane, Snitz Edwards, Pat Moore and Duane Thompson.

Gwendolyn Lee has been loaned to Columbia Pictures Corporation through the courtesy of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play a prominent part in "The Lone Wolf Returns," Columbia's first release of the season.

Director Robert Thornby, who is handling "West of Broadway," Priscilla Dean's newest Metropolitan starring vehicle, has selected the principal players for the picture. Arnold Gray will be the feminine lead, Walter Long, Mabel Coleman, William Austin and George Hall are cast in support.

Al Christie now producing Owen Davis' stage play, "The Nervous Wreck," has added Clarence Burton to the cast headed by Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver. Other headliners in the cast are Mack Swain, Hobart Bosworth, Vera Steadman, Chester Conklin, Charles Gerard and Paul Nicholson.

Holbrook Blinn, "The Bad Man," of several years ago, will return to the screen to portray a featured role in "The Masked Woman," which will be made under the management of June Mathis. Anna Q. Nilsson will be the featured feminine actress. Balboni is scheduled to handle the megaphone. Miss Mathis is already at work on the adaptation and continuity of the play, which will be launched on June 20th.

Cecil B. De Mille has signed May Robson, whose comic characterizations of feminine middle age have proven popular to playgoers. "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," Miss Robson's most successful sketch, is scheduled for production on the current De Mille program with, in all probability, the actress portraying "Aunt Mary."

The list of players in the Preferred production, "The Romance of a Million Dollars," has been completed with the addition of Jane Jennings and Bobby Watson.

The services of Victoria Moore, scenario writer, have been acquired by J. G. Bachmann of Preferred Pictures Corporation. Miss Moore will contribute adaptations to the program of thirteen Preferred Pictures to be produced this season.

Owing to increased facilities, production at the Columbia studios has progressed more rapidly than was expected with the result that the pre-releases for July are in order although originally scheduled for August. The change in the selection of the initial release of the season brings "The Lone Wolf Returns" to first position with "The False Alarm" in second place.

Having finished the script of "His New York Wife," Frederic and Fanny Hatton are engaged on their second assignment, "Studies in Wives," an adaptation of a novel by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes. This will be number four on the Preferred Pictures new season's release schedule.

E. J. Ratcliffe, veteran actor of the stage, has been cast for an important role in Samuel Goldwyn's production of Harold Bell Wright's "The Winning of Barbara Worth," for United Artists release. Henry King is now directing the filming at the town of Barbara Worth, Nevada, with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky featured.

Reeves Eason will direct Fred Thomson in his next Western drama, "The Lone Hand," an original story by Frank M. Clifton.

New additions have been made to the cast of Thomas Meighan's starring picture, "Tin Gods," namely, John Harrington, in the cast of the stage play, "Lulu Belle," Charles Hammond and George DeCarlton. The picture is now nearing completion at the Paramount Long Island studio with Allan Dwan at the megaphone.

Evelyn Brent has just completed "Flame of the Argentine," under the direction of Eddie Dillon and is conferring with Doris Anderson, who is writing the continuity of her next vehicle, "Princess Pro Tem," a story by Harry Hoyt.

The three principal roles in "A Woman's Heart" have been assigned to Enid Bennett, Earle Williams and Gawyne Whitman. Phil Rosen will direct the film which is based on the newspaper serial by Ruth D'Agostino, "The Revelations of a Woman's Heart."

A short story by Dixie Willson appearing in the July issue of the Cosmopolitan Magazine has been purchased by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. It is entitled "God Gave Me Twenty Cents," and will be Herbert Brenon's next production following the filming of "The Great Gatsby," from the pen of F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Tom Tyler will commence work shortly on "Out of the West," an original story by Fred A. Mindlin. The continuity is now being prepared by Wyndam Gittens, and Bob De Lacy has been scheduled to direct.

The leading role in the "Carrie of the Chorus," series of two-reel comedies now being made by Irwin Classics for release by Red Seal Pictures will be played by James Tarbell, whose work in pictures dates back to the old Edison days. An important role has also been assigned Flora Finch, who won much popularity in the past because of her work with the late John Bunny.

Alberta Vaughn is all set to begin work on her first feature comedy, "Collegiate," a story by Jean Dupont, a member of the F. B. O. studio's scenario department. Jimmy Gruen wrote the story and Del Andrews will take care of the directorial end.

Production started this week on "The Silent Power," the second of the coming season's series of Gotham Productions. Frank O'Connor is directing under the supervision of Renaud Hoffman. The cast consists of Ralph Lewis, Ethel Shannon, Charles Delaney, Vadin Uraneff and David Webster. The story is an original by James Bell Smith, who also prepared the continuity. Ray Juno will be the photographer and Bert Clark assistant director.

The cast has been assembled by Jesse Goldburg, producer of the Bob Custer pictures which are released by F. B. O., for "The Devil's Gulch," the next on this year's program. Hazel Deane will have the feminine lead and others in the cast include Charles Belcher, Pat Beggs, Roy Laidlaw and Mark Hamilton.

A role of a "wild, wild, college girl" in "The Campus Flirt" has been assigned Jocelyn Lee, former Ziegfeld Follies girl, and one of the models in "The Dressmaker from Paris. Bebe Daniels is the star in this Paramount production which will start within a few days under Clarence Badger's direction.

Tom Miranda, who recently entered the free lance field after his association with Fox Films as editor, has been engaged by that company to edit and title their special feature, "Married Alive." Miranda wrote the titles for "Three Bad Men," soon to be released, "Early to Wed" and "Siberia."

Robert P. Kerr expects to resume shooting the initial sequences in "The Clown," a Fox Films Van Bibber film featuring Earle, in the immediate future. The cast will include Florence Gilbert and Frank Beal.

Norman Kerry, popular leading man, has been given the male lead in support of Lillian Gish in her Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "Annie Laurie." The new film is an original story by Josephine Lovett and will be directed by John S. Robertson.

"The Return of Peter Grimm," the Fox production which has Alec B. Francis in the leading role will shortly go into work under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. The sets have already been completed at Fox Hills, California. The cast thus far selected is made up of John Sainpolis, Roche, Elizabeth Patterson, Mickey McBan, Duane Thompson and Bodil Rosing.

"The Grey Hat," F. Hugh Herbert's adaptation of the French farce purchased a short time ago by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be directed by Robert Z. Leonard with Lew Cody and Joan Crawford the principals in the picture. The screen version was prepared by Ed Kaufman and Philip Klein.

Barbara Luddy has the featured role in "The Lying Tamer," now in production at Fox Films West Coast studio, under the supervision of George E. Marshall. The cast includes Ernie Shields, Harry Woods, Curtis MacHenry and others, Max Gold and Al Davis are directing.

Laura Moon has been added to the writing staff of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to work with Monta Bella on the forthcoming production, "Upstage," Walter de Leon's story of vaudeville life, to star Norma Shearer.

United States Civil Service Examination

The United States Civil Service Commission announces the following open competitive examination: MOTION PICTURE PHOTOGRAPHER AND OPERATOR.

Applications for motion picture photographer and operator must be on file at Washington, D. C., not later than July 10. The date for assembling of competitors will be stated on the admission cards sent applicants after the close of receipt of applications.

The examination is to fill a vacancy in the Bureau of Reclamation, Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., and vacancies occurring in positions requiring similar qualifications. The entrance salary is $1,680 a year. After the probational period required by the civil service act and rules advancement in pay without material change in duties, may be made to higher rates within the pay range for the grade, up to a maximum of $2,040 a year. Promotion to higher grades may be made in accordance with the civil service rules as vacancies occur.

The duties are to operate professional and amateur motion picture projection equipment and to make necessary electrical connections for the operation of such equipment and machines; to assist in the taking of motion and still pictures; to perform photographic laboratory operations, such as copying, enlarging, lantern-slide making, developing and printing of still and motion pictures; to be in responsible charge of the photographic laboratory during the absence of the Editor of Motion Picture Films, whose work requires frequent assignment to field duty. Competitors will be rated on practical questions pertaining to the theory and practice of the photographic art, and their education, training, and experience.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., or the secretary of the Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners at the post office or custom house in any city.

Hiking Contest an Exploitation Ace

115-Mile Event for "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" Thrills Twin Cities

ONE of the most spectacular and successful exploitation stunts ever attempted in the Twin Cities was engineered in connection with the showing of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," at the Capitol Theatre, St. Paul.

In connection with the St. Paul Daily News, the Capitol offered $1,000 in prizes to be given in a hiking contest. The hike was a healthy one, for it was between Rochester, Minn., and St. Paul, a distance of 115 miles. The News offered to transport all contestants to Rochester, to pay the hotel bills of all women contestants, and to provide tents for the men.

Men, women and children to the number of 250 sent in their names, and it looked as if the competition was to become too bulky for any use until an elimination hike was decided upon. The hike was between Stillwater and St. Paul, a distance of 20 miles, and about 50 men and 10 women survived the test.

The real grind started on Wednesday, May 19, and ended on Saturday, May 22. "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," of course, was shown at Rochester, while the town was all worked up over the contest, and was also shown at some of the towns on the route. Hotels gave special rates to the women guests, and a maximum of publicity was achieved at an expense not greatly exceeding that of the prizes.

The hike was made at the rate of about 25 miles per day. Close supervision was kept to see that none of the hikers were given "lifts" along the route, and a Finkelstein & Ruben truck accompanied the contestants.

Motion pictures of the start of the hike were taken in Rochester and rushed to the Twin Cities by airplane for showing at Minneapolis and St. Paul theatres the following day. Major Ray Miller, of the 109th Observation Squadron of the Minnesota National Guard, piloted the plane.

The big Montgomery Ward plant entered two girls in the contest, outfitted them with costumes, had them examined to see that they were physically fitted for the grind, and actually put them into training days before the hike started. The Twin City Rapid Transit Company also had an entrant, as did the Coliseum dance hall and the Rochester pharmacy.

Winnie Winkle Sweaters to Exploit Artclass Films

As an exploitation aid in connection with its Winnie Winkle series of comedies, Artclass Pictures Corporation has arranged for the manufacture and sale of sweaters to exploit the leading characters in these films—Winnie Winkle and Perry Winkle. These sweaters, in colors, with the names of the characters embroidered across the front, are being made by a New York manufacturer. They should have an appeal to followers of Branner's comic strip, from which the series of 12 two-reel comedies are being produced by Weiss Brothers.

As a further sales aid, it is reported a Winnie Winkle cigar band will adorn the perfectos of a popular cigar brand.

Interesting window display material for a tie in with the showing of "The Barrier" (M-G-M) at the America Theatre, Casper, Wyo. Various mineral ores were shown in conjunction with a grocery store's display of "Gold Dust"

Street stunt staged in Newark, N. J., for the showing of Universal's "His People" at Proctor's Theatre there is shown here. The street act, which featured a domestic tilt between the rube and his wife, was staged by Bill Hobson and Helen Lamb

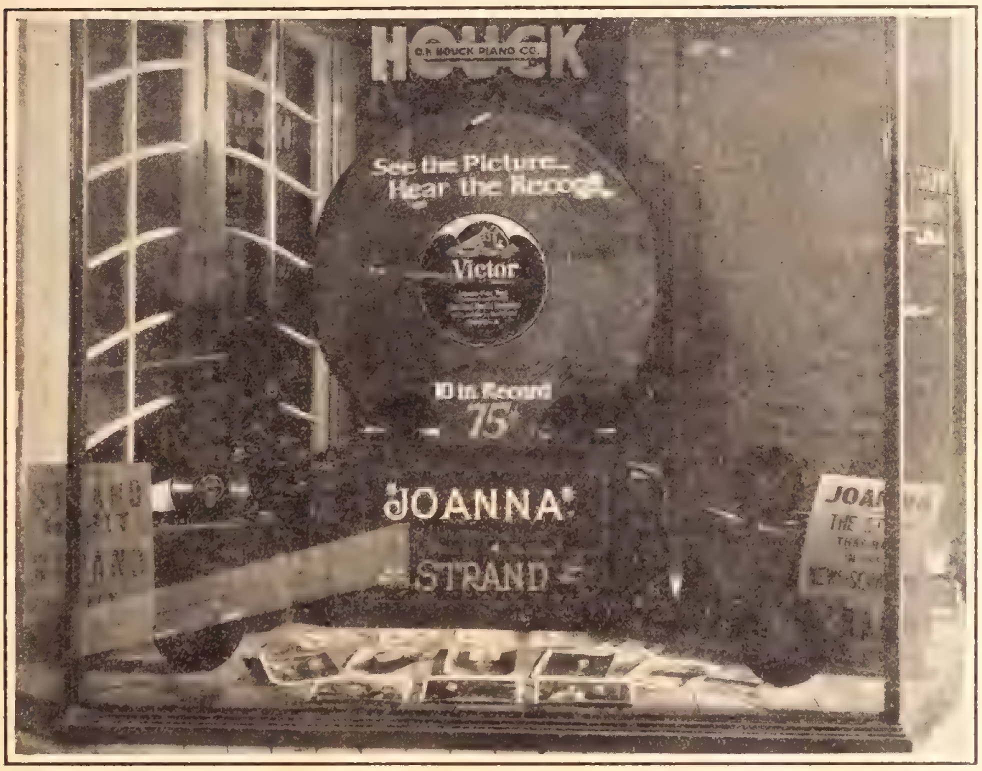
Award Prizes for "Brown Derby" Gags



Music store display working out a tie-up with the Strand Theatre, Memphis. Arranged by Manager W. R. Allen for the showing of "Joanna" (First National)

Heavy Response to Contest Sponsored by Fan Publications

THE "gag" contest conducted for "The Brown Derby" under the sponsorship of Johnny Hines and C. C. Burr, producer of the Hines pictures for First National, has been brought to a close after a period of extraordinary interest on the part of screen fans. The contest was conducted by "Picture-Play Magazine," a fan publication.

It is reported that contributions were sent in from all parts of the United States, Canada, and the Philippine Islands, and that the authors of comedy situations suggested for the comedian's use numbered clergymen, doctors, chauffeurs, teachers, stenographers, druggists, clerks, factory workers, miners, wounded soldiers, and one hundred and one other classes of professional and non-professional people.

The first prize of $250.00 was awarded to Benjamin Levene, Philadelphia, Pa.; the second prize of $100.00 was awarded to Mrs. Lillian Carter, Cleveland, Ohio; the third prize of $50.00 to Edna Buttimer, San Francisco, Cal.; the fourth prize of $25.00 to Stephen Zoltai, Woodside, L. I.; and the fifth prize of $15.00 to C. L. Iverson, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Sketches "Phantom" Actors in Window Display

The campaign for "The Phantom of the Opera" at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, followed, to a large extent, those conducted in other cities throughout the country. One innovation, however, was made by M. A. Mullaney, the theatre's publicity man. He engaged a rapid sketch artist to sit in a store window on Euclid Avenue for several days drawing characters from the picture. People crowded around his window day and night.

Local Band Ties Up With "Johnstown Flood" Show

The local band recently formed in Massillon, Ohio, heartily co-operated with Manager Norkin, of the Grand Theatre there, for exploitation of the showing of "The Johnstown Flood." The organization received a percentage of the receipts in return for their efforts in marching and playing in front of the theatre during performance time. The Massillon "Independent" gave liberal assistance with publicity stories.

Wrecked Car a Ballyhoo for "The Reckless Lady"

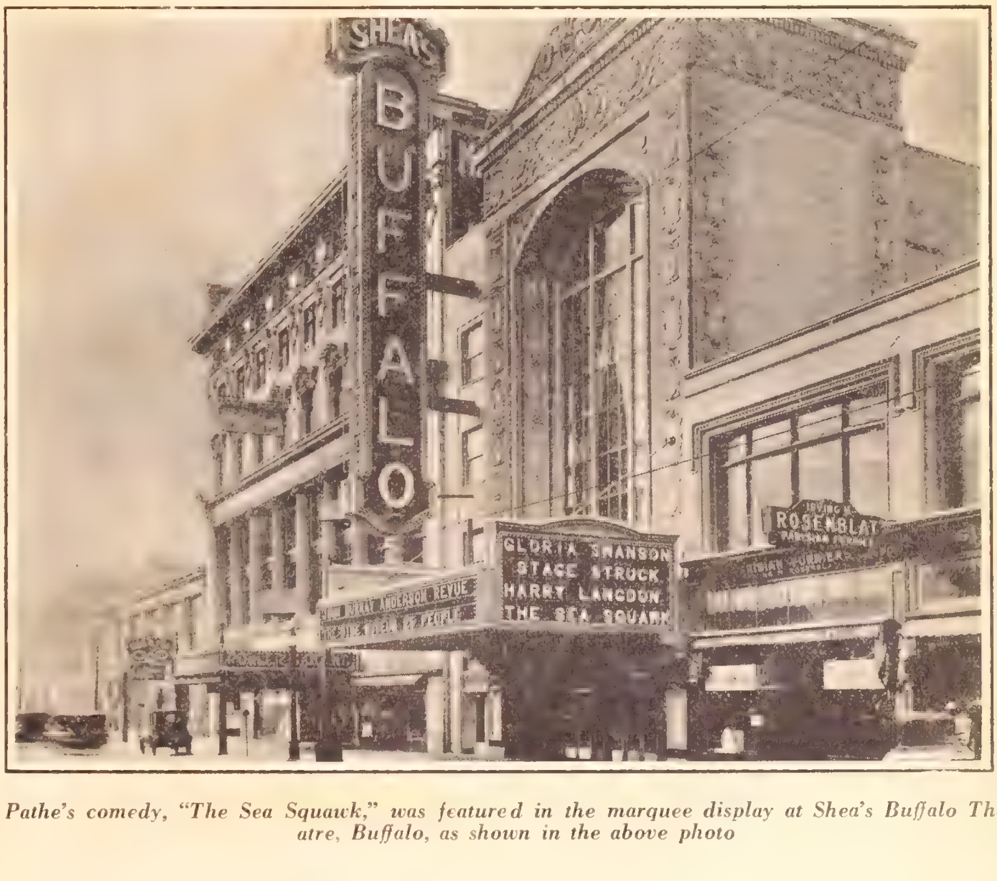
A young woman driving about the streets of Asheville proved a successful ballyhoo for the showing of "The Reckless Lady" at the Plaza Theatre, in that city. The car was liberally bannered with posters giving the title of the picture and play dates. Manager Stelling also used an animated lobby cut-out display, which featured a "winking eye" in the figure of the lady—accomplished with a flasher device.

Marriage License Passes for "Let's Get Married"

Those marrying or celebrating their wedding anniversaries during the three days' showing of "Let's Get Married," at the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, had but to present their marriage license at the theatre to be admitted free to the show.

Masked Girl Distributes "Stella Maris" Bills

A masked girl walked through the streets of Petersburg, Va., distributing calling cards. When the curious, who surrounded her and followed her along the street, read her cards, they found this: "Stella Maris, at Palace Theatre, Petersburg, Va., April 2 and 3."



Pathe's comedy, "The Sea Squawk," was featured in the marquee display at Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, as shown in the above photo

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In the way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up

Sennett "Story Council" Instituted

WHAT is known as the "Story Council" has been established by Mack Sennett at his West Coast studio. The council elaborates upon the preparation of the story for the comedies and comprises the studio staff writers, Arthur Ripley, Vernon Smith, Grover Jones, Phil Whitman, Clarence Hennecke, Harry McCoy, Randall Fay, Earle Rodney, Bob Eddie, and Garrett Graham, all under the supervision of John A. Waldron, general manager.

The council is based on the belief that two heads are better than one and that when an idea is unanimously accepted by the group it will be thoroughly developed. The idea submitted is analyzed carefully and suggestions are made by the various writers to improve the idea and the means of doing so.

Jules White New Director on Fox Comedy Lot

Jules White, brother of Jack White, has been engaged to direct Fox Films Imperial Comedies. "Dizzy Dancers" is the title of his first assignment by George Marshall, Fox comedy supervisor. It was written by Henry Johnson.

Christies Have New Players

Many Unfamiliar Faces Will Be Seen in Company's Educational Releases

THERE will be quite a number of new faces in the comedies which Al Christie will make for the new season to be released through Educational Film Exchanges. Edna Marian, who has been appearing in comedies released through another company, has been engaged to play opposite Neal Burns in the first Christie comedy for the new season.

Charlotte Merriam, who has been appearing mainly in feature pictures during the last two seasons, has been engaged to play the lead opposite Jimmie Adams in his first starring comedy for the 1926-27 release. Also in a comedy part in this picture is Eddie Lambert, stage comedian, who is with the Will Morrissey revue in Los Angeles.

Thelma Daniels, petite blonde dancer, who has been seen locally in Western vaudeville and West Coast Theatres stage presentations, has been signed and is playing the second girl lead with Bobby Vernon and Frances Lee in the first Vernon Comedy.

Adeline McIntyre, who was the Christie winner in a recent Los Angeles Express contest, is playing in two of the new comedies. Miss McIntyre was selected by Al Christie from more than two hundred contestants in a beauty race.

Charles Boyle, a promising juvenile leading man type, has joined the stock company. Betty Byrd, Violet Bird, Collette Mazaletti, Cecile Cameron, Caryl Lincoln, Evelyn Egan and Lillian Mines are appearing in beauty squads being made up for some of the current comedies.

Announcement has already been made of the signing of Anne Cornwall to be featured in several Christie Comedies.

Neely Edwards Returning in Universal Comedies

Neely Edwards has returned to Universal City after an absence of several months to star in a new series of comedies according to announcement from Scott Darling, head of the comedy units at the studio. Edgar Kennedy has been selected to direct the series and expects to star production next week.

Sennett Adds Two Names to List of Fun Makers

Alma Bennett and William Blystone have been signed by Mack Sennett to appear in two-reel comedies for Pathe release, both having been tendered five-year contracts by the producer.

Roach Star Film on Pathe List

Schedule for June 27 Also Offers Another Harold Lloyd Comedy Reissue

A HAL ROACH Star comedy, "Never Too Old," in which Claude Gillingwater appears is a highlight of the Pathe short feature program for the week of June 27, which also offers "Step Lively," another Harold Lloyd single reel reissue, "Jacks-of-one-Trade," a Grantland Rice Sportlight and the concluding chapter of "The Bar-C Mystery."

Supporting Gillingwater in the Roach comedy are Jimmy Finlayson, Vivien Oakland, and Tyler Brooke. Gillingwater, as an old roué with a full-grown son, marries a pretty girl, but complications arise because of the son's attentions to the bride which anger the old man. Richard Wallace directed.

"Step Lively," the single reel Lloyd reissue produced by the Rolin Film Company, relates the troubles of a college boy with expensive tastes and a slender income. Supporting Lloyd are Bebe Daniels and Snub Pollard.

"Songs of Spain" is a new release of the Famous Melody Series, featuring Peggy Shaw and produced by James A. Fitzpatrick. This subject is based upon "In Old Madrid," "Juanita" "Spanish Cavalier" and "La Paloma."

"A Six-Gun Wedding" is the tenth chapter of the Patheserial, "The Bar-C Mystery," starring Dorothy Phillips. In this last chapter Nevada and his friends fight for possession of the mine and win it for Jane. And the episode closes with a wedding of Nevada and Jane.

"Jacks-of-one-trade," a new Grantland Rice Sportlight, shows that the expert in any line of sports has neither the inclination nor the time to devote much energy to other lines. That's why he is an expert.

Pathe Review No. 26 offers: "Asbestos Mining," scenes of the industry at Thetford, Canada "The Jewel of the West Indies," Pathecolor scenes of Havana, the capital of Cuba and "Lords of the Forest," intimate views of the bull moose and his family, released with the co-operation of the American Museum of Natural History.

"A Plumber's Life," is a Paul Terry animated comedy. Topics of the Day No. 26 offers the latest wit from the world press. Two issues of Pathe News complete the short feature schedule.

Christie Bros. Acquire Additional Property

A TWO hundred and forty acre ranch located in the Ventura hills north of Hollywood has been acquired by the Christies for the making of their comedies. This new property is in addition to the forty-acre ranch in Westwood.

Contrary to reports that it would be sold the studio property in Hollywood will be retained. This report was started because of the fact that the Famous Players-Lasky studio which lies on an adjoining block is being abandoned for business purposes following the purchase by that company of the United Studios.

Bright spots in the Educational comedy, "Chase Yourself"

"Felix the Cat Scoots Through Scotland"

(Educational-Cartoon—One Reel)

IN his sojourn among the Scots Felix does not fare so well. The inhabitants of the land of things wee and bonnie assume a cold, distasteful attitude and treat him as a plain, ordinary cat. Felix has a generous heart and a brotherly feeling for all. He aids a Scotchman who is in need of clubs for a free golf tournament by giving away his tail. But the Scotchman proves ungrateful of this generous act and relieves Felix of his nose and uses it as a golf ball. Felix is in a sore plight indeed and in the pursuit of his nose which the unworthy had knocked far and wide he incurs the wrath of another Scot who puts him in a bag with the threat of drowning him. His nose has been restored but this impending disaster causes him to emit despairing and distressing sounds, as only a cat can. But these sounds are sweet indeed to the ears of the judges of a bagpipe contest nearby so they proclaim the irate Scot, who has his hands full handling the bag in which Felix is confined, the winner of the contest, thinking that it is a bagpipe that engrosses his attention. Everything ends happily for all hands.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Snowed In"

(Pathe Serial—Three Episodes)

(Reviewed by Joseph Shea)

THE first three chapters of this serial show more than ordinary care in casting, story, photography and location and it gives every indication of holding the suspense until the last reel. The story concerns the efforts of a band of crooks to rob the airmail and most of the action is laid in the snow-covered Sierras.

Walter Miller, in the role of the Forest Ranger, sets out to solve the series of robberies of mail planes. He finds the center of activities to be a summer hotel, high up in the Sierras and uninhabited during the winter. Here, Allene Ray, sister of one of the mail pilots, who is wrongly accused of stealing government bonds, is held prisoner by the band. Several mysterious shootings occur in front of Room 28 and it is the mysterious occupant of this room the Forest Ranger seeks to capture. The hotel becomes the scene of crime after crime and both the crooks and the rangers settle down to fight it out during the days they all are snowed-in from the outside world. Beautiful photography in the snow-covered wilderness in Northern Idaho adds greatly to the value of this serial, for it is given a setting worthy of the best dramatic production.

THE CAST

Allene Ray, Walter Miller, Frank Austin, Tom London, John Dillon, Natalie Warfield, Charles H. Best, Walter Oettel, Ben Walker, Bert Apling and George Magrill. Directed by Spencer Bennet from the story by Frank Leon Smith.

"The Family Picnic"

(Fox Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS "incident in the married life of Helen and Warren" has fun written all over it. The picture is a sure-fire laugh-getter in any theatre before any audience and it is hereby recommended for a spot on some very choice bill you may be preparing for your patrons. Also if it is booked it should be exploited, because it will stand out as a feature in itself.

The action deals with the domestic difficulties arising in the home of Helen and Warren when their in-laws pay a prolonged visit. Helen's brother is a practical joker, with a bag of tricks which includes everything from fireworks to a miniature "peep show," which blackens the eye of the curious. This part, capitally played by David Butler, provides the character whose sportiveness brings on a series of gags that have novelty and inherent mirth to recommend them. Warren's brother, a dumb-bell, tries to put things over on David. He has good ideas, but they "don't work."

The cast is an exceptional one and every player scores an individual hit. The players are: Hallam Cooley, Kathryn Perry, Arthur Housman, David Butler, Jimsey Boudwin, Grace Goodall, Belva McKay and Mickey McBan. The work was directed by Albert Ray, who adds another clean-cut success to his already impressive string. Andrew Bennison as the scenarist deserves credit and lots of it.

Summary—Exceptionally fine two-reel comedy in the "Helen and Warren" series.

"What a Life"

(Educational—One Reel)

A DOMESTIC comedy, obviously weak, visualizing the frantic efforts of a man to sleep on a Sunday morning undisturbed. The fates conspire and obstacles intervene to leave his wish ungratified. He is disturbed ever and anon with telephones, doorbells, and every manner of clamor and he eventually pulls his hair with desperation. When he finally sinks in blissful, untroubled slumber his little girl dabs his face with the contents of her paint box, thus giving him the appearance of measles. His two aunts, of the loud variety, arrive and proceed to prescribe remedies. Each has a different idea of what's to be done and their poor victim certainly does suffer from their administrations.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Never Too Old"

(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Joseph Shea)

MANY amusing complications are developed with this theme of the perennial lover, his young wife and his equally young and "sappy" son. Claude Gillingwater, is his role of the papa who loves blondes, marries a girl half his age, but forgets to mention his full-grown son. The dashing boy, dressed in kilts, arrives home for the wedding, which seems to be the last quiet and peaceful moment in his father's life.

The wife develops two disturbing habits: she demonstrates her fondness for her newly-acquired son and also walks in her sleep. The majority of the gags are built around this sleep-walking sequence. Whenever in this condition the wife is aroused only by the ringing of a bell and bells are found ringing in all parts of the house, all night.

THE CAST

Claude Gillingwater, Jimmy Finlayson, Vivien Oakland and Tyler Brooke. Directed by Richard Wallace.

Summary—Fairly good comedy, with more than the average number of laughs per reel.

“Snookum's Tooth”

(Universal-Stern—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by M. T. Andrews)

THE Stern Brothers are making a new series of two-reel comedies called "The Newlyweeds and Their Baby." The series are based on the widely read newspaper cartoons by George McManus, adapted and directed by Gus Meins, with Jed Dooley as Mr. Newlywed, Ethlyne Clair as Mrs. Newlywed, and "Sunny" as Snookums. No doubt the series will build a large following among the movie fans, chiefly because of the presence of that precocious, diapered infant, Snookums. Where have the Stern Brothers found this screen prodigy is a mystery but a mystery worth any price. "Sunny," as he is officially cast, plays the elfish youngster with Kewpie hair, a pair of prominent teeth and a roguish grin, and known as Snookums, a calamity personified.

"Snookums' Tooth" is the title of the first number of the series, in which Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed discover that precious gets a new tooth, whereupon they invite the friends to celebrate on the auspicious occasion. In the meantime Snookums disappears and the party breaks up in search for him only to discover the baby snoozing in the very car in which his parents are looking for him. There are plenty of exaggerated absurdities to provide the comedy incident even for a cynic in this number.

THE CAST

Jed Dooley, Ethylne Clair and ‘Sunny."

Summary—Judging from this, the first of the series, these comedies will build a large following among the fans.

“The Cow's Kimono”

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

HERE'S a very fair Glen Tryon two-reeler out of the Roach studios; and slightly better than the average Tryon effort for the simple reason that the star has an excellent supporting cast. The honors really belong to Charlotte Mineau in her impersonation of the wild and wooly gun-girl of the wide-open spaces.

As a result of two years' courtship, Glen and his wife embark in the old reliable comedy flivver—loaded down with their wordly possessions—for a trip through the ranch country. Darkness of night and dangerous roads force them to seek shelter in a nearby ranch-house owned by a father and his formidable-looking daughter. The latter has a playful little habit of pulling out her two guns and frequently indulging in a shooting spree; during which time no one within range is safe. On this particular night, with Glen and his wife established as guests, her shooting complex again manifests itself with the result that the couple are glad to escape after several riotous adventures.

THE CAST

Glen Tryon, Charlotte Mineau, Vivian Oakland, Charles Sellon and Jerry Mandy. Director, Fred Guiol.

Summary—One that will please the average customer.

“Glory or Dollars”

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

IN this subject of the Sportlight, Grantland Rice differentiates between the amateur and the professional value of sports. The major premise is what furnishes the athlete with better incentive to win, and what is the moral influence of each. We see the college football athletes battling for glory of their Alma Mater, then the scene shifts to the professional football game, where the colorful college atmosphere and ardent enthusiasm are missing. A baseball game and swimming are two other subjects which help to illustrate the difference between the amateur and the professional sports. This film will interest young and old alike, especially since it comes at the time when the subject of professional sports is on the front page of every newspaper.—MAURICE ANDREWS.

“The Cat's Whiskers”

(F. B. O.-Bray—One Reel)

THOSE Bray cartoons are certainly striving for high comedy standards, both in drawing technique and entertainment value. Here is one of the Unnatural History numbers which tells us how the cat got its whiskers. A little girl with her pet white kitten is trying to steal out to bed, but her granddaddy reminds her to kiss him a goodnight. This she refuses, resenting his profuse whiskers, so the old man visualizes the following story. Pussy cat is unable to find a sweetheart for himself and wonders why nobody wants him. Suddenly an idea occurs to him that it's the whiskers the ladies like. By means of a hair tonic he provides himself with a pair of bristlers and behold, a haremfull of yearning lips follow him. This is almost hilariously funny cartoon, well drawn and photographed. Directed by Walter Lantz.—MAURICE ANDREWS.

“Step Lively”

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is the latest of the re-issued fun reels in which Bebe Daniels and Snub Pollard appear in support of Harold Lloyd. This is the routine story of the wild college youth who is called home by dad before he is expelled from his Alma Mater. Before arriving home he is bullied by a confidence man of the old school, who forces the young collegian to become a burglar for no good reason. Aided by the villain, heroine, and numerous comedy cops, Lloyd gallops through many comedy situations in his attempt to make good as a novice burglar. This is wild, disjointed comedy, with all the cast dashing from room to room and engaging in a furniture-smashing carnival in the best Lloyd manner. This is just a fair comedy, but it is certain to satisfy all of the Lloyd fans—JOSEPH SHEA.

“Pathe Review No. 25”

(Pathe Magazine—One Reel)

PATHECOLOR series of the American universities are continued in this issue of the magazine; this time, showing several shots of the University of Washington buildings, campus, the 'varsity football team and boat crew; the latter's style having been adopted as the American standard.

Next in line, through courtesy of the Associated Press, the interesting methods employed in the gathering and distribution of news is shown; from the reception of a foreign bulletin to the writing of a head for the story and the appearance of the "extra" on the street.

Another feature of the issue is Vyvyan Donner's poster art in which cut-out pieces of felt are used. An interesting number.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

“Poland—A Nation Reborn”

(Fox—One Reel)

AN interesting addition to the collection of travel pictures offered in the Fox Varieties series. It is a brief and entertaining "easy chair" tour of a picturesque land. With Poland's political and national affairs now occupying a prominent place in world affairs, the picture is particularly timely. But beyond that the reel has to recommend it a pictorial and historical quality which gives it a high place among recent travel pictures.—T. C. KENNEDY.

“A Tale of Two Kitties”

(Educational—One Reel)

FELIX the Cat dons his glad rags and struts out to meet his best girl, but it happens to be very late, eight o'clock daylight saving, and she reminds Felix of the date with Sandman. The disheartened feline leaves in a fury of anger and decides to take a stroll in order to cool off, when a policeman warns him that the curfew rang and that it is time to be home. Right here Felix makes up his mind to shake the dust off his feet and leave this old-fashioned town behind. He betakes himself to the gay White Way, but after enjoying a dinner, he is robbed by the young lady companion. Broken-hearted again, Felix decides that after all there is no place like home. A very diverting cartoon.—M. T. ANDREWS.

Screen Snapshots No. 13

(Columbia Pict.—One Reel)

THIS number of the series, made up of off-stage shots showing what picture stars do in their leisure moments, should prove of interest to fans throughout the country as the series, as a whole, tends to create the impression that the fan is "in the know" as concerns his favorite players. The "Question and Answer" department is a valuable adjunct. The only fault to be found with this particular number is in the sub-titles, which lack punch.

Incorporated in this number are scenes showing the arrival on the Coast of Richard Barthelmess, Hedda Hopper, Buster Keaton and Norma Talmadge and intimate views of Syd Chaplin, Gilda Gray, David Torrence, Charles Ray and a number of equally well known stars. —HAROLD FLAVIN.

“Songs of Spain”

(Pathe—One Reel)

SOME scenes of great beauty are shown in this latest release of the Famous Melody Series featuring Peggy Shaw and produced by James A. Fitzpatrick. The songs in this subject include, "In old Madrid," "Juanita," "Spanish Cavalier," and "La Paloma." The story told by the song is pictured against the background of "Old Madrid." The soldier is called away to war just as he declares his love. He meets death in the conflict and his senorita enters a convent. This subject is treated in an intelligent manner and should be suited to all high-class houses.—JOSEPH SHEA.

“The Land Boom”

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel

ANOTHER of Paul Terry's famous cartoons that has to do with a land boom similar to the one recently experienced by the state of Florida. All the citizens of Fableville avail themselves of whatever kind of transportation is convenient for a race to the choice lots. Old Al has his troubles but manages to reach the scene of action—only to have the back of a whale wished off on him in lieu of a desirable island home site. "A lot on land is worth two in the sea," is the moral of the Fable. It's well up the rest of the series.—EDW. G. JOHNSTON.

“Pathe Review No. 24”

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE Colleano family acrobats are shown in action in the first part of this Review, photographed with the process-camera with the usual combination of slow motion, regular and the reverse photography. A Pathecolor presentation of the luscious fruit crops of Antilles follows, with a dozen varieties or so of palate-tempting specimens. The perilous adventures of the dauntless Alp climbers completes the Review. This number is well up to Pathe Review standard and needs no further recommendation.—MAURICE ANDREWS.

“Jacks-of-One-Trade”

EXPERTS in three branches of sports demonstrate how they reach perfection in this Grantland Rice Sportlight. Three widely different sports are included in this subject. The female champion fancy skater, Miss Loughran, is pictured in training at Lake Placid; Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, the two baseball clowns, are shown preparing new material for their fan public and John Jennings and his sister, society dancers, are shown in training in Miami for their ballroom gymnastics. This reel has fair interest, but has not the pep of previous issues.—JOSEPH SHEA.

Burbridge's African Gorilla Hunt

A Jewel in the Rough

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

Capturing six live specimens of the gorilla tribe is no easy task; fording a river infested with vicious crocodiles and unsociable hippopotami is another venture which must call for courage and good marksmanship with both rifle and camera—the latter particularly if screen patrons are to see reflected on a silver sheet before their comfortable theatre chairs an accurate pictorial record of an expedition into equatorial Africa, a journey a-foot into the darkest and densest of wildernesses where the gorilla makes his home. On the journey into the interior, Mr. Burbridge's camera passed through the country of the pigmies—never before photographed it is said—and cannibal tribes, to say nothing of the lair of the lion, the stamping ground of the elephant.

The picture is a collection of remarkable photographs—and, in its present state, a collection is just what we will have to term this work. After cutting, re-editing and assembling and new titles have exercised their power to give the pictures smoother continuity and interest values, Mr. Burbridge will have an attraction that should compare favorably with the best films that game hunting and exploring in Africa have given us.

SUBJECT: A pictorial record of an expedition into equatorial Africa in search of the gorilla, with scenes covering the journey from the start, through the cannibal country, land of the pigmies and the remote jungles inhabited by the gorilla.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The adventures through the wilderness, infested with vicious beasts. The pigmy tribes and the cannibals. The stalking of the gorilla, capture of young specimens and the attack of the giant male beast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature as a film showing portions of the African jungles never before recorded by the cinema camera, with pictures of a gorilla in his wild state for the first time shown on the screen. Stress value of pictures in showing the portions of Africa visited only by the boldest explorers, and of pigmy tribe filmed for first time.

DRAWING POWER: Properly exploited, with cooperation of educators it may be worked up to draw as a popular attraction.

Bucking the Truth

Entertaining Western will Please Majority

(Reviewed by Maurice Andrews)

Pete Morrison comes to the front again in a particularly refreshing story which shows the popular western star at his best. The action bangs off from the start and rattles along at a merry pace, interspersed with snappy incidents and exciting fistic encounters, the sum total resulting in five reels of genuine entertainment. Although action and intrigue predominate the director managed to inject a sufficient hue of romance and flavor the picture with comedy so that the tense moments are balanced off by elements of relief. The story hinges around the man who is forced to change clothes with a murderer-suspect and through his appearance in incriminated with killing sheriff and cattle rustling. Pete Morrison and his celebrated horse "Lightning" show to great advantage in this speedy Western which is far from being a cut-and-dried affair, and are capably assisted by Ione Reed, the dainty and sympathetic heroine; Bruce Gordon and others. Direction and photography first-chop.

The Cast: Pete Morrison, Brimsley Shaw, Bruce Gordon, Ione Reed, O. Robertson, Vester Pegg, William LaRoche. Author, Jay Inman Kane. Director, Milbourne Morante.

THEME. Western melo. "Slim" Duane is incriminated with murder by changing clothes with a fugitive from justice. With the assistance of a gretty cafe owner he clears himself, discovers the real gang and wins the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The unusually absorbing story and excellent acting by all concerned. The eye-luring outdoor scenery, good quality of camera work, thrilling fights and comedy tricks by "Lightning."

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Pete Morrison as rugged, hard-hitting cowpuncher in a stirring Western. Exploit the title with throwaways, "Are you ready to buck the truth?" see Pete Morrison in, etc.

DRAWING POWER. O.K. as one-day program attraction. Will please the star's followers.

Length, 4,305 feet. Released June, 1926.

Good and Naughty

Negri Has an Entertaining Comedy

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT was Mal St. Clair's turn to direct Pola Negri—seeing as how she has tried most every other director on the Lasky lot. And he has enabled her to give her most sympathetic characterization since she stepped on American soil. Pola, you know, hasn't been blessed with the best stories in the world, but this film version of the light comedy, "Naughty Cinderella," comes in right handy—and shows that the Polish star can be called a first rate comedienne.

The idea develops into a marital mix-up—with everybody having a gay time in a prankish way. The original play was funnier and more senseless. There is considerable more reason for the situations in the film version. The hall-room complications provide the highlights—and the players at all times act like human beings. But the honors do not go to Pola—they go to Ford Sterling. He is a constant delight in his efforts to get in and out of trouble. He has his facial expressions under complete control—a lesson he learned in the Sennett school. It is a first rate comedy, well titled, staged—and sure to provide an amusing hour—even with those who are not sophisticated.

The Cast: Pola Negri, Tom Moore, Ford Sterling, Miss duPont, Stuart Holmes, Marie Mosquini, Warner Richmond. Director, Mal St. Clair.

THEME: Light romantic comedy based upon idea of ugly duckling making herself over when she falls in love with her employer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Scene in office when the employers try to outwit their client. The hall-room complications. The gags put over by Ford Sterling. The incident on the boardwalk. The clever acting. The subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as sure-fire picture for hot weather. Play up Negri as comedienne—and give mention to Ford Sterling and Tom Moore. Play up as bright and breezy comedy of manners.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for first runs and other houses. Title, star and cast should attract them.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, six reels. Released June, 1926.

The Gentle Cyclone

Western Melodramatic Farce. Action, but Poor Story

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

BUCK JONES in the role of a stalwart who loves peace so much that he is ready to fight like fury for it, keeps busy in the five reels of action which make up this latest contribution to the screen's vast store of Western plays, and if the sum total of the entire proceedings seems pointless and thoroughly bla-a, the responsibility for this condition cannot be charged up to him. He has a story that flounders this way and that, dividing its time between melodrama and farce and missing fire consistently in both directions. The story is about a "land feud" between two ranches. Jones enters the tale as a "pacifist who fills hospitals." Each of the warring factions try to retain this "gentle cyclone" in order to subdue the other. The hero is neutral and before he can establish peace in the town, he is forced to lick the whole works, including the sheriff.

The Cast: Buck Jones, Rose Blossom, Will Walling, Reed Howes, Stanton Heck, Grant Withers, Kathleen Myers, Marion Harlan, Oliver Hardy, Jay Hunt. Author, F. W. Buckley. Director, W. S. Van Dyke.

THEME: Western melodramatic farce dealing with the efforts of a young husky who undertakes to force peace upon the two ranchers whose feud keeps the whole town in a constant state of agitation.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The star's performance and his vigorous fights with the ranchers.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: First, of course, the star. Should be sold as a Western action play in which the emphasis is placed on amusement, provided by the satyrical treatment of the familiar plot about a "land feud." The title offers opportunity for teaser advertising. Sell it as a star vehicle, but don't go too strong on it as anything more than that.

DRAWING POWER: While it is not up to the star's standard, his fans can be counted on to respond to it as an attraction and entertainment as well.

Produced and distributed by Fox Film Corporation.
Length, 4,825 feet. Released June 27, 1926.

Regional News from Correspondents

Oklahoma

BENTON ISLEY is opening up a new theatre at Enid, Oklahoma, on June 25th. "The Enid," as the house will be called, seats about 500. Mr. Isley recently sold out his theatre in Chickasha to his son, Phil Isley, of Midwest Film Exchange.

It is rumored that Phil Isley and Sam Clayman are going to open up a theatre at El Reno, Oklahoma.

Claude Ezell, district manager for Warner Brothers, is in town this week-end. Mr. Ezell formerly held this position for Associated Exhibitors.

Hershel Gilliam has closed his theatre at Oscar, Oklahoma, and is said to be opening one in Scott City.

Ed Grews, who has the Empress Theatre at Waurika, is putting a western house at Waurika. The new theatre will seat 300 and will be in addition to his present theatre.

The Palace Theatre at Oklahoma City is closed for remodeling.

New York and New Jersey

WHILE no particulars of the deal have been verified by Motion Picture News, the report has been given out that Walter Reade, one of New Jersey's leading exhibitors, has sold his interests in eight theatres situated in the Southern part of the State. Charles Bryant, former general manager of the Reade circuit is named as the buyer. Houses reported in the transfer are: The Strand and Broadway at Long Branch, and the St. James, Savoy, Lyric, Reade, Rivoli and a new house, at present under construction, all the latter named being in Asbury Park.

Several prominent New Jersey exhibitors have moved to their summer homes at the advent of warm weather.

Fred Mertens has opened his house at Ocean Grove and S. H. Fabian has moved to his summer quarters at Bradley Beach. Chas. Dooley, general manager for the Fabian circuit, is another one to seek the seashore; he being particularly partial to the brand of breezes down at Avon-by-the-Sea.

Although during the summer months there is a slight falling off of attendance on the part of some of our well known exhibitors from New Jersey, a few of them managed to make the grade on Tuesday of this week. Henry Haring, of Haring and Blumenthal, golf enthusiast and also in training for the lightweight championship, was seen along the well known curb; likewise, was Harry Hecht and his famous "Four Horsemen"—and by the way, the "eleven" is fast rounding into shape—for it is announced that it will be augmented by two more players. One of them is the younger son of Mr. Hecht's—a young broncho of six years, and the other none but Harold Lloyd Hecht who was named after the famous comedian.

Charles Stombaugh, genial manager of the Newark Pathe Branch, is no longer a bachelor—Mrs. Stombaugh having returned from her vacation to stoke up the home fires. (We have this information direct from Phil Meyer and Andy Sautelle.)

And by the way, Phil Meyer, of Associated Exhibitors, after scanning the scores made at the late golf tournament, has been seen shopping around local sporting stores in search of the necessary accoutrement. Mr. Meyer will be ready for the fall battle.

Staff and sales force of the New York and New Jersey branches of Producers Distributing Corp. in the "Regional" sales convention held last week. Left to right the background are: J. Sobel, Chas. Kenneth, R. S. Wolff, David Gross (Manager), F. L. Drumm (N. Y. Dist. Manager), Geo. Dillon (Eastern Dist. Manager), S. Trauner and J. Felder. In the foreground: Bernard Kleid, H. Levy, F. Laurie, M. Solomon and " Senator" Sholtz

Harry Harris, who recently acquired several theatres on the upper West Side of New York, made his weekly pilgrimage to the local exchanges. Occasionally, when on a particularly important shopping tour, this well known exhibitor has been known to prepare a special make-up, that of a four or five days' growth of beard; which, it is believed, is either calculated to excite sympathy, or to create a fierce, warlike expression.

The usual amount of theatre closings for the summer season for this time of the year are reported: The Huntington, 284 Hamilton Avenue; The Willis, Bronx, N. Y. City, and The Alhambra Photoplay, 5th and Warren Streets, Brooklyn.

Those houses opening for the summer and those which have gone on a three-day-a-week schedule, are as follows: The Livonia Theatre, 400 Livonia Avenue, three a week; likewise, the Review, New Lots, Sheffield and Miller Theatres—all of them located in Brooklyn. Summer openings include the Park Theatre, Cropsey Avenue, Bath Beach, Brooklyn, and the Cleveland Airdome, 2386 Pitkin Avenue, Brooklyn.

The Park Theatre, Bath Beach, is under new management this season. M. Forman, who has a house on the East Side of New York City, is in charge.

The Alhambra Photoplay at 5th and Warren Streets, Brooklyn, will also have a new lessee when it reopens.

In downtown Brooklyn, near the Bridge, is a new 900-seat house on the way toward completion. It is expected to open about September 1, and will be under the management of the old owner of the Greenwich Theatre, Greenwich Street, New York City.

It is reported that Harry Lewis has resigned from his post as manager of the National Theatre, Brooklyn.

Al Moley, of Prudential Film Delivery, and a close friend of our own John McGraw, Giant manager, gives out the encouraging news that the local team has stopped its downward trend in the percentage column. More inside information is that the team will win 15 or 20 games in a row; and that advised by Al, McGraw has several trades about to break. Prior to this, Mr. Moley was thinking seriously of changing his residence to the other side of the Bridge.

Following the boom given to athletics in the motion picture industry through a successful bowling season and a big send-off for the Motion Picture Baseball League, representatives from ten of the large film concerns will launch the Motion Picture Athletic Association.

The nucleus of officers probably will be taken from the Baseball League. The prime mover in the above branches of sport has been W. S. McIlvain, who is president of both these units. Mr. McIlvain has had in view for some time the formation of a general athletic federation for bringing together the employees of big producing and distributing units in friendly competition on the fields of sport.

The seven companies represented in the Baseball League are: Warner Brothers, First National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox Films, Universal, Pathe and First National will be included, while Producers Distributing Corp., United Artists and F. B. O. will likely enter the sport organization. Various forms of athletics will be engaged in—basketball, swimming, tennis, golf, billiards, skating, track, etc. A branch of the association to take in tennis teams from each company will be formed at once.

One of the high executives of each concern will comprise an advisory board, to which officials of the association will report for guidance and counsel.

The first general meeting will be held Monday night at the offices of Famous Players.

Famous Players and Fox Films have long taken an interest in athletics through their active social clubs and of late their ideas are gaining favor with other companies. Alan E. Freedman, manager of the laboratory for Fox Films, has come forward with many valuable suggestions for the formation of the general athletic club.

Another new salesman has been added to the force of Red Seal Pictures in the Metropolitan District. He is Monroe Schram, and he starts off with the usual pep and intentions which are so evident in salesmen handling this well known product. Schram will handle the Brooklyn District.

Canada

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by Canadian Universal Films of the appointment of C. A. Schaufele as general manager of the Universal Theatres at Winnipeg, Manitoba, these comprising the Lyceum, Starland and College Theatres. Mr. Schaufele has taken charge of the houses in succession to Charles A. Meade who has gone to New York City after a stay of three years in Winnipeg.

Mr. and Mrs. Meade were guests of honor at a dinner-dance in the Nankin Gardens prior to their departrure when Mr. Meade was presented with a silver cigar case and Mrs. Meade with a huge bouquet of American Beauty roses. W. Crosbie, manager of the Starland Theatre, was the chairman. Others who took part included Archie Cameron of the College and Mr. Schaufele. The staffs of the three theatres and their friends were present.

Exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, co-operated with the civic authorities in preparations for the Ottawa Centenary, which is to be celebrated shortly. A request was made by the city that all premises be painted, decorated and otherwise cleaned up so that the whole community would be in order for the home-coming visitors expected.

Quite a number of the local theatres have been done over. Donat Paquin has renovated the Francais Theatre, inside and out; Herbert C. Benson has given the Fern Theatre a thorough painting; Manager James T. Moxley has made the Imperial Theatre look like a new place; Manager J. M. Franklin of B. F. Keith's Theatre, has had the big house retouched where needed and improvements are noted at the Centre Theatre where Manager Don Stapleton is in charge. Manager Leonard Bishop is also arranging for structural improvements at the Ottawa Regent. The exhibitors have really spent quite a bit of money to put the theatres in first-class shape.

J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, has again been elected a director of the Ottawa Humane Society, an organization in which he takes a very active interest as a community booster. Mr. Franklin has also been made a committee chairman of the Ottawa Rotary Club for the new term.

The Capitol Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, has closed for the summer and Ray Tubman, manager of the house, has gone to Ottawa, his home, where he is temporarily relieving Manager L. C. Bishop of the Regent Theatre, who is on vacation in New York. Ray Tubman is a former noted athlete and football star of Ottawa and is known in Calgary, Sault Ste. Marie and other Canadian cities where he has managed theatres in the past.

Burglars ransacked the office of the Francais Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, Saturday night after the house had been closed. Considerable damage was done but Donat Paquin, proprietor, reported that nothing had been stolen.

The third prize winner at the recent Galveston, Texas, beauty competition was Miss Patricia O'Shea of Winnipeg, Manitoba, who was chosen to represent Canada at the bathing girl show in a local contest at the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, under the auspices of H. M. Thomas, Western Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp. Mr. Thomas put on a week's contest at the Capitol, used full-page display announcements in the Winnipeg newspapers and cleared big receipts.

The head office of Famous Players Canadian Corp., on the 12th floor of the Royal Bank Building, Toronto, has again developed growing pains and structural expansion has been carried out to provide more office space. The company occupies the whole floor of the big building. Nearly 100 theatres across Canada are directed from these headquarters.

Toronto, Ontario, exhibitors who attended the M. P. T. O. A. convention in Los Angeles, Calif., included J. C. Brady, proprietor of the Maidson Theatre and president of the Ontario Division of the M. P. T. O. A.; Harry Alexander, Park Theatre; Sam Bloom, Danforth, Christie and Mavety Theatres; Mrs. Bloom, Academy Theatre; A. Pollokoff, Kinswood Theatre, and George Lester, King Theatre.

J. B. Barron, manager of the Palace Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, has returned home after an extensive tour to various Eastern amusement centres where he studied moving picture presentation. The cities visited included Minneapolis, Chicago, New York, Montreal and Toronto. He was accompanied by Mrs. Barron and W. W. Grant.

Seattle

ALEXANDER PANTAGES, head of the vaudeville and motion picture circuit that bears his name, paid his first visit to this city last week in several seasons, and spent several days here in conference with the local representatives of his organization. Albany

THE Film Board of Trade of Albany will hold its second annual outing on Monday, July 26, according to an announcement made this week by Jack Krause, chairman of the entertainment committee. The affair will again be held at White Sulphur Springs on Saratoga Lake.

The new theatre in this city being erected by Strand interests, will be known as "The Mark Ritz," that name having been selected from among several thousand names submitted to Moe Mark and Walter Hayes. The name was submitted by a young woman in Albany, who has received a $50 check, from the Strand company.

Cupid has been cutting up capers along Albany's Film Row, with the result that Vincent Fisher, booker at the Fox exchange, and Miss Dorothy Cook, were married during the past week. They left on a motor trip to Montreal and other places. James Tunny, shipper at the Universal exchange, and Miss Irene Erwin, formerly connected with the Pathe exchange, are to be marrid on July 1. Miss Margaret Alvaney, of the Pro-Dis-Co exchange flashed a diamond the past week, but went no further than to say that the lucky man was "Charles."

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange here, appeared last week with neckties just brought back by his brother from Paris, and which were the cynosure of all eyes among his associates.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, was in New York city during the week. Myer Schine, of Gloversville, was also in New York, and attended the Stribing-Berlenbach fight.

Charles Leger, of New York city, will operate the Casino at Loon Lake, this summer, and is doing his booking by mail at the present time.

The Men's Club at Chadwicks, was damaged by fire last week, and will not be in shape for the showing of pictures to the community, until next fall.

George Coffee, of Clayville, is now running features shortly after they are shown in Utica, and making a big play for patronage from the countryside.

Whitney, Young and Pierce, of Ilion, are doing so well this summer, that they will not close down their main theatre at all.

Chris Buckley, of the Leland, is fortifying himself for the coming fight for patronage with the Mark Ritz and was in New York city last week, doing much booking.

Bob Landry, of Ogdensburg, took a few days off last week and attended the horse races at Ormiston, Canada.

Drought and Goodemote, of Broadalbin, are said to be negotiating for the sale of their theatre.

Charles Sesonske will make his headquarters in Watertown from now on, and plans to establish a chain of motion picture theatres throughout northern New York. He recently sold his theatre in Johnstown. Theatres will either be built or blocks remodeled to suit the purpose for which Mr. Sesonske intends to put them.

Walter Suckno has taken up his residence in Hudson, where he is managing two theatres. He spends his week-ends at his home in Albany.

Harry Lazarus is meeting with much success in the sale of stock for a theatre which he will erect in Kingston in the near future. It is said that there remains but a very small block.

M. F. Tubbs, who has theatres in Oakhill, East Durham and other places patronized by summer tourists, is getting things in shape to open.

There is one exhibitor in the Catskill region who is not worrying over the summer season. He is Clark Sanford, from Margaretsville, who owns a newspaper as well as an automobile agency.

Rae Candee, of Utica, is back from a trout fishing trip in the Adirondacks, and reported excellent luck.

Fred Kavanaugh, who formerly ran a theatre in Waterford, is now considering the advisability of opening a theatre this summer in Lake George village.

Louis Schine and Pete Dana, of Gloversville, were in town during the week.

Harry Seed, manager for Warner Brothers, was in Buffalo last week, conferring with Walter Hayes.

Visitors along Film Row during the week included Julius Byck, of Tannersville, and Neal Hopper, of Haines Falls, who is now operating Mr. Byck's former theatre in that place.

John Spargo, of Ellenville, is reported to be negotiating for the Strand in Philmont, which is owned by Hoctor and Herbes.

William Van Alstyne, of Fonda, whose theatre was burned to the ground last winter, is planning to remodel a block and open another house in the near future.

Sam Hochstim is planning to remodel the Star at Hudson.

J. J. Connors, salesman for F. B. O. in this city, was on a trip last week, that included many of the central New York cities and villages.

Peggy Baker, cashier at the Barcli in Schenectady, is at the Albany hospital recovering from injuries received in an automobile accident a few days ago.

James Roach, manager of Farash Theatres in Schenectady, brought three Indians from the Onondaga reservation to town last week, in exploiting a picture.

Theatres in Schenectady are running their second show at a later hour this week, on account of the opening of the Great Western Gateway.

W. W. Farley, of Albany, attended a meeting of the Democratic State committee in New York city, during the week.

Claude Fish, owner of the American in Schenectady, did not attend the State Elks' Convention in Syracuse, last week, to which he was a delegate, due to the fact that he was so tired when he returned home from the Shriners' convention in Philadelphia, that he could hardly move.

Guy Graves, who is connected with the Farash circuit, is now devoting his attention to theatres which the company operates in Yonkers.

Joseph Saperstein, manager of Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany, was named as a director in the Y. M. H. A., of Albany, last week.

Morris Silverman is planning to paint the Happy Hour, in Schenectady.

The Crescent Amusement Company, of Schenectady, operating the Crescent theatre, is said to be on the lookout for another house.

St. Louis

A SLIGHT fire on the roof of the Rivoli Theatre, 210 North Sixth Street, St. Louis, Mo., at 1:30 p. m., on June 10, provided some excitement for passersby but did not interrupt the motion picture show. Although some smoke penetrated into the first floor the patrons kept their seats. An occupant of a nearby office building tossed a cigarette butt onto the roof, causing the fire.

Fred Greenburg of the Rivoli Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., has taken bids on the new theatre he plans to erect at Illinois and Gordon Streets, St. Joseph. The theatre, of brick, stone and steel construction, will be one-story and cover a site 65 by 120. It will cost about $35,000.

The Rex Theatre, 15th and Main Streets, Joplin, Mo., is to be enlarged 200 seats at a cost of about $5.000. G. E. Shilkett, 14,124 Pennsylvania Avenue, Joplin, owns the property. The work has started.

Walter R. Nelson, Shrine Building, Memphis, Tenn., is preparing plans for a new theatre to be erected in Booneville, Miss., at a cost of about $25.000. It will be one-story, 45 by 100 feet, with built-up roof, concrete floors, plate glass front and brick exterior walls. Local interests are said to be behind the house.

Bids have been taken on the $100,000 Civic Center Theatre which will adjoin the Pinehurst Hotel in Laurel, Miss. The Strand Amusement Company, headed by Charles Green, Ben Schneider and Sank Taylor, is the owner. The house will be two-story, 45 by 120, and will be equipped with modern pipe organ, typhoon air-cooling system, steel projection house. It will seat about 1,500 persons on the main floor, loge boxes and balcony.

The Okaw Theatre, Findlay, Ill., will be closed during July and August.

The Regent Theatre Building, Dongola, Ill., has been sold and the equipment of the house is being placed in storage.

Lawrence Bosman, First National salesman, states that Mokane, Mo., is going to have a new theatre which will be modern and very much larger than the present house. The town is also getting a new factory which will employ 100 men.

The St. Louis Film Board of Trade members are conducting an active fire prevention campaign.

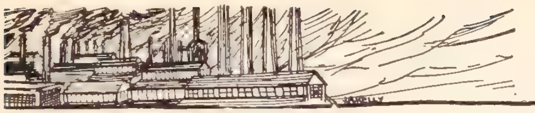
Harry Weiss, president of the Board, accompanied by Captain Gorman, of the St. Louis United Salvage Corp., which is maintained by the Board of Fire Insurance Underwriters, addressed employes of the Pathe Associated Exhibitors, Producers Distributing Corporation and Jack Weil exchanges. About twenty minutes were spent in each exchange. The employes were then permitted to ask Captain Gorman any question regarding the elimination of fire hazards. Fire alarm box locations were also explained to them, etc. During the campaign each exchange will be given the benefit of expert advice on fire prevention. The St. Louis Film Row has had a very low fire loss ratio and it is planned to maintain this excellent record.

Poor business is forcing the theatre at Chesterfield, Ill., to suspend operations.

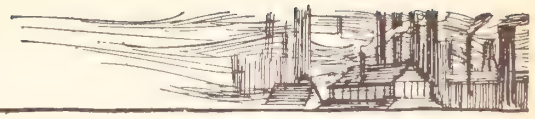
Leo Bernstein motored in from Springfield, Ill.

Lou Hess, former manager of the local Universal exchange, is in town on business for the home office. He expects to spend a few weeks here when he will move along to another exchange.

Jack Osserman, former manager of Universal's exchange at Washington, D. C., but more recently in charge of the Associated Exhibitors in Des Moines, has succeeded Nat Steinberg as manager for Associated Exhibitors.



Central Penn



A PROGRAM of extensive improvements to the Strand motion picture theatre, Carlisle, has begun and will include the installation of a fine organ, new seats, and a new swinging door between the lobby and the theatre proper. The work of installing the organ will be started early in July, at which time the galleries will be changed at the stage ends to provide more room for additional seats. Masonry work on the east wall is now being done preparatory to installing the organ.

Several Central Pennsylvania theatres were visited by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin E. Mix, aged parents of Tom Mix, during a vacation trip they took from their home in Dubois, Pa., to visit the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition. They stopped in Lancaster to visit their grandson, John O. Yoder, on June 8, and on the following day were in Harrisburg as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Rife, friends of the family. Later they went to Mechanicsburg to visit Mr. and Mrs. A. Grant Seyler, the latter being a grandniece of Mr. and Mrs. Mix. In each of the cities they visited, Mr. and Mrs. Mix went to a theatre to see a Tom Mix picture. When they visited the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, Charles J. Jones, the manager, invited them to the stage where an informal reception was held in their honor.

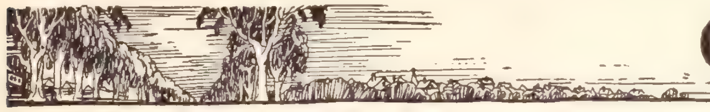
During the summer months the program at the Capitol Theatre, Lancaster, will be devoted more to pictures and less to vaudeville than during the winter. Mr. and Mrs. George M. Krupa, the owners, have announced there will be one feature picture and one vaudeville act at each performance. Heretofore the program consisted of four vaudeville acts and one film picture.

Peter Magaro, of Harrisburg, former member of the executive committee-at-large of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has recovered from his recent severe illness that kept him confined to his home for six weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Esterly, of Reading, the latter being the daughter of Dr. H. J. Schad, former president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, have gone on a honeymoon trip to California, their wedding having taken place in May.

Harrisburg's City Council has ruled that no theatres or other commercial enterprises will be allowed to use "billboard space" in Market Square, the business center of the city. This decision was reached following a number of requests to place advertising matter in the Square as the result of the recent appearance there of a temporary billboard advertising the Community Welfare Campaign to raise funds for local charities.

E. R. Moore, who manages the Orpheum Theatre and the York Opera House, York, accompanied by Mrs. Moore, left on a vacation trip in May to Oneonta, N. Y., where he formerly managed a theatre. They planned to visit also several resorts in the Catskills.



Cleveland

GEORGE W. ERDMAN, manager of the Cleveland P. D. C. exchange is at Glenville Hospital recovering from an operation.

Mrs. Georgia Moffett, secretary of the Film Board of Trade, was in New York last week to attend a conference with C. C. Pettijohn.

J. S. Jossey, president of Progress Pictures, has returned to Cleveland after a four weeks' visit in Georgia, where he was successful in regaining his health.

A Tiffany exchange is in process of being opened in Cleveland. M. H. Greenwald, central division manager for the company, has been in town during the past week, securing a location and a local exchange manager. Nothing definite has been concluded as yet. However, the exchange will be located in the Film Exchange Building, of course.

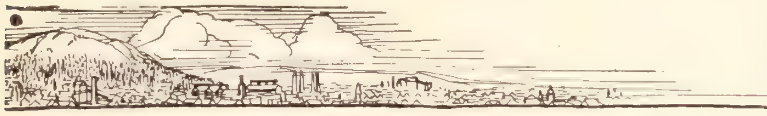
M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington circuit, has set himself the task of building a theatre a year. Last Friday he closed a contract for his new 1926-27 house. It is to be a new 1,250-seat theatre and office building and will be located within 400 feet of the Virginia Theatre, which belongs to the Washington circuit. The Virginia will be remodelled into stores and offices when the new house is completed, which will be as near February 1st as possible.

Jack Greenbaum, well known as a theatre owner and manager, has returned to town after a winter in Florida. Greenbaum is now pushing a proposition for a first-run house in Mansfield.

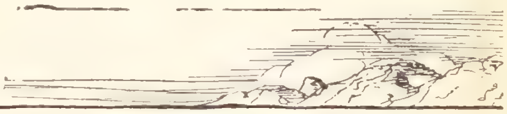
Norman Moray, manager of the Cleveland Warner Brothers' exchange, has installed a new customers' service and booking record which has been so successful as a time saver, that the plan has been adopted nationally by the Warner organization. The system guarantees to save fifty per cent. of the booker's time and seventy-five per cent. of the biller's time over the old method.

Judge Foster, prominent theatre owner of Marion, is a cautious exhibitor. He buys pictures with circumspection, and usually one at a time. Occasionally he has bought parts of blocks, but never has he bought an entire block of pictures of any kind until last week.

Leo Devaney, Universal assistant general sales manager, was a local visitor last week.



Butte



MILES CITY is to have a new theatre if the rumor is a correct one. W. G. Hyde, Manager of the Liberty Theatre, and H. W. Knutson, Manager of the Strand Theatre of Miles City, have decided to unite forces and build a modern structure that will compare favorably with the classiest playhouses of the Northwest.

Eugene O'Keefe and Mrs. O'Keefe are touring a number of theatrical centers on the Pacific coast studying the various types of theatre structures in view of building a $120,000 theatre in the heart of Billings.

E. Powell White, exhibitor of the Strand Theatre at Livingston, attended the M. P. T. O. A., convention at Los Angeles the past week.

Harry Sigmond, General Manager of the Tax Free Bureau of New York City, passed through Butte on May 26, and stopped over in Butte between trains on his way to Pacific coast cities. He was met by a delegation of old friends and associates here, where he served Associated First National as Manager of the Exchange.

F. A. Boedecker, president of the State M. P. T. O. A., who owns the Ellen Theatre at Bozeman, has returned from Los Angeles, where he attended the convention.

The Silver Bow Amusement company has closed its American theatre. This is in line with the usual policy of the company for the summer months. Last summer the American was closed for the season and during the time was redecorated and this summer there is a persistent rumor that North Coast Theatres will come to the rescue and enlarge the stage and again open the theatre.

Manager W. M. Hughardt is in Billings and vicinity in the interest of the new Pathe product.

R. D. Boomer, former manager of Associated Exhibitors, has resigned to take a position with the Fox corporation. He is in Montana at present with the Fox manager from Salt Lake City.

Des Moines

V. E. TORNQUIST, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch, is assuming management during the summer months of the Star Theatre at Mitchelville for Galloway and Schwartz, who will take active command about Sept. 1st. Some of the recent visitors in Movie Row recently were P. F. Fadden, of the Masonic Theatre at What Cheer, Iowa, Walter Carroll, of the Star Theatre at Colfax, and F. P. Hagaman, of the Palace Theatre at Waverly.

L. C. Friedman, who has been assistant manager of the Parrot Films Co. for the past six years, left for the Pacific coast to open a branch office.

Bob Gorham is the new office manager of the Educational Film Exchange of Iowa. He succeeds Galloway, who is now on the road. Gorham comes from Omaha, where he was associated with First National and United Artists.

The Exhibitors Supply Co. made the following sales to Iowa Exhibitors recently. A Blizzard fan to the People's Theatre at Redfield. Two Mazda units to the Eastern Iowa Theatre Co. at Anamosa. Two Peerless lamps to the Orpheum Theatre at Webster City. One machine to the Community Club at Hanlantown. Also some spotlights to the East Des Moines High School.

The Lyric Theatre, Wadesboro, N. C., has been dismantled and the equipment sold to Dr. Hutchinson, for his new theatre in Bladenboro, N. C., according to report.

The Ideal Theatre, at Gastonia, N. C., owned by J. E. Simpson, suffered a severe loss by fire which destroyed his booth and several reels of film.

Al Barber, formerly with the Piedmont Amusement Company, in Winston-Salem, N. C., has assumed the management of the Ideal Theatre, owned by B. F. Southern, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

A. C. Peeler, of the Victory Theatre, Mooresville, N. C., spent a day in Charlotte the past week.

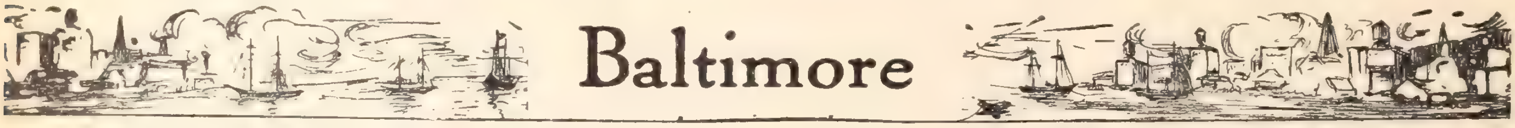
B. F. Southern, of the Ideal Theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., was along Film Row the past week arranging his bookings.

W. F. Lenehan, of Producers & Distributors, has just returned from New York, where he underwent an operation.

A. B. Cheatham, sales manager for Arthur C. Bromberg attractions, arrived in Charlotte the past week and will be located at the Progress Pictures Corporation office for several weeks.

J. W. Griffin, of the Pastime, Lumberton, N. C., will close his theatre on June 15th to make extensive repairs and renovate the entire theatre.

Baltimore



JOHN BETHEL has left Philadelphia and has arrived in Washington, D. C., to manage the Trio Exchange there, succeeding J. D. Young. Sol Korson, also from Quaker City, is salesman for that company.

Fred Kline is covering the Baltimore territory for Producers Distributing Corporation now. He was with Universal. A. A. Moore has gone with Universal.

The Maryland territory is being covered for Educational Films, by E. M. Ooghe.

The Embassy Theatre, 415 East Baltimore Street, which was opened to the public Monday, March 1, by the Independent Theatres Corporation, Philadelphia, Louis Berman, president, closed Saturday night, June 5, for the summer and will reopen during the latter part of August according to the plans of Mr. Berman.

Since it opened three managers have been in charge. H. D. Cheery, who was there at the closing, will return to Philadelphia and expects to return to Baltimore in the fall, to manage the house.

The City Park Orchestra, which has taken the place of the City Park Band in Baltimore, is being directed this year by Bob Iula, brother of Felice S. Iula, director of music at the Rivoli Theatre here.

Mrs. Bernard Depkin, Jr., wife of the manager of the Warner's Metropolitan Theatre here, is recovering from an illness. She has left the hospital and is now at their home in Guilford.

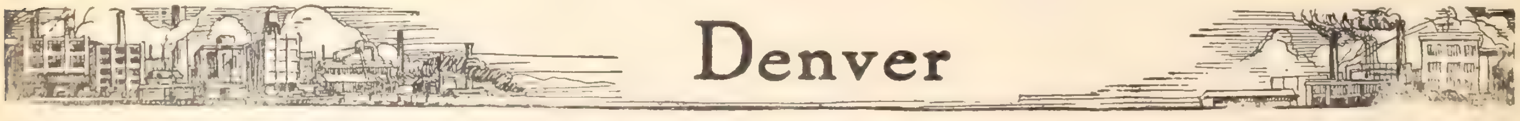
Miss Mary Nash, formerly at the Missouri Theatre in St. Louis, has come to Baltimore and is employed as phone exchange manager at the Century.

Miss Vernie Hanlan has succeeded Miss Anna Sweeny as secretary to Herschel Stuart, managing director for the Loew Interests of the Century and Parkway Theatres. Miss Sweeny resigned due to her health.

Mrs. H. A. Brown, formerly bookkeeper at the Century, has been transferred to the New Theatre in the same capacity.

Harry Van Hoven, well-known publicist, who has been handling the work for the Century, Parkway, New and Garden Theatres, will continue his work for the Whitehurst Interests, which now control the New and Garden.

Denver



WALTER LEAGUE, formerly manager of the Criterion and Rivoli Theatres in New York, has been appointed resident manager of the Rialto and Victory houses of Denver, to succeed J. A. Haas, who has been transferred to the Capitol Theatre of Little Rock, Ark. The change is effective at once. League has assumed his new duties at the Denver Publix houses and Haas has departed for Little Rock. Many changes in the operation of the two Denver houses have been promised by the new manager, the first being the remodeling of the entrances of both theatres. He will also enlarge the stage in each house, making them adaptable for more elaborate presentations.

A new theatre for Cheyenne is now a certainty. It will be a 1,200 seat theatre and will be ready for opening about October 15th of this year. The new amusement house is being built by the Plains Theatre Co., an organization with the backing of Harry Nolan of Denver, Max Kravetz of Ft. Collins, and a prominent Wyoming business man. Construction on the new theatre will start immediately. All Cheyenne houses, the Princess, Atlas, and the Capitol, are at present controlled by the Carl Ray Amusement Company which for years has controlled the situation in Cheyenne. The general belief is that opposition will cause finer and better entertainment in all houses. The public of Cheyenne is therefore welcoming a new amusement house.

Miss Florence Ward, manager of the Midwest Theatre of Midwest, Wyo., arrived in Denver last Monday en route to Kansas City for a month's vacation. Miss Ward's theatre is in the heart of the Wyoming oil fields, in fact, the oil derricks are so thick around her that a producing well is located within twenty feet of the theatre. The theatre is owned and controlled by the Midwest Refining Co.

C. A. Mulock, owner and manager of the Iris Theatre, Thermopolis, Wyo., has arrived in Denver to transact some very important business with exchanges.

Improve Patronage with Improved Programs

Showmanship Ideas and Simple House Renovations That Made Business Outgrow the Theatre

THE showmanship policy of "giving them something new if they don't patronize the existing type of show" was applied to the Grand Theatre in Hazleton, Pa., several months ago with the result that within a comparatively short time the Grand was transformed from a losing proposition to a money-maker.

The Grand is a 900-seat house, owned by the Comerford Amusement Co., operating a large chain in Pennsylvania and New York. After a period of depression during which the 900 seats were more than enough to care for the patronage attracted to the Grand, the Comerford officials decided to find out what the Hazleton citizenry wanted. The company knew—the books told them that—what the public did not want. It was certain the people did not like the type of shows being offered at the Grand. This public, like every public, refused to say what it did want, but told by its absence from the show, what it didn't want. "Try something new there" was the order of the company officials—an order which was carried out by bringing in a new manager from another field.

William E. Schmidt, formerly connected with the B. & K. Midwest theatres in Illinois, was engaged to install a new type of program, new service ideas and new methods of conducting a theatre. He went at the work with a will and his policies triumphed to the extent that now the Grand's 900 seats are insufficient to care for the volume of business drawn to the house. And the Grand is now charging five cents more per ticket.

An account of the changes made by Schmidt tell the story of how completely and thoroughly the program of "offering them something new" was carried out at the Grand.

To begin with the front of the house was repainted in a novel way. A window trimmer and show-card man was trained in the work of making pictorial layouts for lobby posters and decorations. The interior of the house was given an entirely new and fresh appearance by seemingly trifling changes here and there. Bits of drapery were added to liven the decorative effect and give an artistic touch. The organ was overhauled to make it more flexible for solo work and an iron pipe railing around the orchestra pit was supplanted by a wooden railing painted to harmonize with the general scheme of the house. In addition to this, the orchestra pit was equipped with a director's stand.

The service of the house was overhauled. Schmidt organized a new staff of ushers, dressed them in new uniforms and drilled them in the courtesies due the public and trained them to efficiently perform their work. A check-room was installed, offering a free service to patrons. The employees are not permitted to accept a tip for any service they perform for a patron.

With these changes in the house and the house personnel, Schmidt next turned to giving the Hazleton picturegoers new and better programs. He engaged a capable organist and rehearsed him in solo work of the popular type. An eleven-piece orchestra was installed under a leader. Both the organist and the orchestra were "sold" as personalities. The orchestra was advertised as "Nick and his syncopated melody mixers." Within a short time after their introduction, the musicians were moved from the pit to the stage during the presentation of their overture number. This latter stunt was started on a Friday night, the weakest night at the Grand, and inside of two weeks the special music feature proved so popular that it was given Thursday nights as well.

Next prologues and presentations were added to the fare at the Grand. The first three nights of the week are devoted to these specialties. In order to stage them adequately, Schmidt installed extra lighting equipment and built a fly loft over the stage, which is only 12 feet deep. He installed 14 sets of lines, spot lights, and built a selective type switchboard out of a standard push plug board.

That the Hazleton public wanted this type of show was a fact which soon manifested itself at the box office of the Grand. The house now does a flourishing business and a new theatre is being built there by the Comerford Company. The new theatre will seat 2,400. The increase at the Grand since this new program was introduced is at the rate of a minimum average of $13,000 over the former figures. During the time that the new system has been in force not a single complaint has been registered, not even at the increase in admission. This, Schmidt says, "is due to the fact that we sold the idea to the people before asking them to pay for it."

The idea was "sold" in the theatre itself. Institutional advertising was carried on in screen trailers. Schmidt named this a "screen editorial."

Equipment Amortization

By P. M. ABBOTT

WE believe we have discovered a source of error in the bookkeeping of most exhibitors—an error causing an apparent inflation of profits. We are inclined, also, to believe that this same discrepancy in accounting is at the root of our tradional laxity toward proper upkeep and renewal of equipment.

In most industries building and equipment are amortized for a period extending over years—all the way from ten to fifty. To account for the cost of building and equipment in less time than ten years is discourging to profits, but in the motion picture industry conditions make necessary excessively heavy amortization—that is, if the problem of keeping abreast of the times is fairly met. This, of course, applies to theatres as well as equipment.

But considering only equipment. Exhibitors do not realize that equipment and appointments rapidly become antiquated and actual detriments to the houses of which they are a part. It is not the fault of the equipment manufactured in the past or of that made today. This condition exists because there is an ever-increasing demand for more effective methods and equipment. With this field becoming more important each year and attracting new manufacturers, rapid strides in equipment development follow. Therefore exhibitors who attempt to make themselves believe that the equipment of ten, or even five, years ago will keep their theatre in the running today, find themselves badly outdistanced.

Theatres and equipment existing a decade ago have been replaced almost without exception. Those houses that feel the effect of our so-called overseating problem are simply approaching the expiration of the amortization period. So with these conditions in mind, it will be well for exhibitors to face the problem of depreciation fairly—and make the allowances.

Publix May Circuit Broadcast Service

Experimenting with Radio Novelty in 4 Theatres of Chain

A RADIO broadcasting "act" in which a government licensed station is set up on the stage, may be circuited over the entire Publix chain of houses if experiments now being conducted in four of the company's theatres prove successful. Under a tentative agreement with the Carrell Broadcasting Service of Chicago, this radio novelty will be tried out at the Broadway Theatre, Newburgh; the Carolina, Greenville, and the Rex, Spartanburg. The first theatre on the list to offer the novelty, the Stratford in Poughkeepsie, is now operating a station from the stage.

The stations operate on the exact principle of the largest broadcasting units, under the charge of a licensed radio engineer. They have a range of 1,000 miles. The complete outfit is routed from one theatre to another. The broadcasting will constitute a part of the afternoon and evening performances at each theatre, local talent providing the bulk of the performers on the programs broadcast within view of the audience. The exceptional publicity angles of the stunt are to be exploited by co-operation with local newspapers, civic organizations, glee clubs, etc.

The "premier" of the radio novelty at the Stratford in Poughkeepsie, where the station operated for a week in co-operation with the Poughkeepsie Eagle-News, had the endorsement and backing of the Chamber of Commerce and a number of prominent business organizations. The station call is WKBG, and during the course of the week several prominent Poughkeepsie musicians, vocalists and public speakers addressed the microphone set up on the stage of the Stratford. A special force to take care of incoming requests was installed at the theatre.

Alex Hyde Music Act Plays Loew's Aldine

Alex Hyde and his ensemble of singers and dancers in "Berlin vs. Liszt" was the stage feature offered last week at Loew's Aldine in Pittsburgh, in conjunction with the photoplay "Paris." The Hyde act, which offers musical and dance features in a novel playlet with a thread of "plot" involving a young musician torn between love for the classics and the urge of the day for popular tunes, proved a popular attraction with the patronage at the Aldine.

Ottawa Regent Stands Pat on Policy for Summer

Leonard Bishop, manager of the Regent Theatre, a downtown house of Ottawa, Ontario, has decided to stand pat on his policy for the summer months, making no changes whatever in his booking arrangements, admission price schedule, orchestra or added attractions. Film programs will be booked for week runs as usual, starting on Saturdays. Manager Bishop feels that a change to split weeks entails extra advertising, exploitation and incidental costs, thus offsetting the revenue from additional patronage.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

HARRY E. LONG, for the past six months managing director of the Alhambra in Milwaukee, has been transferred to the Broadway Strand in Detroit.

JACK PLANT has been transferred from Saxe's Merrill to the Modjeska in Milwaukee, succeeding Milton Harmon, who has been transferred to the new Mirth in the Bay View district.

LEO SALKIN is now connected with Marks Brothers in Chicago and it is reported is slated for the management of their Embassy Theatre, which will open in August.

CULLEN ESPY, formerly manager of the Lyric Skydome and West End Lyric in St. Louis, has been named by the Skouras Brothers to manage the new Ambassador Theatre, their new theatre soon to be opened in St. Louis.

LETO HILL, who was manager of the New Lindell in St. Louis, has been installed at the Lyric to succeed Espy.

WILLIAM BUTTS is now manager of the Academy Theatre at Waukegan, the new house opened last week by the Great States Company. He was formerly manager of the Highland Park Theatre at Highland Park, Ill.

CORBIN SHIELD has succeeded Fred J. Starr as manager of the Rialto Theatre in Washington, D. C. Shield formerly was publicity manager of the Rialto, a post now occupied by James Callahan.

FRED McAVOY, who was formerly manager of B. F. Keith's Bijou Theatre, in Woonsocket, R.I., was recently appointed manager of Levine's Globe Theatre, Bethlehem, Pa.

Planning Program for F.&R. Managers' Convention

Stimulation of good-natured rivalry between the three large subdivisions of F. & R. managers will be one of the features of the convention which will be held in Minneapolis in July. The Minneapolis managers will constitute one group, the St. Paul managers another, and the managers outside the Twin Cities another, and the three divisions will be pitted against each other in some pep-raising competitions. Members of the three divisions will wear distinctive regalia during the convention.

The business sessions are to be held at the Curtis Hotel, and a dinner dance is planned at Radisson Inn, Christmas Lake, on the second day of the convention for the managers and their wives.

Musical Stock in Glens Falls

At the Empire in Glens Falls, N. Y., a musical stock company will hold the boards from June 21, for an indefinite period, replacing pictures.

Publix Shows for New Michigan

Publix attractions, now being shown at the Capitol Theatre, Detroit, will be transferred to the new Michigan when that house opens in August. Something entirely new and novel is in store for the Capitol.

Split Week Policy Starts at Keith's in Ottawa

A general shake-up in the policy of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, went into effect Monday, June 7. Manager J. M. Franklin decided upon split weeks for one thing, the theatre having always previously had week runs of programmes. The so-called supper show has been discontinued except on Saturdays and holidays, matinees running from 1 to 5 P. M. and evening performances from 6:45 to 11 P. M. There are five acts of vaudeville which are presented twice daily, 2:30 and 8:30 P. M., the feature picture being presented four times daily, 1, 4, 7 and 10 P. M. Prices have also been reduced approximately 10 cents, the evening scale being 35 and 50 cents, including the amusement tax.

Butte Theatre Mgr. Boosts Cooling System

The Rialto Theatre is boasting these hot days about its Arctic Nu-Air cooling system; giving the patrons of the playhouse the benefit of the coolest air waves in the city as the electric fans play over the tons of ice in storage. W. J. Sullivan, manager, is using the system as a strong urge to the public to drop in for a cool, refreshing evening's entertainment.

Manager of Cook County Theatres

Louis Laemmle has appointed Walter Johnson, manager and part owner of the Parkway Theatre, Roseland, Ill., as manager of the Laemmle Cook County Theatres, to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Ralph Tippetts.

Summer Policy at Troy Griswold

During the warm weather this Summer, Jack Campbell, manager of the Griswold in Troy, N. Y., will run specialties on Monday nights only. At the present time these specialties, which are featured with the pictures, are running two nights a week.

"Take-A-Chance Week" at Shea's

Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, last week presented a "Take-A-Chance" bill which was advertised as a mystery program "fixed so you can't lose."

Stock at Colonial in Akron

The Colonial Theatre, Akron, belonging to the Feiber and Shea chain of houses, closed its vaudeville and picture season last Saturday, and has introduced stock for the summer. The Pauline Maclean Players will be seen in a repertoire of new plays.

Dance Act Featured at Capitol

An elaborate stage presentation starring Renoff and Renova with the Volga Beauties in a group of dances supplemented the featured picture, "The Wise Guy" at the Capitol Theatre in Des Moines last week.

Bennett Twins on Rialto Stage

A. H. Blank's Rialto in Omaha offered the Bennett twins in a well-balanced blending of songs and dances, as the stage attraction on a program featuring "The Bat."

Revivals Proving Popular Summer Bills

“REVIVAL festivals” during which outstanding screen successes of the past are brought back to the screen are enjoying wider popularity with the public this season than ever before, according to the views of several theatre men who have offered this type of bill recently. Many theatres scattered throughout the country have offered “revival” weeks, with a daily change of picture; “revival” days, on which some past success is brought back for one day during the week, and in the case of some—the Stillman in Cleveland for example—the revival period extends for as long as seven weeks.

A large proportion of the picture theatres used “revival weeks” to mark the change over from the regular winter policy to the summer regime. Pictures which have figured as outstanding successes over a period of several years have been revived for such occasions and according to reports the public is responding more actively this year than ever before.

The Stillman started its revival season three weeks ago. The theatre is offering a new picture each day at prices of 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children during the matinees and 40 cents for adults with 20 cents for children evenings and holidays. The orchestra has been disbanded for the summer, the organ supplying the musical settings for the pictures. The program at the Stillman last week offered “Grumpy,” “The Dark Angel,” “The White Rose,” “Male and Female,” “The Mark of Zorro,” “The Snob” and “Graustark.”

Two weeks ago the Majestic in Hartford, Conn., put on a Grand Revival Week program, offering the following pictures on a daily change basis: “The Thief of Bagdad,” “Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall,” “The White Rose,” “Robin Hood,” “A Woman of Paris,” “Rosita” and “America.”

The Tower at St. Paul started its official summer season with a Review Week during which “Go West,” “The Ragman,” “The Blackbird,” “The Midshipman,” “Mike” and “His Secretary” were presented. The Circle Theatre in Cleveland, which recently changed over from a winter policy of pictures and Pantages vaudeville to straight pictures, started the new programs with a double bill on which a revival of “The Marriage Circle” shared honors with “Hell Bent fer Heaven.”

A revival of “The Miracle Man” last week at Loew's Theatre in Newark, N. J., proved a popular attraction. Another house which featured “come back” pictures during the week past was Loew's Dayton Theatre, Dayton, O. The event was advertised as “Two Big Revivals,” with “Over the Hill” playing the first three days of the week, and “A Connecticut Yankee” the last three days.

Newman Artists Now Staff Entertainers at WDAF

The concert orchestra of the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, Earl Thurston, the organist, and the Royal Syncopators of the Royal Theatre now are “staff” entertainers over the WDAF radio station, operated by the Kansas City Star, and receive free publicity aplenty.

The tableaux shown above was staged after Universal's published presentations by Jack Savage for “The Flaming Frontier” and accompanied the showing of the Universal feature during its run at the Colony Theatre, New York City

Pictures and Music Only Is New Policy at Atlanta Met

The Metropolitan, Atlanta, Ga., last week inaugurated a new policy of “pictures and music exclusively.” The policy of a straight picture presentation was started with “Mlle. Modiste” as the leading attraction.

The program included the following features: Overture, “Herbertiana”; News reel; Our Gang Comedy, “Uncle Tom's Uncle”; Piano Quartette; “Mlle. Modiste,” with music accompaniment based on the song “Kiss Me Again.”

Weidoeft and Cansinos on Allen Stage Bill

Rudy Weidoeft, saxophonist, and the Original Cansinos, Spanish dancers, who offered a Spanish version of the Charleston and a Latin interpretation of the familiar darky Shuffle among their numbers, were the stage attractions at the Allen Theatre in Cleveland last week. The featured photoplay was “Ella Cinders.”

A & P Gypsies, Radio Stars on Branford Stage

The A & P Gypsies, string ensemble which occupies a place among the most popular radio features, appeared on the stage of the Branford Theatre, Newark, N. J., last week, on a bill headed by “The Wilderness Woman.” The stage portion of the program featured Brown and Sedano, dancers.

Eastman's “Breezy Program” a Diversified Bill

Offered as a “breezy program of delightful summer entertainment,” the Eastman Theatre in Rochester last week presented a diversified bill headed by the Paramount production, “Let's Get Married.”

The stage numbers included “A Corner in Spain,” a group of songs and dances in a Sevillian cabaret setting; Sara Segelin and Celia Wolberg, playing two pianos; and the orchestra's contribution, “Selections from Pagliacci,” with a prologue sung in costume by Mark Daniels. The other screen offerings were “Sweet Adeline,” a Song Cartune; “Sweden To-day,” a scenic, and “With Amundsen to the Pole.”

Three Stage Attractions at Palace, Dallas

The Palace Theatre, Dallas, last week presented three stage attractions, the bill being headed by the Publix unit show, “Chinese Plate,” staged by Frank Cambria. “Pierrot's Serenade,” another Cambria production, and “Anniversary Syncopators” with the Bel Canto Quartette, jazz musicians and singers. The photoplay attraction was “Say It Again.”

“Student Prince” Chorus at Stanley Last Week

The Stanley Theatre in Philadelphia last week starred the male chorus of 20 from the musical stage success “The Student Prince” on the stage bill supporting the presentation of “The Devil's Circus.” The program also offered Maryon Vadie, dancer, and Ota Gygi, violinist, with their company of 14 dancers.

Ted Lewis Stage Star at Mosque

Ted Lewis and his “Musical Clowns” headed the stage bill presented last week at Fabian's Mosque Theatre in Newark. The photoplay attraction was “Other Women's Husbands.”

Trio of Songsters at Rialto

A. H. Blank's Rialto Theatre in Omaha last week offered Lester Howson & Clark, songsters, as the stage presentation with “Ransom's Folly,” the Richard Barthelmess screen vehicle.

Guthrie Opens Elsinore at Salem, Ore.

Defies Accepted Practices of Architecture and Color and Produces Masterpiece

WITH Governor Walter M. Pierce, Mayor John B. Giesy and Circuit Judge Percy R. Kelly participating in the dedication ceremonies, May 28, George B. Guthrie has opened to the theatre patrons of Salem, the capital city of Oregon, one of the most beautiful theatres in the Pacific Northwest, The Elsinore.

True to its name, derived from the setting of Shakespeare's "Hamlet," the new theatre follows English Gothic architectural lines in both exterior and interior design, and is the personal creation of Mr. Guthrie who, defying accepted architectural and color scheme practices against the advice and over the protests of his architects and the artisans employed on the job, has produced a wonder palace.

Outstanding features of the building are the spacious lobby of old cathedral nave and aisle design, with high vaulted ceiling, massive pillars and sweeping grand staircases at either end, and the novel mezzanine promenade, extending entirely across the front of the building, crossing over the main entrance by means of a bridge. Gothic arch openings off from the promenade give beautiful vistas of the magnificent lobby, the mezzanine balcony opposite and, through similar penetrations in the lobby wall of the mezzanine balcony, of the stage itself. On the promenade are the convenience rooms for men and women, and from it rise staircases leading to the balcony lounge immediately to the rear of the main balcony.

Shakesperian Scenes

Appropriate art glass windows, rich in coloring and beautifully executed, line the west side of the promenade. Each group of window pictures some scene or character from Shakespeare, the central group over the main entrance interpreting that scene from the second act of "Hamlet," where Hamlet welcomes the strolling players to Elsinore. In two great panels, 12 feet wide and 21 feet high, over the landings on the grand staircases at either end of the lobby are paintings of other Shakespearean scenes done by Professor N. B. Zane, professor of fine arts at the University of Oregon.

Entering the main lobby the observer gets full benefit of the spacious and lofty architectural scheme, with its typical nave and aisle design. The aisles are five feet wide and 25 feet high to the peak of the arched ceilings, and are separated from the nave by eight massive free-standing columns, four on either side, with a series of connecting arches. The ceiling is fully groined and illuminated by concealed lights from the capitals in the opposite walls. The ceiling is done in polychrome, deep brown and blue prevailing, overglazed in a greenish cast.

The railings along the promenade, the rear arches of the mezzanine balcony, and on the grand staircases are of wrought iron, as are the lighting fixtures on the walls and pillars throughout the building.

The walls and pillars throughout the interior are done in brownish stone texture of weatherbeaten effect. Each of the wall stones is individually treated in glazed colors of deep brown, grey, yellow and red, giving a massive and pleasing masonry effect. In the main auditorium this is relieved by a comprehensive Gothic decorative scheme. The breasts of the main and mezzanine balconies are panelled in mosaic pattern carrying a heraldic design, including conventionalized coats of arms and Tudor roses.

Massive Arches

On either of the side walls of the auditorium are three massive arches. The rear arches are open at the front of the balconies, and the other two arches on each side are in reveal and draped in damask hangings of Gothic pattern in red, black, gold and blue.

The ceiling is broken into three great panels extending from side to side, separated by ribs in run plaster richly decorated in polychrome, each panel being divided into 150 small panels of heraldic design, connected by cross stiling in lacy gold. The great proscenium opening at the four-centered Gothic arch over the stage is elaborately modelled, rising 28 feet to the crown of the arch. The arch itself splays from the proscenium opening to the side walls a distance of 25 feet, the outer arch springing to a crown 40 feet above the floor of the auditorium. Approximately half of the width of this splay is in open grille Gothic design through which the big Wurlitzer unit organ speaks from specially constructed sound chambers above. The lower portion of the splay passes fresh washed air into the auditorium from the modern ventilating system.

The immediate proscenium opening is done in Sienna marble texture, and adjacent on either side stand groups of four columns

Smoking Room "Rapped" by Joplin Women

CONCERTED action of Joplin, Mo., club women in protest of the recent announcement of a smoking room for women in a new motion picture theatre to be built at Fifth Street and Virginia Avenue is being sought by representatives of various local women's organizations.

The protest originates from published announcement of the new theatre stating that a women's smoking room, to be provided in the new theatre, would be the first one in the district. The original plans for the theatre, which is to be built by United Studios, Inc., also provide for a men's smoking room, a woman's rest room and a nursery. It is to be finished probably in April, 1927.

of marbleized texture of black, dark blue and green, overglazed in gold and copper bronze.

Aisles in the main auditorium and on the mezzanine balcony are heavily carpeted in Wilton velvet, and the floors of the lobby and the mezzanine promenade and the treads of the stairs are laid in rubber tile of brown and antique coloring.

Two hundred and sixty thousand dollars was spent on the Elsinore, which in a city of less than 25,000 people has a seating capacity of 1,435. On the main floor are 718 fully upholstered seats, cushioned in blue Spanish leather fabricoid, with the back panels in gold velour. One hundred and forty-seven choice, fully upholstered opera chairs in spacious arrangement occupy the mezzanine balcony which is, in effect, an enlarged loge section. The main balcony chairs are also of the full-cushioned seat type.

Illumination of the auditorium ceiling and the proscenium arch is by means of cove-concealed globes in four colors controlled by dimming rheostats from the operating room.

Combination Program

A full stage, completely equipped and sufficiently large to handle the largest of the road shows visiting the Pacific Coast is provided, and this form of entertainment will augment the regular picture offerings. Vaudeville one day each week is also offered.

The Elsinore and the Oregon Theatre, an exclusive picture house, are both operated by Mr. Guthrie and his general manager, J. C. Stille. Immediately following the opening of the Elsinore Mr. Guthrie purchased and closed the Heilig, which for a year had been operated as a picture, road show and vaudeville house.

Glen Dickinson Announces Plans for New House at Lawrence, Kans.

GLEN W. DICKINSON, operator, and Henry B. McCurdy, owner of the Varsity Theatre, Lawrence, Kans., has announced plans for the construction and the equipment of a new Varsity Theatre.

Plans for the new structure are being executed by Boller Brothers, of Kansas City, Mo., who are theatre architects of national reputation.

The new Varsity will accommodate about twelve hundred and sixty-four patrons and will be twice the height of the present theatre building. The front will be of terra cotta with indirect lighting system built in.

The street level will provide two small shop spaces and an island box office for the convenience of patrons. The spacious interior will provide a seating capacity of about twelve hundred, of which the balcony will handle five hundred. All seats are to have leather bottoms and backs and to be of the most comfortable design available.

Under the balcony will be located a spacious mezzanine floor, providing a large promenade and retiring rooms for ladies and gentlemen. The Mezzanine will have windows opening upon the street.

The stage, to be equipped with the latest modern appliances, will accommodate vaudeville and presentation acts.

An outstanding feature of the project will be the massive three manual theatre pipe organ, contracted for from the Reuter Organ Company, of Lawrence, who will make one of the finest installations in their history.

The new cooling system will be the latest and most efficient type now manufactured, providing diffused air currents rather than direct drafts.

The lighting throughout will be indirect, imbedded in panels and equipped with dimmers.

Construction work will start June 10th and by rushing operations, opening of the new Varsity will be effected by the fifteenth of September.

Mr. Dickinson has announced his intention of making the new Varsity Theatre the feature house of Lawrence, where all the largest attractions will be shown.

At the present time Mr. Dickinson controls thirteen theatres in five "key" towns of Kansas and Missouri, and anticipates the purchase of others in the near future.

May Cry or Smoke and Still See Screen

PATRONS of the Modern Theatre, a motion picture theatre under construction at 2705 Troost Avenue, Kansas City, Mo., are to have the privilege of smoking while performances are under way.

The smoking-room is to be in the foyer, but Boller Bros., architects, Huntzinger building, who planned the theatre, arranged a glass partition facing the screen, so that smokers can see the stage while smoking.

The theatre also is to have a "cry room," not for those over-emotionalized persons who suffer synthetic sorrows, but for the babies.

The theatre will have a deeply recessed lobby, slightly over 21 feet square. The lobby will be flanked by a shop on each side.

The roof is trussed, so that there are no columns centering the 52 feet width of the room.

The Modern Theatre is being built by A. Baier, who will lease it to others.

Rebuild Electric Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.

The Electric Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., will be rebuilt and remodeled at a cost of $150,000, according to an announcement made by C. U. Philley, vice-president and secretary of the St. Joseph Electric Amusement Company, which owns and operates the theatre. Work on the project will be started June 1 and will be completed by September.

The front of the theatre will be torn down and completely rebuilt in Italian style, with a frontage of eighty feet on Edmond Street. The entrance will be in the center and on each side will be archways.

The interior will be completely remodeled and refurnished with new seats and decorations. A new organ will be installed. Above the entrance will be a mezzanine floor, the promenade of which will connect with the women's rest room, manager's office, advertising managers' office, ushers' room and men's smoking room. On each side of the mezzanine floor will be passageways leading to the balcony. The project room will be outside the main theatre wall and above the balcony.

The seating capacity will be increased to 2,000, of which 1,250 seats will be on the main floor and 750 seats on the balcony. The construction will be fireproof throughout.

The officers of the St. Joseph Amusement Company are E. J. Grubel, Kansas City, president; Mr. Philley, vice-president; Rice McDonald, treasurer, and F. O. Williams, manager. The theatre will continue its present policy.

Oppose Freihofer Project at Llanerch, Pa.

SEVERAL hundred residents of Llanerch, Pa., with attorneys, physicians and private detectives, have recently opposed a theatre project sponsored by Louis Freihofer, president of the Freihofer Baking Company. They contended that the proposed theatre would not only depreciate property values but would be a menace to the health and well-being of the community.

This was in answer to a statement made by A. M. Taylor, president of the Philadelphia and West Chester Traction, before the Haverford Township commission, that Colonel Freihofer desired to erect a $500,000 theatre building in Llanerch.

Strand at Carlisle, Pa., to Be Remodeled

The Cumberland Valley Amusement Company of Pennsylvania, have recently announced that they will entirely remodel their Strand Theatre at Carlisle, Pa. Work will be pushed during the dull summer weeks in order that the house will be in shipshape for the fall of 1926. Seating capacity will be increased to 1,700.

Included in a large appropriation, is an order for the installation of a Robert Morton organ of the latest design.

Other theatres under control of the Cumberland Valley Amusement Co. are: The Rosedale and Strand at Chambersburg, and the Richmond, Grand and Ingomar at Alexandria, Va.

World Ticket Supply Gets Coin Changer Agency

The World Ticket and Supply Company have recently been awarded the agency for the Lightning Coin Changers in the Eastern territory.

C. E. Minnerly has been added to the staff of World Ticket in the capacity of sales-director. Mr. Minnerly is increasing the sales force and will have charge of distribution in this territory of both Simplex Registers and Lightning Coin Changers.

Promoters Plan S. I. Playhouse

A new motion picture theatre for Grant City, Staten Island, N. Y., is being planned by promoters who have the project under advisement. It is believed the theatre will be erected with an automobile showroom annex and will cost $200,000. The favored site is reported to be Lincoln Avenue and Hylan Boulevard.

Inquiries and Comments

Can't Understand It

A YOUNG chap in a small Virginia town, who is just starting in to learn the business of projection, has already found out, among other things, that the subject of electricity is not so simple as the advertisements of so-called electrical schools in popular magazines would lead the unknowing one to believe.

He frankly confesses his ignorance and requests a simple explanation of the phenomenon of electrical induction. His frankness, however, is tempered with fear or shame, we do not know which, since he wishes his identity to remain a secret.

His letter is as follows:

"Dear Sir:

"I am wondering if you would be kind enough to help me in a little problem. It may be little to you, but to me it is rather big one since I cannot solve it alone.

"For the past few weeks I have been studying electricity by means of a correspondence course given by the——— Electrical School and I have struck a subject which has me guessing considerable.

"I have been unable to obtain a satisfactory explanation from the school in question and they are not as patient as they might be, so I guess I must be rather dumb.

"The subject I wish an explanation of is electrical induction. I can't for the life of me understand how it is possible for one wire to cause electricity to flow in another wire when there is no actual connection between them.

"I understand, of course, that the thing actually does work because I have seen transformers and other equipment work, so it must be so. The thing that stumps me, however, is how does it work?

"If you would be so kind as to explain this to me I would certainly greatly appreciate it. Also, if you should, by any means, publish this, would you please omit my name?"

Everyone Must Start

While we are granting your wish, Friend X, there is really no need for withholding your name. We attribute it primarily to a sense of shame, on your part, for your present ignorance concerning fundamental electrical action, but, for that matter, we were, all of us, at some time or other, ignorant of exactly the same things, so everyone must learn.

Our first advice, therefore, is to lay of the incognito stuff and announce that while you are now ignorant of such matters you have no idea of remaining that way for any considerable length of time.

This principle is used in the electric motor. The wires on one side of the armature are forced up while those on the other side are forced down. And, since the armature is pivoted, it revolves.

To summarize:—If a conductor, carrying an electric current, is placed in a magnetic field, a force will be exerted on it which will cause the conductor to move in the direction of the weakest part of the field.

Electro-Magnetic Induction

A generator was used embodying exactly the same principle as described above, but in this case force is applied to move the wire through the magnetic field between the north and south poles, with the result that a voltage is induced in the wire and, if a closed loop of wire is used, a current will flow.

The action is thus reversible; if current flows in a stationary wire placed in a magnetic field, the wire will be forced to move, whereas, if a wire carrying no current is moved through a magnetic field, a voltage will be induced in the wire which will force a current through it.

Self Induction

It is not essential that the conductor be moved for a current to be induced in it. If the conductor is stationary and the lines of force, or magnetic force, around it change, the same result will be obtained. That is, an induced current will flow in such a direction as to oppose the change in the magnetic field.

This is known as self-induction.

Mutual Induction

It is also possible for one wire to induce a current in another neighboring wire. This is called mutual induction. In this case the magnetic field, set up by one wire, cuts across, or threads, the other wire and induces a voltage, which, if the switch is closed, drives a current through the second wire.

If two wires are placed side by side and current is passed through both, the magnetic field of each will induce a current in the other. This is also mutual induction and the effect is as if the resistance of the wires had been increased. The closer the wires are brought together, the smaller will be the induced current.

For this reason the Fire Underwriters specify that all the wires of alternating current circuits must be placed in the same conduit. If this rule were not obeyed the current carrying capacity of the wires, due to the apparent high resistance, would be reduced, and if a higher current were forced through the wire to overcome this resistances, the wires would be burned out.

Then buckle down to some real study. We will help you all we can and will try to clear up difficult points to the best of our ability.

As for that so-called electrical school which promises you complete knowledge in three or four weeks, more will be said in a later article.

Magnetic Induction

The subject of induction plays an important part in electricity. In fact, the generation of electricity by means of dynamos would not be possible were it not for induction. Transformers rely on it for their operation; it is present in motors; its effects are seen when a switch, through which current is flowing, is opened. In fact, wherever current flows, induction is almost certain to be present.

If a piece of iron is placed near the pole of a magnet, another pole will be induced in the iron which will be of opposite polarity to that of the magnet. That is, if the pole of the magnet is south, the inducted pole will be north. This is called magnetic induction.

It is also possible to induce voltages in conductors under certain conditions. In order to give a clear explanation, a roundabout method will be used to describe it.

Consider a magnetic field set up between the opposite poles of two magnets. The lines of force go from north to south (poles) across the air gap. Whenever a wire carries an electric current a similar magnetic field is created which travels in a circle around the wire as a center and the lines of magnetic force travel in a certain direction depending upon which way the current is flowing.

Suppose we place such a current carrying wire with its magnetic field, between the two magnetic poles. What happens? The magnetic field on top of the wire is going, say, to the left, and the field between the two poles is going to the right (north pole to the left of the wire) so that the field of the wire will buck that of the poles and tend to wipe it out. On the bottom, however, the two fields are moving in the same direction so that they will build up and make a much stronger field.

The lines of magnetic force, from the north pole, bend down around the wire and then curve up to enter the south pole. Now these lines, due to their odd shape, tend to straighten out and go back to their original straight condition. They act just like rubber bands stretched between the two poles, which have been drawn down by the wire. When the wire is released the tension of the bands forces it up.

Capitol, One of Central Penn.'s Finest

According to all reports, Shamokin's newest playhouse, the Capitol, is one of the finest theatres to be found in Central Pennsylvania.

Under control of the Arcadia Amusement Company, of which Caspar Thorpe is president, the new theatre was constructed in what is said to be record time for a building of its kind.

Grey and gold are the colors which dominate the decorative scheme of the interior, with the furnishings blending in perfect harmony. In the foyer, panelled walls and heavy carpets add to the attractiveness of that section.

In the auditorium, which seats 1,200, more carved panels are in evidence, and the several crystal chandeliers lend a particularly pleasing lighting effect.

One feature installation in the Capitol is the highly efficient cooling system manufactured by the Carrier Engineering Company. Systems of this kind have usually been confined to theatres seating 2,000 or over—such as the Rivoli in New York City—and the Capitol is said to be a pioneer among houses of its size.

Another feature is the expensive three-manual Wurlitzer organ, the tone of which was praised by many of the first-night audience.

Simplex and Morelite low intensity arcs were responsible for the excellent projection.

A large gathering of exchange men, and others well known in Pennsylvania film circles attended the premiere to extend their congratulations to Manager Leitzel.

Prepare Plans for Los Angeles House

PLANS are being made by the Signal Realty company of Los Angeles for the erection of a motion picture theatre at the corner of Hyde Park and Centinela Boulevards, according to a recent announcement.

It is understood that no negotiations have been made for the lease of the theatre, although it was reported some time ago that the West Coast theatres would secure a new playhouse in Fairview Heights.

Gumbiner Project Ready in Fall

Work on the $300,000 motion picture house to be erected on the southeast corner of Broadway and Eighth Street, Los Angeles, for H. L. Gumbiner, will start in early fall.

The Broadway house will be 4-stories, steel frame, with terra cotta finish.

Falconer Council Forced to Allow Theatre

FOLLOWING weeks of controversy, the village trustees of Falconer, N. Y., recently granted a permit to Anzalone Brothers to build a moving picture theatre is the city line section of West Main Street. The board sought to deprive them of the permit, but was advised by the village attorney that it must be given. The board members felt that the theatre would be undesirable in the proposed location, they said.

Ruben Urges M. P. Equipment Dealers to Attend Detroit Convention

ACCORDING to a recent announcement from Max Ruben, Chairman of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, this year's convention of the Association will be held at the Hotel Statler, Detroit, Mich., July 19th-22nd inclusive; at which time, there will be matters of great importance to the Motion Picture dealers—as well as the industry—to come up for action; and, that it will be to the advantage of everyone connected with the industry to be represented at this particular meeting; manufacurers, as well as dealers, owing to the fact that many rife rumors will be thoroughly discussed.

The Committee is also arranging a most entertaining program for the ladies who plan to accompany the different members of the organization and it is said that all will live to regret any inability to attend.

Mr. Ruben strongly urges every member to strain a point this year in order to be present during the dates given above.

Wolfson and Meyer's Miami Theatre Scheduled for June Opening

ANOTHER motion picture theatre is to be added to Miami's great white way. It is to be the new Capitol Theatre on Miami Avenue at Third Street and will be ready on June 18th. The new house is being built along the lines of the famous Capitol Theatre in New York City and will contain all the best features to be found therein. The actual cost of the playhouse will exceed $500,000.00, no expense being spared for the installation of every comfort and convenience for the patrons. The seating capacity will be for 1,500 persons, each chair being fitted with an air cushion, assuring the maximum comfort for the audience.

The Capitol's policy will adhere to strictly first run photoplays only and the presentation of pictures will be a revelation in photographic projection. The screen is being built along newly perfected lines, which in conjunction with the latest projection equipment will reduce to a minimum any eye strain. In following out the artistic interior decorations, the contract is in the capable hands of Vollmer, who so distinguished himself in the decorative effects of the Capitol in New York. Much time and effort have been expended in planning the entrance to the theatre, and the finished effect will be a delight to the eye. The entire foyer will be done in mosaic, both the floor and the walls blending together to form an artistic color scheme. The ceiling is to be decorated with fitting designs in connection with the giant chandeliers which are studded with thousands of colored electric light bulbs diffusing the vari-colored rays in all directions. But the effort to make the theatre a beautiful place to see has not overshadowed the equally important duty of making it a safe place to visit. The building is constructed entirely of steel and concrete, making it absolutely fireproof in every detail, and to cover any contingency a particularly large number of exits are available, each being designated by a dimmed red light. A steel and asbestos lined operator's booth completely removes any possibility of a conflagration from the film and a specially treated asbestos stage curtain assures freedom from a back stage fire.

The theatre is being erected by the Wolfson Meyer Theatre Enterprises and will be run by them in connection with their many theatres now operating in Miami and Palm Beach. Frank D. Rubel, formerly manager of the Temple Theatre, another Wolfson-Meyer house, has been appointed house manager.

Break Ground for North Saginaw House

Within two months a neighborhood motion picture theatre will be erected near the corner of Michigan and Genesee Avenues, North Saginaw, Mich., it was recently announced by Theodore J. Beeker.

The new theatre will be owned and operated by Mr. Beeker and the estimated cost of the building is $12,000.

"I expect to break ground next week," Mr. Beeker said, "and the work of erecting the building will be started soon afterward."

Beeker has been granted a lease extending over a period of 20 years and including renewal privilege.

Strand Amus. Co. to Build at Laurel, Miss.

A new playhouse costing $100,000 will be build by the Strand Amusement Company at Laurel, Miss. Construction will get under way shortly, according to an announcement made by a New Orleans, La., architectural firm who drew the plans. The playhouse will be built on a site in the rear of the hotel Pinehurst and will be one of the finest theatres in the state.

The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,000 persons and it is hoped to have the building completed and ready for the first performance on Christmas.

Announce New Playhouse for Lincoln, Neb.

A new $75,000 theatre will be built on the site of the Old Victoria Hotel at Fifteenth and O. Streets, Lincoln, Neb., to be completed not later than September 1, Homer K. Burket announced recently. W. M. Folsom and E. P. Leonard are the other backers.

Arrangements have been made for the leasing of the House, Mr. Bucket stated, but he declined to name the lessee.

The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,000. It will be two stories, the front part to be used for store space downstairs and office rooms upstairs. The whole building will be 50 x 100, with two 20 x 40 store rooms at each side of the lobby.

The front will be terra cotta, with large windows over the entrance to the lobby. The lobby will be tiled and wainscoted with tile.

The store rooms will be at either side of the lobby, with entrances from both the lobby and the street. The theatre proper will have a large balcony, making a total capacity of 1,000. The stage will be small, intended only for special entertainment such as is offered in a picture house.

Contract Let for Englert Theatre, Iowa City

Contracts for the erection of a $100,000 theatre building to replace Iowa City's leading showhouse, the Englert, which was destroyed by fire three months ago, were let May 25, by James J. Hanlon, owner of the building. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,300, approximately 200 more than the building which was razed by the flames. Leases for the building already have been arranged with the A. H. Blank interests and Mrs. Nate Chapman, of Iowa City, operators of the old Englert.

Starret-Kraft Rebuild at Forest, Ohio

The latest addition to the Starret-Kraft chain of motion picture theatres, of which the Crown is a member, was recently opened at Forest, Ohio.

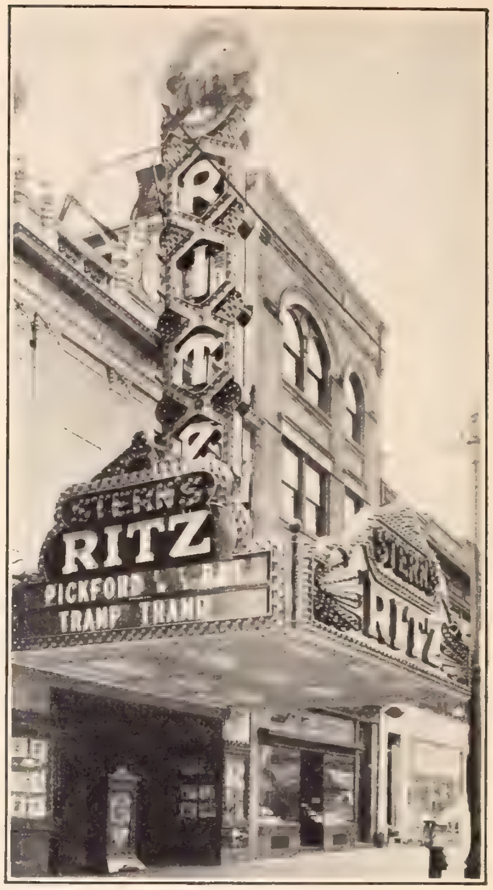
The Forest Theatre, which has been closed for four months for repairs, has been entirely repaired and is described by many as being the most beautiful theatre in northern Ohio. The interior is decorated in velvet drapes and small colored lamps. H. W. Starret is the sole owner of the Forest and Ottawa houses.

Wilmer & Vincent Install Marr & Colton Organs

The most modern types of Marr & Colton organs are now being installed in two of the finest Wilmer & Vincent theatres of its Pennsylvania chain—the State Theatre in Harrisburg, and the State in Easton. The organs are of the three-manual type. These organs, it is announced, have every known combination of tone color, including all the families of flutes and diapasons.

Prepares Plans for L. A. Theatre

Adolph Ramish has authorized John Paxton Perinne to prepare plans for a 1,700-seat theatre building, to be built at 2,300 South Central Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal., at a cost of $120,000.



Patrons will always be able to find their way to Jos. Stern's new Ritz Theatre, Newark, N. J. Note the elaborate electrical display of sign and marquee

Will Erect New Theatre at Van Nuys, Cal.

A 1,400 seat Class A motion picture theatre will be erected in Van Nuys, Cal., by the Van Nuys Theatre Incorporated, composed of N. Scheinberg, Louis Greenberg and M. E. Horwitz, it was announced at the offices of the corporation recently.

The building will be located on the southeast corner of Sherman Way and Kittridge Street. It will cost in the neighborhood of $150,000 exclusive of the equipment which will be of the most modern obtainable. One of the features of the house will be a large stage.

Plans for the structure are now being completed.

Bids Asked on Chatham Theatre

Walter S. Crandell, of New York and Chatham, announces that the plans and specifications for the theatre he proposes to build on his lot on Main Street in Chatham, N. Y., are in the hands of contractors for bids. These plans call for a theatre that will seat 650 persons and it is understood that the building will also contain two stores.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Waltz Dream"—Ufa Palast, Berlin, Germany

BOERSEN COURIER: "No doubt Ludwig Berger's latest production will have world-wide success. It is a mixture of all the elements that have counted for international film success so far. One should be pleased that another fascinating film has been made, a film that will appeal to all classes."

Deutsche Tageszeitung: "It is a dream picture that flashes across the screen, a dream of beautiful phantasy and charming grace."

Die Welt Am Montag: "A fairy-like tale and a lightly moving picture melody run through this film and distribute a joyful enchantment like the tender, moving rhythm of the Viennese waltz. This film induces us to count Ludwig Berger as one of the chosen master-directors, for he has depicted the Viennese temperament with gaiety and grace in this picture. One can sing a hymn of praise to all those concerned in the making of this picture."

Boersen Zeitung: "One soon warms up. The frowning reviewer is completely disarmed and enjoys this production, the most beautiful film shown in the past months, like the naive audience. It looks as though the film will have the same success accorded the operetta about two decades ago. The premiere was a great success. The Ufa Palast has not witnessed such thunderous applause for a long, long time. Again and again, 'Christians! — Fritsch! — Berger!' rang out in true sincerity."

Germania: "All in all, a clean made, wonderfully effective production. Ludwig Berger imparted his direction with tempo, calculated humor and strict discipline."

Der Tag: "The thundering applause began at the opening title, and at the end of the performance was so prolonged that the artists present had to bow at least a dozen times."

Am Mittag: "This film of beautiful women, of intoxicating Viennese waltzes, Viennese spirit, Viennese gaiety, the film that has assembled the best artists of the German film industry in one production, the film that America has cause to envy us—is 'The Waltz Dream.'"

Neue Berliner 12 Uhr Zeitung: "Three cheers for Ludwig Berger, Norbart Falk and Robert Liebman, who have written this composition, full of vitality and melancholy, full of caprices and impudence, full of timidity and boldness! And three cheers for Mady Christians, Xenia Desni and Willy Fritsch, who receive endless applause at the end of the performance."

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung: "The ensemble is wonderful. Xenia Desni is incomparable, Mady Christians is wonderful, Willy Fritsch refreshing and magnetic, and the rest of the cast give a satisfying performance."

Montag Morgen Zeitung: "It was the most important and enthusiastic applause ever accorded a picture."

Film Journal: "'The Waltz Dream' surpassed all expectation, even the highest. One departed from the final shot with the thought that this is the film. 'Caligari,' 'Quo Vadis,' nor 'Peter Pan' have achieved the subtle finesse of meaning that is in this film."

8 Uhr Abendblatt: "This film is on the best road to bring back romance to the nations that has been taken away from them by a presumably realistic era. The film is a composition, just like music. It is like a really beautiful woman, who is always pretty—even without the assistance and secrets of cosmetics."

The little more

The feature picture, the musical accompaniment, the supplementary attractions on the program—are of course of utmost box office importance.

But it's the little more that makes your theatre different—photographic quality on the screen, for example. When the picture is printed on Eastman Positive Film the photography of the negative is saved for your patrons to enjoy. And that's of importance at the box office, too.

Prints on Eastman have the black-lettered identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in the transparent margin. Look for it.
